Mr. Chris Kringle Welcomed Back By Students Who Skip Lectures

Santa Claus hit town last Saturday. The old gentleman drove through the cheering crowds preceded by clowns, bands, and the whole paraphernalia of a triumphal entry.

As usual, the parade was one of the biggest social events of the campus year. Students deserted lectures en masse to welcome Mr. Kringle back to Toronto. Eds and co-eds lined the route and gave a rousing "Toronto" when the hero of the occasion how in sight.

The parade wended its way through Queen's Park to amuse the members of parliament children and their fathers. Reliable sources close to the government whispered that several prominent personages were seen at the windows of the Parliament Buildings.

The students in the residences and the Red Schoolhouse were greatly disappointed in the weather. The absence of snow broke an old Varsity tradition

Over Four Hundred Students Sign Petition for Plebiscite

MOWERS OISSISSED

Saskatoon, Nov. 19 (CUP): Over four hundred students signed a petition here today for a plebiscite on the issue of the dismissal of Cio Mowers, editor of The Sheaf, University of Saskatchewan newspaper. Mowers was forced to resign last Wednesday following a meeting of the Students' Representative Council, when its president issued the ultimatum that Mowers should resign or he would himself. A previous motion for Mowers' resignation was rescinded, owing to a narrow vote.

Great opposition to this measure arose on the campus. A student meeting presented a resolution to the council asking that all relevant facts about the controversy be published in The Sheaf with no restrictions. If this request was refused, money offered by individual students would be used to publish an independent report. A plebiscite was then demanded.

The offending editorial, published in the Armistice Day issue, said in part that no modern soldier could be waged without breaking every one of the ten commandments of Moses, and two of Christ. "Among the professions least becoming an intelligent and social human being," said the editorial, "I would put first that of the soldier, particularly the mercenary soldier, the member of the standing army." The editorial was headed "My Contribution".

In addition to the editorial, war veterans considered particularly obnoxious a cartoon story on the Sport Page headed "In Memoriam".

SODALITY HEARS FATHER CALLAGHAN

The monthly meeting and general communion of the St. Joseph's College Sodality, was held yesterday morning at which Rev. Father Callaghan celebrated Mass and gave the sermon, speaking on "Religious Instruction".

The sodality, which is a lay organization, one's religion, and further, of being able to discuss it intelligently, so as to present it to others in its proper perspective.

At the business meeting called by the president, Anita Martin, the heads of the various committees gave reports on the activities of their respective societies. Plans for Christmas charity were discussed. Helen Gerson, III General, was elected convener for this work. It was decided, too, that religious study groups be formed.

Gen. Conlin, social convener, announced that the annual St. Joseph's At-Home would be held at the Granite Club on January 13th. Breakfast was served in the common Room.

Those Who Live by the Pen

Speaking about the attempt of the Students' Council at the University of Saskatchewan, to suppress free speech by firing the editor of the Sheaf, the Swift-Current Advocates editorializes: "In a world where freedom of speech and the freedom of the press are fast disappearing, it is a tragedy that our University should take the lead in imposing restrictions on the written word."

The editor of the Sheaf, Cleo Mowers, has been the first to run into serious difficulties in this year's class of college editors. Being a pacifist and also an isolationist, and not afraid to say so, Mowers drew down upon his head the wrath of Don Armour, last year's editor, and half of the students' council upon his shoulders, when he printed an editorial denouncing war, and its results, in the issue the day before Armistice. Mowers has had a vigorous editorial policy throughout the year, although at times his columns weren't what we would consider in the best of taste.

Although we didn't agree with all his ideas and certainly not with his way of handling them, he is the editor and should have freedom to express his opinions. The editor does not necessarily act as spokesman for his University, and does not of necessity express the ideas of the students' council. On the other hand the members of the council are elected by the students, and in a democratic system should attempt to express their ideas, and represent them to the best of their ability.

Don Armour, president of the council, didn't show up in a very good light when he threatened to resign, unless the editor did. If that is the way he feels about it he should resign. After all, he isn't there to run things as he wishes, but to run them the way the students wish. Mowers, on the other hand, has a right to express his ideas, and until he knows that the students are opposed to him in such a way that his continuance on the paper would do more harm than good, he should stick it out.

If he had been asked to resign because he was turning out a poor paper or in some other way not fulfilling his contract, the council would be perfectly right, but because he was expressing his own opinions, then it is over-stepping its authority.

For one thing, the council split 8-7 against Mowers, and there is still a great deal of support for him on the campus. The managing editor is willing to resign out of protest, and will also forego his salary in order to clear thing up. The fact that the editor has his staff behind him speaks well for him.

It looks as though the President of the Council has railroaded the demand for resignation, and the students are right in their demand to have the whole thing cleared up, and the facts made public. After all, the council owes this to the body it represents and should be willing to have its actions brought out in the sober light of day. In such an issue the students should be given a plebiscite, as over four hundred of them have already demanded.

One thing, the whole University has a right to kick against the unnecessary hold-up, with no campus paper being published. This is an unnecessary result of the controversy. Surely the students might be given their regular paper . . . by the use of a substitute editor until the matter is cleared up.

The C.U.P. will continue to bring the latest news of the situation until the Westerners have come to a decision.

Women Debaters

The curriculum of this university encourages student self-expression to the extent of several long essays per term in most arts courses, but makes little or no provision for education in public speaking. To counteract the lack of such training there are several student organizations which offer opportunities in public speaking. Among these the debating societies are the most active. And in spite of the popular notion that men have the monopoly in this field, there are several flourishing debating societies for women. The Women's Interfaculty Debating Union sponsors debates between the four arts colleges, and next week expands into the interfaculty field when it meets the women debaters from Queen's and McMaster. On Tuesday two Toronto debaters will go to Queen's to uphold the negative, and two will argue for the affirmative against McMaster at Toronto on the issue, "Resolved that in the opinion of this House Germany should be granted colonial territories."

This Intercollegiate Debate is an annual event which deserves the support of both men and women around the campus. It is to be hoped that there will be a good crowd to support that little-known but hard-working group, the Women's Interfaculty Debating Union.

ARTE MUSIC

U.C. Follies

Although the U.C. Follies is not art, nor music, nor even drama, it is the most entertaining production on the campus, and easily comes up to any professional production that is presented downtown. This is especially true of the humour.

Follies humour has its origins for its originality, its cleanness and its uproariousness. Lou Weingarten, who has had little opportunity to display his ability in serious action on the campus, although his participation in the Theatre of Action's Bury the Dead brought him favourable notices from critics throughout Canada, was star comedian of the evening.

Among the galaxy of comedians which Weingarten headed, special mention should be made of Tom Daly, whose characterization of Neville Chamberlain was outstanding, and Sholome Gelber, whose ability for pantomime put the third act in his pocket and left it there.

Assistant Director John K. Rooke, wonder boy of The Varsity staff, produced some belly-laughs from time to time, and Frank Shuster was very good in the Whitney Hall sequence. But Weingarten was really funny.

Helen Gardiner was the outstanding feminine player. Her work in Act III was very clever.

The songs were far better than last year. Start the Music, Johnny Rooke's miniature masterpiece, ranks with any professional hit of the season. The orchestra, however, and even Kaplansky's overture, were admittedly good, but not as good as they were last year.

The direction and production were adequate but nothing to marvel at, but these are mere details in any Follies. Everyone left the theatre remarking on Weingarten's Hitler, or his characterization of the "matron", or his Charley McCarthy. The only dissenting voice was that of Weingarten per se who, when questioned about his son's achievement, made the cryptic comment that "he was still young".

Reuven Frank

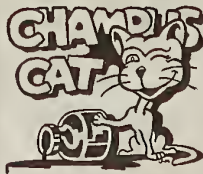

Hollywood Theatre

In La Mort du Doyne, by Jean Benoit-Levy and Marie Epstein, screened on Saturday morning, we are taken behind the scenes of the Paris Opera House. Unfortunately the only really outstanding dancer, Mia Slavenska, breaks her leg halfway through and appears in the rest of the picture in a straight dramatic role at which she is markedly less proficient.

The plot revolves around a 12 year old girl who is in training for the ballet. On her rests the whole burden of the plot. There is a rather superficial delving into childhood psychology which falls somewhat flat as the child cast in this part does not seem equal to the necessary first class characterization.

Much ballet dancing is shown throughout the picture but it is not very well fitted in. The standard of production is high but the whole is not very smoothly assembled.

TAKEN FOR GRANTED

A mild furor was created in university circles yesterday when the City Council announced an increase in their annual grant to $7,000,000. It will be recalled that the Council were a bit wary five years ago when they were asked to contribute one-seventieth of that sum. It is hoped that now registration will rise again to its former heights. Beautifully coloured leaflets are being distributed to all prospective students—in addition to their free tuition, room and board, students are guaranteed a weekly income of twenty-five dollars, double for holidays. Lectures are to be reduced to a minimum as the aim is quantity, and nothing else. A new feature to be inaugurated by this increased grant is chauffeur service from lecture to lecture, removing the old "alright-method" which proved unpopular, particularly when there was no snow.

The snack shop situated in the centre of the campus will now be able to provide mid-lecture snacks free of charge. Plans are under way to establish food-centres of this type at every university building. With such stimuli there is no doubt that registration will rise to at least one hundred.

A member of the newly-enlarged psychological faculty when interviewed stated—"After seeing the benefits derived from such a noble institution of learning, the council of the city of Toronto has decided that the penny tossed, according to the customary manner of deciding on a vital issue, coming out 'heads' was not merely chance, but DESTINY".

Like most film versions of a best seller, The Citadel as a movie was not as convincing as the novel. The role of Andrew Manson was excellently played by Robert Donat, and the settings were very genuine and very English. The scene where the young doctor brought a supposedly still-born child to life, and again where he performed an amputation underground with the aid of the mine crumblers overhead, were both gripping and realistic. But something of the earnestness of the book was lost. The portrayal of married life by Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell was rather pallid. Miss Russell was in our opinion a rather poor choice for the role of Christine; she is too dramatic looking, and her manner is too finished, to comply with our idea of Miss Barlow, the school-teacher. The changes in the plot were doubtless made in the interests of dramatic unity; but the death of Christine was the emotional climax of the book, and the substitution of Denny as the victim of Andrew's moral relapse destroyed the effect.

Those who went wild over The Citadel as a novel will probably be disappointed in the movie, but on the whole it is excellent entertainment.

University College volleyball teams had mixed luck over the week-end. The Junior squad dropped a game to Trinity Friday afternoon but the Thirds made up for the lapse by winning their first game of the season Saturday morning in the upper Hart House gym against Pharmacy B.

The first game between Trinity and Junior U.C. was a pretty dull affair, with Trinity dominating throughout. They took the first of the series by a score of 15-4, dropped the next 10-15 and came back strong to take the series 15-11.

The U.C. Thirds showed that they could play better ball than they have done so far when they took two out of three against a hard-trying Pharmacy B team. The Druggists won the first game quite easily when they topped the boys in red 15-6. However, the winners came back strong to grab a seven-point victory, 15-8, and enter the final match even-Stephen.

The deciding game was a ding-dong affair with Pharmacy taking an early lead of 4-1, only to have U.C. come from behind to even it up. The lead changed hands several times and finally the score stood at 14-11. The losers missed two consecutive serves and it was all over, with the Artsmen ahead 16-14.

TEA-SHOT "CLICKS" THREE WAYS

"TEA ACROSS THE COUNTER" WINS HARCOURT BULL $2.50

A Trinity House man takes the palm for this week's play-Tea-Shot, the best of this term's series. His "Drug-Store Thinker" clicks three ways at once—first, in the reading matter; second, with the prize judges; and third, the best of all, because Tea as a revival at any time is always sure to "click". Tea-Shot Remembrance—$2.50 is given away weekly for the best snap-shot or Tea-Shot forms in people-enjoying tea. For camera-finds and near-rivals Mr. Bull in-forms us that he snipped his "Drug Store Thinker" at "I see, F. 4.5, on a Superman Press film using store lighting."

The Tea-Shot Contest begins again in January, 1939. Try taking Tea-Shots yourself—they may be odd, serious, funny or candid. Send yours in to Shots yourself—in January, 1939, so that they'll be in time for the Varsity Play-Tea-Shot Award whose winner will appear in The Varsity of Monday, January 16. At the end of the Contest—Prizes of $25, $10 and $5!

U.C. JUNIORS TAKE ST. HILDA'S 40-9

Well organized play combined with a speedy passing attack gave U.C. Jr.s a 40 to 9 victory over St. Hilda's Freshies last night at O.C.E. gym. The Saints were kept well in check by the fine guarding of Kay Bryans and Patsy McLaren. They had an unfortunate tendency to bunch together on the floor, thus encountering difficulty in their passing.

Bobbie McDonald starred for U.C. Freshies, getting 23 points. Yvonne Wells gained 7 and B. Brodie 2 for St. Hilda's.

U.C. Jr.s: Bobbie McDonald, G. Evans, Helen Gurney, Mary Kirkland, Anna M. Smart, K. Bryans, Patsy McLaren, Peggy McLaren.

St. Hilda's Freshies: Agnes Steele, N. Tyrrell, Yvonne Wells, M. Skeels, E. McLaughlin, B. Brodie, Mary Combs, C. Harrison, L. Young.

HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE WIN OVER MEDS 25-23

Household Science eked out a narrow 25 to 23 win last night over Meds at O.C.E. gym in what was a really strenuous game.

Betty Jackson, newcomer for Meds, turned in a strong game in guarding Jean Clarke, although Jean managed to get away at times. Doris Prowse played well for Meds.

Meds: Doris Prowse, Jean Brereton, Jean Mehner, Helen Holden, Betty Jackson, Lili Sugarman, Flo Allan, Mary Moshaug, Mary McFarland.

Household Science: Jean Clarke, Peg Griggs, Muriel Dobson, Eileen Elson, Peggy Arnold, Fran Richardson, Elizabeth Dean, Helen Abel.

While Canadian football was winding up for the year here this week, down at the Webster Groves High School in St. Louis, teen-aged girls were beginning their football careers. The seniors of the girls' school defeated the juniors in their first game, which was characterized by frequent "unfady-like tackling". Both teams came trotting onto the field wielding powder puffs (so they tell us) and spent half time repairing their make-up. Time marches on.

Every now and then (despite our poll) one of the women's basketball stories is omitted from next day's Varsity. This explains why the game between U.C. Jr.s and St. Hilda's Freshies which the Juniors won 40-9 last Thursday was not printed—night editors have lots of worries that way.

The same night Household Science defeated Meds 25-23 in a close game which deserved more than mention. Apologies to both teams.

As for tonight—we're calling the Domestic to do a repeat act, and Nurses to put up a stiff battle before bowing to St. Mike's—which they will do.

It looks as if the 'A' baseball team at Vic is to go through the season undefeated. They meet St. Mike's tonight for the second time, and should pull out a win over the gallant but weakened Irish. Time will tell.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shifman

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH OLD MCGILL? . . . NOTHING!

Last year a mighty McGill team failed to reach the play-offs. They had everything but a kicker to compare with Gray and Munro, who brought their respective teams to the play-offs. This year the same team with the addition of a kicker, won six of their seven games and took the Yates Trophy, emblematic of the Intercollegiate Championship, for the first time in ten years. It was McGill's year right from the start of the season right down the home stretch and it would have been an injustice if the Westerners had relieved them of their crown. McGill's mighty machine loses most of its integral parts next year, by graduation, so that if they hadn't won this year it would have been years before another team as powerful as the present one could have been put together. Western, however, retain their aggregation for another year, so that we at this time call University of Western Ontario, who last won the championship back in 1931, for next year's intercollegiate title.

But getting back to kickers, it wasn't till this season that we appreciated the difference a kicker can make to a team. Last year the Redmen with practically the same team as this year finished in the cellar. Last in the league was old McGill because every other club in the group gained twenty to twenty-five yards in exchange of kicks. This year the foot was on the other team (or the shoe was on the other foot or sumptin) and McGill gained the ten or fifteen yards on kicks. Saturday up at the Bowl we saw how a powerful line smashing team, Ottawa, with fairly good kicking, burnt themselves out gaining yards through the line, only to find themselves back where they started when the kicking exchange was over.

So it is to Herbie Westman, whose outstanding kicking was the coaches' despair from Kingston down to London, that we take off our hat. He, with the protection given to him by an outstanding line, and excellent backfield, brought back to McGill the most important intercollegiate title of the year . . . the football championship. . .

POLLS CLOSED . . . ELECTION RETURNS

Picking an all-star intercollegiate team when you only have the opportunity of seeing each team play once and the home team three times is liable to find you sitting up a tree without a ladder when you are through. But thanks to the co-operation of individuals who sent in teams, to the janitor's staff in Hart House, the orchestra leader at the U.C. Pollies, and the university police force, we have been able to form The Varsity's official team, which will be sent in to help select the C.U.P.'s all-star team.

Very few of the teams sent in were different as far as the halves went. Stollery of Queen's as flying wing, Westman of McGill, Kiefer of McGill and Farmer of Western were chosen almost unanimously, with Faust (W) and Merrifield, McGill, appearing as alternatives. Perowse of McGill was picked unanimously to quarterback the all-star team. In the centre position there were two choices, Willis of Western, and Pithouse of Queen's, with Willis just edging out his Queen's rival. Ruschin of McGill and Conlin of Queen's were tops as far as the inside positions went and they were flanked by Anton of McGill and Sirdevan of Toronto, to form the front line. Hall of McGill and Shukun of Toronto, to play end on this team. This completes The Varsity's selection, but Warren Stevens had different ideas for his team.

Stevens' team has Farmer at flying wing and Merrifield, Westman and Faust at halves. Willis was again at centre, with Ruschin and Conlin at inside. Stevens chose Sirdevan and Kenny at middle, excluding what everyone thought was a sure choice, Andy Anton, from his team. His ends were Kent and Hall, as fine ends as can be found in any league. Perowse was assigned the job of quarterbacking this team.

It is interesting to note that Phil, guardian of the poolroom, on his own selection picked man for man every player on the all-star team, that is, representing The Varsity's choice. So to Phil goes the handsome prize of Monday's issue of The Varsity, autographed by every member of the Sports Staff (you lucky guy!).

KNOX BEHIND

To the Editor,

Dear Sir:

Now that there has come a full in the central European crisis the majority of far-seeing countries are pessimistically arming to the teeth. Canada, thoroughly frightened at being caught between two fires, is determining her international policy. There could be no better time for her to resolve to stay out of the European struggle and protect her own markets.

"Isolation is impossible" is the claim. Why? Why can Canada not sit quietly back with United States as military support and reap financial benefit from a general struggle which will leave again a weary, depression-stricken world?

What was gained from the last war? The farcical reason of freeing the world for democracy has long been a joke. Enormous war-debts never paid were contracted and people are still paying in an economic way for four years' madness in 1914. On the contrary, the world can be galvanized by staying out! Certainly millions of lives, government money and economic stability. Provided fascism were to triumph in the end! What country, no matter how powerful in the beginning, is going to be in a position at the end of a world conflict, to attack neutral countries which have been conserving their financial and military resources for just such an emergency?

Should we fight to save the same old thing we fought for last time and lost? Save Spain, save Austria, has been the cry. Propagandists have so impregnated us with the fear of dictators that we see Mussolini and Hitler under every bed. If we did win the war, who is to say fascism would stop?

If Europe is determined on mass suicide—let her go ahead. Where would America be in it? She would have to spend men and money and provide for her allies, and at the end—chaos. Why not spend the forty billion or so that participation in a war would eventually cost combating lack of foreign trade or projecting public works?

At least the money would be used for 100 per cent American purposes. A selfish viewpoint, of course, but one which would leave a rich, unassailable America rather than a debt-ridden mutilated country.

II Vic.

The St. Michael's College lacrosse team is tied with the O.C.E. stickmen for their group leadership today as the result of an 11-3 victory gained over Trinity in the Hart House gymnasium Saturday morning. However, the Irishmen have played two more games than the Teachers, who have yet to taste defeat.

Playing the same flashy game that has earned them all their points, the winners had little trouble beating the boys in black and dominated play throughout. Led by Cassidy, who dented the net seven times, the Bay Street squad scored ten goals before Hodgins got the first point for the losers in the third quarter. Trinity added another point to their total in the final period, but failed to seriously threaten the superior St. Mike's team.

The win enabled St. Mike's to pull ahead of Knox, who can force a three-team tie for leadership by winning their next 2 games.

St. Michael's: Silvester, Gendron (1), Dore, Hector, Cassidy (7), McLean (3), Coates, Wimpey, Fitzpatrick.

Trinity: Northgrave, O'Grady, Hodgins (1), Curtis, Edmonds (1), Fraser, Andrews, Telfer (1), Stephens, and Templeton.

TRAVELOGUE PRESENTED AT WYMLWOOD MEETING

At Thursday night's meeting of the Italian-Spanish Club in Wymlywood, Dr. Willinsky, a member of the Amateur Cinema League, presented his travelogue, "Mediterranean Meanderings."

As a "pedantic peregrinator" presenting the world in "chiaroscuro," Dr. Willinsky took us on a colourful ride through Madeira, Gibraltar, Algiers, Monaco, and Sicily, complete with an harmonious music setting. Among the "visual effects" produced by the travelogue were: the church where Columbus was married; Mr. Fitzpatrick, MGM's Travellog commentator posing with embroidery girls; the teledisks and sounds of Algiers' famous Kasbah; the authentic tarantella danced by Sicilians; the 40-year-old Capucin transvaine; and the beautiful sweeping views of Sicily, which Dr. Willinsky pronounced "one of the most romantic and colourful of countries." Of greatest contemporary interest were the teledisks of Sicily, which Dr. Willinsky pronounced "one of the most romantic and colourful of countries." Of greatest contemporary interest were the teledisks of Sicily, which Dr. Willinsky pronounced "one of the most romantic and colourful of countries." Of greatest contemporary interest were the teledisks of Sicily, which Dr. Willinsky pronounced "one of the most romantic and colourful of countries."

Unfortunately the tour could not be completed, owing to shortage of time, but it was promised for a future meeting of the club.

The box, not written by Mowers, said: "It seems fitting that we should dedicate this small space to those misguided men who, like sheep following one another over a cliff, were led into killing each other in ruthless slaughter. And especially, we would dedicate it to those who were unfortunate to go on living under the praise which was heaped upon their departed comrades and themselves as 'saviours of democracy'." To these men we offer our deepest sympathies, knowing that neither expensive memorials, slobber praise, nor stupefying effect of alcohol, can ever wipe out the doubt from their minds, "Did they die in vain?"

A tirade began Saturday after the publication of this editorial. President Thompson of the university called for an interview with the editor and Don Armour, president of the Council. In this interview he called upon Mowers to "reform or resign".

Students on the campus are asking if Mowers was railroaded by the ultimatum, if pressure was exerted by the university president, if the offense warranted firing.

Fred McNeil, managing editor of The Sheaf, has offered his resignation in protest, and has offered his month's salary to help clear up the issue.

NICKEL ALLOYS
ARE STRONG, TOUGH, DURABLE

A GIANT BUCKET bites into the ground. A slim axle shoulders tons of earth. A slender derrick tosses steel and stone aloft. A whirling mixer vomits concrete. Under terrific stresses, strains, shocks and abrasion this equipment stands up, for its vital parts are made of Nickel Alloys. Wear and breakage played havoc with construction schedules not so many years ago. To make parts stronger they had to be made heavier.

Then came the age of Alloys, with Canadian Nickel as the chief alloying element. Today engineers measure in advance the strain each part must bear. They specify in advance those Nickel Alloys they know will stand up under the particular conditions. Equipment is lighter and more compact because of the unusual strength of Nickel Alloys, and their increased resistance to wear and corrosion.

And because Nickel Alloys perform better longer, the demand for Nickel in peaceful industry continues to grow. Every Canadian shares in the wealth the Nickel industry brings to Canada.

JUNIOR SWIMMERS COMPETE TODAY

Interfaculty Competition Opens with Record Entry for Preliminaries

SCHOOL TOPS ENTRIES

Today at 3 o'clock a hundred odd assorted swimmers will begin competition in the annual Junior Interfaculty Swimming Meet. So many entries have been received that preliminary heats will be necessary in every event. All swimmers and divers who have entered the meet, therefore, are required to be present at 3 o'clock this afternoon in order for the preliminary heats to be run off. The finals will be held tonight at 8 o'clock with only male spectators being admitted.

The biggest entry this year comes from S.P.S. but U.C. with one of their biggest lists of entries in years, promises to pool a formidable aggregation of swimmers. And Trinity, who have always finished well up, will undoubtedly be a threat.

The events will be run off as follows:
Medley Relay: 2 heats, final, 1st and 2nd in each to qualify and 3rd in the fastest heat.

500 free: 8 heats, semi-final, 1st in each and 2nd in 2 fastest heats; final, 1st and 2nd in each heat and 3rd in fastest heat.

440 free: 2 heats final, 1st and 2nd in each heat and 3rd in fastest heat.
100 back: 3 heats final, 1st in each and 2nd in 2 fastest.

100 free style: 5 heats semi-final, 1st and 2nd in each heat; final, 1st and 2nd in each heat and 3rd in fastest heat.

200 relay: 2 heats final, 1st and 2nd in each heat and 3rd in fastest heat.

Swimmers are reminded that the national intercollegiate start will be used consisting of "Swimmers, take your mark", followed by a pistol shot.

CHOICE OF FRIENDS STRESSED IN TALK

No Age Limit for Friendships
Dr. Curtin Assures Audience

That one should have friends of all ages, was the opinion expressed by Dr. Anne Curtin in her lecture "How to Choose Your Friends", the third in a series of lectures on "Personality Hints."

There is something to learn from persons of every age, according to Dr. Curtin. One's parents give a more mature viewpoint, and she believes that even a child may have well-formulated ideas.

The importance of choosing a friend, especially a mate, with a progressive mind, was stressed. This requisite should be sought especially by university students. Dr. Curtin issued a warning against stop and start friends. In choosing a mate, his background and nationality should be considered before one becomes emotionally involved, the speaker warned.

The lecturer maintained that it is possible to capitalize on one's handicaps and change them into assets.

Saskatchewan Students' Council Blamed for Firing of Sheaf Editor

OPPOSE DICTATORIAL POLICY

The source of a veritable furore on and around the University of Saskatchewan campus, that which was tantamount to the firing of the editor of the Sheaf, U. of S. daily, was the cause of only a slight stir of student comment on the local campus. Some students were in favour of the resignation; others were, in some cases, strongly against it; the large majority had either not heard about the event, or were unwilling to express an opinion.

In the first group was a U.C. co-ed in I Arts who thought that the editorials were in very bad taste and that it was up to the editor of the Sheaf to avoid what was obviously an offensive title. Ken Hignett, a U.C. freshman, held a similar view. That the resignation was justified, was the opinion of John Clary, another freshman at U.C., who thought that since the paper was backed by the Students' (Continued on Page 4)

STUDENTS PROTEST NAZI PERSECUTION OF WEAK MINDRITIES

Joint Meeting Sponsored by S.C.M., Social Problems Club
Avukah Society

WILL FORM PLAN OF ACTION

To protest the Nazi persecution of minority groups and the Canadian government's indifference to the refugee problem a students' meeting is to be held tomorrow afternoon in University College, under the sponsorship of the S.C.M., the Social Problems Club and the Avukah Society. Speakers are to be Rev. C. A. Silcox, Secretary of the Social Service Council of Canada, and Rabbi Ruben A. Slonin of McCaul Street Synagogue.

According to Edna May Quentin, Secretary of the S.C.M., the purpose of the meeting is to produce a plan of action upon which the students may work. Miss Quentin said she would like to see a motion passed urging the Canadian government to co-operate in the refugee problem. This motion could then be laid before the Prime Minister.

The meeting will discuss the Nazi programs against the Jews, their persecution of other religious groups, and the sufferings of the Czechoslovakians.

All students are invited to the meeting, which will be held in Room 11, University College, tomorrow at five o'clock. The meeting is scheduled to last an hour.

LIONS WILL FEATURE DUKE ELLINGTON AT BALL

The Lion's Club of Toronto have caused a sensation in town by the announcement of a Giant Charity Ball featuring Duke Ellington and his famous orchestra.

Although Duke played the Meds Ball in January, this will be his first public appearance here since 1936. Ellington enthusiasts (and who isn't) are in for "a night of it" as the band will play for dancing from 8 till 1 a.m.

Improved "Blue Book" Current Best Seller

The Directory of Staff and Students came out yesterday. Seven thousand copies of the latest official publication went to the Registrar's Office at Simcoe Hall to all the colleges and federated colleges, and the eds and co-eds as well as the members of the faculty stocked to their source of supply to find out pertinent facts about each other.

This year's Directory is different from any previous edition. The cover is in a revolutionary blue tint, which, according to authorities in the field of fashion, should go well with ensembles in turquoise or ultramarine dirndl. Second innovation to catch the eyes of the casual browser is a telephone directory, which occupies the first two pages of the book. All the departments of the University have their telephone numbers listed, in addition to the telephone numbers of the students and their teachers. It is now possible, not only to look up a particular girl and phone her, but phone a residence and take your pick.

Comments on the new Directory were varied. One Theology student who insists on remaining anonymous, suggested that in future names of blondes be marked with an asterisk. But most students were favourably impressed. "Simply fascinating," was one freethinker. Besides the new additions, the 1938-1939 Directory shows one more change, which competent observers believe will have far-reaching effects. The little chart at the back, which used to add up the final total number of students, has been omitted. Encyclopedists who want to include University of Toronto statistics under College in Volume Blue will have to add up the totals given at the end of each faculty's allotment of pages.

A casual glance through this latest best seller to appear on the campus will show that there is not one Hawkins in the university, professor, lecturer or student. An intensive survey will reveal that there are a lot of Smiths.

SIMPLE RITUAL BEST PARKS DECLARES

Psychological and Physical Preparation for Marriage Advocated

Favouring a dignified, reverent and simple marriage ceremony, Rev. J. D. Parkes in his lecture yesterday on marriage, reminded his Hart House listeners of the influence which one's choice of wedding ceremony may exert on one's friends. A church or chapel wedding was advocated.

The blending of two backgrounds with both parties submerging, if necessary, their original environment to achieve mutual harmony was recommended by the speaker. The actual wedding ceremony, its date, ante-nuptial festivities and finally the honeymoon itself, should be well planned and timed, said Rev. Parkes. He also stressed the importance of psychological and physical preparation for marriage and strongly recommended a pre-marital course in economical, sexual and mental relationships for every engaged person.

THEOLOGS TAKE LEAD IN REED TROPHY RACE

Knox College, one of the smallest faculties in the University, boasting of no more than 100 men, is leading the way in the T. A. Reed Trophy race. Their supremacy is not so much due to any success their teams enjoy but rather to the enthusiasm and eagerness of the theologians who turn out for the many interfaculty events. This spirit should set an example for the other small faculties as well as the larger ones who may not realize that points are scored not only for winning games but also for entering men in the various sports.

CASSIDY AND McLEAN STAR

Playing for forty minutes without substitution the St. Michael's College lacrosse team scored a victory over Knox to the tune of 10-7 and jumped two points ahead of O.C.E. in the race for group leadership.

The score at half-time stood at 4-all and it was not until the last two quarters of play that the winners began to assert their superiority. McLean and Cassidy rapped in two quick goals at the beginning of the third quarter to put St. Mike's in the lead and in spite of a short-lived rally by Knox in the last period were never in any danger till the final whistle.

McLean and Cassidy were best for the winners, while Cassler was by far the most outstanding player on the purple squad.

Knox: Davis, Cassler, Cochrane, Spenser, Wilson, Henshaw, Near, and Alden.

Well-Matched Squads Determined to Snatch Interfaculty Football Honours

HALF-HOLIDAY ASSURED

Bitter rivals of the campus since away back when, the Medical and Engineering Faculties continue their feud today up at Varsity Stadium, the Junior Engineers meeting the Senior Doctors for the famed Mulock Cup, emblematic of interfaculty rugby supremacy.

The game, postponed from last Friday because of rain, is arousing interest throughout the university, while in the faculties concerned, with half-holidays assured, excitement is at fever pitch. It is expected that a huge crowd of students will watch the two outstanding faculty teams of 1938 battle it out for premier honours. Both squads have gone through the season unbeaten and undisturbed and have provided stirring, wide-open football.

Leading the Doctors' attack will be blond Freddy Glinket, probably the outstanding kicker in the interfaculty league, who also passes and runs with the best. Veteran S.R. Meds player Paul McGee, brilliant running half, is sure to give the tacklers plenty of trouble. Gus O'Brien, former Varsity intermediate snap, shapes up as a tower of strength dependably. EXPERIMENT FAULTY STUDENT CLAIMS

Language System, Invented
Recently, not yet
Perfect

"It is an interesting experiment but little else," said Aramis Johnson, Ontario College of Education student, of the new system of language teaching tried here this summer.

This course of instruction, designed to give the student a reading knowledge of a language after only ten hours of study, is based on word frequency lists. No memorization is involved, words are recognized by their form. Mr. Johnson volunteered to test the claims of this theory this July.

"I studied Ukrainian, a language of which I had no knowledge," he said. "In spite of the fact that I had the advantage of knowing some Russian, which is one of the roots of Ukrainian, the test was not a success. Although the theory does not differ very greatly from conventional teaching, it is superior (Continued on Page 4)

FRENCH CUISINE TOPIC OF ANDERSON'S ADDRESS

Monsieur Anderson of the French Department gave a brief outline of varied recipes when he spoke on "La Cuisine Française" at the second meeting of the French Club Wednesday.

M. Anderson related that Anatole France once said that "man has only two objects in life, to love and to eat."

He discussed some French menus, and specialties of certain districts of France that were very appetizing. He described some special restaurants, and recommended a few to the members.

"L'Ingenu", a French comedy, was ably portrayed by some of the leading members of the club.

There and Here

Although not in agreement with the editorials published by the editor of the Saskatchewan Sheaf, we have not been surprised to find that many students on this campus have been very much in favour of them. That fact only goes to strengthen our opinion that the editor of the Sheaf should be reinstated, until student opinion on the campus has proven that he is not the man wanted by the students to edit their paper.

After all in last year's Varsity there were editorials which expressed similar ideas, although certainly in a much more tasteful way, and the Students' Council here didn't take upon itself the liberty of discharging the editor. Nor did the authorities in the University try to throttle the expression of ideas with which they were probably not in full agreement.

Most universities realize that the quickest way to ruin a paper and an editor's job is to start stepping on his toes every time he prints an editorial which does not follow the line of popular thought. We are sure that we could pick out a representative Student's Council on this campus composed of ardent and sincere pacifists who would exchange The Varsity editorial board for that of the Sheaf. But those same pacifists haven't been trying to suppress the publication of our opinions.

Such a fracas, created because an editor had definitely radical ideas and printed them, and a Student Council President didn't like the editorials or the editor or something, will likely mean that the Sheaf will assume the aspect of a glorified bulletin board with a series of platitudinous boring editorials for the rest of the year.

We are glad that our paper is being printed in good old reactionary Toronto, where with all its conservatism, the press isn't entirely guzzled.

Campus Culture

In a few weeks several campus "literary" publications will appear in public. Many readers will complain of their highbrow contents. Obviously, this can mean one of three things; either the readers are lowbrow, or the editors are prigs, or they had to print something and simply did their best with the stuff at hand.

The complaints raise another question, however. How highbrow is a prig, or how low should our literature go?

It is all very well to say a style is obscure, but that observation only reflects on the author when the same ideas could have been expressed more simply. This is less often the case than most campus critics realize. There are few true synonyms in any language. And if a writer is trying to communicate any ideas more subtle than the bald arguments expressed here, he may find it necessary to use less common words.

Some of us go to college to learn how to do things (to think, for example), others to learn how to get others to do things for them.

Those who complain of the literary efforts of others seldom contribute anything themselves. They usually represent those good companions who want others to do things for them, to make hard thoughts simple, and to keep them comfortable mentally and physically.

If undergraduate authors confined themselves to comedy and bright sayings, the results would have a stink more foul than any serious effort, however pedantic.

More often than not a simple style but sustains a simple mind. And if we ever want to grow up, our editors had better be prigs than philistines.

Your Best Entertainment

Movies are your best entertainment. At least movies about university life are the college student's best entertainment. If you want to die laughing, and that's as good a way as any, don't fail to see every college picture that comes to town. After having seen five or ten products of the Hollywood conception of college life the following conclusions may be drawn.

1. All freshmen wander through the campus with their mouths open.
2. The captain of the rugby team is invariably an Adonis.
3. Any group of college students will at the least provocation burst into a harmonious version of Alma Mater.
4. There are no such things as lectures.
5. All professors wear spectacles ineptly and lose their self-control at crucial rugby games, shouting "Yippee!"
6. We always win even though a traitorous half-back sold our signals to Teddy Reeve.

The sad thing about the whole affair is that most theatregoers actually believe this. Thus when one irate taxpaying cinema addict expresses concern over the fact that college girls outdo Ann Corio and Gypsy Rose Lee in their show, he can be excused on the grounds that he is suffering from an acute attack of double-billitis.

APRIL MUSIC Drama

Pins and Needles

Something new in musical comedies visited Toronto when Pins and Needles made its debut last night at the Royal Alec. The cast is a group of young people, all members of the I.L.G.W.U. . . . International Ladies Garment Workers Union, to you.

Originally a little revue presented for their own amusement, Pins and Needles was received with such acclaim that it was held over and finally taken to Broadway about a year ago. P.S. It is still running on Broadway and while the original company is touring the United States and Canada it is being replaced by a second company.

Chief feature of the show is its unassuming and fresh approach as compared to the lavish Ziegfeld, Earl Carroll and George White musical extravaganzas that have visited the Royal Alec. Two pianos instead of the usual thirty-piece orchestra . . . a small cast instead of the usual Ziegfeldian horde of acrobats, jugglers, tap-dancers, magicians, and legs.

There is an almost continuous tinkle of very catchy music running through the show and most of the dialogue is in recitative style . . . with the rhyme in the Ogden Nash fashion. Catchiest tune in the show is Sunday in the Park. The scene of the same name is the cleverest and best staged of the whole production.

Funniest scene in the show is the one entitled Four Little Angels of Peace in which Hitler, Mussolini, Chamberlain and a Jap appear dressed in wings and halos.

Best in the show are Harold Clark and Ruth Rubinstein. The former stole the show with his Mussolini take-off. The latter had the audience in the aisles with her mournful ballad Chain Store Daisy.

One of the most impressive features of the show was the amazing precision and teamwork of these comparatively inexperienced actors, as well as the even division of the limelight and the absence of "stars". Noteworthy too was the sincerity of the cast in their desire for their presentation to have "social significance".

U.C. Alumnae

Miss Black Sheep, the play put on by the Dramatic Club of the University College Alumnae Association in Hart House last night, was distinguished by its racy dialogue and situations which were typically English. The plot seemed to centre around the idea that still waters run deep, only in this case they

BRIG NANCY BOMBED BY REBELS

Wiregarters is Machine-gunned by Plane as He Attempts to Escape on Lifeboat with the Provisions

CONDITION CRITICAL

While running a cargo of coloured beads through the straits of Gibraltar, The Brig Nancy was attacked by an unknown trimotor bomber amphibian believed to be the one from the rebel base at the foot of Bay Street.

The markings on the plane were not plainly visible, but Wiregarters swears that it is the one used by the Globe and Mail to smuggle banned Gies pictures to the New York Herald Tribune.

It happened at dawn when the skipper was sunning himself on the poop-deck. Before he had a chance to man the anti-aircraft guns the Brig Nancy had been struck three times in a vital spot.

"Last man over the side is a sissy," yelled the captain. All hands took to the boats as one man, and the cargo of coloured beads was left to the sharks who received them with a murmur of thanks.

Wiregarters stuck with the ship till the end and went down three times for no apparent reason. Getting tired of this he swam to the nearest piece of mainland where he was Majorca, where he amazed the natives by wading ashore and demanding food and lodging for the week ending Nov. 4th.

The rest of the crew were last seen rounding the horn with the aeroplane in hot pursuit.

Wiregarters recounted the tale to a gathering of old salts down at Bloody Nell's the other night. Frankly we were inclined to doubt it, but the Majorcas will vouch for it (they will do anything for a laugh!).

To the Editor.
Dear Sir:
The Oklahoma Daily has, it would appear, (editorial, Nov. 15), found at long last, the solution to the present chaotic state of international affairs. By balancing two sides of an algebraic equation, they have concluded that X, the unknown, is Russia. Stand by Russia and we are saved! It goes further to allege that Russia is an advanced democracy, and it is this statement to which I strenuously object. What would happen if I were to advocate in Russia a peaceful change in the form of gov-

Speaking OF SPORT

By Ed Goodman

EXIT MR. FOOTBALL

This afternoon football makes its 1938 grand exit from the University of Toronto campus, when Sr. Meds and Jr. School play in the Mulock Cup finals. The Mulock Cup is the most traditional of all intramural titles and School and Meds are the two bitterest interfaculty rivals. All of which points to one of the best cup finals for a long time. Both teams have gone through their seasons unbeaten and untied and it will be a fierce struggle before one of the tightest records is broken. If the hard charging School line can keep Fred Clinkett, Meds' triple threat ace, under control, then they should win the championship, but Clinkett will be no easy man to stop. The Medical faculty have prepared song-sheets for the occasion and every embryonic doctor in the university is reported as intending to turn out to cheer on their team to victory. The game should be hard fought and thrilling, but even if it isn't we are prepared to guarantee amusement in the stands when the Doctors and Engineers get together. It begins at 2:30 at the Stadium.

INTRAMURAL STANDINGS

Somewhere else on the sports page are the intramural standings in the race for the T. A. Reed Trophy. S.P.S., last year's victors, have not waited until the last two weeks this year to jump into the lead, but have taken the command position right from the start. Last year's runners up, Wycliffe, are now in third position just behind Knox. Victoria, who along with School captured the most individual trophies in the 1937-38 struggle, are down in 6th position. The Scarle and Gold lads believe in concentrating their strength and entering fewer teams than a faculty of their size is supposed to have, according to the point system. But this year with the football title already lost they may find themselves without titles and without points. However, they have got the track title already chalked up to their credit.

As we just stated, Wycliffe, who were just nosed out by School last year, are once again making a determined effort to win the title. There are very few faculties in the university that possess more school spirit than the Anglican Theologues. Their soccer team just won their group and are now in the playoffs. At the first round-robin game against Vic more than nine-tenths of the student body and every member of the staff were out to support the team. It certainly would be a great boost to intramural sport if a few more faculties were just half as spirited. Foremost and most persistent offender is University College. The largest faculty in the university, U.C. has been making no showing for years either in the competitive side of sport, or what is still worse, in getting people to turn out for the teams or to support them when they play. This year's Athletic Director, Ken Stewart, has been working overtime in an effort to dispel this condition, and a slight improvement is being shown, but there certainly is room for more co-operation from the students. There is nothing that helps a team as much as the knowledge that their efforts are appreciated, and a few spectators at the various intramural contests certainly would live things up.

AN AUSPICIOUS DEBUT

Varsity senior hockey team started off the season by proving that all the nice things said about them have good foundation when they defeated Native Sons Juniors 7 to 2 in an exhibition game last night. Native Sons are being highly-touted in Junior O.H.A. circles, have had more practice and conditioning than Varsity, and so the win is decidedly impressive. Dick Craig sparked the Toronto attack with two goals. Dick has been going like a house on fire in practice and he should have a big year. Art Frenes of last year's squad was not out yesterday and it looks as if he is going to confine himself to his studies this winter.

BOXERS AND WRESTLERS AWAIT JUNIOR ASSAULT

By Owen Prichard

The 5 to 6 sessions in the boxing, wrestling and fencing rooms at Hart House are getting busier every day in preparation for the approaching tournaments, particularly the Junior Inter-faculty Assault on December 14th and 15th. This tournament is open to any man who has not yet won a bout in interfaculty competition. Thus a double purpose is served, that of giving a chance to beginners and also of supplying material for intercollegiate teams. Special nights are set aside for the instruction of novices. Every aspirant has an opportunity to demonstrate his prowess as a grappler, or in the use of the gloves and foils.

"Chesty" Martin is quite hopeful for the success of his wrestling charges. There is a dearth in the heavyweight division, but generally speaking there are enough of last year's intercollegiate squad to form the nucleus of a real team for this year. In the 175 lb. class, Schwenger, Phoenix of O.C.E., and Scott are back. Amos is wrestling at 155, and a fresh named Esson (late of Broadview Y) is almost sure of a berth. Dr. Les Black and Mel Gionna report a real interest among the fis-cuffers. This department seems to be the busiest of all three. The careful coaching given here (as well as among the grapplers and fencers) is being responded to by the students, and the results are encouraging. The boxing class has doubled its attendance this year, and the quality is there as well. Hearst at 118 lbs., and Joe Piggett show promise. Jack Piggett expects to fight at 175 and De Wolfe at 155. Bill Raymore of School is again in the 145 group. Cudge Dillon is also back from last year's team, at 118 lbs.

Mr. Walters, the fencing coach, also is optimistic, with Garcia, the intercollegiate champ, and Wilson once more on deck. Among the new men, Heller, Horsey and Magee are outstanding.

ST. MIKE'S MAJORS SEEK HOCKEY TITLE

Star Newcomers, Quigley and Dunbar, Impress at Practice

DR. LAFLAMME CONFIDENT

By Charles Dubin

(Editor's note—This is the first of a series of seven articles dealing with hockey teams in the junior O.H.A. Big Seven group.)

One of the hardest tasks to confront any coach in the city, is the one which Coach Jerry Laflamme has to face in choosing his St. Mike's Majors hockey team for 1938-39. Over 100 aspirants turned out for the first practice and Dr. Laflamme has already cut the squad down to 40, from which two teams, the Majors and the Buzzers, will be chosen.

Last year the Majors reached the play-offs in the Big Seven Junior O.H.A. group, being beaten in the semi-finals by Oshawa Generals, Dominion finalists. This year with such a large turn-out and the loss of only 3 of the old guard, St. Mike's should have an even stronger team than last year, and are a definite threat for the title.

The three players lost to the team are Inglis and Schnurr, who were on the first string line last year, and Smith, an alternate. But there are plenty of new candidates for the vacancies. Two new forwards, who have shown up well in practice, are Johnny Quigley and Don Dunbar, both from Calgary. Other leading candidates are Freddy Ralph, Japlin, and Tommy Somers, who was with the team the end of last year.

MEDS GAIN BERTH IN SOCCER FINALS

Defeat Dentistry to Win Playdowns Against Victoria

Meds visualized championship aspirations yesterday afternoon when they plunged themselves into the interfaculty soccer playdowns by virtue of a 1-0 win over College of Dentistry, on the front campus. The Doctors will now mark time until Thursday when they take on the Victoria eleven.

The game was close with neither team showing up to too great an advantage. In the first half both teams muddled up many well earned scoring chances by becoming too excited when they found themselves in front of their opponents' citadel.

In the latter half of the game Meds clinched a scoreless forty-five minutes when Boyd sifted through the defence to send home a bullet shot from his talented toe which had goaltender McLeod beaten all the way. From here on Meds settled down to defensive tactics and held the Molarmen scoreless for the rest of the game.

As the score would indicate the game was closely contested and both teams deserve credit for turning in good efforts. Boyd of Meds, who scored the only goal, Lore, Kline and Seymour, of the same team, turned in fine efforts. McLeod and Wishart played fine soccer for the Dentistry boys.

Meds: Emmett, Townsend, Parker, Seymour, Lore, Joseph, Kline, Cooke, Boyd, Green, Prouse, Routley, Lane, Holmes, Pashberg.
Dents: McLeod, McCall, Schwart, Wishart, McEwen, Werdell, Scott, McCay, Lucy, Antoni, Alford, Cameron, Roberts, Mackay.

Sr. Meds, self-styled "wonder team" that has only lost three games in the last three years, continued their fight to regain the title they lost to Dents last year, when they defeated Sr. Vic in yesterday's volleyball game. Vic, playing with only five men, took the first game 15-10. But the Doctors came back strong and won the next two encounters, 15-6 and 15-8. Freshette and Jones stood out for the losers while as usual the Meds' game was sparked by Wise and Gates.

didn't. The more interesting possibilities are sacrificed for the young love happy ending.

Doris Shiell as Miss Black was adequately witty wacky in the first two acts but missed a grand chance for some genuine emoting later on. Jean Dow bounced about having a marvelous time as the exuberant younger daughter Fris whose fabrications have such disastrous results. Her movements were too jerky most of the time and it was difficult to follow her. Earle Fisher as Michael Hayes, the dashing lover and Agnes Muldrew as Lady Mary the prospective mother-in-law along with Alison Ewart and Jean Stewart, were well cast. The whole play was characterized by the enthusiasm of the participants.

VARSITY STAFF MAN NOW STRIKE MARTYR

Apartment-House Workers Gain Sympathy of Varsity Man

By Arthur J. Benton
(Staff Writer, The Varsity)
New York, Nov. 21—

EVERYTHING HAPPENS TO US. Just when we get down to some real hard studying for a mid-term examination which promises to throw us for a six-day loss the employees of the apartment house where we have our one-room version of The Englishman's Castle go out on strike. Elevator boys, handy man, furnace man, maids, in fact everyone except one non-union maid and the two housekeepers (regarded, we suppose, as white-collar workers) have chosen to exercise the one right left to Labour.

THE EXACT FACTS of the dispute are not known to us. We choose to remain contented with one or two general inquiries, because it seems every day we sympathetically interest ourselves in a strike we get it in the neck. For example, as the Toronto taxi strike neared its deadline we remember telephoning union headquarters to find out whether a certain large cab company had lost its Union Station contract. We were nice and sympathetic. In fact we even gave our right name and address when interrogated. But not only did we not get a satisfactory answer, but we nearly got our head bashed in (over the telephone) on the suspicion of being a labour spy, or something.

THEREFORE WE ARE UNABLE as much as we regret it, to speak with the voice of authority. Once bitten, twice shy. However, we do know that long hours is the major item. And at the risk of converting The Varsity into an "un-American publication" we will say that they have something to kick about. Working twelve hours a day, for we can imagine what wages, the elevator boys in this right story building time to answer loud telephones and stoke the furnace. Exerting ourselves to the utmost to be impartial, we must confess that another man or two is definitely needed to take adequate care of things.

INASMUCH AS WE ARE, we like to think, an amateur of the drama, we usually seek out the irony in real life situations. But it is not necessary to exert our critical faculties overmuch in this case. Because only yesterday we had a long talk with the owner of the building, the subject being Roosevelt mostly, with a dash or two of political "ism". Without actually calling the president a rat, our friend pointed out "how every wave of political, social and economic liberalism was followed by poor business conditions".

With Frank Shuster

THE COLLEGE YEAR-BOOK at Poughkeepsie, entitled the Vassarion, recently issued a poll for their undergraduates. . . . Seniors were named to various posts including "Class Cleopatra", "Class Harpo Marx", "Most Kissable Lips", "99 44-100 per cent pure", and so on . . . but there were other categories in which they placed the co-eds. . . . Some of them are: "She wandered lonely as a cloud." "Hail to thee, blithe spirit!" "Just can't get her poor self together."

"Oh that this too solid flesh might melt." "Her shoes were number nine."

. . . BEAUTIFUL THOUGHTS, BEAUTIFUL THOUGHTS. . . .

DOES AN APPLE A DAY really keep the doctor away? . . . One Oklahoma student doesn't seem to think so. . . . It seems that while munching on an apple, he took one bite too many, which means he took one bite too big, and wound up with a dislocated jaw. . . . Doctors at the infirmary struggled with it but they couldn't get it back into place. . . . They finally decided to insert two blocks of wood between the unfortunate fellow's jaw, and as the student bit down on the wood . . . the doctor inserted pressure on the jaw-bone, and before he knew it . . . jaws broke out from the medics . . . the jaw was in the groove.

THIS HAPPENED AT SYRACUSE. . . . At a recent examination, five students suddenly stood up and walked out of the room where the examination was being given. . . . The instructor was rather perturbed at this rather violent action and asked for reasons for the walk-out. . . . A spokesman for the secession replied. . . . "We refuse to compete against the cribbing that is taking place here" . . .

SPECIAL NOTE FOR MALE STUDENTS . . . Hedy Lamarr was at the Harvard-Yale game last Saturday . . . AHHHHHHH!

NOTES OFF THE ELBOW . . . Columbia University is fostering the "international point of view" through a newly organized Council of International Publications. . . . With a gift of $225,000, Harvard University has opened a new graduate school of public administration. . . . At Iowa State a large number of co-eds applied for the university band and the band leader being an enterprising chap decided to find out whether a co-ed band would go over . . . mainly for ornamental purposes. . . . Surprisingly, the girls turned out to be good musicians, and from now on, the girl band will be a regular institution. . . . The campus tradition of classroom singing has been revived at the University of California. . . . Winchell informs us that at a recent practice session at C.C.N.Y., the football coach adopted a clever way of teaching his men how to tackle hard. . . . He gave the boys an effigy of Hitler to use as a tackling dummy. . . . The players that day, tackled with a vengeance. . . .

VARSITY STUDENTS VALUE FREEDOM

Council, and the article was not plainly the opinion of the writer as it appeared in the Sheaf, the editor was at fault. Gwen Plant, II Arts, stated that it was an insult to the veterans who, she thought, were not mercenary, but were willing to sacrifice their lives for the sake of their country.

Steering a middle course was Duncan Gray, III Arts, who said that the editor himself would have to be consulted "before we can pass judgment".

Opinion against the resignation was much stronger. A Graduate student thought that editorial opinion should not be interfered with, and he agreed with the article wholeheartedly. G. M. Dent, IV Arts, was enthusiastically in favour of the article. "Where is your freedom of the press? What is the difference between this and Germany?" were his rhetorical questions. He stated that the article was "great stuff". A freshman at U.C. showed similar enthusiasm: "It is ridiculous, and I entirely agree with the editor's opinion," he said.

More reserved opinions were expressed by a fourth year Household Economics student, and a co-ed in second year at Victoria College. The former was of the opinion that the Sheaf was the voice of the student body, and as such should be allowed its freedom. She also said that, after all, last year's editor was not running the paper. The latter stressed the importance of the freedom of the press.

The last opinion obtained was that of U.C.'s first year president, who was in favour of the article. He believed that, since the president of the Students' Representative Council at Saskatchewan had been the editor last year, and since he knew the president and this year's editor were on bad terms with each other, the railroad was evident.

prior in some respects. It is a functional rather than a grammatical study; its approach is much more direct. Although the idea of the teaching is quite sound, its claims were far too great."

Mr. Johnson felt, too, that the theory was labouring under a disadvantage because the word-frequency lists were not chosen as carefully as they might have been. The original ten hours for study was increased to 24 when it was seen that the system was not working as well as expected. The idea, conceived here by a University of Toronto graduate, Redpath Drummond, is a variation of a popular theory of language teaching. If it was a success, it was to be used, to a large extent, on foreigners of this city studying in night school to give them a reading and speaking knowledge of English.

erument? Obviously, I would ascertain beforehand the adequacy of my life insurance. And yet, Communists have been brazen effrontery to demand free speech in Canada. They want free speech to urge upon us a form of government which does not tolerate free speech. They are thoroughly inconsistent. It is forgotten also, that Nazism or National Socialism, is but a variant of the same form of government which now exists in Russia.

England is criticized for not having gone to the aid of Czechoslovakia and China. People who live in glass houses do not, as a rule, throw stones. We might accuse the United States of the same crime.

The moral is an obvious one. The British Commonwealth and the U.S.A. are the only important places where today every man is guaranteed religious and political freedom. The government is responsible for the blood of each and every citizen. In this chaos and confusion, wherein human life and liberty mean nothing, these countries stand out as a beacon to a dark and gloomy world. God bless the true democracies.

MEDS MEET SCHOOL FOR MULOCK CUP

Clinkett's towering hoists leaves the opposition little opportunity to get loose.

S.P.S. has proven to be exceedingly well balanced. A fast hard-charging wingline is backed by a brilliant half-line composed of Barry, Munro and Kilpatrick. Ronny Fugler calls the signals and handles the kicking. Throughout the season the Junior Engineers have displayed a brilliant running attack, Fugler showing himself a master at the art of starting an end run.

Today's tilt shapes up as a crowd-pleaser and a thriller in every way. The chance-taking, thrilling style of play of both teams combined with traditional rivalry of these faculties promises the outstanding game of the year. By winning today Junior School can equal Victoria College's record of nine wins, while Sr. Meds can pull themselves within striking distance of these two by capturing their seventh victory today. In every respect the game is a "natural".

HERBERT HOOVER RECEIVES VARSITY ON TORONTO VISIT

Refuses to Discuss Anglo-American Trade Agreement

FORESEES BETTER TIMES

"The student who graduates from university today is going into a world that is coming upon better times," said Herbert Hoover, ex-president of the United States, in an exclusive interview with The Varsity yesterday. Mr. Hoover, who was Republican president from 1929 to 1933, and is still one of the leading figures in the Republican party, visited Toronto yesterday to address a dinner-meeting of Mr. Denison Massey's York Bible Class.

The ex-president has been in close contact with university life for some time. He is on the governing body of Leland Stanford University, and lives on the campus there. It was on the basis of this experience that he declined to give any "moral lectures" to university students.

However, he did compare the situation which faces the graduating student today with the similar situation in his own day. "I graduated into the middle" (Continued on page 3)

WRITERS ADVISED ON RADIO DIALOGUE

Continuity Writer for C.B.C. Addresses Women's Press Club

WARNS AGAINST SUBTLETY

Miss Monica Muggan, continuity writer for the C.B.C., advised the members of the Women's Press Club yesterday as to the technique they should follow if they attempted to write any plays for radio production. She said that the radio offered the best field for young dramatists today.

The most important thing to remember in writing radio dramas is that the audience can see none of the action. All actions must be alluded to in the script, and all characters (of which (Continued on page 2)

Three Students to Appear in Court on Charge of Disturbing Peace
RELEASED ON BAIL

As an aftermath of the celebration which hailed McGill's football championship on Saturday, three students will appear in court on November 28 to face charges of disturbing the peace and damaging property.

Arrested at the German Harmonia Club, Douglas Campbell, John N. Parker, and Earle A. White all third year Arts students, were released on bail of twenty-five dollars each. Claims against the club amount to $300 in alleged damages. It is believed the students will plead not guilty.

Trouble followed a parade in which three thousand persons, including students and spectators, marched through downtown Montreal. After snake dancing through the lobby of the Mount Royal Hotel, the crowd dispersed with the exception of a few hundred persons. Impatient for the next move, this group took up the cry "On to the German Club!"

Engineers Prepare For School Dinner

The traditional event of the School year, the School Dinner, takes place at Hart House this Thursday.

Pre-dinner surveys point to one of the best and most interesting dinners in recent years. Hart House chefs will spread themselves in a tasty turkey dinner. With what speeches, toasts, a rousing song, and professional entertainment, the boys should enjoy themselves as only engineers can.

Four outstanding engineers, School graduates, will speak on "The Status of an Engineer". Speakers are: Dr. J. B. Chaffin, president of the Engineering Institute of Canada, vice-president of the Shawinigan Power Co.; Austin Wright, general secretary, Engineering Institute of Canada; G. A. Gaherty, president Montreal Engineering Co., director of Calgary Power Co.; Fred Newell, chief engineer, Dominion Bridge Co.

The School Dinner has been the traditional function of the year since the first years of the School of Practical Science. This will be the 49th Annual Dinner.

NEW TRINITY REVIEW APPEARS ON CAMPUS

The second issue of the Trinity Review for the current year has made its appearance on the campus.

Headlining the issue is an article Should We Ask Questions, by J. N. Emerson. This article concerns the recent Czechoslovakian crisis, and advises a questioning attitude towards such issues.

Fiction in the issue includes Night Road by Morgan Reid, The Man from Padunah by W. J. Haight, and Two Tales by J. M. Careless.

Announcement of a prize award for the best humorous material, prose or verse, in the next issue, is made.

Also included in the Review are drama criticisms and Convoction Notes.

WYCLIFFE HONOUR TO BE PRESENTED TO TWEEDSMUIR

Governor-General Expected to Address Students on Religious Work

Tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock Wycliffe College is to be honoured by a visit from Lord Tweedsmuir, the Governor-General of Canada.

A few words of welcome will be addressed by Rev. Dr. R. B. McEhleran, principal of Wycliffe College. Lord Tweedsmuir will then speak to the students. His subject has not been determined but it is expected that he will discuss the value and great need for religious work in our far flung Dominion.

During this week the foresters will be hard at work organizing material for the dance setting of Friday. Camp sites in the depths of the woods will be represented throughout Hart House and in the course of the evening a camp supper will add the extra touch to the spirit of the night.

Household Economics Girls Think Less Scientific Course is Needed

Have the women of today abandoned their time-honoured domain... the kitchen? Judging from the enrolment in the Household Economics course and the enthusiasm of its members, domestic science has assumed an honoured place in scientific studies.

The cooking done by the girls of the Household Science Building consists in trying all the wrong ways to cook in order to learn the right way. This is called experimental cookery. They may eat the finished dish if they so desire, but according to Doreen Melloy of Victoria, B.C., who usually burns her concoctions, one does not always care to. Vegetables must be experimented on according to their colour. For instance, potatoes are cooked differently from tomatoes because the former are white and the latter red. You may not think so, but this is important.

Not only can the Household Economics co-eds cook, they can also play the needle. Before the end of the year they expect to have made a complete outfit for themselves. Sewing is popular with most of the girls. Its practical value is evident from the statement of Helen Irwin who took sewing last year. She said that she made most of her own clothes this summer.

NEGATIVE WINS VICTORIA DEBATE

McMaster Opposition Wins Majority; Decides Against Return of Colonies

The resolution that Germany should be granted colonial territories, was defeated last night by a vote of seventeen to eleven in the intercollegiate debate at Victoria.

The winners, the opposition from McMaster, were June Attig and Georgia Whitaker, while the team from Varsity consisted of government leader Margaret Easto of Victoria, and Agnes Ireland of Trinity.

In support of their contention the government claimed that Germany should not always be treated as a defeated enemy and that by the Versailles treaty we offered her no alternative, other than to organize on a war basis.

In opposition, the McMaster team asserted that Hitler's claim that Germany may needs the colonies as an outlet for surplus population contradicts his constant encouragement of an increase of population within the Reich and that (Continued on page 3)

An imperative need for moral re-education was stressed by Hon. Herbert Hoover, ex-president of the United States, in a talk to the York Bible Class last night.

HAWKINS INVADES OTHER COLLEGES

85 PER CENT APPROVE

Following her triumphant visit to the University of Toronto, Sadie Hawkins has been received with open arms at both the University of Western Ontario and at McGill in Montreal.

From Western and McGill comes the news that the males are literally swamped with dates. Clothing stores and restaurants report business booming, with the advent of this unheard-of reverse in the social system.

In a survey made by the McGill Daily newspaper, on Sadie Hawkins' popularity, over 85 per cent voiced their enthusiastic approval. In fact, so great was the enthusiasm of the Engineers at both universities, that they have actually started to take an interest in their appearance, some going so far as to put on a clean shirt and get their hair done before Sadie called around.

MRS. M. MOORE TO TALK TODAY ON GOOD SPEECH

Mrs. Dora Mavor Moore, actress and director, will speak in the theatre of the Women's Union this afternoon at 4.30. Her subject will be "A Plea for Good Speech". Mrs. Moore, who has had many years of experience on the professional stage both in England and on this continent, was formerly leading lady with Sir Philip Ben Greet's company at London's famous Old Vic Theatre. She is now director of the Village Players and is in charge of dramatics at Forest Hill School.

The lecture is under the sponsorship of the University College Players Guild and is open to all undergraduates.

Meds Take Lead in Last Quarter to Win Game

CLINKETT STARS

By Dick Stewart

Superior in almost every department of play, Earl Selkirk's great Senior Med football team captured the Mullock Cup at Varsity Stadium yesterday afternoon, defeating Junior S.P.S. 13-7. The Engineers were outplayed, out-kicked and outplayed by an inspired Medical team who tackled like demons and opened gaping holes in the line time and time again.

The Engineers jumped into the lead near the end of the first quarter when Stirling completed Fugler's 35 yard pass on the Meds 25 yard line. Barry's attempted placement went wide, but the Engineers got the ball on the five yard line when Clinkett fumbled after running the kick out from well behind the line. Munro plunged over on the second attempt, Barry failing to convert. The Doctors came right back (Continued on page 4)

LEWIS FORESEES PARTY UPSWING

Faction's Policy and Morality Seen as Desire of Canadians

NEW TYPE OF CANDIDATE

The C.C.F. offers a new type of political candidate who is honest and sincere according to Mr. David Lewis, speaking at the C.C.F. study group yesterday afternoon. Mr. Lewis, who has just returned from a Canadian tour, is the full time National Secretary of the C.C.F. party. McGill graduates and Rhodes scholar, He outlined the history of the movement and estimated its present force.

The leaders have had to grow with the party, he stated, due to the late rise of progressive people's political movement here. The Canadian capitalist expansion period came to an end almost with the last depression, hence there has been no long development of labour as in England. Mr. Lewis showed how opinion has been consolidated within the C.C.F. since 1935.

"Alberta defection from Premier Albert has nowhere to go except to the C.C.F., and in British Columbia the response to appeal for funds shows the movement is on the upswing."

"The general approach, policy and morality of the C.C.F. seem to have hit the right note for Canadian people," he concluded.

A Happy Birthday

Last week the Bolshevik Revolution celebrated its twenty-first anniversary with a gigantic display in the Red Square at Moscow. An outsider hearing the loud speakers blare out such cheers as "Long Live the World Revolution", "Long Live the Leader (Stalin) of the International Working Class!", "Long Live the Proletarian Revolution!", would assume that the party was a solid group united in a common purpose, and that the twenty-one years had culminated in success.

This is far from true. Difficulties both external and internal have beset the Communist Revolution from the hour of its birth. Internal disintegration has threatened to annihilate its accomplishments since before the revolution of 1917.

Communists inside and outside Russia are finding the yoke of their thoroughgoing leader no light one. Trotskyism still has its adherents, and these object that Stalin's "zigzag" methods are benefiting Stalin and Russia much more than the cause of World Revolution. They feel that the outpouring of "Moscow Gold" into China, though it may check Japan, furthers the Proletarian Party not a whit; that the $2,000,000 transferred via Lloyd's to the leaders of the British General Strike—most of whom were not even Communists—was a squandering of funds and a betrayal of principle.

Externally, there have been world-wide set-backs to Russian and Communist aims and prestige—from the collapse of Bela Kun in Hungary (1919) to the desperate plight of the Spanish Lefists today. And since the Sudeten crisis, the latest triumph of Fascism, many devoted revolutionaries have forsaken the party. The Bolshevik Revolution celebrates its coming of age under conditions far from perfect.

It Still Exists

The statement by Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec that enforcement of the Padlock Law would be continued, together with the raids and court cases, brings up again the question of the law's constitutionality.

When M. Duplessis said, "They protest about my law, but they have never been able to point to one abuse of it," he must have overlooked some of the raids made on bookstores and private homes in his province. He could not have known that only two days after he spoke, his government would authorize seizure from a residence of papers deemed by themselves to list names of persons "supporting Communism". He could not have approved of the arbitrary holding, for a time, of a sum of private money.

He must have forgotten, also, that in the opinion of many, his law is at variance with our basic precepts of justice. Written into our constitution, these say that no one shall be penalized unless proved guilty of a specific crime.

This "act respecting Communist propaganda" stipulates the padlocking of premises as the penalty, and provides for everything except a proof of guilt and a definition of the crime. These two unknown quantities depend for their meaning not upon statute or the law courts, but upon the prejudices of one man, the attorney-general.

Under such conditions, civil liberty is not guaranteed. There can be no assurance against an apparently legal infringement by a despotic government of the right of individuals.

Theoretically, there is little difference in category between a government that can define to its liking a crime, and impose a padlock, and a government that can treat as a crime any opposition to its program, and confine the opponents in concentration camps. Both bring punishment without proof of guilt in an impartial court. And both leave the interpretation of what is meant by the crime to the government itself.

No matter how discreetly the padlock may be applied, its potentialities as a weapon of tyranny are unlimited. To allow this symbol to go unchallenged would be to invite further invasion of the field of civil liberty in other parts of Canada.

It is time that the demands of some of the intelligent democratic groups in Quebec were recognized, and action taken by the Federal government.

The Review Reviewed

Undergraduate literature is not always mature. Sometimes it is, but not often. Possibly it should not so presume. Take, for example, the November issue of the Trinity University Review.

The most revealing due to the Socratic personality of this issue is Mr. Emerson's pleasantly critical "Should We Ask Questions?". This plea for a less misleading use of the language technique of social communication is heralded sympathetically by Mr. Owen's editorial, "Problems of Expression". The theme is a good one, but it recurs rather often. The last movement is Mr. Maybee's postscript, "Ontario Juvenilia" which indicates the literary frailties of high school students.

Most of the contributions are short. They are written to be read, but they are unnecessarily simple, unless the readers are assumed to be simple-minded. They touch ideas just enough to thrill at contact with the surfaces, and then stand back to admire the colour. They never try to weigh the things. After all, they are artists not scientists.

As art most of the work is good, especially Mr. Careless's "Two Tales"; as logic the articles are shallow but not without appeal. Most stimulating page—Mr. Piper's violent sneeze at orthodoxy entitled "Mental Gymnastics"; as delightful a piece of palpable campus sophistry, seasoned with sense, as this reviewer has yet been privileged to enjoy.

The rest of the magazine is readable, largely of college interest, better than the corresponding items of most campus periodicals. Mr. Reid's attempt at impressionistic narrative is less impressive than some, likewise Mr. Rolph's rather glib two pages on "The Importance of History".

The Varsity is sorry to hear that Mr. Newton Rowell has been forced to resign his position as Chief Justice of Ontario and chairman of the Royal Commission. The announcement made last night by Prime Minister MacKenzie King that the Chief Justice was forced to leave his post on account of ill health must have brought regret to many Canadian citizens. It is indeed unfortunate that such a prominent and successful citizen has to leave his work when he has reached the position where he is able to do so much for his nation.

It is hoped that Mr. Rowell will soon be restored to good health again so that he will be enabled to assume once more some of those duties, the fulfilling of which have enriched the life of Canadians so much.

Toronto Symphony

After its remarkable Sibelius of two weeks ago, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra returned to normal last night, playing in its customary broadly enthusiastic style, but with little polish. This is not altogether a complaint, because there are occasions when broad enthusiasm is quite as acceptable as polish, while the reverse is not necessarily true.

Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 5 is such an occasion. This bewildering assemblage of melodies is almost purely emotional in its appeal; its themes are perhaps deceptively obvious and can be depended upon to appear under their own power, so that a rugged performance such as it usually receives from the T.S.O. may be far from displeasing when the approach of the players is sympathetic. Last night's performance offered no innovations, except for some magnificently spirited passages from the new oboe and the usual quota of unofficial variations from the brass and woodwind sections. CRIME ON THE CAMPUS

This is the first of a series of articles dealing with the astonishing prevalence of crime on the University of Toronto campus which is being sponsored by Special Prosecutor Unluf Wiregaters honorary president of the Junior G-men of the University of Toronto.

1. SMASHING THE DIRECTORY COMBINE

When my special squad of Junior G-men shot down One-ear Shyster last night upon a billiards table, they wrote fairs to a long career of crime and ended the reign of terror of the directory combine. The directory combine was one of the worst rackets ever to hit the campus.

By means of beards and trick disguises One-ear and his henchmen had succeeded in collecting all the student directories and storing them away. Then when the demand became great these rats of the underworld sold the books at two dollars apiece. BUT CRIME DOES NOT PAY . . . and so we smashed this nefarious racket.

there should be very few) should be introduced separately with a complete build-up.

The dialogue should be racy, no long monologues. The radio writer should avoid all subtlety because the "twelve-year-old mind" of the great American public doesn't recognize subtlety. There should be more action than in stage plays, and the plot should be very, very simple. Her advice was "to pour forth and then hammer home".

In the preparation of script for radio the author must give indication of all sound effects desired, the emphasized words, and the manner in which each speech is to be delivered.

Miss Muga also told the club some of her early experiences in radio work in Calgary, when they made their own microphones and one person handled the whole station. Script writers had to be careful to avoid sibilants because they would, if delivered too forcibly, blow a tube and put the whole station out of commission.

of the work is sound and in the best of taste.

Orrea Pernel, the assisting violinist, was disappointing. Her technique was at best uneven, and her tone strangely commonplace and lacking in uniformity. For some perverse reason she did her best work in the tricky last movement of Mendelssohn's Concerto, and in her encore, a rather Bachian work for violin alone, unfamiliar to us. A trace of nervousness and a not too responsive instrument may have had some effect on her playing, but there were at least two men in the ranks behind her who could have done the Concerto more efficiently and with greater understanding. The orchestra is still not at its best in dealing with a concerto, there being a marked tendency to throw off all restraint and go to town as soon as the soloist passes.

The program began with the overture to Mozart's The Magic Flute before the lady had quite settled down, and included a transcription by MacMillan in the approved Tschaikowsky manner of the choral prelude, In These is Joy, by Bach.

this moral and spiritual rcarmament. "It is also the mission of all thinking laymen," he said.

Mr. Hoover pictured the totalitarian states of the world as proclaiming new ideologies of economic security to sanctify personal power. He told of persecution of the Jews in Germany, the political executions in Russia, and the bitter class war in Spain. Japan, he said, is making a war of aggression upon China as horrible as that of Genghis Khan.

Today, he continued, nations are arming as never before in history for some unknown conflict. But our democracies have greater moral troubles than these imports.

Toronto, Ontario,

Dear Eds and Co-eds:

Have you ever wanted to thank someone and not known how to do it? Well that's just how I feel right now.

I want to thank all you students for the way in which you have co-operated with me in building up my Formal Rental Studio.

Due almost entirely to your co-operation I now have the smartest and most modern Formal Rental Studio in Canada.

I wanted to show my appreciation for this in some tangible way; and so "Let's go Formal!"—my new radio program, was begun. On this program, which is heard every Wednesday evening at 6.45, we announce all the parties and dances that take place at the University.

If your fraternity, or club, is planning a dance or a party, just send a notice of it to "Let's Go Formal", Station CKCL, or bring it in person to Yonge Street Formal at 500 Yonge Street, and the announcement of it will be read over the air. Of course, this is absolutely free of charge.

I'll be watching for the notices, so send them in right away and in the meantime remember . . . Yonge Street Formal rents everything "From Top Hat to Slippers" at special student rates. So . . . "Let's Go Formal!"

Sincerely yours,

Syd Silver,

School Finishes on Top In Annual Junior Swim

S.P.S. Aggregates 28 points; Meds and Vic Come Second with 21 Points

WINNERS TAKE 3 FIRSTS

By Sam Lipin

In a thrilling, fighting finish the S.P.S. junior swimming team captured first place in last night's annual Junior Interfaculty Swimming Meet in Hart House pool. With Victoria only one point behind and only one event to go the Schoolmen captured a second and fourth place to finish with a total aggregate of 28 points, followed by Victoria and Meds, tied with 21 points, with U.C., Trinity and Knox trailing with 10, 5 and 1 point respectively.

The most surprising upset of the evening was the place captured by Victoria College. With only a small team entered, the contestants for Vic turned in surprising performances. Jackson won the 100 yard free style in the closest finish of the evening and Beatty won the 440 in rather easy time. East-augh of Vic also turned in good places by coming second in three events, the diving, the 50 yard free and the 100 yard back stroke. Meds, too, although beginning rather weakly, finished with a burst of power, and winning the final relay, took 8 points and a second place tie with Vic.

S.P.S., as expected, won the meet, but not as handily as anticipated. Capturing three first places, one the medley relay, gave School an impressive total number of points and after adding several seconds and thirds, S.P.S. finished on top.

Medley relay: 1. S.P.S., Staples, Finlayson, Laari; 2. Meds, Baldwin, Wadds, Young; 3. Trinity, Mabce, Steiner, Telford. Time 3 mins. 50.7 sec.

Diving: 1. Ames, S.P.S.; 2. East-augh, Vic; 3. Fennel, Vic.

50 yard-free: 1. Meen, U.C.; 2. East-augh, Vic; 3. Duck, Knox. Time 26.9.

440 yard free: 1. Beatty, Vic; 2. Laari, S.P.S.; 3. Jackson, Vic. Time 6 mins. 14.6 sec.

100 yard back: 1. Staples, S.P.S.; 2. East-augh, Vic; 3. Burt-Gerrans, U.C. Time 1.15 sec.

200 yard breast: 1. Wadds, Meds; 2. Steiner, Trinity; 3. Finlayson, S.P.S. Time 3 mins. 34 sec.

OVER THE NET

While the cold winds howled and frozen footballers were footbaling for the coveted Mulock Cup, tucked away in the little quiet gym in Hart House two teams were victorious in the cleanest of all group games, volleyball.

Winners in the double header in the upper gym were Dents and Junior Victoria. By winning Dents swept a step closer to retaining their year-old title of King of the Volleyball Court. The Dents played the Pharmacy team in the opener and came home an easy winner by the scores of 15-0 and 15-12. By the way, there were two white-washes in today's contests.

Junior Victoria won the other game of the double featuring by beating St. Mike's A by the scores of 15-6 and 15-0.

The class of both contests was presented in the first game with Shukun and Nefsky showing definite class in setting up and spiking the old ball.

COLLEGES PREPARE FOR HOOP GAMES

Series of Exhibition Games with American Colleges Planned

MEET NIAGARA NEXT WEEK

By Mike Greentstein

It looks like a great basketball season is in store for those enthusiasts this winter if news trickling in from other intercollegiate camps are to be taken at their face value. Every one of the major colleges, Western, Queen's, McGill and our own Varsity have been hard at work practising for the last two weeks and have lined up a series of exhibition games with American universities that will keep them in the pink of condition until the official schedule starts in the last week of January.

Western have practically the same team of football-playing basketballers that capped the senior championship last year in addition to Joe Kroll and Clem Faux, two players who add class to any team. Down at Queen's coach John Edwards has had a turnout of over a hundred men and from these will no doubt be able to round out a formidable squad. In addition he has four of last year's dependables in the persons of captain Joe Hoba, "Fuzz" Jack, Bob Davis and Bill Drysdale. McGill will probably be the weak sister of league but have a schedule of exhibition games with New York teams that should give them a great deal of experience and put them in mid-season form.

Returning to home territory we find Warren Stevens surrounded by what observers are calling one of the best teams in the last few years. Of the many hopefuls that turned out for early season practices only about fourteen remain and from these will be chosen the senior squad. From where we stand it looks as though "Moose" Rogin, "Scrubby" Aitchison, Walt MacGregor, Chick Mahoney, Freddie Minehan, Percy Singer, Jim Craig, all seasoned and experienced players, should give Varsity a fighting chance of regaining the barrels they held two years ago. In addition Stevens still has on reserve Cahill, Biers, Dunn and LaVarway of St. Mike's, McWha of Western, and Humenick of last year's Seconds.

Moving down a bracket to "Mac" McCutcheon and his Seconds, we find nothing very definite as yet. Not until the senior team has been chosen and Mac can call on the men who have been dropped from the squad can a fair idea of their chances be estimated. However, the intermediates have been perennial champions of their group for a long time and this year should find them in the same favoured position.

The seniors play their first exhibition game a week from this Saturday when they meet a strong team from Niagara away from home. Rogin and Aitchison have had a great deal of experience with American teams, having played in Detroit for a number of years and chances are a little brighter than usual for a Varsity victory.

Spectating OF SPORT

By Bernie Shiffman

AFTER THE BALL GAME IS OVER

A Mulock Cup final game yesterday afternoon brought back football to the University of Toronto for the last time, before being snowed under by hockey and basketball. It was the day before Christmas . . . well anyone sitting there in the stands as the chill wind swept down from the north end of the field it certainly felt it. A grandstand filled with "Oike-Tolkers" and "Medicos" with a half-day holiday and the result can be imagined by anyone who knows the little Red School house and the Anatomy building. (Right, the poolroom was filled.)

Beautiful kicking, forwards, fumbles, intercepted passes, blocked kicks, hard tackling, made the Junior School-Senior Medicine clash a real climax to the current interfaculty football season. The final score had the Doctors at the long end of a thirteen to seven score. A fumble paved the way for the Engineers' touch . . . Blocked kick gave the Doctors their "half" as someone in the stand named a touchdown. The ball game was put in the bag by the Doctors in three long consecutive forward passes, scoring their second touchdown. A slow, muddy field kept the game a little slower than average but countless fumbles and intercepted passes kept the boisterous crowd and I do mean boisterous, roaring with pleasure (didn't they, backers of School team). Meds outplayed and outfought the smaller and lighter Engineers along the entire line. They deserved their win and are worthy holders of the Mulock Cup and it should also help to bring the Medical faculty up the ladder of the interfaculty standings.

I YAM REQUESTED

One thing that left us a little disgusted with the finals was an outbreak by the School team or rather a part of it. After the game a group of spectators who were feeling sort of happy that the Doctors had triumphed, were walking arm and arm down Devonshire place singing to the tune of "Three Blind Mice". Poor Ole School . . . poor ole School. The School team, who were walking down from the Stadium to Hart House, hearing this chant, dashed across the street and started a sort of melee. It would have been fitting "the Forty Beers" to take revenge of their defeat on the Trinity, U.C. and Victoria men who were doing the singing. But surely it was not fitting for a team who had battled for sixty minutes, gamely against a superior team. It left most of the people who walked by this fight, with a sort of disappointed feeling. It was a sort of weak and miserable way to take a defeat and discredited the team and players like Fugler, Munro and Barrie, who had given their best. In the words of that famous adman, Walter Winchell, "a scallion to you guys who attacked the spectators". We hope you're sorry. You see when two teams play there can only be one winner and if you lose a clean, hard-fought battle there is even satisfaction in knowing that you tried your best.

CONTRIBUTIONS REQUIRED

Seeing the success we had with the number of all-star teams sent in when we asked our readers (7,000 of you—just to be different than the other columnists who always boast of having two or three readers) to let us have their selections, we now feel that you will respond as favourably when we ask anyone who is interested to send in their idea or opinion on athletic scholarships. We would like to run a column with the "Case for and against athletic scholarships", and we are sure that there are plenty of people around with different ideas on the subject. We on the sports staff have divergent ideas about this. Surely in the university there are opinions on this subject so if everybody will co-operate and send in your ideas as soon as you can we would appreciate it.

By the way we are making all efforts to secure the services of the noted ski expert who wrote a series of articles for beginners on skiing last year. In all likelihood we will be able to secure his co-operation and soon as the snow falls these articles will surely appear. In fact we're positive they'll be in. In fact they'll appear if I have to write them myself . . . (just try to stop me. Wow!)

Owing to the demand for the O.C.E. gym last night only one of the scheduled games was played. The one and only game, between U.C. Freshies and Physiotherapists, was a very exciting though somewhat wild game. The score was close throughout but the Physio came out victorious with a four point lead over their opponents, the final score being 23-19. Neville Hamilton and Eleanor Fisher, both of Physio, were high scorers, making much use of their block play, which worked marvellously. Lil Seccombe was high scorer for U.C. Freshies. The other two cancelled games Vic Srs. at U.C. Jrs. and U.C. Srs. at St. Hilda's Srs., will both be played Friday night.

Many of the complaints around the campus about gaining weight, so all you "gal's" who are afraid of that extra ounce should try riding horse-back at Glen Muir (remember the cut-rate). Spills, thrills and fun, just as they advertise the funny-house in the circus, are definitely in store for you—but we do hope there are not too many spills. Oh yes, and you can look terrifically smart in those new riding outfits. You must try it!

DENTS TAKE FORESTERS IN LACROSSE BATTLE

While peace and quiet reigned in the upper gymnasium where two volleyball teams were gently stroking the ball, two savage teams, Dentistry and Forestry, played a ferocious lacrosse game in the lower gymnasium. Dentistry's powerful attack was too strong for the Men of the Woods and they smashed home nine goals to win by a score of nine to three.

It wasn't till De Logman broke loose forcing the Forestry netminder with bullet-like shots to the corner, that Dentistry started piling up a score. He was aided by Smoockum, who also went out and scored a few goals for the molar-men. Gennell seemed to be the only man on the floor for Forestry, but his sole effort was not enough to stop the scoring spree of the conquering Dentists.

SPEAKING OF SWING

By Les Vipond

Writing about Duke Ellington on the morning of his arrival is like writing a thesis on immortality before being shot. Howbeit, we are all waiting breathlessly the opening chords of "East St. Louis Toodle-oo". Whether or not the accents of the "Gardens" are going to be adequate is a matter of opinion apparently, although Dick McDougall of C.K.C.L. has a telegram from Paul Whiteman's manager which specifically states that on the last visit of the King of Jazz to these parts, the Arena was more than satisfactory. At any rate it should prove better than the building the Duke occupied when he played at the C.N.E. a few years ago.

According to reports of the advance sale of tickets, all Toronto is going to come down tonight to hear the greatest organization ever assembled in the history of jazz. Here's a few things to listen for when you get there. In the first place listen to the greatest brass section of history; each one of its members is a ranking instrumentalist. The three trombones could be included in a list of the six greatest trombones in jazz. The first trumpet has a range, technique and imagination that will astound you, another trumpet (along with a trombone) is the only important and artistic user of the wa wa mute in jazz. The trombones are Juan Tizol (who uses a valve trombone and was voted behind only Dorsey and Teagarten in last year's "Down Beat" poll), Joe "Tricky Sam" Nanton, the wa wa mute exponent, and Lawrence Brown. The trumpets are Rex Stewart, he of the range, precision and brilliance, Wallace James and "Coolidge" Williams, of wa wa müté fame. To quote from Hughes Panassié's Le Jazz Hot—"It (the brass section) is best from all standpoints: tonal balance, ease and certainty of execution in even the most difficult ensembles, power and precision in attack, beauty and richness of tone quality. It is full, but delicate; strong but light; majestic, yet intimate; clear yet mysterious. It is a brass section that deserves a place among the seven wonders of the world."

The saxophone section is also worthy of raptures. It contains the world's greatest alto sax—Johnny Hodges—the greatest baritone sax—Harry Carney—and the greatest negro clarinet, Barney Bigard, who is assistant leader or concert master if you will. Ellington and Greer on piano and drums are not great according to Teddy Wilson and Gene Krupa standards, but they are supremely great orchestrally speaking. And that in a nutshell is the secret of Ellington's greatness—his is the voice of the whole orchestra, not a series of individual solos. When writing and arranging music he doesn't take a melody and wrap his instrumentalists around it, rather he takes his orchestra and produces a work of art in terms of it. This is possible because of the way his musicians have identified themselves with the "Ellingtonian" expression largely on account of the long time many of them have been playing together—close to twenty years in some cases. You will notice that nearly all of the pieces played tonight will be compositions of the Duke and his men. Don't, however, get the idea that Duke plays nothing but stiff complicated arrangements with no individual expression. Over half the time is taken with individual improvisations so vital to hot jazz, but these are improvisations always in keeping with the mood or emotion that is being expressed.

And if moods or emotions were ever beautifully and realistically expressed in jazz Ellington does it. Here, for instance, is the way one music critic raves about Mood Indigo which, the Duke will surely play tonight. "Mood Indigo—a mood you find yourself in after having passed through all the strain of 'being blue'. A state of mind in which fury, melancholy and resentment have disappeared, leaving room only for lonely meditation." It is indeed worthy of ranking with Debussy, the Duke's favourite composer.

To conclude and reiterate, how about another question from the same critic (Henk Niesen)? "Duke Ellington and his orchestra. It is impossible to separate one from the other. We cannot imagine one without the other."

with a touch two minutes later when Bolley crashed through the School line to block a kick on the Engineers' five yard line. McGoe went around the end for a touch on the next play, Clinkett converting. The Schoolmen tied the game shortly after when Fugler kicked a single. Just before the half ended the Doctors unleashed a dazzling passing attack, three successive heaves being good for sixty-five yards and a touchdown, to make the score 11-6.

The Engineers got the only score of the third quarter. Fugler kicking a single. In the last quarter Clinkett really found himself and his towering punts kept play in the S.P.S. half of the field. He got two singles before the game ended.

McGoe, Clinkett, McKone and Lindsay were the big guns in the Doctors' attack. McGoe's accurate passes were good for eighty yards, and he ran back kicks and called the signals in excellent fashion. Clinkett outkicked Fugler of School consistently, and he ran and tackled well. McKone plunged time and again, and picked up considerable yardage. Lindsay showed a sure pair of hands in gathering in passes, and he and McNeil stood out with their fine tackling. The line went well as a unit, with Bolley outstanding. Stevens and O'Brien shone on the secondary.

Fugler ran well in the safety position for the Engineers, and shook his backs loose on many dangerous end runs. Munro plunged consistently and well. Sloan was perhaps the pick of the Engineers with his faultless snapping and great tackling on the secondary.

A Clinkett to McGoe pass for 9 yards and plunges by McKone brought the Doctors within scoring distance right after the kickoff, but they lost the ball when they attempted a pass on the third down. The Engineers got a break soon after when McGoe fumbled Fugler's kick and the Engineers recovered on the Meds 27. However, Barry's attempted placement went wide and Clinkett ran it out to the five yard line from deep in the end zone. The Engineers then scored when Clinkett fumbled on his five yard line. The Doctors made it 6-5 just before quarter time on Bolley's great play.

Both teams stuck to a ground attack in the third quarter. Fugler shook his halves loose for several long gains on end runs. The Engineers displayed their best ball in this period, getting a single and making four first downs to the Meds' one. Munro made thirty yards on plunges for the Schoolmen during this period.

In the final quarter Clinkett pounded the ball for two singles, twice getting over sixty yards on his hoists. Fugler tried to pull the game out of the fire in the dying moments with several long heaves but the Meds line broke through repeatedly to hurry him and spoil his aim.

Mr. Clinkett, Wagman, McKone, Hall, Guyatt, Stephens, McGoe, Bell, Mibgton, Lindsay, Cavan, O'Brien, Fleming, Bolley.

hearing motorcycle sirens. Two friends of the student, missing their companion, returned to the building to find out what had happened and were in turn arrested by police.

In all probability no official action will be taken against the students by the university, it was learned today. However, the Students' Executive Council might step in to investigate when all known facts have been collected and considered.

Commenting on the parade in general, the McGill Daily pointed out that it believed the majority of participants were non-students. Referring to the German Club, an editorial stated "According to all available information, the German Club was not selected with malice aforethought. As other well known rendezvous, it seemed as natural to end the parade here as anywhere. There was no underlying or premeditated cause for this action as some searomgers would have us believe."

GOVERNOR - GENERAL GIVEN SILVER TOKEN AT WYCLIFFE SOCIETY

Lord Tweedsmuir Discusses Loyalty to the English Language and Advocates
Brevity and Reason in Speech

Wycliffe College was honoured yesterday afternoon by a visit from Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada. Mr. L. C. Swan, Senior Student, on behalf of the Literary Society, presented to him the silver Wycliffe "W" suitably engraved. This is the highest honour which the student body is empowered to award.

Rev. Dr. R. B. McElheran, the principal, addressed a few words of welcome to the distinguished guest, affirming the loyalty of the college to the monarch whom the Governor-General represents.

Standing before the famous polar bear rug in Wycliffe Library, His Excellency replied briefly.

"I want to ask you for another kind of loyalty this afternoon as well," he said. "Loyalty to the English language." In his subsequent remarks he adhered very closely to his subject, dealing with some of the very common (Continued on page 4)

ATHLETES ARE ACADEMIC

By Bruce A. Smith
Is it true that studies and intercollegiate athletics do not mix? To which the Toronto answer is a great big, emphatic "NO!" According to the past scholastic records of Varsity's many famed athletes, nothing could be farther from the truth than to suppose that they did not play far or better for the tricky exam course.

There is but one Canadian intercollegiate competition—a rule applying to all sports, both senior and intermediate. This all-important phrase from the blue book says in effect that no player who flunks his year may participate in inter-college sport the subsequent year. And as far as the blue teams are concerned that rule might just as well be in the nearest waste-paper basket—that is, almost.

Out of all the athletes who represented the U. of T. last year in rugby, basketball, hockey, swimming, gymnastics, boxing, wrestling and fencing only two men received B.L.s in June—one on the senior hockey squad and one on London, Eng., Nov. 11.—The citizens of London paid tribute today, not only to the soldiers who died in the Great War, but also to the Prime Minister, Mr. Neville Chamberlain.

The vast crowd around the cenotaph applauded Mr. Chamberlain as he came through the doors of the Home Office. It was the first time any person had received public recognition at the Cenotaph service.

Also significant was the prayer for the Jews by the Dean of Westminster at the Abbey. "Let us remember in silence and in sympathy the Jewish people in their troubles."

This was, of course, only one sentence of the concluding prayer. As it (Continued on page 4)

JOHNSTON DIRECTING DRAMA FOR VICTORIA

Eighteenth Century Comedy by Goldsmith to be Presented in Hart House Theatre is Nearing Production Stage

Under George Johnston's direction the Victoria College Dramatic Society's production of Oliver Goldsmith's brilliant comedy "The Good-Natured Man", is rapidly rounding into shape. The show will be presented in Hart House Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, December 1, 2, 3.

The play has been carefully directed so as to recapture the atmosphere of the early eighteenth century. The excellent costuming and scenery will help greatly in this respect.

The central character of the play is the "Good-Natured Man", whose genial and easily-swayed nature makes him an easy mark for unscrupulous characters. He is portrayed by Howard Naphtali, star of last year's "Michael and Mary". Tom Paton and Betty Gray, veteran actors of the society, give excellent character portrayals as Mr. and Mrs. Croaker.

This year in order to avoid confusion and delay each actor is being trained to put on his own make-up.

the senior football team. Which is a batting average that any specific faculty on the campus could hardly hope to equal.

Indeed, it seems that our sports heroes not infrequently are lazier students. As proof of this there is a long list of men who have made both athletic and scholastic history. For example, Joe Bren captained the Varsity senior footballers away back in the 'twenties and also headed each of his years at S.P.S. More recently Cam Gray, Williams, and Bob Ibsister are only a few of many honour students. In fact, two years ago there were no less than eight men on the big blue team who got first class marks.

As the players themselves point out, they probably have more incentive to pass than other students insofar as they derive worthwhile pleasure and experience from participating in athletics, and would hate to be barred from such active competition because of flunking. They argue that in reality they are getting more out of university than most so-called bookworms.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE HOLDS JOINT DEBATE

Debaters from Trinity College to Participate in Discussion of Worth of American Democracies at Parliament

For the first time in the history of the U.C. Parliament a joint debate will be held with Trinity College as the resolution "Resolved that American democracy is not worth saving," is debated this afternoon in the Junior common room at 4 p.m. An invitation has been extended to all Trinity men and women.

The Rt. Hon. Sally MacDonald, leader of the U.C. government, will be supported by Norman Emerson, Trinity College. Miss MacDonald, when interviewed, stated that, "American democracy is not worth saving because its foundation, the two-party system, has degenerated into a meaningless contest for office in which both sides represent the same interests."

The Hon. H. H. Donick, leader of the U.C. opposition, will be supported by Ted Robinson of Trinity College. Mr. Donick declared that he considered American democracy rather the finest way of life yet evolved, based as it is, upon the time-honoured principles of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

literary issue

The Christmas literary issue of The Varsity will appear on Friday, December 9. Manuscripts or drawings will be accepted until 5 p.m. of Monday, December 6 at the Men's News Office, Hart House, or the Women's Varsity Office, Room 43A, University College. All contributions must bear the name, college and faculty of the student.

There are prizes for verse and prose, serious and humorous, and for pen and ink sketches and line-outs. All fully-registered students are eligible, and there are prizes for everything published. Manuscripts must be typed or neatly written on one side of the paper only.

VICTORIA DOWN MEDS IN SOCCER SKIRMISH

Meds suffered a setback yesterday afternoon on the front campus in their struggle for soccer supremacy, when Vic beat the Doctors by the score of 3-2. Vic is now holding first place in the round robin series with one win and one tie.

Boyd opened the scoring, giving Meds their only point in the first half. Vic quickly retaliated with Zurburg banging two past the Meds goals, who time and again had made brilliant saves. The first half ended with Vic on top 2 to 1.

In the second half Vic pressed hard and kept the ball well within Meds territory. Woodsworth of Vic accidentally kicked one into his own goal to even the score 2-2. But not to be daunted Vic came right back, Paton banged one in for the Scarlet and Gold after receiving a brilliant pass from well out on the left wing, catching the goalie absolutely unawares. The game ended with the score 3-2 for Vic.

Menziez and Zurburg played outstandingly for Victoria, the latter scoring 2 of his team's three goals.

DIFFICULTY ADMITTED IN JEWISH PROBLEMS BY UNDERGRADUATES

Survey of Campus Opinions on Question of Settlement in Canada for Refugees Shows
Conflicting Feelings

The general feeling of the campus as to whether or not Canada should allow the persecuted German Jews within her borders was mirrored by a first year student in the Department of Social Science, who explained, "It's really difficult to know what to do. They have to be put some place, and Canada has plenty of room for them," she said, "but on the other hand, we have so much unemployment..."

Morley Hardy, II Dents, said that the only humanitarian thing we can do is to take them in. "Unless someone comes to the aid of these homeless, penniless Jews," he went on, "soon they will become derelicts drifting about on the goodwill of whatever nations will help them. The nation that does take them in will profit from it as well as the Jews, and that nation may as well be Canada."

Don Gresson, I Vic, was also of the opinion that in view of her having plenty of room for the Jews, Canada's admitting them with slight restrictions would be a profitable move to make.

Jean Di Cola, II Loretto, felt that Christian charity should be reason enough for Canada to give the persecuted Jews a home. "They have to go (Continued on Page 4)

PACIFISTS IN CHURCH IS NOON HOUR TOPIC

"To prevent another war, we should all refuse to prepare for it and to fight for it," said Raymond Booth as he addressed the S.C.M. group in the noon hour address on "The Church and Pacifism—Yes."

Mr. Booth is secretary for the Society of Friends, a group of earnest Christians who had one-quarter of their members imprisoned during the World War.

"It was in the thirteenth century," said Raymond Booth, "that the evils of state were incorporated into the goods of Christianity into a disturbing dualism. Luther's Lutheran, Calvin's Calvinism and Cromwell's Christian Imperialism all lacked pacifism. They believed the state to be an instrument of God, to be cradled if necessary, to those enemies of the state and religion. The Quakers and Anabaptists are pacifists formed in opposition to this strict nationalism."

ELLINGTON TOO LATE TO MEET SWING FANS

Alligators and Hep-Cats Wait Half Hour for Coloured Exponent of Swing to Address
Victoria Enthusiasts

Remnants of an expectant crowd were rewarded for an hour's wait last evening when Duke Ellington finally appeared on the Hart House stage.

"I'm sorry to be late," grinned the Duke. "I'd like to play something but I haven't got time—got to get to a broadcast." And swing's most polished exponent was on his way, surrounded by a group of admiring fans.

Ellington's lightning visit was arranged by the U. of T. Swing Club. The restless throng was beguiled with a tale of hard-boiled managers and midnight conferences at the Duke's hotel. "When I got in to see him," said the club's spokesman, "he told me he'd be glad to do what he could for the club. He should be here any time."

Protest Meeting Takes Subject

Agreeing Jewish Refugees
Deserve Much Sympathy

At a protest meeting held at University College, a frank discussion of the question, "What About the European Refugees?", took place. The speakers, Rabbi R. A. Slonin and Rev. C. E. Silcox, presented both the Jewish and the Christian viewpoints.

"Terrorism is greater than the horrors of war because it has no bounds," declared Rabbi Slonin. "A nation can be rebuilt physically but it is infinitely harder to reconstruct its moral fibre."

He proceeded to show that, without land, treated as a dog wherever he goes, and helpless before a system of legalized brutality, the Jew is a real sufferer.

"At the destruction of half a million souls," he cried, "the world has been moved to sympathy."

POINTERS IN SPEECH REVEALED TO GUILD

Mrs. M. Moore Considers Diction as Most Important Element in the Preparing of Plays by Amateur Actors

When once we have learned to draw breath deep into the diaphragm instead of holding it in the throat we have gone a long way towards the goal of better speech, Mrs. M. Moore told the U.C. Player's Guild.

But even if the breathing is correct there are other faults which will prevent clear enunciation, the speaker continued. The most prevalent is a sluggish use of the soft palate.

As in singing, the full use of the lips is imperative. This does not mean that the words should be spoken from a wide-open mouth. If that is done, another fault is made.

In Mrs. Moore's opinion speech on the stage should not be subordinated to physical action. Of the time spent by amateurs in preparing a production fifty per cent should be devoted to diction so that the highest possible degree of audibility and euphony may be attained.

DO YOU MIND IF I SMOKE?

Where can the college co-ed indulge her flair for sophistication? Where on the campus can she smoke without fear of rebuke?

Girls in residence at St. Hilda's and Whitely Hall may smoke in their rooms, but smoking is not allowed in the rooms of the Vic residences, Loretto College or St. Joseph's.

Yesterday in Annesley dining room hung a burned towel accompanied by a note requesting more implicit obedience to the rules.

Victoria girls may smoke in Annesley tea rooms, but not in the college or in Wymilwood. U.C. girls have a smoking room in the Union and may smoke in their common room in the college.

One Trinity girl estimated that more than 75 per cent of the girls of her college smoked, at least sometimes. A III U.C. girl said nearly every girl in that college smoked by her last year. However, several people thought 35 per cent was too large a percentage of Vic girls.

None of the girls seemed to feel the rules were unfair. As one girl naively remarked, "It is probably the law here and that has made the rules so strict. But we can always go to Diana's."

Losing Our Heads

Saturday's little after-the-game affair in Montreal reflects in no creditable way on Canadian university students. The McGill Daily is at pains to believe that the majority of the crowd fanatics were not students, and of course there was no malicious intent in singling out the German Club for their crazy antics.

However, there isn't much doubt in the minds of many other people that the attack on the German Club was just a result of the feeling of Canadians against anything German. It is time that we pull ourselves together and remember that we have no quarrel with the rank and file of German people, no matter how atrocious a treatment the Nazis inflict on their minorities.

Years ago we remember being shocked by the statement that Italians were teaching their children to hate their French neighbours. That very thing is happening today in Toronto.

The other day a little girl on her way to kindergarten was heard telling her playmate what her daddy was going to do to Hitler. It wasn't complimentary . . . in fact, it wasn't even decent. In Canada today we are not using the right methods to educate a peace-loving generation. Rather we are instilling into the hearts of our youth and our children thoughts of war and hate.

Throttling the Radio

Recent events have proved more than ever that radio is the most powerful influence in public opinion that civilization has seen. The press is rapidly being eclipsed as people listen to their news and get their opinions from authoritative mouths rather than authoritative articles.

In view of this, everyone agrees that it is of tremendous importance that the radio be kept free. As a matter of fact, it is nowhere absolutely free, and it is regimented in countries where democracy nominally rules. In France, where radio has not reached the importance it has here, speakers of all parties may air their views. Nowhere else.

In the United States, the Federal Communications Commission exercises a stranglehold on all radio. The latest indications are that the government will step into the field even more directly, and open its own stations. The protest against this is justified. Under such government control, the radio is democratic if the president and his government are so inclined. If not . . .

The British Broadcasting Corporation is owned and operated exclusively by the government. Eden and Churchill, recalcitrant members of the party in power, have been refused the use of the air. Opinions expressed over BBC are those of the government, and any other can be expressed only in a press which is becoming more and more censored. Dr. James Parkes said emphatically that the government will not allow anti-Nazi opinion to be expressed over the government network.

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is directly descended from its British counterpart. With the exception, of course, that it is ten years behind the BBC, just as most things in Canada are ten years behind the corresponding British institution. CBC is just leaving the stage of being a democratic organization.

Some time ago, CBC sponsored a series of addresses under the general title "Whither Democracy". Illuminating symposia on national problems made the series one of the most valuable features since the Corporation was a Commission. But even then, the evening on labour problems was given to an A.F. of L. organizer and Col. Drew, The C.I.O., which was such an irritating political problem a little while before, was given no voice.

Now, the latest report is that the Canadian Press, the Canadian Newspaper Publishers' Association and the Canadian Broadcasting Commission are conspiring (there is no other word for it) to regiment Canadian radio. The plan is not yet definite, but it has been proposed that all scripts be censored. Are all newspaper articles censored? Why should CP and the newspaper publishers, who went into such frenzies when Aberhart "violated the freedom of the press" conspire to destroy freedom of expression over the radio?

The CBC should sponsor an appendix to its "Whither Democracy" series, and devote it to radio.

Horatio Alger--1938

American optimism is a wonderful thing. At least, it has proved that way for Americans. Every young gaffer in the forty-eight states has an equal chance to be president of the union provided of course that he is lucky enough to secure a nomination, has earned a few million dollars while on his way up to the top (no mean feat in itself) and possesses a magnetic personality. It's as simple as all that. That's why the terms American and optimism are almost synonymous.

When Herbert Hoover spoke in this city he revealed himself as a typical American in his typical American optimism. To quote the Globe and Mail, "If he had his career to begin all over again, he would head for Canada, because the Canadian mining industry of today is the greatest in the world and offers more chance for advancement than any other." That from an ex-president of the United States. He got to the top of the pile but if he had his life to live over, Canadian mining would be his choice. How mistaken we have been. All our life we thought that there was no office to compare with the presidency of the United States. But there is. Say, for instance, president of Lake Shore. Then he could be both president and right.

But the chances for Canadian youth to find fame and fortune in the mining industry are about as problematical as are the chances of our American cousins ever attaining the presidency. True, the mining industry here has a great future but as to being the adopted profession of Canadian youth as a whole, not even an optimist of the calibre of Herbert Hoover would reasonably yellow. But then Mr. Hoover might have meant his chances of becoming a power in the mining industry in this president again in his own country.

ARTE MUSIC Drama

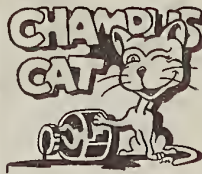

"Hay Fever"

Despite the fact that the Trinity College Dramatic Society produced Hay Fever well last night there are two glaring reasons why it should not have produced it. Hay Fever is a laboured piece of comedy which could never have been written if English drawing-rooms ruled out the smoking of cigarettes.

The dramatists at Trinity should be more ambitious, even if they are not constructive, in their choice of vehicles to display their dramatic talents. Firstly, then, Hay Fever should not have been chosen for production because it is an anemic piece of conversation. The playwright, Mr. Noel Coward, has an intimate knowledge of the theatre. He has written a play which demands the exercise of theatrical tricks for successful production. Amateur groups, by virtue of the limitations imposed upon them are not proficient in effecting such tricks. Secondly, then, Hay Fever should not have been chosen for production because it presents too many technical difficulties.

Anne Armour, John Barnes, Hugh Henderson and Frank Lawlor were the outstanding actors of the play. Each one of them seemed to understand the characters they were portraying. Each one of them could stand the acid test—they were convincing. Sidney Jones should be commended for her conscientious work. Her consistent speech pattern jarred somewhat and she seemed oblivious to the other members of the cast. Margaret Munro is quite obviously not of Cockney origin.

REEKING OF SWING

A thrill of anticipation should fill all hep-cats in the city now that Zazoorza Pignuckle and his boys are coming to play in the boiler-room of Knox College. We are all atwitter to hear that new toon North Memphis Hiccup Blues which will have its premiere in this city.

And what an aggregation Zazoorza is bringing with him! Wierd Willie Gardenweed his number one alto sax . . . Ickie Johnson tops on the wa blowpipe and Brimstone O'Neill who can really beat out on his Anglo-French horn.

To quote from Hughes Panassie's Le Jazz Hot . . . "A bas les Boches" . . .

Especially interesting will be the Pignuckle treatment of Schwand der Dudelsackpfeifer, Los Cuatros Inietes del Apocalipsis and Les Flatfoot Floogie avec les fiole fiole. It will be interesting to hear whether Zazoorza believes in jiving on down the groove or grooving on down the jive. In any case, you hep-cats should truck on down to get ickie and jitter with Zazoorza and his alligators especially his skin-beater who isn't a paper-man and likes to whack down when the chief cat is blowing it out on his agony pipe or ripping it off the elbow over the old wood-pile.

Dear Sir:

Many University of Toronto students have lately shown a strong interest in discussing the subject of "marriage", and I, for one, am convinced that the sensible discussion of this subject by broad-minded people is of great importance to us. One essential move towards successful marriage is the creation of a better understanding between men and women. In order to really develop such an understanding, men and women should have many opportunities of

LITERARY CANADIANS ADDRESS BOOK FAIR

Dr. Pelham Edgar Announces Fair to be Held by Bookmen in Co-operation with Toronto Public Libraries

Well-known authorities on Canadian literature will speak at the annual Book Fair of the Association of Canadian Bookmen to be conducted from November 28 to December 3, according to an announcement by Dr. Pelham Edgar.

During the week of the fair which is to be held with the co-operation of the Toronto Public Libraries, Dr. Charles Peaker, F.R.C.O., will lecture on "Everyman's Music". Dr. Peaker, a member of the staff of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, is a graduate of Toronto and for five years was the conductor of the Hart House Glee Club. He is widely known for his activities in the realm of music.

The popularity of Canadian literature will be discussed by William Arthur Deacon, literary editor of the Toronto Globe and Mail, while world affairs and books will be dealt with by Mrs. John Davidson. Other speakers will include Angus Mowat, prominent librarian, who recently published a novel dealing with schooner days on the Great Lakes, and Dr. G. F. Rogers, chief inspector of secondary schools, who will discuss reading for pleasure.

RESIDENCES ACCOMMODATE SUBURBAN GIRLS NIGHTLY

The girls living in Port Credit, Richmond Hill, etc., have been put on the spot. After one o'clock in some of these places, the street car doesn't run. The boy-friends have no other resort but their thumbs. Those interviewed who had had such an experience didn't mind very much how far they had to go as long as the girl was attractive.

But this state of things, long rides in the little red wagons need not exist, for the various colleges supply sleeping accommodation for those girls who have late dates.

At St. Hilda's there are two guest rooms. A night's lodging costs fifty cents. Any girl occupying them is subject to the rules governing the girls in residence. The doors close at 2.30.

Up in the eaves of Wynwood is the Victoria Undergraduates' Bed. It is a long low room containing six beds. On important nights at Victoria this room is full. The girls are given a key. Although they may come in at any hour they wish, it has been found that none of the girls violate the house rules.

There are two rooms in the Women's Union available to undergraduates of University College.

Advertisement Competition

The N. W. Ayer Company, advertising directors for the Ford Motor Co., announced that it was offering a prize for Ford advertising copy submitted by students, to run in student publications. The five best entries, in the opinion of the company, will earn fifty dollars each for their creators.

The only limitation as to subject is that "Ford V-8" must appear somewhere on the entry. The company release stressed that the idea was more important than the art in the case of the ads submitted.

The drawings should be sized to scale, eight inches by ten inches; they may be made in line, wash, air-brush or any other technique suitable for black and white print on newspaper stock.

There is no limitation on the number of drawings any student may submit. The five prize-winning drawings become the property of the Ford Motor Company, and unsuccessful entries will not be returned.

All entries should be sent to N. W. Ayer & Sons of Canada Ltd., at 80 Richmond Street, in Toronto. The envelope should be marked "Attention R. W. Booth".

Speaking OF SPORT

By Sid Roebuck

WE DISAGREE

Rugby activity is officially over but news still comes pouring in about the past season. . . . The intercollegiate press sent us their selection of this year's all-star rugby team. . . . seems weird in spots. . . . not one Varsity man chosen on the first team. . . . five McGill men chosen, four from Western and two from Queen's. . . . Stollery, a Queen's man chosen at flying wing. . . . Westman picked for kicking half, he was the best kicker in the league this year. . . . Farmer and Faust are the other two halves. . . . both are from Western and both are good. . . . they couldn't leave Ronnie Perowne off the signal-calling position, he was the backbone of the McGill team this year. . . . Willis was their choice for snap. . . . Ruschin of McGill and Conlin of Queen's got the call for insides. . . . How did Conlin get in there? . . . Anton and Sprague were chosen for niddles. . . . Sprague played good rugby the year before. . . . Hall and Kent, respectively of Montreal and Western, won outside berths. . . . Hall must have starred while he was away from Toronto. . . . that was the first team. . . . the blue and white have four men on the second team. . . . Schwenger and Sirdevan as middles. . . . Kenny and Holden as ends. . . . the halves of this team are Hamilton, Thompson, Merifield and Keefer. . . . Stollery chosen as quarterback. . . . and Robb, Paltowski, Benson and Bartram compose the rest of the team. . . . "maybe we're wrong".

SOCCER DRAWING TO A CLOSE

We were down watching the second game of the interfaculty round-robin soccer playdowns yesterday and were greatly impressed by Vic's chances of winning out. . . . they lost the rugby crown but they are certainly on the right track for finding the soccer title. . . . The Scarlet and Gold are now in first place in the play-off series. . . . this fellow Zurburger can kick them. . . . maybe he'll make next year's intercollegiate soccer team. . . . Vic have a strong defence. . . . Woodworth, their ace back, looked good except when he scored one in his own goal. . . . Wycliffe is still in there and holding down second position.

FOREIGN NEWS

Queen's will have Johnny Edwards coaching their basketball team this year. . . . Johnny knows his stuff. . . . Western are holding their rugby banquet tomorrow night. . . . they expect to elect their 1939 rugby captain while they eat. . . . McGill are looking forward to a very successful hockey season this year. . . . Perowne, Anton and Russ McConnell are back from last year. . . . Gordon Crutchfield, who played for McGill for the last few years will be gliding along the ice for University of Montreal this season. . . . A celebrity is attending our fair university. . . . he's the junior badminton champ of British Columbia and his name is Hugh Ford. . . . Hugh has decided to make Medicine his profession. . . . so long.

Toronto Art Gallery

The fifty-ninth exhibition of the Royal Canadian Academy of Arts seems to be characterized by a maximum of falsehood and a minimum of sincerity. If the number of pictures hung had been reduced and the quality maintained at a higher level it might not have been necessary to crowd the walls two and three deep, in which case the general effect would have been more enjoyable.

Despite the tendency of certain pieces to be merely photographic reproductions of the sense data without any attempt at composition or meaning several of the landscapes stand out. Charles Comfort's "Pioneer Survival" shows the forcefulness of his style, but none of his imitators, fortunately they were not many, arrive. Anthony Law's was indeed a "Contrast. . . ." yet with his fresh definite stroke he knows what he wants, whether you like it or no. Alan Beldoe displays his usual lovely charm, Manly Macdonald a compelling depth of feeling, and W. P. Weston the mystic sense of rhythmic form. The harmony of its composition however, seems to single out Leonard Brooks' "Before Snow" for more than special notice.

The withering hand of patronage on portraiture is even more apparent than in the "horrible" examples in the recent educational exhibition, "Paintings of Women". Yet the sun breaks through and shines brightly upon Fred Steiger's "Forgotten". The haunting pathos of her face grips even in its reflection. The "Portrait" of a horsewoman, by John Alfien fills one with a desire to see more of his work, and D. J. Johnson's "Self-portrait" presages a bright future. The living likeness of the creator of "Red Fox" shows what intelligent co-operation between a painter and her subject may accomplish.

The grace and strength of Donald Stewart's "Fiona" sets it apart among the sculptures something more than a successful imitation. "Baboushka", by Byllee Lang, with its solid simplicity catches the genius of peasant life. Emanuel Hahn's "Working Models. . ." are characteristic of the craftsman's sure touch and well considered ease in his medium. Russell Gordon

Trophies Presented at Vic To Residences Foremost In Various Competitions

Victoria College men's residences held their annual trophy presentations in Burwash Hall last night, with the awarding of three cups to the winners of the inter-house competition.

A candelabra, donated by Mr. A. B. Fennell, registrar of the University of Toronto, and a former Don of Middle House, was presented by Principal W. T. Brown to Middle House, which had the best average academic standing in the last annual examinations.

The Narraway trophy, donated by six former members of the residence for the winning house in athletics, was presented by Mr. H. Wright, Toronto barrister, to South House. . . .

The Don's cup for the Stunt Night competition, was awarded to South House by Mr. R. G. Riddell, on behalf of the tutors in residence.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Household Science, bowed to a superior St. Mike's team to the tune of 69-17 last night. The consistently high-scoring St. Mike's hoopers were at their best form in this game and Household Science were missing some of their regular guards.

Peggy Arnold and Jane Clarke starred for the scientists of the kitchen and Edith McGovern for the Saints proved that she could play forward as well as defense. Little Jean di Colo did some beautiful work on the collens' defense and intercepted passes beautifully.

The players appreciated the new identification cards used in this game for the first time.

St. Mike's: Marg Bennett (19), Anabel Macdon (26), Edith McGovern (24), Vic Longo, Jean di Colo, Kay Bennett.

Household Science: M. Griggs (2), Jean Clarke (14), F. Richardson, Peggy Arnold, M. Dobson, E. Deans.

Ever since the importance of a cheering section to a team has been officially recognized, ways and means of pepping up co-ed interfaculty cage games have been sought. Naturally the presence of spectators would provide interest all round, since their absence is the outstanding feature of interfaculty games.

At present there are one or two games every week-night. It has been suggested that if two definite nights for all co-ed games were set aside, much more interest on the part of players and gallery would result. On these nights all the players would be present, and the games would be continual, one team playing during the other's rest period. With both gyms in use, and the followers of each team present, there would be much more of Ye Olde Spirit shown.

Tonight the Directorate is holding its second meeting of the term, primarily to discuss appointments of the inter-collegiate and intermediate basketball coaches and managers. A badminton trophy for intercollegiate competition has been offered by McMaster and the Directorate will study this proposal.

About that "Interfaculty Night" basketball suggestion. We know there are many aspects such as finding seats for the spectators, renting the gyms, etc., which would have to be solved before the plan could be accomplished. However, since it is too late to adopt anything new this year, what we have said ought to suffice as a thought for next year's club.

Defeating Knox two straight, 15-1 and 15-1 in the Knox gym last night, Wycliffe volleyball team scored their fifth successive win to clinch the top of the third group of the intramural series.

Clicking with machine-like precision despite the low ceiling, which seemed to bother them more than their hosts, the Anglicans were never pushed very hard, although at the beginning of the second game the service went back and forth without much score for quite a time.

Wycliffe: Murphy, Cardy, Newman, Barnett, Symons, Paterson.

Knox: Lloyd, Booth, Renshaw, Taylor, Vincent, McKee, Vance, Calder, Chapman, Hanson.

Travelogue

William B. Holmes with a companion travelled to thirty countries, covering 55,000 miles in 14 months. The trip started from London to Marseilles, north to Paris, back to Gibraltar and by way of the Suez Canal to India, and then to the Orient.

The audience at Eaton Auditorium last night received Mr. Holmes' exciting film record of his trip with great enthusiasm.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Sam Lipin

Avenging their previous defeat at the hands of the Y.M.H.A. water polo team, Varsity white-washed their opponents to the tune of 10-1. Opening a terrific attack Mabee notched up the opening counter for Varsity, but Rosen of Y.M.H.A. tied the score to give Y.M.H.A. their only point of the evening.

From this point the game was all Varsity's. Green, Mabee, Laari, Adams, Menzies and McGill all added to the Blue total. Trying desperately, the Y team were unable to stem the Blue wave, who rained in shot after shot. At half time the score was 5-1. The second half saw an equal number of points with the game ending on a beautiful dual rush up the pool by Green and Earl, the latter missing a goal only because the whistle blew a split second before the ball passed the post.

Baldwin, Adams, McGill and Jackson were good for Varsity while Rosen and Chappelle stood out for Y.M.H.A. Varsity: Taylor, Laari, Jackson, Earl, Mabee, Green, McGill, Baldwin, Adams, Menzies.

Y.M.H.A.: Mayzel, Urman, Winick, Linzon, Flishman, Rosen, Chappelle, S.Cy.

the opposite sexes seldom have the chance to really get to know each other. I sincerely believe that a better acquaintanceship between men and women is vital to a sane attitude toward sex and to happiness in marriage.

To be more specific and constructive, I strongly advocate the introduction of joint common rooms on this campus. University College, for instance, could set the pace by converting its Literary Society common room into a joint common room. The recent removal of the chess set, radio, and all magazines from that room have robbed it of most of its value, and such a conversion would be of decided advantage. I am certain that other such rooms that are seldom used during the day exist in other colleges and faculties, and they would lend themselves well to such a purpose.

During my freshman days here I regarded the Date Bureau as most unconventional and questionable. Any men who used it were regarded as queer by most students. I now realize that it was an honest effort to enable some of the men and women of the University to become friends. Now that it has died, a more powerful and lasting measure should replace it—joint common rooms! Surely the "powers that be" in the branches of this University Tree realize that many students of the opposite sexes who attend lectures together here for many years, never develop more than a superficial intimacy. It is in the power of those in control to promote a basic understanding between enlightened men and women, and to make a permanent contribution to their happiness in life.

I have little doubt that many prudish people will find fault with my suggestions. Yet I am confident that, sooner or later, the authorities in the University of Toronto will realize that joint common rooms are of vital importance and can easily be made practical!

RABBI AND MINISTER PROTEST TERRORISM

He intimated that mass hysteria and protest could accomplish nothing, but only by putting this expensive sympathy to some practical use could anything constructive be done.

He suggested a world conference to get a home for the Jew, preferably Palestine and not some South African colony. He defined the Jewish attitude as, "We are down, but we will rise more gloriously than before, we have the ability to transform defeat into victory,—this is our comfort and our strength."

"If there is no settlement now, a movement with a greater pressure than any in history may arise from Central Europe."

Rev. Mr. Silcox outlined the popular conception of a new immigration into Canada. "The urban Jew will, when he strives for a foothold in a new land, work harder and possibly undercut his rivals, using capital necessarily donated by his adopted country." However, Mr. Silcox substituted possible gains for the drawbacks, saying that Canada does not need production as much as she needs more markets. The Jew would bring his clientele, and with that new industries that could sell to the whole world.

He then showed how many internal problems would resolve themselves "with a larger back to bear the load". He advised that any protest by the students, made to Ottawa, should be put on a humanitarian basis. Nevertheless, he finished, "it ought to be shown that the proposed immigration would not merely be a dead loss."

GRADUATE WITNESSES WHITEHALL CEREMONY

was uttered, a few miles away in Germany, plans were being made for the revival of the ghetto.

It was an impressive ceremony. The stony silence for two minutes. The depositing of the wreaths by the King and Mr. Malcolm MacDonald. And yet when it was all over, what did the people of London think as they shuffled away from Whitehall?

For a few minutes their thoughts were no doubt of peace. They had prayed for peace. But when they lifted their eyes again, they saw in the windows of the shops, on fences, in every thorough, placards with bold red circles type, "HAVE YOU A GAS MASK?" (printed on these bills were directions where every citizen could obtain a mask).

As they passed St. James Park, or any of the two hundred parks in London, they saw the unfinished trenches dug during the September crisis.

The people clapped when Mr. Chamberlain appeared. Yet on the streets were small circulars, again printed in large red type with the following heading: "WHAT IS THE MEANING OF MUNICH?" and ending with, "ABOVE ALL REVERSE THE POLICY OF THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT OF CO-OPERATION WITH DICTATORS."

These citizens were thinking not only of the battles fought during the Great War, but also of Madrid and Barcelona. They had not forgotten the Japanese atrocities in China. They could still visualize heart-broken parents digging for their children in the piles of bricks; the same bricks that were once solidly cemented together forming a shelter for innocent people.

For these persons it had not been twenty years of peace. Perhaps they were idealists in refusing to believe that peace was another commodity to be purchased with difficulty at the world market. They would have preferred to agree with George Bernard Shaw that there would not be a Greater War.

FOR THOSE MALE STUDENTS who have trouble in breaking in new pipes, we present to you the ingenious methods of the U. of Rochester freshmen in which they make their pipes smokeable in the shortest possible time.

... This is the idea. ... Fill and light your pipe in the usual manner, put the stem of lighted pipe on a suction tube ... and presto, your pipe is broken in.

However, the plan's originators warn that too steady application of the suction tube will rapidly burn out the pipe altogether. ... This will be a bad thing, and you would probably be sore at me. ... So if things go wrong, blame the U. of Rochester freshmen.

HURRAH FDR THE CDMIC STRIPS ... not only have they succeeded in bringing to the students that admirable female, Sadie Hawkins, but at Midland College a comic strip has become part of a college yell.

The student court there has ruled that on days before football games freshmen must say "Foo to the goo that plays Midland" whenever pointed at by upper classmen. THIS IS A GDDD THING.

LET US SHED A TEAR. ... It seems that the newly organized Swing Club at Varsity had Hart House filled to the gills awaiting the arrival of Duke Ellington who was to speak and display his talents on the ivories. ... Unfortunately, after waiting some time, most of the members finally gave up in disgust and just a few moments after they left ... who should arrive but the Duke himself. ... However, he could not stay long as he was due at a broadcast, but just the same it is an example of cruel fate. ... Ah well. ... THAT'S LIFE I GUESS. ...

PDDR FELL DWS. ... The football teams down at Temple University really feel bad about everything. ... It seems that those who are majoring in Physical Education are required to successfully complete a course in the modern dance. ... WHODPS, YOU TUGH GRIDDERS. ...

NOTES DFF THE ELBOW ... Noble Cain, nationally recognized composer for NBC, will write a song to be dedicated to the Guilford College a capella choir. ... Iowa State College has started construction of a $230,000 women's dormitory to house 165 students. ... A special commission has been appointed to correlate and improve the curricula of all Louisiana colleges. ... The fact that Ellington was in town reminds us that Duke University will celebrate the centennial of its founding next April. ...

wherever," she explained. "The only thing is, don't let them monopolize everything."

George Beatty, II Vic, emphatically said, "No! We don't need them; there is enough unemployment now without any more people looking for jobs."

Morgan Rowland of II Emmanuel, thought that Jews could be admitted to Canada "within certain controlled limits."

James R. Williamson, II S.P.S., was of the opinion that Jews should not be admitted because "Jews and Canadians cannot get along together on a business basis."

Jack Klebanoff, IV U.C., said, "I'm Jewish myself, and I'm naturally in favour of it." He argued that Canada is large enough, and has plenty of unoccupied areas to take care of any increase in population.

John Weddell, V Meds, pointed out that "we should not admit the Jews in large numbers because we have too much unemployment already. Perhaps they could be divided with other British possessions, for instance, South Africa."

faults which are to be found in the speaking and writing of modern English.

Jargon he defined as "words and phrases which have long ceased to convey a meaning, a God-send to lawyers." He maintained that "Unless a thinker can put what he is saying into concrete, clear English instead of abstract, high-flown phrases, he does not understand the subject himself."

The tendency for modern poetry and fiction to become collections of disconnected interjections was deplored. "Our grandfathers may have written stiff, stilted English, but it was a language. They did have ideas, and they did express them." He blamed the baser Hollywood films with their "baby talk" for helping to destroy our ability to express real emotions and real thoughts.

"I regard a reasonable and rational brevity as one of the greatest virtues in public speaking," concluded the Governor-General.

ART MUSIC AND DRAMA

Hugh Henderson and Doris Hyde are very clever in their opening scene, providing stimulating amusement. The love scene of David Bliss (John Barnes) and Myra Arundel (Anne Armour) is hilariously funny and worthy of congratulations.

The make-up was poor. But there was as pretty a female cast as we have seen at the university. The lighting was poor and the set left much to be desired. The actors failed to give the performance the rhythm that it should have had.

But this badly chosen play was well acted by the promising Trinity players and well directed by R. K. Hicks, Esq. May we expect bigger and better productions? We are counting on them.

S. Michael Gelber

Duke Ellington

The Case for Swing was once again presented at the Maple Leaf Gardens last night through the medium of Duke Ellington's music. The Duke was in fine fettle and his orchestra presented startlingly different arrangements that never failed to satisfy the large, enthusiastic audience.

The music of Ellington is distinctive. The team-work and the precision with which he presents his repertoire could not be excelled by the finest symphony orchestra. Every song was treated colourfully by means of distinctive interpretations in the Ellington style, and instrumental combinations were used to best advantage in bringing out tonal quality.

The Duke confined himself almost entirely to his own compositions and those of the members of his band. I Let A Song Go Out of My Heart was given a beauty and richness of tone that brought out its intricate harmonics with the best possible effect. Rachmaninoff's famous Prelude was dressed up in white tie and tails and the Duke's interpretation was the acme of sophisticated swing.

It is difficult to single out members of the orchestra as they all were in the groove. However, Sonny Greer on the traps, and Joe "Tricky Sam" Nanton on the first trumpet really turned on the heat. Ellington himself leads the orchestra from the piano with precision, and his arrangements are written for the express purpose of showing the individual interpretation of his musicians in improvisation.

This orchestra possesses a vitality and freshness that is not found in many orchestras. Their brass section is superb, and their saxophone section does not lag far behind. Indeed, this orchestra will probably go down in the history of modern music as one of the greatest musical organizations of the Jazz era.

Frank Shuster

Hart House Gallery

The beautiful simplicity of the vastness which is the West breathes from the sketches of Lionel Lemoine Fitzgerald which are hanging in the Sketch Room of Hart House.

The sense of distance is apparent in all the exhibited landscapes from the pencil of the Director of the Winnipeg School of Art, who was a member of the Group of Seven in 1932-33. In several even the texture of the paper suggests the third dimension. The controlled freedom of his style is in harmony with his subjects. His sure sense of harmony in shape, line and arrangement seen in his development of cloud masses, ruffled trails, and tree and other groupings, binds each piece into a satisfying whole.

One has to realize the limitations of pastels fully to appreciate the lack of vividness in the colouring. The mastery of form is conspicuous in the simple nature sketches, especially the three leaf motifs. Even the battered pall in the only oil shown has a definite personality.

Blake's illustrations for Dante's L'Inferno (in the print room) are in many ways a decided contrast. Their bold conception is their strength. Their cartoon character gives the beholder a chance to co-operate in filling in the details.

Great Poets Perform Duties of Soothsayers, Clairvoyants and Alchemists Claims Yale University Professor

In an address on Truth and Poetry by Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale University, Professor Phelps urged that "If you want truth you must go not to science, but to poetry. When you buy a work of science you must always buy the latest edition, whereas the earliest editions in poetry are the most valuable." Furthermore, although soothsayers, clairvoyants, and alchemists do not bring us truth today in a professional capacity, this mission is performed by the great poets.

One of these, and incidentally the most interesting Irishmen of modern times, "A.E.", otherwise known as George W. Russell, said to Professor Phelps once, in a soft Irish voice sitting through his whiskers, "All narrative poetry is second rate... the truly (Continued on Page 4)

The Duke Forgives Students Who Wouldn't Wait For Him

By Lois Jurgensen

In an interview with The Varsity in the studio at C.K.C.L. Duke Ellington said he forgives the deserters who didn't remain to welcome him at Hart House on account of his late arrival and doesn't blame you in the least; but he hoped that the Varsity students would understand that his lateness was unavoidable.

A record of "East St. Louis Toodle-o" gave the proper atmosphere in the studio and formed a fitting introduction to an interview with the great Duke.

He evidently approves of the gaudy plaids so popular this season, his tie was a vivid red, green and yellow, and the woolen plaid scarf draped over his overcoat on a nearby chair was as colourful as some of his musical arrangements.

Speaking of music, did you know that Mr. Ellington is working on an opera at present which ought to really be something. He has also just completed a series of stamps which are as yet unnamed. It was a little difficult to say what his favourite hot tune was, but

Government will Probably be Criticized because of Loss of Wheat Preference in United Kingdom

EXPECT REVENUE LOSS

By Ross Munro
CUP Correspondent

Ottawa, Nov. 21.—The new trade treaty between Canada and the United States is shaping up as a certain issue for the next federal election, probably within a year.

With defence and national unity also problems of wide public interest and importance which the electorate might be asked to give an opinion on, a rousing campaign is already being predicted here. But first a hectic session of parliament is expected with the government on the defensive for the first time since the present parliament opened three years ago.

While the trade pact has been generally received with favour by Canadian interests, it has such wide ramifications that any final opinion on its merits is out of the question until it has been in operation for many months. It appears, however, that the maritime provinces will stand to gain more than any other part of the Dominion, due to the large concessions in the U.S. market for fish and potatoes.

Cattle raisers and dairy producers in many parts of Canada will find easier access to U.S. buyers, but the vital question to western Canada is the loss of the six-cent-a-bushel wheat preference, in the United Kingdom. National Revenue officials appear a little puzzled too, as to just what their losses will be in connection with the abolition of the three cent excise tax on imports from the U.S. listed in the agreement.

On these questions the government will have to endure considerable criticism. Sectionalism will flare more blatantly than ever in the commons as the members from the various economic areas strive to make their point. The whole issue of Empire preference has been put in some jeopardy by the concessions made to reach a satisfactory conclusion in the Anglo-American pact and some staunch Imperialists in the house should make a strong case out of this.

RADIO PROGRAM STILL INDEFINITE

But Prospects Brighter than Last Year When Broadcast Cancelled, Says E. A. Macdonald

"There are possibilities but there has been nothing definite decided," E. A. Macdonald, secretary-treasurer of the S.A.C., said yesterday in regard to inquiries as to whether there would be any student broadcasts this year.

Last year there were several planned, but they could not be arranged. Prospects look brighter this year, but little information on the subject is available.

Status of Engineer Described at Forty-Ninth Annual S.P.S. Feast

In an atmosphere typically School, the 49th Annual School Dinner took place at Hart House last evening. Refreshed by an excellent turkey dinner, Schoolmen enjoyed a splendid evening, under the chairmanship of P. C. Anderson, president of the society.

Dr. Cody, responding to the toast to the University, spoke of the qualifications of an engineer, stressing the need for a good command of English and economics.

Dr. T. Hogg, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario, presented the scholarships and prizes won by Schoolmen last year. He spoke briefly of School in the days when he was there, and showed that a Schoolman is still a Schoolman, no matter what year he graduates.

Dean C. H. Mitchell, responding to the toast to the Faculty, spoke in his usual friendly way, stressing the fact that the undergraduates are as much a part of the faculty as the staff.

Unusual at a School Dinner, the main speech of the evening was delivered by a triumvirate comprised of men prominent in the engineering world. Dr. J. B. Chaffin, president of the Engineering Institute of Canada, was the first speaker on the subject "The Status of an Engineer". He discussed the future of an engineering undergraduate, and stressed the importance of understanding the fundamental principles of the profession.

Mr. Fred Newell, chief engineer of the Dominion Bridge Co., spoke of the originality needed in an engineer, as well as the desirability of his keeping his feet on the ground.

Mr. Austin Wright, a former editor of The Varsity, expressed the desirability of having a spirit such as School spirit, in other organizations, a spirit of affection and loyalty.

U. of T. Squad Shows Power in Exhibition Tilt: Win with 29-Point Margin

By Frank Shuster

The 1938 edition of the University of Toronto basketball squad went on display for the first time this season last night at Hart House gymnasium when they trampled over the West End Y squad by the lop-sided score of 50-21.

Willie Rogin was the spearhead of the Varsity attack. His offensive and defensive powers were all-important factors in the Blue win and the Moose was high man for the sista with sixteen points to his credit.

Although but an exhibition match, the play began with a briskness which characterizes a league game. Rogin started the ball rolling at the very outset by dropping in two beautiful baskets. MacGregor, on the Blue defence, tossed one in from the side. The (Continued on Page 4)

SAYS SHORT STORY NOT STUDENT FORTE

Number of People Capable of Creative Writing Smaller than Those Capable of Intelligent Reading and Criticism

That the students would be appalled if they were suddenly called upon to write a short story instead of the usual essay is the opinion held by Professor N. J. Endicott of the English Department of University College.

Professor Endicott, when questioned as to the suggestion of Leslie Roberts, Canadian author, that short stories should be substituted for the usual essay themes as a means of teaching English composition, stated that it would depend on whether the university courses in English were designed for intelligent reading and criticisms of creative literature or as a training ground for creative writing.

He also stated that there would be a vastly larger waste in the suggested method than in the present one used in the university because the number of people capable of creative writing is a great deal smaller than the number capable of intelligent reading and criticism.

He explained that it would be very difficult to get suitable short story subjects and that experience would show Mr. Roberts how uninteresting the results would be, that anyone who has read undergraduate short stories knows that there is plenty of room for practice.

In conclusion, he stated that it is too big a question and there is too much at stake to be treated casually.

To be Completed Monday. Message is Result of Mass Meeting of Jewish and Christian Students

DIRECTED TO PREMIER

Representatives of S.C.M., Avukah Society, and Social Problems Club Members of Committee

A petition protesting the present pogroms against Jews in Germany and asking for consideration of the refugee problem, to be completed on Monday, will be sent to Prime Minister MacKenzie King by a committee composed of representatives of the Student Christian Movement, the Social Problems Club and the Avukah Society.

The petition is the final result of a mass meeting held by the three organizations on Wednesday. It is being drawn up by a committee which includes Miss E. M. O'Brien, secretary of the S.C.M. Council; Eileen Jackson, secretary of the Social Problems Club, and Sam Lavine, chairman of the committees of the Avukah Society. The final draft of the petition will be submitted to the members of the three societies for final approval before being forwarded to the Prime Minister.

First Debate to Deal with Ethics of Democracies Restricting Anti-Democratic Propaganda

Enthusiastic Senators gathered yesterday at the first official meeting of the newly-formed Senate Club at St. Michael's.

After introducing all the members, President James McNamara read off the constitution of the new club, which was considered excellent by all. The section relating to the impeachment of the executive was received with particular glee.

Then followed suggestions by the various members for topics to be discussed at future meetings. Senator Perry Ryan's suggestion that it be "Resolved that a democratic government should restrict anti-democratic propaganda" was finally selected for the meeting on December 4th.

Foresters Installing Timber For Boucheron Spree To-night

Foresters are up a tree for want of trees.

But the woodsmen of the Faculty of Forestry are today finding solace in Joyce Kilmer's poem "Trees". Together they chant:

"I think that I shall never see, etc." There they stop. The words bring to mind the fact that a week of re-arranging through Toronto and environs has been carried out and still no trees—with Stunt Nite only a few hours away!

With axes in hand foresters trudged wearily about the metropolis, seeking suitable decorative material for Hart House.

Be advised, then, and lock your doors; keep your eyes open, for wild-eyed axe-men may seek soon to imitate George Washington, who chopped down other people's cherry trees.

It has been rumoured too, that the staunch conservationists were caught short attacking with double-bitted axes the government's property in the form of nature's gifts to our canine friends, two days ago. To further substantiate this report, it is said that a special guard has been called out to Queen's Park to guard the park's oldest and dearest residents from unmitigated destruction at the hands of the foresters.

The suggestion has even been advanced that a curfew be tolled to keep these ruffians from a fly-by-night advance on our campus grounds, for their wood supply.

Beyond Reason

Science has done much for us in exposing the nature of the physical universe and the laws which govern it. This knowledge has been applied to almost every aspect of modern life. We could not want to travel much faster, fly much higher, or consume a greater diversity of economic products. Children are bigger and healthier, and the span of human life has been increased. But the world is as far as ever from perfection, and knowledge is still in its infancy. The results of the patient labour of the sciences will remain as the unshakable basis of our knowledge, but future progress must take place in another realm, namely that of intuition and creative imagination. We are due for a new era of non-scientific culture.

Creative imagination alone is capable of inspiring conjectures of the unknown, leaps into the dark realm of unexplored phenomena. Its weapon is intuition; this faculty enables men of genius to learn things ignored by other men, to perceive relations between seemingly isolated phenomena. Intuition borders on clairvoyance, and is too often therefore dismissed as mere hokus-pokus. But even clairvoyance is not merely the tool of teacup readers; it is a primary datum of scientific observation. Those endowed with this power can grasp reality quite independently of observation and reasoning, and can perceive events more or less remote in space and time. The clairvoyant may perceive at great distance a scene, a landscape, an individual, which he is capable of describing minutely; he may read the thoughts of other people, and even receive telepathic communications. The whole realm of thought transmission is almost completely unexplored. It is not, contrary to popular belief, a branch of black magic, but a real aspect of human intelligence, related to scientific, religious, and aesthetic inspiration. Such phenomena cannot be added or multiplied or sketched in a graph; but they constitute a part of reality, and express an almost unexplored compartment of the human mind. The co-ordinating of existing knowledge, the postulating of the principles of existence, the apprehending of all intangibles depends on some such function.

Human intelligence is not a simple thing. The side of it which is developed in schools and universities is only one aspect of a marvellous activity. The activity of these practically unexplored realms may offer new solutions to old problems. If we have reached a standstill in the progress of humanity, it may be that we need to supplement scientific research with a freer interplay of the intuitional faculties, and approach our problems from a less empirical point of view.

Award of Merit

We are indebted to the Galveston Daily News for the idea of the underlying editorial. Wish we had thought of it first.

At a time when war, not peace, seems to be the foremost thought in the minds of the men who determine the destinies of European nations, it is probably very difficult for the persons on the committee which awards the Nobel Peace Prize to find a man worthy of it. This year, however, there are at least three outstanding personages who deserve utmost consideration.

Neville Chamberlain appears to be the outstanding candidate. At Munich he prevented war by giving Hitler Czechoslovakia. He has just put in operation the Anglo-Italian treaty which gives Mussolini everything he wanted in that connection and thus eliminates any chance of British-Italian friction. If only he would give China to Japan we would have world-wide peace. At present it is rumoured that he will meet Hitler's demands for colonies by giving him some of Belgium's and Portugal's. (Chamberlain believes that small countries should be prepared to make sacrifices in the interests of peace.) As a small boy Chamberlain learned that as long as you give a person everything he wants, he won't fight. And as a big boy he has learned that it is all right to give such a person everything he wants as long as it doesn't belong to you.

In urging the British parliament to put the Anglo-Italian pact into operation, Chamberlain extolled the efforts of Benito Mussolini in maintaining peace in Europe. If Duce called the Munich conference which gave Czechoslovakia to Hitler and which resulted in the greatest armament race the world has ever known. Furthermore, to give convincing proof of his desire for peace Mussolini withdrew ten thousand Italian troops from Spain. Since then, of course, he has sent further aid to the rebels to enable them (he hopes) to score a quick victory and thus establish a healthy Fascist peace in Spain. Benito Mussolini deserves serious consideration as a possible winner of the peace prize award.

Our third candidate is Herr Hitler. Of course Hitler has been having things his own way. Nevertheless only a peace-loving dictator would have waited for Mr. Chamberlain to make three airplane trips, and not have gone to war in the meantime. Unfortunately Herr Hitler has disqualified himself. When Carl Von Ossietzky, a German pacifist, was awarded the prize in 1935, Der Fuehrer decreed that in the future no German shall accept Nobel prizes. The cause for this action will forever remain a mystery.

Fair Exchange

That Easterners have been complaining against the Federal Government's policy of guaranteeing 80 cents a bushel to Western farmers for this year's crop of wheat, is what might well be expected. The fact that this guarantee is apt to continue for some time to come may make the Easterners complain more than ever.

However, those who are west of the Great Lakes must remember that for years the Westerners have been paying high prices for farm implements, and other manufactured articles, merely that the Eastern manufacturer and his employees might have tariff protection. It is seldom that Eastern Canada has any reason for complaint against her Western neighbours, but all one has to do is travel around the prairie provinces for a while, and talk to a few wheat-growers, to realize that there must be several causes for feeling against the East which has robbed the West.

Although it will be necessary for the federal government to meet the difference in the price paid to the farmer and the price received by a sale of the wheat, it seems just as good an arrangement as paying out relief year after year. On the whole such a bonus system does not seem to be too sound economics, but at least it must have as solid economic principles behind it, as doling out relief orders, and cancelling taxes and back interest on mortgages, or foreclosing mortgages and forcing farmers to desert their property, as has been the custom for the past several years.

If the Western farmer gets a break, and has a little capital to work on, at least he will be able to purchase goods and supplies manufactured in the East.

Undergraduates are persons who want degrees in order to get jobs. Students are persons who get jobs in order to get degrees. Graduates are persons who conceal the fact that they have degrees in order to get jobs.

Examinations are games of bluff in which the professors hold all the cards. A tough examination is one in which the professor asks you what you know. A fatal examination is one in which he asks you what you think.

WITH PUCK AND STICK

With the rugby campaign completely over for this year, hockey is gradually creeping into the picture. Down at the Varsity Arena, Coach Bailey and his troops have been rehearsing daily, awaiting patiently for the opening of the curtains, which will mark another hockey season for Varsity. "Ace" Bailey has whittled down a mass of turnouts to fifteen prospects. From these, the regular Varsity senior hockey team for the '39 season will be chosen. A few old faces are still hugging the boards for Varsity. Morrison, Caswell, Blackhall and Craig are all back from last year's squad. New faces are quite observable in the prospects for this year's line-up. Johnny Taylor, who played out in Vancouver for many years, Beattie and McLaughlin are all out with the team.

If Varsity doesn't finish on top this year, it certainly won't be because of lack of training and practice as the boys have a long exhibition schedule drawn up for them before the current season starts. This coming Monday, the Varsity puck troops will entertain Fort Colborne in the Varsity Arena. On Dec. 2 the boys leave for Midland and come back home on the fifth for a practice tussle with Goodyear. Oshawa visits the local ice palace on Friday, Dec. 9. On the 14th of December the boys play host to the University of Southern California. On Dec. 19 the Blue and White warriors pack their grips and head down to California where they take on the University of California for a single tussle and then play Loyola two games before leaving for New York. In New York the Toronto hopefuls play the McGill redmen at Rye. Following this, the lads invade Brooklyn and offer opposition to the St. Nicholas Club. From here the boys head back to New York and exhibit their talent to the University of Montreal at Rye. On January 5th, the Varsity sextet climb over the

We heard last night that the Edmonton Grads, famed women's basketball team, "come out of the west" is contemplating a trip east, with a view to playing exhibition matches at the Universities of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Western, Varsity, McGill and Queen's.

This is something decidedly new at Varsity and while we could not hope to offer much opposition to the more experienced Grads team, yet the opportunity of seeing a well-balanced, well-organized team in action is not one to be let slip by. But more of this later.

It has been decided by the Women's Athletic Directories that the intercollegiate badminton meet will be a round robin tourney. This is a much fairer type of tournament and is more interesting to the individual player who gets a second or third chance to try her luck. The tournament will be held the last week-end of January, and with McMaster's presentation of a trophy, competition ought to be keen. Arrangements are being made for the use of the Lillian Massey gym, for badminton practice from 5 to 6 o'clock, but watch the Sports Notices for further news of this.

In reviewing the swimming field for the coming year, we see that Dot Hobson, famed swimmer who participated in the British Empire Games in Australia last February, is attending University of Toronto, being enrolled in the Physical Education course, and will be eligible to compete for the intercollegiate team. Supporting Dot will be Bobbie McDonald, member of last year's team, Marg Hall, Mary Casson. But don't let this list discourage would-be swimmers, as these girls are not unbeatable.

Prize story of the week is Nora Rean's action last night in the basketball tilt between U.C. Jrs. and Varsity. She had just finished a toss-up during the game and had inadvertently caught the ball herself, by which ordinarily she forfeits the ball, when she stopped halfway, put an astonished hand to her mouth and looking towards the referee, exclaimed, "Oh, I caught it." Such honesty. Genial Phyl Griffiths, as referee, merely smiled and called for another toss-up.

OVER THE NET

Emmanuel College continued in their winning ways by defeating Jr. School in a thrilling volleyball game yesterday afternoon in the upper gymnasium.

Although Emmanuel won both games by the similar scores of 15-13, they had no pinch. It was nip and tuck all the way with first one team taking the lead and then the other. Both teams played well offensively and defensively, but Emmanuel came through both times in the pinches to take both games.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shifman

NOW IT CAN BE TOLD

Dame Rumour has been making quite a hang-out of the athletic wing these days so we decided to go down and see what truth there was to all the stories we've heard. Some of these fantastic stories were traced directly back to the day when The Varsity carried screeching headlines which fairly howled: Varsity Football Team to Play in the Rose Bowl on June 1st, or thereabouts. But in our attempt to get at the truth we sought out "Chandu" the Athletic Trip arranger, otherwise known as The Montreal Wonder Kid alias King of the Forward Pass.

It has often been said that Coach Stevens is a hard man to get to say anything definite, but we have discovered a technique that is hard to beat and which is guaranteed to work every time. We have found that if you trap him at his desk just before the lunch period, and fire away with your queries, he talks and talks mightily fast.

So with everything in our favour we fired away with the following questions: "Is it true that the volleyball team is going to volley in Venezuela?" "Definitely not," he snapped back. "Well, then, is it true that the English rugby team is going to England?" "Land sakes no," he answered. "What about the ping pong team, the jiu-jitsu team's trip to Japan, the skiers to Switzerland, are all these stories false?" we questioned with a despairing note creeping into our voice. (You see we figured that we might catch a trip to Brazil or some other nice warm place for the winter with one of these teams.)

Have you ever heard a train conductor coach at the Union Station? Well I wouldn't have believed it but suddenly Coach Stevens took a deep breath and taking a running start at it hollered, "Midland, Berkeley, San Francisco, Los Angeles, New York, Rye, Boston, and points north, west, south and east." Breathlessly we asked what it was all about and then we found out what started all these rumours.

It seems that after the Varsity senior hockey team plays Port Colborne on November 28th, Goodyear, December 5th, Oshawa, December 19th, and the University of Southern California on December 14th, all to be played in the Varsity Arena at 8.30 our boys are going to leave us until January 14th.

SEEING AMERICA . . . TRAVELOGUE

Using the choo-choo, and going for a real ride the boys leave the country of four seasons (summer, winter, autumn and spring) and leave for the land of perpetual sunshine and joy. (It never rains in California, according to all radio commentators). The hockey team goes all the way to Berkeley across the bay from San Francisco in Sunny California, where they will pay a return visit to the University of California on December 22nd. This trip has its drawbacks. Imagine a Christmas with the sun shining, green trees, swimming in the ocean, beautiful blondes in bathing suits and the temperature around eighty. (What a drawback!) Loyola University, who have the strongest team in the Pacific League, play hosts next to University of Toronto "Hockey Gypsies" on December 26 and December 28th.

Getting a little fed up with the quiet of San Francisco, broken only by the noise of the ocean lapping upon the beach, the team goes to New York for a little excitement—you know, the odd show and night club. (Incidentally they play McGill on Jan. 2, St. Nick's on the 3rd, University of Montreal on the 4th.) New York soon loses its trip on our little band of travellers and off they go to the Quaker City, quaint old Boston, scene of the Boston Tea-Party. (Gee, I'm beginning to sound like a Travelogue). They play Boston Olympics on Jan. 5th, Harvard on the 7th, Dartmouth on the 9th . . . then they bid farewell to the Stars and Stripes and as the strains of My Country 'Tis of Thee fade into the distance the weary band of hockey players return to their native land . . . the land of ice and snow.

Seriously though, the boys are in for a difficult trip, long . . . tiring . . . plenty of games filling up a crowded schedule . . . absent from school and books for about a month, but holy mackerel we sure wish we had made a serious attempt with our first pair of bob skates.

A series of preliminary basketball games have been arranged for the Varsity senior basketball team which will be played in Hart House before they leave for their American invasion. The first game of the three was played last night when Varsity met West End Y.M.C.A. On Tuesday, Nov. 29, Varsity will meet the Sunday Morning Class and on Thursday of the same week they play Broadview Y. These games should be real thrillers.

Rough but good-natured play featured last night's game at O.C.E. gym between Vic juniors and Physiotherapy in which Vic emerged the victor to the tune of 52 to 15.

Victoria had the advantage in height which they used to advantage. Dorothy Clarke starred for Vic, also Ruth Thompson and Ruth Danard. Jean Keefe and Neville Hamilton did more than their share in keeping the ball rolling for Physio.

Playing the whole game without substitution, Vic seniors scored a close 26 to 20 win over U.C. juniors last night in O.C.E. gym.

Norah Rean showed fine form for Vic, while Jean Lennox turned in a fine game guarding Bobbie McDonald, U.C. star.

That American democracy as a whole is developing hysterical, neurotic individuals who combine alcohol and gasoline and make up a race of "slap-happy jitterbugs", was the opinion of Norman Emerson, III Trinity, speaking on the affirmative side in the joint U.C.-Trinity debate yesterday afternoon.

The subject of the debate was, "Resolved that American democracy is not worth saving". A vote by the House favoured the affirmative 19 to 18.

"The mere fact that Father Divine can exist in the United States proves the freedom of American democracy," maintained Harold Botnick, III U.C., speaking for the opposition.

"Freedom of speech and press are not found in totalitarian states," continued Botnick. "In the totalitarian state people just obey the whim of any slap-happy maniac." Addressing the House as members of a democracy, he shouted, "Now is the time to count your blessings."

"What's wrong with American democracy is its inadequateness for reform," held Sally MacDonald, II U.C. "For example, President Roosevelt wishes to help the people of the United States and he comes up against the constitution which prevents him from doing so. Freedom of the press exists in America merely as a dream," she contended. In her opinion, American voters are unschooled in civics and therefore not able to deal with great problems of government.

"American democracy has many defects but these can be rectified, whereas in a totalitarian state this rectification is not possible by the people," stated Ted Robinson, III Trinity, for the affirmative.

He held that the persecution of the negro in the United States is no worse than the treatment of Jews in Germany today.

Norman Emerson, III Trinity, believes American democracy is not worth saving because it seems to have fostered "gangsters, red light districts, strikes, slums and taxicab dance halls".

DECLARES BIRNEYSays Ulysses Good Example of Development of Realistic Novel in Twentieth Century

"The most difficult and debatable of modern writers," said Professor A. E. Birney, speaking of James Joyce at the regular Thursday afternoon lecture in University College on modern authors. "Born in Dublin in 1882 into a declining middle class Irish family, he began to write poetry while still in university."

"Chamber Music", a volume of undergraduate poems, is based on Elizabethan lyric, displays a self-conscious craftsmanship. His most important work "Dubliners", completed in 1905, owes much to the sardonic style of De Maupassant, but it limited by the biased opinions of Joyce. It was published by an English company in 1914, but along with the rest of his work, has never been published in Ireland.

In 1918 "Ulysses", Joyce's much discussed novel, began to appear in American magazines, which were promptly heavily censored and confiscated. In 1925 it was published in book form in Paris, and was immediately banned. It was finally legally published in the United States in 1934, but is still banned in England, Canada and most other countries.

VARSIY CAGERS
TAKE WESTERN Y
BY 50-21 SCORE

Blue boys stole the play away from the city league team constantly by means of their heady tactics, and their accurate shooting. Before ten minutes had gone by, Moose Rogin had sunk no less than six baskets. The West End team seemed to be suffering from encephalitis lethargica, or something just as bad because they could not seem to get their plays clicking. Near the end of the first half, Lavaraway of the Blues dropped in a set shot from the corner, and Aitcheson and Mahoney followed with quick baskets.

In the second half the West End boys came to some semblance of life, and Watts and Walker scored on rebounds. However, Scrubby Aitcheson came back with a foul and a long shot. Cahill and Mahoney also dropped in hoops for valuable points, and the tussle was nothing less than a runaway for the new edition of the Varsity.

The Blues used twelve men in the practice game and they looked as if they will be a tough team to beat in the university title hunt. Rogin and Aitcheson are a pair of men that will undoubtedly make the difference between a good team and a championship outfit. Rogin with sixteen and Aitcheson with eleven points, were easily the most outstanding players on the court. Lavaraway showed up well and MacGregor and Mahoney of last year's squad looked good.

Varsity: Aitcheson (11), Rogin (16), Lavaraway (8), Mincham (2), MacGregor (5), Mahoney (5), Singer (1), Dunn, Cahill (3), Humeniuk, and Beers.

West End Y: Gooke (1), Pinn (5), Valentine (2), Walker (6), Mockford (1), Crosland, Graham, Watts (6).

great poetry is poetry of transfiguration."

Professor Phelps illustrated this statement with quotations from such poets as W. A. Percy, W. E. Henley, Goethe, and Wordsworth. These poets have taken ordinary situations, phrases, and emotions and transformed them into universal passions that escape all the boundaries of time and space. Such themes as the plight of a solitary bird left behind in a winter field when all its companions have gone south; the situation of the "carefree" child who is compelled to go to bed when it is not sleepy; the phrase "Over the Hills and Far Away"; and the homesickness of a child, become poetry of transfiguration.

Undoubtedly Homer is the greatest of all poets, Professor Phelps continued. He used the "effect" method of description rather than the modern "inventory" method wherein the heroine is endowed with hair, throat, and for eyes "a pair of pools . . . rainy pools if she is crying".

"Finally," said Professor Phelps, "Homer told the truth . . . and that is why he is great today."

Students Disrespectful Says Santa in Interview

States Students Ask for Very Foolish Things—Holds Bitter Grudge Against Champus Cat

By J. H. Clarry

Santa Claus still gets a kick out of the job, whatever the cynics may say. Last week in his first formal newspaper interview he told The Varsity that not only does he come back year after year to his Christmas quarters downtown, but he feels his responsibility greatly. It appears, however, that he is somewhat peeved at University students, especially those who work for The Varsity.

Sitting in his big chair on a white-bearskin rug wearing his customary fire-red coloured costume, he was reassuring the mob of infants who kept asking him for everything from Packards to baby brothers. Was he friendly? You should have seen how he took those little girls on his knees . . .

The children are all very good to the genial old fellow—they don't pull his whiskers or call him names. But oh my!—and here Santa shook his head sorrowfully and his eyes became moist—there are a few who do not show the respect which they ought. "Just the other day," he lamented, "a gang of University students came in, and asked Santa for some very, very foolish things. (He comforted himself by saying that they were only freshmen.) Why, oh my! they even laid bets, during each other to make fun of Santa. That was a very naughty thing to do.

In fact, according to his secretary—for Santa Claus does have a secretary—the reindeer herdsman of the North Pole sees the University as a menace to established society. It appears he is deeply grieved by a biting tactless

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

Pembroke Fire

A child was burned to death as his father leaped from a second-story window of a blazing house in Pembroke yesterday. The father, unaware that his 5-year-old son was still inside, sustained a broken shoulder in the fall. It is believed that the boy innocently caused the fire while his mother was attending early Mass.

Daladier Suspects Reds

Premier Daladier yesterday charged that an "International organization" was behind the French strike wave which promises shortly to develop into a general strike. The Premier warned that he would fight to the end and has ordered the requisitioning of all railways in an effort to maintain full service if the walkout occurs.

Week-end Accidents

Three people were killed and many injured as ice and snow made week-end driving hazardous throughout Ontario. The season's first severe snow storm accompanied by icy streets drenched cars and sent scores to hospitals with minor injuries.

Motor Show

Attendance was double that of any previous opening night as crowds swarmed out to the Automotive Building for the Motor Show Saturday evening. Manufacturers look forward to greatly increased sales and are optimistic about a general upswing in business.

Photograph Exhibit

Great interest has been shown by members of Hart House in the exhibition of coloured photographs loaned by the Jam Handy Photographic Service of Detroit. These photographs have been made by the Kodak wash-off relief process and should be seen by all those interested in photography. The camera committee are keeping the camera rooms open from 12 to 2 p.m. until Wednesday, 30th November.

FAMOUS AUTHORESS TO VISIT TORONTO

Phyllis Bottome, Who Wrote "The Mortal Storm", to Speak at Holy Blossom Forum

The internationally known author, Phyllis Bottome, who recently created a sensation in Cleveland by reading an indictment to the British Government accusing them of betrayal and disloyalty to the ideals of democracy, will arrive in Toronto next Monday.

Miss Bottome's latest book "The Mortal Storm", describes the fate of a German family divided against itself living under the Nazi regime.

Miss Bottome will lecture on "Love and Marriage", tonight, at the opening of the Holy Blossom Temple lectures. While her lecture subject is given as "Love and Marriage", officials of the Holy Blossom Forum said yesterday that Miss Bottome will also discuss the present persecutions of Jews in Germany.

Miss Bottome is the first lecturer in a series to include James Waterman Wise, Ameen Rihani and Dr. James Heller and Maurice Hindus.

SINO-JAPANESE CONFLICT TO BE SHOWN IN MOVIES

Undergraduates will have the opportunity of seeing standard motion pictures of the actual conflict in China, according to plans laid by the Far Eastern Student Relief Committee.

The pictures were brought back from the Orient by Dr. F. H. Pon who had returned to his native land after graduating from Dentistry in 1936, but owing to the disturbed nature of the country found it impossible to practice there, will be shown in Room 22 of the Mining Building on Thursday next.

Hart House Debates

Any member of Hart House wishing to be eligible for the Debates Committee of 1939-40 must speak from the floor of the House at least twice in the academic year 1938-39, or three times in the two academic years previous to election. If those who wish to speak from the floor on Wednesday night, Nov. 30, will leave their names at the Warden's office they will be given to the speaker before the debate.

SOUND FILMS ANNOUNCED BY PHYSICS DEPARTMENT

The Department of Physics will give three free demonstrations of sound films of a scientific nature. These will be shown in Room 43, Physics Building, from about 5 p.m. to 5.30 on the three following Mondays—November 28th, December 5th, and December 12th. November 28th: The Solar Family, Light Waves and Their Uses, and the Percussion Group of Instruments.

Chemical Engineering Seniors Find Many Baffling Pursuits

The Fourth Year Chemical Engineers have found that there is a Library on the campus. Unknown to most of the Schoolmen on the campus, the Library has been invaded by the seniors, intent on gathering information for their research problems, announced last week. The elevator has been put to use this past week, but the Engineers claim that it goes down and up, instead of up and down, like any self-respecting elevator. They refused to give any further statement on it, stating that it is typical of the perverse Arts equipment.

Several groups are formed, with a professor at the head of each. Each student has a different problem. The subjects for research are varied, some being of an industrial nature, while others are in the realm of pure investigation. The results of the work are embodied in a thesis, and anyone writing more than sixty pages finds himself in the chemical tank, which can be conveniently filled with water.

Investigating such subjects as the soy bean, petroleum and the flotation process, the seniors have found that in spite of the great amount of information available at the Library, there is still a terrific amount not recorded.

There are fifty-two students in fourth year and one student claimed that there are fifty-two different interpretations of the German language. A theory advanced as the cause of the unsettled condition of world affairs at present is that the powers that be are so busy trying to find jobs for the class next year, that they have temporarily neglected the world situation.

One boy spends most of his time at the Household Economics building, as there is a great deal of information there on his subject. He denied that he is doing some research for himself as well as for the university.

The favourite stunt of the seniors last year was to heat a penny red-hot, and then drop it on the sidewalk of College Street. The result can be imagined. This year, the boys have found that a mixture of grease and water makes a swell skating rink when applied to the floor. Up to the present, however, no prize has been awarded to the champion figure skater.

Applications Requested

Applications for the office of manager of the rowing team must be in the Athletic Office by five o'clock Wednesday, November 30.

Holding Hands?

--Don't!

"Will the gentleman who is holding hands with the gentleman behind him please stop?"

This startling remark almost caused a riot in a recent economics lecture. The professor, who was in the midst of a discourse on "Monopolies", suddenly interrupted his remarks to address the two students in question. The class roared.

It is believed that the extreme cold in the room was the cause of the act, and that the students were attempting to warm themselves.

Because of the extreme cold and the boisterous laughter following his exclamation, the professor concluded that perhaps it might be advisable to cancel the remainder of the lecture . . . which he did, shortly after.

SANTA CLAUS MYTH GOOD PSYCHOLOGY

"Anyone Who Does not Believe in Him Has Missed an Important Part of His Training," States Professor Bernhardt

"I believe in Santa Claus," maintained Mr. K. S. Bernhardt, Assistant Professor of Psychology, and instructor in the Institute of Child study, in an interview Saturday.

"Anyone who does not believe in him has missed a very important part of his training as a child," he said.

That the child needs a personification to understand the Christmas spirit, was his opinion. Enlarging this, he said that the logical romantic home for

Menzies, Simmonds, Small, and Kane Turn in Creditable Performances Among the Numbers of the Blue Team

An invasion of the front campus Saturday afternoon by the soccer soldiers from the Royal Canadian Regiment at Stanley Barracks was successfully repelled by the Varsity eleven, 3-0.

Once again demonstrating their classy type of football, the Toronto team had little difficulty in running up a two-goal lead in the first half and then adding another as they staved off all the army's attempts in the second half. It was Bill Small who opened the scoring at the ten-minute mark by eluding his check and picking an open corner. Captain Jack Convey lived up to his goal-a-game reputation by netting the second after a corner-kick. And Jack Mullett was away in a cloud of snow to north Toronto's third tally.

The blue team had a decided edge in condition, speed and experience over

CLUBS LAY PLANS FOR JOINT MEETING

Social Problems Club and Avukah Society to Discuss Possibilities of Bringing German Refugees to Canada

The Student Christian Movement, the Social Problems Club and the Avukah Society are meeting today in their second student mass meeting within a week. The meeting, which will be held in Room 8, U.C., at five o'clock, will consider the resolution drafted by the committee chosen at last Wednesday's meeting.

The resolution, which is addressed to the Canadian government, is divided into two parts. The first part urges the government to liberalize the immigration laws to allow a certain number of refugees from Germany to enter Canada. The second part of the resolution asks the Canadian government to use its good offices with the British Colonial Office to alter the Palestine immigration quota in order to allow as many German refugees as possible to enter the Holy Land.

MEDS IN RUNNING FOR SOCCER PRIZE

Wycliffe Blanked in Hard-Fought Game Against Meds Friday Afternoon

Meds defeated Wycliffe in a tough battle on the front campus Friday afternoon to stay in the running for the soccer championship, with a score of 2-0. Both teams played good soccer, but Meds had the edge in kicking and passing. This game finishes the first round of the six-game series with each team having one win to their credit. The next three games should produce some good soccer with all three teams fighting hard for the Arts Faculty Cup, token of interfaculty soccer supremacy.

The first half started off at a stiff pace. Towards the end of the period Routley of Meds, on a quick rush down the field through a strong Wycliffe defense, kicked one past Coleman in the Wycliffe net, making the score at half time 1-0.

The second half was much slower with both teams feeling the effect of the gruelling pace set in the first half. Wycliffe on several occasions almost broke through to score, each time just missing the goal mouth by inches. Finally, on a brilliant sortie up the field Kline banged one in for the Doctors on a pass from Green, to make the final score 2-0 for Meds.

Denton Massey, Founder of York Bible Class and Prominent Conservative, to Lead Informal Discussion at Mac-Cartier Club Tonight

Mr. Denton Massey will lead an informal discussion at the Macdonald-Cartier Club tonight, in Hart House. Mr. Massey attended the University of Toronto, and later graduated from the Massachusetts School of Technology. About twelve years ago he organized the York Bible Class, which under his leadership has grown to include over two thousand active members. He is a brilliant and polished speaker, and because of his great influence with young men was eagerly sought by both parties prior to his adherence to either of the two older parties.

In 1935 he was appointed by the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett as Conservative organizer for Ontario, a position which required great organizing and administrative ability. In the same year he was elected to the House of Commons with a large majority.

PAUL VAN ZEELAND TO LECTURE HERE

Ex-Premier of Belgium and Authority on Economics, to Appear at Eaton Auditorium

Advancing a plan for world peace by means of economic negotiation among the three great democracies, Dr. Paul Van Zeeland, ex-premier of Belgium, will lecture on "Roads to World Recovery" at the Eaton Auditorium on Monday evening, Dec. 5.

Dr. Van Zeeland, founder of the Bank of International Settlement at Geneva and the Institute of Economic Sciences at Louvain, has been a student of the Five Year Plan in Russia and the New Deal in the United States.

In 1935 he became premier of Belgium, and after he resigned this high office, formed the Van Zeeland Report on International Economic Reconstruction.

Old Music Best No Swing At Sing-Songs

Swing is the thing, it is said, but judging from the Hart House noon-hour sing-songs, the old songs are still popular with the men on the campus.

Every Friday at half-past one these get-togethers are held in the East Common Room. Then the men of Hart House give vent to their vocal desires, not in Flat Foot Floogie or Small Fry, but in Roamin' in the Gloamin' and Just a Song at Twilight. And the students seem to enjoy it. About 150 of them crowd into one end of the room, some seated, some standing, straining to see the words of the song projected by lantern onto the screen.

Ross Workman leads the singers, who all sing heartily and without restraint. Alouette and There is a Tavern in the Town are among those which make the stone walls vibrate. The gathering is pretty largely made up of "subdued jitterbugs", judging by the slight waving of hands, the unconscious movement of feet or the tapping of pencils in time with the music.

The Cost of Education

The McGill Daily, estimating the cost of education in a recent editorial, points out that every student owes a debt to the state, and as privileged individuals, should be willing to pay for their privileges.

We reprint:

"It has been estimated that every student in the Arts Faculty of a university costs the state approximately ten thousand dollars for the four years' education, over and above the fees paid by the student. The state probably considers it a good investment, but if there is a loss it should be remembered that it is the other members of the community who bear the weight of it. Every student therefore has a very definite responsibility in seeking a higher education because his failure will mean that he has betrayed a trust which was put in him by others.

"Slacking on any job may be called dishonest to the rest of society, but one need not go far into moral philosophy to see the responsibilities of students. The proportion of young men who have the privilege of coming to college is comparatively small, and this makes each individual all the more important. The university is a kind of incubator where ideas for the betterment of man and society must hatch; here are the leaders, the minds of the future, the real basis of all social change, if any such change can be brought about by man's conscious efforts.

"Society expects much from her universities, and has a right to expect much. College students are a privileged class which must be alive to the troubles facing the world today, they must seek solutions, and they must be prepared to go out and face these difficulties with a firm desire to correct them. That is the bulk of their duty."

To that we might add that every student who has been graduated from a university owes a debt to that university and to the students who at some later date may attempt to gain an education therein. A great deal of the work in this university as well as in all of the major educational centres in Canada is made possible through the contributions of graduates who have achieved a certain success in the business or professional world. There are others, however, who forget that their success has been made possible through their higher education, and that that education was not paid for entirely by themselves.

The duty of a graduate is not only to fill a large and useful place in his community. It is also to assure that posterity has the same educational privileges as were enjoyed by him.

On Big Words

For some time we have felt that there was much room for righteous wrath against those professors who purposely make themselves incomprehensible in order to amaze their open-mouthed classes. But it is realized that in science and philosophy a technical language is necessary to advance theories, which simply cannot be explained in every-day terms.

For example the expression used by a professor

the other day, ontogeny recapitulates philologically, carries a great deal of meaning, and there is no other phrase in the English language which could convey the same impression in so few words. It is the duty of every college student to develop a vocabulary which will enable him or her, not only to express their own ideas, but also to understand the cultured language of their professors.

Lectures which are amusing are, of course, far superior to those which follow the rigid form of transferring, through the spoken word, ideas which are written down in the professor's note-book, to the note-books of students. And a good command of vocabulary, with the ability to play on words and express oneself in unusual phraseology is one of the greatest gifts a professor can possess. A certain lecturer in Philosophy invariably keeps his class amused by expressing his theories in an amusing and varied flow of verbiage. To cite another example: when speaking of the process of a man becoming drunk a professor describes it as, "taking a trip down to the grog shop to dip into futurity and super-exuberance by the liquid entry".

But those professors who day after day pour out words and phrases which they well know cannot be understood without innumerable references to Webster are to be deplored. The only way to understand them, of course, is to take down what they say, and then battle through the lecture again with a dictionary. Such a system in itself might have many advantages, one of which would be, graduating students who are enabled to return to their own community and amaze their old associates by talking in a strange language. Only one thing which may be compared to this is writing books, in such a laboured and heavy style, with extravagant five syllable words, that the book cannot possibly be enjoyed by untutored and unlightened undergraduates. Then to force students to buy and read those books requires the height of nerve.

But after consulting a few stories in some recent editions of our own paper we have come to the conclusion that we have no right to criticize our professors. One story says that a certain "swing" club welcomes everyone excepting "ickies", and expects a great number of enthusiastic cats. Anyone who is hep to the jive will find a spot in the groove. The cats will be friskin' their whiskers, while others staring off mugging light and mugging heavy are soon carried away into a screw-ball.

All of which means that this club is having a little jam-session, but why they don't say it so that the profs will understand, is hard to tell.

The 1938 College Man

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

When it comes to describing the college man of 1938, so many and varied are the paragraphic portrayals that he is at once a master-mind and a dolt, a play-boy and a great student. None has so brilliantly painted the picture as Kent State University's Dean R. E. Manchester, who sets the man-of-the-campus on his pedestal in the following manner:

"The college man is a living paradox. Most people cannot understand him and those who do, come to their conclusions by indirect proof. He talks of the future but worships the past. He is liberal in his conversation but conservative in his action. He is radical in his opinions on politics, but elects stand-patters to the class offices. He demands freedom of thinking but defends with all his strength the traditions of his institution. He takes wild stands on religious theories yet attends colleges and universities that are created and maintained by orthodox creeds. He preaches democracy yet supports the most rigid caste system. He demands that his university maintain the highest athletic standards yet in the same breath also demands a professional football team. He scoffs at his profs yet defends them strenuously when they are criticized. He rebels against rules but sets up more rigid ones when given the opportunity. He hazes the high school graduate who comes with a boy scout badge on his coat, but he covers his own vest with medals and keys. He invents and uses the most outlandish slang on the street, but reads and writes pure English in his room. He clamors for self government but doesn't want it after he gets it. He laughs at convention but insists upon it. He cuts classes the day before a vacation but comes back three days early.

"You ask, 'What are we going to do about it?' We are going to praise the Lord that we have him and that he is just what he is, a walking contradiction of himself."

Like it? We thought you would!

Winter Hath Come

Ah, thou blessed season, thou hast
Finally arrived in all thy glory.
The snow hath fallen
So have my marks.

The little beasts have scampered to
Their lairs for a goodly slumber.
Other beasts have hid themselves to The University Library for A similar purpose.

Ah, thou blessed wintertime how dost
Thou shower me with thy gifts
Thou bringest snow and glistening ice,
A tang in the sweet-scented air.
Thou bringest the jovial wind and Refreshingly icy blast.

Thou bringest tonsillitis, bronchitis
Laryngitis and the Common Cold, Thou bringest influenza, and Various forms of eye, ear, nose and throat Trouble.

Ah, Jack Frost, would that thou were Here beside me.

I'd break thy damned neck!
WIREGARTERTH.

Editor's Note—Following is a clipping from the editorial columns of the "Daily Kansan." The hitch-hiking system has long been a source of interest in Ontario. Here is the situation in Kansas.

Every fall thousands of young men crowd the highways in search of passing motorists who might give them "lifts" in the general direction of some college or university. Every spring similar thousands crowd the highways in search of "lifts" back again. Every Friday or Saturday hundreds of them may be found on the outskirts of college towns in order that they may handle week-end jobs, ask parents for money, or re-establish contacts with their best girls.

Until recently many of these hitch-hikers were coming to or from the University of Kansas. Even now a few may be found on their way to or from Lawrence.

For the most part these young men were affable, well-mannered gentlemen who were grateful for the lifts, and said so. Many motorists welcomed such companions as a tonic against the tedium of cross-country driving. Also, they liked to feel that they were giving assistance to ambitious youth traveling with a worthy purpose. Both parties benefited by the arrangement.

Then the rapidly lengthening list of highway tragedies—thief, rape, murder—committed under the guise of the innocent hitch-hiker, induced Kansas as well as some fourteen other states to pass laws which now make it a state offense to travel via thumb. These laws were just and necessary. No alert citizen would wish for their abolishment.

However, if a bored or sympathetic motorist sees a well-dressed, pleasant young man with a college sticker on his suitcase, trudging along the highway, and chooses to pick him up, there can be little inherently criminal or anti-social in the process. Indeed, when a reporter asked Governor Walter A. Huxman whether the present law applied to college students, the Governor is said to have smiled cryptically, but in such a way as to imply the college students and those who picked them up need not fear the "full penalty of the law."

Nevertheless, "the law's the law", as Javert was fond of remarking, and technically, the hitch-hiking law applies to all. But most colleges now issue individual identification cards containing the student's name, the date of the semester issued, and at least a reasonably accurate photographic reproduction of his physiognomy. Why wouldn't it be feasible to make such student identification cards "passports" for all bona-fide, student hitch-hikers?

MYSTERY OF JUDO

Judo Said to be a Whole Ideology of Life as Compared with Jiu-Jitsu, which is Apparently Just the Physical Act of Self-Defence

By Ed Goodman

Ever since the time I read "Dick Merriwell in Japan" and saw how Dick managed to overcome six drunken sailors who were waylaying him by the use of judo, which was akin to jiu jitsu I have always wondered just what the difference between the two modes of self-defence was, and also just what either sport consisted of. Recently Art Menzies, judo instructor of the University of Toronto, cleared up all the points that had been bothering me for years.

Art was instructing a class in one of the Hart House art of self-defence rooms (we dare not call it wrestling room in a judo story), and it did not take him long to set me straight on the basic principles. Judo, it seems, is a whole ideology of life, while jiu jitsu is merely the physical acts of self-defence. Judo consists of using the mind as well as the body and is evidently the aristocrat of the pair.

A great deal of amazement is often evoked by the outfit that is worn by the contestants. This is explained by the fact that a use of the clothing in various holds is an essential part of the sport. To go on and explain fully about the sport is impossible on paper and furthermore there are classes on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday for those interested.

These classes are divided into lessons for the beginners on Tuesday and Wednesday and for the more advanced on Thursday and Saturday. Unfortunately there is no other group in Eastern Canada who study judo and there is

EXTRA ITEM ADDED TO ATHLETIC LIST

To an already imposing list of athletic advantages, the athletic directorate have gone out of their way to add another that will certainly meet with the approval of the undergraduates. Many an undergraduate has shunned the boxing and wrestling room because of the fact that everyone there was training with the eye to active competition on one of the teams. Because of the fact that a great many students hadn't the time to take training seriously many have missed the opportunity of learning the art of self-defence or mat mixing.

So the athletic directorate got into a huddle and when they emerged they had decided to secure Vince Gionna to take care of the boxing end, and George Daly, Cliff Chilcott's best pupil, to look after the wrestlers.

This new addition is going to go under the name of recreational boxing and wrestling and will take place Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 5 o'clock. Actually all it means is a chance for those who feel unqualified to make teams and who haven't time to train every night, to learn all that they want to know about two excellent sports, boxing and wrestling.

no place that the university exponents can find competition.

Then according to Mr. Menzies the more advanced tricks and arts cannot be practised in competition as they would result in an injured and disabled opponent with a few broken bones or one dead of strangulation. But don't get the wrong idea of the sport as practised in Japan, or anywhere else for that matter. It is strictly a "gentleman's sport" and any violence is deplored. The one who used it is immediately ostracized from organized competition.

All of which adds up to the fact that the university offers one of the finest of athletic attractions under expert instruction to anyone who is interested in Japan's ancient sport.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shiffman

TODAY'S SPECIAL . . . MITT AND MAT

"Be a man." "Did she say no?" Are you taking it lying down?" No, we're not advertising Fitch's Shampoo or those famous cod liver pills that put new pep into an old chassis. We're merely announcing an addition to the over-aweing list of athletic privileges that are obtainable for that same little measly handful of shckels, the athletic fee. The last addition was the ping-pong facilities and it seems that no one could possibly connect it with pulse-stirring athletics or muscle building. So the athletic executive, looking around for new worlds to conquer, decided to start things humming by the introduction of Recreational Boxing and Wrestling.

The name sounds something like Ornamental Swimming (which we still haven't obtained a definition of), but is nothing mysterious or fantastic; it is merely an addition that we feel has been neglected up to date and is a decided advantage.

A great many students come down to school from their high schools with the idea of taking full advantage of the athletic facilities—they decide they'd like to box, to wrestle, to swim, etc. . . . and in spite of lacking time they come down and join the classes. Here they find people turning out regularly, whipping themselves into condition, and everyone trying to catch a place on the teams, and the coaches, through necessity of putting their time in with the more advanced students and those who most likely will make the team, have no time for the novice. So after a few times out, in which they are left by themselves, sadly put out of their minds the picture of walking up to the swaggering bully who has asked his girl to dance and punching him right on the button. That was the case, but now take heart, you dreamers. The Athletic Directorate have become aware of your plight and rectified it by this new recreational boxing and wrestling.

Three times a week, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at five o'clock, the boxing and wrestling room will be devoted to people who are interested in learning the art of self-defence (as Mr. Warren Stevens calls boxing) and grappling. It is for you, red blooded men with little time but plenty of will, to learn to box and wrestle, that this plan has been concocted. The Directorate have secured the additional coaches to take care of these classes, and Vince Gionna, brother of the present boxing coach, will take care of the boxers. George Daly, Cliff Chilcott's best pupil, one of the best mat coaches, is going to take care of the wrestlers.

We think that this new athletic advantage is really going to go over with the students at the university. So to make it more convenient for everyone concerned, it would be best for those interested to sign the lists in the athletic office so that the classes can be formed and avoid confusion.

BASKETBALL IS BACK

Last week the Blue basketballers played their first exhibition game and were indeed gratifying to the coach, the manager, the scorer and the spectator. The Blues ran wild with Moose Rogin and his pal Aitchison, running them in. They completely demoralized the West End Y team and won hands down. So it's beginning to appear that we might (yes, might) give the powerful Westerners a bit of competition if they intend to retain the basketball championship. The crew of Hurley, Farmer, Casey, recently supplemented by Faust and Croll, are going to be hard to beat and from reports from London it seems like they are in for a banner season.

Tomorrow night and Thursday night at 8.30 the Varsity team are going to play two more exhibition games, so let's see everyone come out and get a look at the team that might dethrone the Western champs.

SKI NOTES

Coincident with the second fall of snow this winter comes an announcement from the University of Toronto Ski Club that the first meeting of the club this year will be held Wednesday afternoon at five p.m. Movies dealing with skiing will be featured at the first meeting, with two films being shown, one on the technique of skiing, and the other presenting shots of the Olympic Games.

The Ski Club executive, headed by Aubrey Boyd, recently elected president of the club, wishes to impress upon students that there is no fee attached to membership in the club, this being one of the privileges of the Athletic Fee. Preparations have been made for a banner season. Among the improvements already provided are equipment of the clubhouse with a new stove, tables, benches and kitchen utensils. In addition, new trails have been cut and the old trails improved. The executive is also seeking a suitable downhill run and ski jump.

The newest trail leads from Newton's, headquarters of the club, to Edwards, a youth hostel. Students bent on skiing may obtain meals here at a nominal charge, and guests staying overnight will be provided with beds and blankets. Skiers are invited to go up to the ski course, which is just north of Aurora, near Sir William Mulock's estate, and make use of the cabin on the Newton property. The key to the cabin may be obtained from Mr. Newton.

Track!—Whether you ski or "shi" (as they do in the movies) now is the time for all co-eds to start bending for the season ahead. If you are a jerky beginner we would advise you to enroll in the correspondence course about to be inaugurated in the SOS. However, for those smooth advanced people, may we remind you that Varsity co-eds have been invited to send a team to the ski competition which is being sponsored jointly by McGill University and the Penguin Club at St. Sauveur, Quebec, on February the 25th and 26th. If and when the Varsity Ski Club gets under way after Christmas, a team of four co-eds will be selected to represent Toronto, but the catch at present is that there is no Co-ed Ski Club to finance the trip, and the team would be every man for himself, (or is it herself?). From the Staines Vassar, Radcliffe, Wellesley, Smith, Mount Holyoke and Bennington are all sending teams, and it is hoped that Varsity co-eds will accept the invitation. We have the material, but as you may have heard we often lack snow as an essential to those in training.

Interfaculty basketball is more fascinating as the finals approach. Thursday night St. Hilda's Sr. trounced U.C. Sr. 24-4, in a game which had all the features of a classic. Tonight the Saints meet the Frosh from Victoria and this game won't be lacking in thrills either. For the Frosh in former games, the accurate shooting of "poker-face" Jean Crawford and the stellar play of titan-haired Patty Perrin has already brought results. Tonight against the cagy Saints, starring Joan McMaster, "Tibs" Anselmy and Joan Griffith, the Frosh will meet their strongest opposition so far. In the other game tonight we are calling St. Mike's to "take" Meds. Enough said.

At long last . . . the Directorate announces that it has obtained Miss Beatrice Longley, former Varsity cage sensation, to coach the Varsity women's intercollegiate basketball team. This choice is a particularly fine one, and we wish Miss Longley every success. Last year's coach, Miss Marjorie Rean, brilliant Western product, was unable to resume her coaching duties this year, Marg Pickering of the Vic Sr. team, who is also the inspiring coach for the Frosh at Vic, has been appointed manager for the intercollegiate team. Anyone who knows Marg is quite confident that she will accomplish this newest task of hers with her usual nonchalant despatch. If you don't know her, take our word for it.

(Editor's Note—This is the second in a series of seven articles dealing with hockey teams in the Junior O. H. A. Big Seven Group.)

Couch Baily Cotton's Native Sons may have finished out of the "money series" in the Big Seven group last season, but this year supporters of the Cotton Clubbers are confident that the Sons will catch a play-off berth. Chief reason for their optimism is a group of classy imports from out-of-town centres, plus the improvement shown by returning members of the 1937 squad. In addition, several promising youngsters have been added to the Sons' roster to give them a strong cast for S.P.A. and Big Seven competition.

The whole purpose of this great commercial movement is to instill in a person the spirit of autonomous giving. SPEAKING OF SWING

By Bernie Shiffman

Swing has been discussed theoretically in this column from all angles. Different people have been invited and have given their interpretation of swing. Definitions for a jitterbug, icky, gettin' in the groove, swingin' the gate, have all been forthcoming, yet all these ideas have been merely theories to most of the people at the university. So it is our idea to make a tour of Toronto and see where and when swing enthusiasts may enjoy beating it out, accompanied by the fantastic cawing of ecstatically spell bound ikeys.

One of the most famous of these Toronto night spots, and one which is daily gaining in popularity is the Onyx Club on Church and Dundas. Nightly Lou Lewis and his quartet swing it along while the small floor is crowded with the queerest array of dancers, that we never imagined existed in Canada, but whose likeness we have seen in the States. Vocalizing for this quartet, believe it or not, is Jackie Rae, brother of both Saul Rae, formerly pride of U.C. until his graduation and now attending Oxford, and Gracie Rae, who has been in charge of training the chorus for the U.C. Ballads for the last few years. Jackie really swings out in every type of song and the downtown bands would do well to take a stop, look, and listen at this youngster who is at present attending Jarvis Collegiate. Jackie Rae tends to follow in the footsteps of his brother and expects to attend college next year.

Every Friday night is dance contest night at the Onyx Club and a wilder exhibition of free expression in dancing is hard to find. Couples dance in turn and the winner is judged by the volume of applause. Girls are swung high over their partners' heads, tossed and whirled as good as any adagio team we've ever seen in the good old days when Shea'd had vaudeville. It really is an experience to see these people, most of them young kids, but even some older people completely under the fascination of a certain type of rhythm and the voice of Jackie Rae.

The famous Jam Sessions take place at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoons. This is when the swing cats get really high. Orchestra players from the big bands from all parts of the city sit in with the boys and have a busman's holiday beating out the tempo. The Duke and Sammy Greer when they were in town sat in with the boys. Trump Davidson and Bert Niosi and boys from their bands have been making a custom of coming down to this hot-bed of swing and jamming with the boys.

So if you swing cats and members of the Swing Club want to find fellow music lovers and you want to discuss with sympathetic devotees of the classics like "Dinner Music for a Pack of Hungry Cannibals" and "Shad Rack" you can take yourself down to the Onyx Club, today's centre of jitterbugs. Even if you are not interested in swing you should go down, it is a new and exciting experience. It certainly completes a college education.

The bill at the Imperial Theatre this week is fine entertainment and should not be missed. The feature, Men With Wings starring Fred MacMurray and Ray Milland is an interesting as well as an exciting film based on the history of aviation. The technicolour effect really enhances the beauty of some of the scenes.

In technicolour too is the animated cartoon version of Munro Lea's famous book for children, Ferdinand the Bull. The cartoon is almost completely pantomime and the tale is told by a very soft-voiced narrator.

Especially noteworthy about the cartoon of peaceful Ferdinand is that it is absolutely the best type of entertainment for youngsters from the viewpoint of progressive education.

The odds are 100 to 1 that Italy and Germany will ban this cartoon.

ART-MUSIC Drama

Conservatory Quartet

Last Saturday evening the Conservatory String Quartet gave the first of its winter concerts. The guest artist was Alberto Guerrero, local pianist. The players of the quartet are Spivak, Sumberg, Figelski, and Leo Smith, all of whom are leaders of their sections in the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

The outstanding work of the evening was Ernest Bloch's Quintet. The composition itself is magnificent. The first movement consists to a large extent of devastating octaves, thrown back and forth between the piano and the strings. Yet nowhere does it seem thin or weak—far from it in fact. The Andante Maestoso is one of the best examples we can think of at the moment of the mysterious, the enchantingly weird, in music. The last movement is stormy and virile.

Despite a fairly frowsy piano, the blending between the piano and the quartet was just about perfect, thanks to Guerrero's good judgment. It is our firm belief that Guerrero is one of the finest of living pianists, and his performance in the Quintet strengthened this opinion.

Elgar's Quartet in E Minor was played with a highly sympathetic feeling for the luscious type of writing with which the work is saturated. It is amazing what tonal effects Elgar achieves while using conservative harmonic resources.

Grieg's unfinished Quartet in F Major started the program. It is very typical of Grieg—melodious, in a quaint sort of way, with unusual treatment of the themes, but never very deep.

The ensemble of the quartet is remarkably good. A listener feels that here are four men who are completely en rapport, in cabaret, etc., with one another. Their tones are all good, particularly the viola's. Of course, the near-perfect acoustics of the Conservatory Concert Hall aided them in this. However, there were occasional inaccuracies of intonation in the first violin section.

Hollywood Theatre

After reading and hearing so much of the Maginot Line during the last crisis, Double Crime Sur La Ligne Maginot, shown at the Hollywood Theatre Saturday morning was of double interest to us. We wondered if the discreet shots of the fortifications allowed us were actually taken there or if a stage set was constructed. At any rate it seemed real enough. The French always seem to be able to make the most of their cameras.

Unfortunately the plot is not as skillfully handled, the producers committing the dramatic faux-pas of killing off early in the picture, a character for whom they had built up sympathy and interest. We would much rather have had the inefficient little police commissioner as the victim, Victor Francis, as the Captain Bruchot, does an excellent job with the material provided, but there is not enough sympathy built up for his part in the early stages. D'Espina is much the more dominant character.

The theme of Franco-German misalliance is quite frankly dealt with as such. However, a point is made—which may be taken for what it is worth in consideration of the context—of treating the spy-assassin not as a criminal but rather as a gallant officer who only-did-his-duty.

Friday Afternoon Recital

The construction of the fugue movement of Beethoven's Hammerclavier Sonata, opus 106, was explained in detail by Viggo Kihl in Hart House, Friday afternoon. Mr. Kihl was extremely lucid in his description of the writing of this difficult form of music. The theme—answer—counter subject—were all deftly demonstrated in a way which made the final playing much more enjoyable. He made the movement a very vital thing by his polished interpretation, and in melodic passages Mr. Kihl's singing tone is especially notable.

It would be a pleasure to bear this distinguished pianist present the Sonata in its entirety.

Red Rancy, headlines the list of imports this year. Dalton McKenna, a high-scoring winger from London, has fitted admirably into the Native Sons' style of play and has been starting on the first-string line in pre-season games. One of the standout performers of last year's Kingston Indians, Len Crawford, completes the list of imports. Dew, a newcomer, has been flashing brilliant hockey in games to date.

The mainstays of last year's outfit, McKelvie and Webster, have been turning in good efforts to date and look to be headed for a successful season. Advance notices from the Sons' camp indicate that Webster has been the best man on the ice to date, while McKelvie, a Toronto boy, has kept right in step with his front-line mate. Clow, another holder, has been looking after the goal-tending chores in masterly fashion to date. Sons picked Owen Sound Greys, a strong junior team, 7-2 in a pre-season joust and may be the team to beat in the Big Seven group.

letter implying very unethical conduct on his part which was submitted to this paper about a week ago by some scurrilous malcontent known locally as the "Champus Cat". Not only did Santa vow that this backletter would have a few pages to himself in the big black book of bad little boys, but he intimated that any other University students who went about trying to deceive and corrupt the young would also be sorry for it on Christmas Eve.

Regarding himself, the old chap told The Varsity that although there are times when his voice gets lost in his whiskers he never gets laryngitis. Asked if the suit of North Pole flannels was hot, Santa only said "Wow!", which, being translated from the Eskimo, means something even hotter than that.

Santa Claus has to explain to his youthful admirers that he keeps a large staff of assistants at children's parties and on the street corners, as well as one in the retail department store across the road, and how he leaves Mrs. Claus (the wife) at home when he comes to the city on business. He emphatically denies that he goes on a spree on Christmas Day—oh my no, he works all day, delivering things.

Santa also bade this journal make it known far and wide that Mr. Chamberlain is no relation to him, even though the British Prime Minister is regarded as his counterpart in some European capitals.

Pacifism Misleading States Phyllis Bottome

Duty of This Generation Lies in Reinforcing Democracy to Meet Fascism

SITUATION GRIM

By Anita Freedman

"Our safety today," said Miss Phyllis Bottome in an interview with The Varsity yesterday, "lies in doing for democracy what the totalitarians have done for their states. Give every man the right to work and the security of old age but without committing the crimes of dictatorship."

Miss Bottome, author of Private Worlds and The Mortal Storm, combines the qualities of a convincing writer with those of a magnificent speaker. It is hard to understand how so frail a person can achieve such power and eloquence.

Young people today are facing a grimmer situation now than did the young people of the generation before who saw the Great War, believes Miss Bottome.

To young people as a whole Miss Bottome says, "Don't be misled by pacifism. It is a side issue. Everyone will be a pacifist when we learn to love our neighbour. But we must be prepared to defend ourselves and the priceless heritage of moral law. We must answer a fool according to his folly. If we are not prepared to fight for what we believe, we shall most certainly lose it. And we shall most certainly lose it unless we're prepared to defend it."

Miss Bottome stated that she is prepared to stand by any statement that she made in The Mortal Storm concerning German youth. She writes from first-hand knowledge, as she has lived in Austria until very recently.

EXPECT DISAPPOINTMENT IN LOVE, ADVISES PARKS

"Like the graph of a stock market, the emotion of love must fall from triumphant peaks to temporary abysses of disillusionment," said Rev. J. D. Parks as he addressed the "Preparation for Marriage" group on the topic "Marriage Rhythm."

"Psychologically," said Rev. Parks, "it is natural for a newly-wed couple to encircle themselves in a complete universe of two, shutting from sight a forgotten world of realities. Sooner or later their universe expands, the circle breaks, and love seems to fall."

Rev. Mr. Parks went on to say that such problems as disillusionment, interfering relatives, hospital bills, unemployment and reduced salaries must be dealt with sanely.

"Ask yourself," he said, "what's wrong? Don't go seeking another romance."

Special to The Varsity

London, Eng., Nov. 18.—Approximately two hundred students and members of the staff of the University of London gathered in front of the large white towering building in which thirteen thousand students are registered, last Sunday afternoon.

They waited at the University until all their forces were mobilized and then staged a demonstration, which from a student angle, could be well named "monster."

Students and instructors alike marched down the streets carrying large posters indicative of their disapproval of having Mussolini and Hitler as the foreign secretaries of Great Britain.

The demonstration was well advertised so that the authorities had ample time to station policemen around the university. Nine policemen walked up.

Drama and Travel Featured at Fair

"Story of Novel" Shows Pageant of English Authors from Chaucer to Galsworthy

If you are one of those lucky students who find time to read many books outside of your course the Toronto Book Fair being held this week at the Central Public Library will afford you an infinite variety to choose from.

Things that catch one's eye are the black, velvet-clad figure of Hamlet in the drama corner; the Christmas tree shining with book-shaped lights made to represent the latest works; the horn-books, an early form of school primer, so called from the thin covering of horn over the wooden tablets; queer looking portfolios of early ceramics from Peru.

There is the travel booth with books on every land under the sun, where strange contradictory titles meet one's gaze—"Snow on the Equator"; "Hell on Ice", where every colour of the rainbow flashes from cover to cover. Outstanding in this section are "The Nile" by Emil Ludwig, and the new book by Anne Lindbergh, "Listen! the Wind".

The books are, for the most part, loaned to the Fair by the publisher; after the Fair, some will be kept. The

STAGE FINAL PUSH

Collecting evidence to show that their coming trip to California is justified, the Varsity senior hockey team flashed a smooth performance last night at Varsity Arena to upset Port Colbourne Sailors by a convincing 6-2 score. The Blues entered the contest underdogs against a strong Port Colbourne outfit, who have won one, lost one and tied one in Senior O.H.A. company, but emerged with colours flying as they outclassed the Tars in every department of play.

The Ports grabbed the lead after four minutes of the first period, Vines Upper conceiving a rink-wide pass from Gooney McGowan, shifty Port Colbourne centre, to beat Bing Casswell easily. Bill L'Heureux, Varsity defence man, took a pass from Tony Cassels and drew Hawse Marsh out of the Port Colbourne nets to revive Varsity hopes two minutes later. Bill Morrison, who played a standout game for the Blues, stunned the crowd with a neat goal on an assist from L'Heureux. The Bailey-Coached Blues held the lead to the end of the first period and managed to storm Marsh's citadel on several occasions.

The crowd was still waiting for the Ports to show Senior O.H.A. calibre as the second frame started. However, Craig Dick made it 3-1 for Varsity after four minutes when he poked one home from a scramble. Morrison got credit for the assist.

EDGAR ADDRESSES CANADIAN BOOKMEN

Says Fair not Commercial; Appeals to Small Group of Book Lovers

PLANS TRAVELLING FAIR

The Book Fair, in the opinion of Pelham Edgar, president of the Association of Canadian Bookmen, can never compete with the Motor Show or the Royal Winter Fair; it is a little-advertised display that attracts a small group of true book-lovers.

The library, he went on to say, is one of the least commercialized institutions. Although it could not affiliate itself directly with such a commercial project as the Book Fair, it could utilize the services of a semi-commercial body like the Association of Canadian Bookmen. Together, these two are responsible for the varied display of books.

The books were classified according to their subject matter; under a comparatively narrow heading such as "Biography" the faithful might find books varying from the story of George Gershwin by most of the musical lights of the day, to Hanns Frobenius' "Kemal Atatürk".

A travelling Book Fair, not centred in cities like Toronto or Montreal, but moving through the smaller communities, in the West one year, in the East the next, is an ideal toward which the organization is striving, stated Dr. Edgar. They also seek the improvement of library facilities in outlying districts, which is one of the primary problems of the library.

NOVELIST SPEAKS ON 'ART OF LIVING'

Hitler, Stalin, Mussolini, Are Described as Unskilled Labourers

"The Art of Living" was the subject of a lecture given by Miss Phyllis Bottome, widely known novelist, who spoke at the Holy Blossom Temple last night.

Miss Bottome throughout her talk paid tribute to Felix Adler, Austrian psychiatrist. It was he who called criminals unskilled labourers. According to Miss Bottome, Hitler, Stalin and Mussolini are unskilled labourers. They try to get power over others because it is much harder to get power over self.

"Crime of property can be forgiven," said Miss Bottome, "but those today are crimes against human beings. They arise from some deep failure in the art of living."

Answering questions put to her by her audience, Miss Bottome explained that fear is the trick the Nazis are playing on the world today. When asked why she classified Stalin with Hitler and Mussolini, she pointed out that to her there was not much difference between a Nazi-minded communist and a communist-minded Nazi.

ROOSEVELT AN EXAMPLE

"We strongly recommend that the Canadian Government immediately Canadian Government undertake immediately its share of responsibility in this international issue, by revising the immigration laws in order to admit a liberal quota of refugees into Canada."

This is the final draft of the petition drawn up at a joint meeting of the Avukah Society, the Student Christian Movement and the Social Problems Club, which is to be sent to the Canadian government.

Representatives of the three societies who were responsible for the drafting of the petition were Edna Mae Quentin, Secretary of the Council of the Student Christian Movement, Sam Lavine, Chairman of the Committees of the Avukah Society, and Eileen Jackson, Secretary of the Social Problems Club.

Although the main part of the petition was to stimulate the Dominion government to consider the problem of the refugees, it was preceded by a preamble which asked that Prime Minister Mac-

Guiding Jobs Seen For Forestry Grads By Faculty Dean

In reply to the statement made by Earl A. Trager, Chief Naturalist of the National Park Service at Washington, in his Convocation Hall lecture Saturday evening, Dr. C. D. Howe, Dean of the Faculty of Forestry, remarked yesterday that while there are no college-trained naturalists acting as guides in national parks of Canada at present, it is his belief and hope that the service will be established.

Dr. Howe was answering the complaint of Mr. Trager that while American public parks were provided with college-trained naturalists, there was no such provision in Canada. This service, according to Mr. Trager, was discontinued by the Dominion government after a two-year trial, but he added that the practice might be revived in accordance with popular demand.

Dr. Howe stated that before the depression graduates of the Faculty of Forestry were hired by the Dominion Government for forestry work.

Pity the Drunk

Writers and preachers use the media of editorial pages, magazines and pulpits to tell to the soft-hearted and easy public that it should be more wary of its nickels and dimes. They advise the softies not to give anything to the pan-handler who asks for funds for a cup of coffee. And the reason given is that the money is oftener than not used to purchase the liquid means to reckless bliss.

We condemn the drunk of the streets who although weak for food will beg nickels and dimes, and then use them to buy cheap wines, rubbing alcohol or any other dope that can be secured. Public spirited citizens feel justified in refusing every beggar, because some use whatever they can get, to buy liquor. Drunkenness should be condemned and we should use the same means to combat one of the greatest social evils of the world as we use to wipe out any other disease.

The drunk of the street is more to be pitied than condemned. His habit is just the result of what happens to any good moderate drinker who is unfortunate enough to possess the physical weaknesses that make three men out of ten, who commence to drink moderately, become chronic drinkers.

We talk about will-power, and blame their helplessness upon the lack of that. And we condemn the lack. But do we condemn a man because he has not the resistance to ward off tuberculosis or some other dread disease? Inebriety is a disease, and he who has given to one on the streets who has asked for help, need not feel ashamed because he has helped a brother down the road to hell. It is going to take a lot more than starving the drunkards of this generation, to wipe out the curse. Education will help, but can it be helped while the brewers and all those who are profiting by the industry, are using every known means of subtle and deceptive advertising, to educate another generation to be drunkards.

You can't do the drunkard much more harm with a dime, and you may make him happy, but you have to remember that that dime will eventually find its way into the coffers of a firm growing wealthy by distributing the germs of a great disease. A large percentage of the money that is given on the street, without a doubt is used for such a purpose. Street-car tickets are begged and sold for a nickel apiece, and the proceeds used to appease the terrible craving that no one but a drunkard knows.

If you can detect the odour of liquor upon a man, you do right to refuse him money, but not because of the good or evil that it may do for him, but because what you give will go to stimulate a cursed industry which is fast dragging part of another generation down to disaster and despair.

Pro's and Con's

There is a story told of a young man who a few years ago was receiving $100 a month as a secretary. He spent his spare time studying and reading. Then one night he delivered a speech in Boston on, "What I'd Do if I Were a Millionaire." At the conclusion of the speech a quiet-mannered man came up to him and after introducing himself as a millionaire, offered the young speaker $10,000 a year if he would come and tell him what to do.

The millionaire was Edward A. Filene, the famous Boston merchant. The young speaker was Glenn Frank, afterwards president of the University of Wisconsin, and now a well-known political figure and possible Republican candidate for the presidency of the United States. This one speech gave Glenn Frank the opportunity he needed to start him successfully in life.

In a day when many young men are thinking in terms of success in after life, every opportunity should be seized upon to make one better fitted for a life work. Whether one has the desire to become wealthy or not, the ability to be able to speak and express oneself in public is a valuable asset.

Everyone realizes that debating is one of the finest methods of training for public address and while at University there are many chances to debate. Whether one ever intends to debate or not, it is worth while for each and every undergraduate to attend some of the campus debates occasionally. Anyone who hasn't attended a Hart House debate is almost uneducated, and there are many uneducated students in Varsity.

In choosing a subject that has popular appeal, the debates committee has resurrected the old question of fraternities, to be debated on tomorrow night. Most students have their ideas about fraternities, and a few freshmen may be interested in formulating some ideas. No doubt there will be more room for original wit to be expressed than has been heard for some time. The fraternity men will be out to prove that their brotherhoods are not detrimental to University life, while many barbarians or pagans will be willing to exhibit their friends as examples of what happens to men when they assume Greek letters.

It will be interesting to hear what great men have been members of frats, and what greater men have not been conformers. Some of our Canadian universities bar them from their campus, while others simply continue without recognizing their existence. There will be no scarcity of arguments for either side, and the debate should be the liveliest of the year.

Tuberculosis

From the Saskatchewan Sheaf

If there is any doubt about the value of the recent tuberculosis test held on this campus, a most cursory investigation would dispel such doubt.

In this university every student is now given an opportunity of having an opinion expressed about his health in regard to tuberculosis. A very great majority of the students have no sign of the disease, no sign even of infection. But tuberculosis has been dropping students out of classes every year, and as long as this continues there is need for concern.

Last year nine students were shown by the tests to have the disease. Eight of them had to quit classes to undergo treatment, while the ninth was able to continue study. Results from this year's tests are not yet available, but regardless of definite statistics the certainty attached to them is invaluable. No doubt the test is not infallible, but it is a most decided advantage over the old way of waiting till the disease had become incurable before discovering it.

Preventive work cannot be done for nothing. The University donated only one hundred dollars, a small part of the total cost. Except for that, work is financed entirely by the Christmas Seal Fund. In other words the health of us students is partly guaranteed by a charitable fund.

In view of this it seems reasonable to anticipate that the students will sponsor a real campaign for the sale of Christmas Seals.

If there had been wisdom at Versailles, there would not be chaos today. If wisdom reigned today, there would be order—not only in Germany and Spain and Italy, but throughout the world. One wise man, given the opportunity to use his gift, could have saved millions of lives in the past thirty years; could probably save billions in the next thirty. Instead, we have innumerable fools, vying with each other to see who can be the biggest.

—Notre Dame Scholastic

Once again the editors would like to mention that much of the correspondence which comes to this office cannot be printed for several reasons mentioned at an earlier date. Letters must be signed. Many of our best letters have been unsigned, probably because the writer was afraid to be honest in expressing his own ideas. We will withhold the signature, however, if requested, but will continue to refuse to print letters unless we know where they come from.

WEATHER FOR THE NEXT WEEK

Lower Lake Region: An area of low pressure is rapidly moving along Highway No. 2 for no apparent reason. Visiting motorists have been reassured, as this is quite a common phenomenon. . . . The Lower Lake Region is funny that way. Occasional showers are promised for the fall crop of brides . . . and you can have them too. An anticyclone was arrested by a group of cyclones and thrown into a hurricane cellar without food or drink . . . no quarter was promised.

The Maritimes: Continued cold with thunderbolts and St. Elmo's fire, is promised for the week-end. Precipitation will be about $7.450 in. (This figure is only approximate.)

Thunder Bay District: There will be a special display of the northern lights for all those taking the C.P.R. excursion trip to Nome. Refreshments will be served. Lake Chigoubiminaga is overcast . . . (and vastly overrated too, I may say).

Pacific Coast Region: There will be a special eclipse of the moon which is only eclipsed by an eclipse of the sun. (May we draw attention to our special bargain in smoked glasses and herrings.)

Based on John Weeley's play by the same name, Radio City brings to Toronto for the first time, the great prison picture, "The Last Mile". Similar in the last mile many ways to some of Warden Lawes stories on Sing Sing prison, the play dramatically portrays part of the life of the men in the death cells before their execution, showing the horrors of the penal system which crushes men spiritually and mentally before finally robbing them of life itself.

Although there is plenty of Hollywood colour, the picture is unique in the absence of all romantic sentiment . . . in fact the only woman to appear is the gray-haired mother of the condemned innocent hero, who is relieved with a few minutes to go.

Ginger Rogers married on the spur of a midnight crush to a young associate professor, gives plenty of laughs in "Vivacious Lady", which goes to make up a very good second feature of a three-hour entertainment.

BASKETEERS TO MEET
SUNDAY MORNING CLASS

Varsity fans will have a chance to see the senior basketball team in action tonight at Hart House when Warren Stevens' boys in blue meet up with a strong aggregation of Sunday Morning Class players. It will be the second game of the season for the home squad and in order to enable everyone to take in the tussle there will be no admission charge.

The same eleven men who saw action last week when Varsity beat West End Y to the tune of 50-21, will play and on their former showing should make it two straight wins for the collegians. On Thursday the boys play Broadway Y and then leave Saturday for Niagara Falls, N.Y., where they clash with the powerful Niagara University team.

Although eleven men have been selected by Stevens and have received uniforms only nine can play in intercollegiate games. Hence every player will be out on the floor doing his best, in the exhibition contests, as it is their showing in these games that determines whether they make the final team that meets McGill on January 27th.

Of the players with the squad at present four are freshmen, four were with last year's team, Red Humenick has come up from the Seconds, Rogie and Aitchison have played with both Windsor and Detroit teams. The latter two have justified to date all the nice things that have been said about them by Varsity sport scribes. However, it

KNOX LACROSSE SQUAD
DEFEATED BY TEACHERS

O.C.E. continued their winning ways in the lacrosse league, beating Knox by a 12-0 score yesterday afternoon in the Hart House gym.

Aitchison opened the scoring in the first period by banging two in for the Teachers, while Knox failed to click for any points. O.C.E. scored two more goals to end the first period 4-0.

The next two periods saw Knox striving hard to score, but they seemed unable to hold off the speedy Teachers, who quickly piled up the count to end the game with a score of 12-0.

White and Bailey were outstanding for the Teachers, accounting for most of the 12 points, while Cassler, Davis and Alden played good lacrosse for Knox, checking and passing well in spite of the stronger O.C.E. team.

O.C.E.: White, Glenn, Fraser, Box, Bailey, Masters, Aitchison, Rogie, Stensson.

Knox: Renshaw, Wilson, Cassler, Spencer, Davis, Vincent, Alden.

It is not entirely a two-man team that Stevens is coaching. While MacGregor has been with the seniors for the last two years and showed up well against the city team last Thursday, Sinner, Mahoney and Mincham are playing their second year in intercollegiate circles.

St. Mike's: "Deed" McGovern (6), Annabelle Macklin (15), "M. T." Bennett (15), Jean Grant, Geri Muleahy (11), Jean de Cola, Vicky Longo, Jack Bennett.

Meds: Doris Prowse (15), Jean Brerton (3), Jean Meiners (8), Helen Holden, Lil Sugarman, Lil Karmalaska, Mari Mosbaugh, B. Jackson, F. Allan, M. McFarlane.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Ed Goodman

"THIS IS OUR YEAR"

There seems to be only one thing that gives a sportswriter as much satisfaction as calling the winner of an athletic contest, and that is to have a great string of false prophecies. No matter whether the writer is merely embryonic or a full-fledged veteran, he jocularly points out his own deficiency and immediately is entitled to a place alongside McLemore, Gallico and Runyan. At the end of a successful football season, having backed Montreal Nats, Ottawa Roughriders and above all Toronto Varsity, I find myself therefore a much prouder although a great deal poorer sports expert.

Intercollegiate football is now a thing of the past and last night marked the beginning of the University of Toronto hockey season. With the senior team's debut, follows the inevitable summary of their chances and the hazarded guess as to where they will finish off the season. Without any more ado I come flat-footedly out on a limb and declare that Varsity should end McGill's six-year supremacy and capture the intercollegiate hockey title, both Canadian and International.

This assertion is not expected to meet the same fate as the ones mentioned before. It is not dictated by school sentiment or hope. Its fulfillment should be the inevitable result of three years of careful building. Two years ago Varsity had a good but inexperienced junior hockey team. Ace Bailey took them in hand and started to develop them. Their main cogs were Boddington, Cassels, Craig, Callon, MacLachlan, Blackhall and Simpson. Next year the five of them played for Varsity seniors strengthened by such players as Morison, Caswell, and some defencemen. This year under Ace Bailey's tutelage for the third year, the whole seven of those players, plus Morison and Caswell, and still further strengthened by L'Heureux, Copp, Shipman and Taylor, will in all probability compose Varsity's senior hockey team. They have played together for three years. They are all good natural hockey players, some are even brilliant. They have been coached by one of the finest hockey brains of our time. This is the last year in school for over half of them. McGill has been weakened by the loss of several stars, notably Pidcock. Varsity, under such circumstances, should undoubtedly win the title.

In order to show that the "this is our year" spirit (this saying is supposed to have helped McGill win the football championship, so perhaps it can win the hockey crown for us) is evident, Varsity have already trimmed Native Sons in a practice game and last night they beat Port Colborne in their first exhibition tilt 6 to 2. McGill, in the meantime, dropped their opening fixture to Montreal Royals. However, the Redmen were playing without Anton and Perowne, both of football game.

Ace Bailey has shifted his lines about this year, and for his starting forward trio has put three speed demons together, Craig, Morison and Taylor. This line should be the undoubted class of the league, if Taylor is as good as is reported. In fact we do not think that there are many forward lines in amateur hockey that are very much their superiors. The second line, on the other hand, may prove even more useful, Cassels, Boddington and Callon. All are clever stickhandlers and backchecking fiends, and will undoubtedly play good consistent hockey. The utility line of Woods, Copp and Ross is good enough to keep the rest of the boys hopping to keep their positions.

But the prize package of 1938 is L'Heureux, Cam MacLachlan's defence mate. He is a power both offensively and defensively. Jack Simpson of "fight Oshawa" fame, rounds out the rearward. As we come to the final department of this hockey preview, the goaltending position, we are not in a position to comment. At the present time Caswell, Blackhall and Shipman are all running neck and neck. Time alone will decide who will play, but any of the three will hold up his end.

As we read over this copy and consider the team our confidence grows. And if we don't stop talking about them we might say something about an unbeaten record, only we can't manage to push Queen's powerful squad out of our mind. But we still reiterate

St. Hilda's Srs. def. Vic Fresh, 28-15
St. Mike's def. Meds, 37-26
U.C. Jrs. def. St. H. Frosh, 33-12

Led by Doris Prowse, a much improved Meds team seriously threatened St. Mike's defences in the first half of their game last night before the Irish rallied in the second half to defeat them 37-26. In every angle Meds equalled the Irish until half-time when the latter's defense began to tighten up and hold off the accurate Meds forward line. Although their defense was far stronger than it was in their opening games, the Medettes lacked the advantage of height which featured the Saints. Jean de Cola turned in a brilliant game for the Irish.

St. Mike's: "Deed" McGovern (6), Annabelle Macklin (15), "M. T." Bennett (15), Jean Grant, Geri Muleahy (11), Jean de Cola, Vicky Longo, Jack Bennett.

Meds: Doris Prowse (15), Jean Brerton (3), Jean Meiners (8), Helen Holden, Lil Sugarman, Lil Karmalaska, Mari Mosbaugh, B. Jackson, F. Allan, M. McFarlane.

The more-experienced St. Hilda's Seniors team succeeded in piling up a thirteen-point lead to repel the lightning attack of Vic Fresh, 28-15, in the first game at O.C.E. gym last night. The Freshies' passing lacked the speed which they have shown in earlier tilts. Jean Crawford was held to nine points by the strong Saints' defense which never let up. Joan McMaster led the Saints' attack and tied with "Tibs" Annesley for individual scoring honours.

St. Hilda's Srs.: Joan McMaster

Victoria Frosh: Jean Crawford (9), Beryl Pollock (6), Eleanor Jose, Lois Davison, Jean Sterling, Patsy Perrin, Win Haly, Gracia Gordon, Celia Corcoran, Phil Hulse.

U.C. Juniors came smashing through St. Hilda's Frosh defense line to win a victory of 33-12 last night. Helen Gurney and Bobby McDonald starred on the forward line for U.C., while Mary Skeeles, defense, and Eleanor McLaughlin bravely upheld the honour of St. Hilda's.

U.C. Jrs.: Helen Gurney (12), Bobby McDonald (9), Anna M. Smart (8), Mary Kirkland (4), Gertrude Evans, Jack Bryans, Patsy McLaren, Fran Barbour.

St. Hilda's Frosh: Agnes Ireland (5), Eleanor McLaughlin (4), Betty Brodie (3), Nancy Pyrell, Mary Skeeles, Leatha Young, Connie Harrison, Mary Connors.

INTERFACULTY TEAMS COMPETE IN PING PONG

Riding the crest of the keen inter-faculty competitive spirit, the intra-university table tennis tournament is receiving strong support in the various faculties.

Although most of the teams entering the competition have not been determined officially at the time of writing, Victoria College has already forwarded its entry. On the Vic team is Lloyd Whiting, who played against a group of world champion ping pong players last April.

Wycliffe also has a team which should provide plenty of opposition for

Among those present . . . the popularity of basketball (or maybe the players are the feature attraction) is more evident as the semi-finals in the inter-faculty championship approach. The most enthusiastic gallery so far was up at the O.C.E. gym last night to see their favourites fight it out. If the spectators increase during the semi-finals some method of accommodating them will have to be arranged, since we don't crash the sacred portals of Hart House until the finals. Meds and St. Mike's succeeded in getting the vocal support of some of their fellow eds for their games. We would like to see the other teams getting a boost from their class-mates. They certainly work hard enough and anyone who goes to these games will attest that they are worth while.

Nurses, who have been turning in some gallant efforts this season despite all sorts of handicaps, were forced to default to Household Science last night because of their inability to muster up a team for their final game which was scheduled to finish off their group. Meds, after trouncing Nurses last week, turned in a brilliant effort last night against St. Mike's before bowing to the superior team-work of the Irish. Much credit is due the busy Medettes for the fine display they made in all their inter-faculty encounters. We bear that their epic struggle against Nurses, which they won last week, didn't even merit a line in our annals. Remember what we told you about the problems of night editors?

Whisper—St. Hilda's Seniors seem slated for Interfaculty Honours. Last night against Vic Frosh their defense turned in some really outstanding work. They are undoubtedly winners of their group and if they continue the way they have been playing all along are our choice for the championship. Deep breath—that's really asking for it.

OVER THE NET

Still retaining a mathematical chance to tie Vic and Trinity for the group lead Jr. U.C. finished off their schedule by trouncing St. Mike's in two straight games of volleyball last night. The Collegians had no trouble with their opponents and won 15-9, 15-8. St. Mike's just could not seem to click as U.C., led by Cowan, Dublin, Gould, combined well together.

Their opponents, Abbott is their strongest player, having won the Faculty championship last year. S.P.S. has listed a semi-official team composed at this writing of Bryce, Turner, McCallum, Hober, Greenbloom, Finlayson, Brisco and Wilson. The Engineers' chief contenders are Turner and Finlayson, who have earned a great deal of respect around School for their ability.

MEDS VICTORIOUS
ON SOCCER FIELDWycliffe Bows to Doctors
Losing Claim to Title

Wycliffe's hopes for a soccer title were dashed as they bowed to Meds by the score of 1-0 on the front campus yesterday. The game was the second of a double round-robin series, Meds having taken the first encounter 2-0. Victoria is the other team still in the running.

The only goal of the game came in the first half, as Hughie Kline caught the left hand corner to beat Coleman, the Wycliffe goalie, on a perfectly placed shot.

As the second half started, the Doctors tried to increase their lead, and stormed the Anglican goal time after time, but steady work between the posts by Bill Coleman kept them out. Open play featured the closing minutes, Boyd and Townsend pressing hard for Meds, while Ed Abbott spearheaded the Theologians' attack.

Wycliffe: Coleman, Piercey, Simpson, Vance, Abbott, Kerr, Parkes-Taylor, Hooton, Morris, Shaw, Cathcart, Macdonald, Simmonds, Sutherland. Meds: Lang, Boyd, Holmes, Routley, Lore, Prowse, Cooper, Seymour, Park, Townsend, Emmet.

One feature is the booth dedicated to "The Story of the Novel", where all the important English authors from Chaucer to Galsworthy are represented. Well-known characters from some of the best novels are depicted.

There is a special exhibit of Louis Hemon's "Maria Chapdelaine", which has been translated into nine languages; one copy particularly valued contains illustrations by Clarence Gagnon. On display, too, is the first known picture of Niagara Falls published in Utrecht in 1608.

BRITAIN DENOUNCED AS PRO-FASCIST

and down in front of the British Museum carefully watching the students assemble along the road. A police car was also called.

Students and members of the staff attacked the Munich peace plan. They resented the policy of the British Government which allowed Germany to gain control of northern Spain, and by so doing he in France.

They interpreted this move as meaning only one thing. The Socialist Party was becoming too strong in France and there was the immediate danger of the movement spreading to England. The policy of non-intervention gave Germany an opportunity to establish herself firmly in northern Spain, and France, finding herself surrounded on all sides by Fascist countries, could not carry out the former plan, such as the forty-hour week.

(Recently the French Finance Minister, Reynaud, told his people that they were living under a capitalist regime and whether they approved of it or not, the system was based on profits. "Capitalism," he said, "cannot function at a loss, and France cannot change the regime.")

Students complained of the censorship of important news in the British press, and the substitution of pure propaganda.

(It is interesting to note that during the past week an intensive campaign has been conducted by the British press (Reuters) to impress the English people with the atrocities in Germany, the organs which are supposedly eliminating the Jews from Germany. At the same time Hitler's press is saying, "... Sixteen hundred Arab dead have been sacrificed to the Englishman's demonic humanity in the last four months. Let the blood of the Arabs soak into the desert, that never disturbs them.")

On November 14, The Evening News published an editorial, "France to Work and Pay", clearly enunciating the policy of the big interests. An excerpt from this editorial is evidence of the clever strategy which has succeeded in checking Socialism in France.

As Mr. Reynaud said in his broadcast speech, French industrial production is now in the last rank. Unless it can be greatly intensified—unless the French factory worker is prepared to work harder and for longer hours—all other efforts to place France on a sound economic footing or to assure her military safety can only be useless palliatives.

This demonstration was the first major attempt in three years to show the government that the students did not approve of its pro-German policy; that they opposed any loan to Germany via Czechoslovakia or any other country, and that they did not approve of the rigid control of the press.

SCHOOL OF NURSING TO HOLD GRADUATION

Woodstock; Ruth Kent, Toronto; Hope Linton, Toronto; Frances Smith, North Bay.

Certificates for successful completion of one year's post graduate study in public health nursing or in hospital staff work will be awarded to seventy graduate nurses from many different training schools across Canada and in foreign countries. It is expected that a considerable number of these nurses will be present to receive their certificates from the president of the University, Dr. H. J. Cody.

Of this latter number six are graduate nurses from foreign countries (one from Puerto Rico, two from Panama, three from Mexico). As Rockefeller Foundation Fellows, these nurses spent an academic year at the University of Toronto School of Nursing, studying public health nursing. They have now returned to their own countries where they are giving leadership in the development of public health nursing.

At Wednesday's graduating exercises the chief speaker will be Mr. Norman Sommerville, K.C., president of the Canadian Red Cross Society. Miss Kathleen Russell, director of the school, will report on the work of the past year.

IN THIS DAY AND AGE . . . we find at Manitoba that undergraduates are warned to keep away from the law courts. . . . The officials state that the court rooms are limited and it is felt that barristers, others connected with the legal profession and the police should be accommodated first. . . . It seems that in the spring assizes last February, several rape cases were tried and large numbers of first and second year university boys and girls from the U. of Manitoba, flocked over to listen to the proceedings. . . . It is understood that the officials at the court house consider it highly improper for young university girls to attend at these cases. . . . The officials have now gone so far as to post signs asking the students to keep out. . . . THIS IS NOT A GOOD THING!

THE DAILY NORTHWESTERN comes out with a new suggestion, now that all-star teams are quite the rage. . . . They suggest an all-international team. . . . Hitler was nominated for right end. . . . "Ed Daladier" will play right guard on the mythical squad. . . . "Nev" Chamberlain will play on the half line. . . . He will use his special play of receiving the ball direct from the snap, and taking ten steps backward on the dead run. . . . Others named for positions include Benes, Stalin, Roosevelt, Chiang Kai Shek, who will play quarter, and it is believed that he will make a good field general. . . . the team will be rounded out by "Ben" Mussolini. . . . "Big Ben" as he is affectionately called on the Ethiopian campus, will guard the right side of the line next to Hitler. . . . It is also rumoured that Big Ben once broke his arm in the middle of a big game, patting himself on the back. . . . If you do not agree with this all-international team, send in your team in care of this column. . . . All letters will be gratefully received and deposited in the nearest waste-paper basket. . . .

ONE OF THE MOST INTERESTING GROUPS that meet on the campus are the men who meet in Hart House and blow bamboo-pipes. . . . This form of amusement may seem a little silly at first, but the bamboo-pipe blowers are all for it. . . . However, from time to time a discouraging note is heard and this is what took place last week while the class was tuning the pipes. . . . The class was tuning up in the art room, and from the graduate common room this remark was heard "From the sound of things, a bamboo-pipe is an ill wood-wind which nobody blows good".

Some answers measured the distance in other units besides feet, yards and miles, and the distance was variously estimated at one and a half cigarettes, fifteen minutes and twenty-five square blocks. The type of blocks was not specified.

BLUE PUCKSTERS DEFEAT PORT TEAM

over the boards in an effort to regain the lead but stary play by Frank Blackhall, who had replaced Caswell in the Varsity nets, staved off a score. The goaltender from St. Michael's was warding them off from all angles in agile, peppery style. On a close play La Roche of the Ports clipped the goal post when he had Blackhall beaten. Then Varsity took a new lease of life when Johnny Taylor batted home his own rebound on a clever play.

Morison led the way for Varsity in the final frame, backchecking in leech-like fashion and spearheading the powerful Varsity attack. The Ports tossed five men on the attack, but Varsity again demonstrated a scoring punch which they lacked last year when Dick Craig punched the puck behind Muir Walker, Marsh's successor in the Ports nets, at the three minute mark. The game started to look like a runaway as Simpson scored from Cassels five minutes later to hand Varsity a 6-1 lead.

The Ports continued to press, however, and Bill Holmes, playing coach of the Sailors, was finally rewarded when he slammed home Leitch's rebound a few minutes before the close of the chapter.

Bill Morison, Frank Blackhall, Tony Cassels and Dick Craig shone for a Varsity team that played inspired hockey, while Bill Holmes and Gooney McGowan looked best for the Sailors. The Blues travel to Midland Friday night for their next warm-up engagement.

STUOENTS SEND PETITION TO KING

kenzie King protest the German racial and religious pogroms which have currently aroused a great deal of criticism throughout the world. "We ask," read the introduction, "that the government protest the attacks on racial and religious groups in Germany and Austria."

The president of the United States, Franklin D. Roosevelt, was cited as an example which Canadian statesmen would do well to follow, as he had voiced his objections to the cruel practices against the religious minorities. It was decided that the inclusion of a clause that Germany be boycotted would detract from the importance of the main issue. The petition is to go to each individual society and any further discussion will take place between the three executives.

The main objection to allowing immigration was cited as being "the tendency of the Jews to flock to the cities" which might prove detrimental to economic conditions. It was replied that if admitted to Canada, they could be settled in the country and northern towns where they would be of definite value to the nation.

It was suggested that on admission of the refugees, the church and other organizations would be responsible for their welfare. While these university groups could back them, they were "not sufficiently important financially" to accept full responsibility.

Student Organizations Against Demonstrations

Mass Demonstration Staged by U. of London Students Prompts Censure from Forum and Other Campus Clubs

CONSERVATIVE HERE

Student demonstrations, similar to the one held a week ago Sunday by University of London students and staff, cannot be successful here in Toronto. The heads of campus organizations interested in affairs political and social agree that the conservatism that pervades this university wouldn't allow such a meeting to gain importance or attain success.

Rev. Doctor Lockhart, secretary of the S.C.M., said, "Protest meetings have their limitations, since they are negative. However, anything that will awaken students' interest in the foreign policy or political destinies of the British Empire should be encouraged." Dr. Lockhart cited the situation that arose last Wednesday outdrew the protest movement held here on the campus concerning Jewish refugees by a large margin. "Social activities are not to be condemned," said Dr. Lockhart, "but the students here haven't the keen interest in social affairs of the English students." The case in China where the

Victoria Freshies Pay Double; Seniors To Benefit By Tradition

Tomorrow night is Freshie-Senior night for Victoria College. Freshies will treat their seniors to "The Good-Natured Man", a comedy by Oliver Goldsmith, to be presented in Hart House Theatre, December 1st, 2nd and 3rd by the Victoria Dramatic Club.

The custom that freshies escort their seniors to the annual production of the Victoria Dramatic Society, has become a tradition around Vic.

All the freshies appear to be quite enthusiastic even though they do have to buy double tickets for the show, is the opinion of Betty Gray, associate president of the Victoria Dramatic Club.

FINAL LECTURE

The final lecture of the series, attendance at which is compulsory for all entering women in University College, Medicine, Household Science, School of Science, and Dentistry, will be given in the north lecture room of the Medical Building at five o'clock this afternoon.

EXAMS POSTPONED FOR PASS ARTS

Xmas Tests to be in February So that Students May Study During Their Holidays

Pre-Christmas examinations for pass Arts students have been abolished—but as yet the decree is purely tentative.

According to Mr. A. B. Pennell, secretary of the Faculty of Arts, the first term is so short that the students are not up on their subjects well enough to write any examinations.

It is hoped that by postponing them until the first week in February students will take advantage of the Christmas holidays to pursue their studies instead of their social activities.

If, however, this plan should be a failure, the old system will undoubtedly be restored and the eds and co-eds will once more have to plug for term tests before Christmas.

NEW PRESENTATION WILL FEATURE PLAY

Sholome Gelber, guest director for the University Drama Committee, is rehearsing the cast of the play Pawns by Pervela Wilde, for presentation in an afternoon performance in Hart House Theatre on Tuesday, Dec. 6.

Gelber, who studied drama last year at the Neighbourhood Playhouse in New York City, is using a technique of direction which stresses both objective and subjective aspects of characterization. The players first are taught to understand the characters according to the play, and then later to interpret the characters in the light of their own experience.

"It's great to be a senior these days," laughed Mark Weymark, III Vic, when asked if he favoured the freshie-payment-plan for Thursday night. "There's really something to it," she added.

"Between acts some members of the cast will sing amusing period songs," stated John Hilton, III Vic, president of the Dramatic Club. With a smile he added, "this will be something new." He intimated that the costumes are gay, colourful, suggestive and in harmony with the whole show.

Geo. B. Johnston, B.A., a Vic graduate of 1936, is directing the performance.

LAND TAX URGED TO ELIMINATE UNEMPLOYMENT

Owens Sees Remedy of Modern Problems in Increased Land Tax and Reduced Income Tax

URBAN PROBLEMS GROUP

That we must decrease taxes on improvements and income, and substantially increase that on land, if we are to eliminate unemployment, was the most convincing pronouncement made by Mr. H. T. Owens speaking to the Urban Problems group in Wymwood last night.

Mr. Owens, a former United Church missionary to Korea, is one of the foremost exponents in Toronto of the opinion that a single tax, namely on land, will lead the way to the complete solution of our Canadian municipal, provincial, and federal problems. He stated that at the present time the assessment on improvements (i.e. buildings) is more than that on land and income put together, and this resulted in land being locked up so that labour could not gain access to it.

Asked if increased taxation would not also increase the value of land, his reply was that such would not be the case with what is unused, of which at the present time in Toronto there is the amazing amount of 60 miles of frontage. Most of this, he said, is privately owned and should revert to the

Xmas Issue Deadline Set For December 5th

Students Urged to Submit Prose and Verse; Sketches Accepted; Work Competently Judged

CASH AWARDS

Do you write? Have you any ideas? Would you like to see some of your ideas set up in type and appearing in the columns of a daily newspaper? Here is your opportunity. The field is wide open, providing the copy submitted is written by you on your own ideas.

The daily newspaper in question is The Varsity. Each year it is the custom to run an eight-page edition on the last day of publication before the Christmas vacation, December 9.

The feature of this edition is that it makes its appearance in green ink. The content is comprised almost totally of the efforts of prose and verse writers, and the art of potential sketches.

Whether you are inclined to gravity or levity in your writing it makes no difference. As for sketches, anything goes, providing it is good. All copy submitted will be competently judged. The copy and sketches must make a deadline set at Monday, December the fifth.

There are four fields open for literary competition: serious prose, humorous prose, serious verse and humorous verse. For the first and second prize-winning entries in each field there will be awards of five dollars and three dollars respectively. Prizes will be awarded for the two best sketches.

MCGILL ROOTERS ARE RELEASED AFTER CLUB RIOT

Third Year Men Out on Bail; Claims for Damage Dropped; Handshaking Ensued

RESULT OF OOWTOWN RIOT

Montreal, Nov. 29 (CUP)—The three McGill students arrested for disturbing the peace after the championship game last week, were released from court yesterday. Claims for damages amounting to $300 were dropped by the proprietors of the German Harmonia Club and the trial was terminated by shaking of hands all around.

The students were arrested as a result of a demonstration and parade held in downtown Montreal which culminated in a riot at the German Harmonia Club. After chairs, tables and windows were smashed the employees of the club secured one of the students as hostage. When two of his comrades returned to his rescue they also were arrested. They were charged with damaging property and disturbing the peace, and were released on bail of $25 each.

APPLICATIONS RECEIVED

Applications for the position of manager of the rowing team will be received at the Athletic Office, Hart House, until five o'clock tonight.

FERIGAN TO PLAY MUSIC AT FAIR

Trinity College have secured Jack Ferigan and his band for their annual Concert to be held in Hart House, January 20. The well-known maestro of the air has promised to devote his broadcast period on Wednesday, Dec. 30 at 11.15 to the dance.

Mr. Ferigan has been secured through the courtesy of the Royal Connaught Hotel in Hamilton. The broadcast will come from Station C.K.O.C. Trinityites are advised to watch The Varsity for further information.

PAOLOCS GUARD SIGNS FROM SOUVENIR HUNTERS

Hanging outside the Athletic Office is a sign which says "Athletic Office—Tickets", and keen observers have noticed that there is a padlock attached to the bottom.

To dispel the rumour that the lock was to prevent McGill taking the sign along with the football championship, Warren Stevens was approached. It was learned that Varsity students themselves were the culprits, having stolen the original sign. There is nothing unusual about this, since any little thing not securely fastened to the foundations of Hart House has a habit of disappearing, usually after a dance, as a souvenir.

Student Observations Sought Before Debate

Good and Bad Aspects of Fraternity Life Are Exposed

OPINIONS DIVIDED

Student opinion on the question of tonight's Hart House debate, resolved, "That fraternities are a bad thing," is fairly evenly divided, according to a survey conducted by The Varsity yesterday afternoon.

All fraternity men questioned were definitely convinced of the value of fraternities. Some non-fraternity men, however, were just as emphatic in their denunciation of these societies. Gord Black, I Vic, said, "Fraternities are dives and places of wholesale degeneration." Of somewhat the same opinion was Duncan Gray, III History, who alleged that "sprees had a tendency to occupy a prominent part in fraternity life, including other activities which might be of more lasting benefit." He also intimated that fraternity men were inclined to be snobbish and cliquish.

Another bad aspect of frats was pointed out by Doug Montgomery, IV S.P.S., who claimed "fraternities for the most part are always getting into financial difficulties."

Fraternities? What are they? asked Bob Shearer, I U.C., when questioned on the matter. After the system had been explained to him, he emphatically declared that they were a waste of time and energy.

Nearly all frat men had no doubts about the matter. Len Andrews of Trinity, claimed that "not only was a fraternity a home on the campus, but it provided valuable connections for

PLAYWRITERS' GROUP GIVE THREE PLAYS

Three one-act plays will be presented by the Playwriters' Group in Hart House Theatre.

The Playwriters' Studio Group will present their second evening of original plays in Hart House Theatre this season on Wednesday, December 7th.

The bill will consist of three one-act plays. The Trop, a modern melodrama, written and directed by Arthur Burrows. The Union Jack—and Thomas Sheen, written by Leonora McNeilly and directed by Murray Bonycastle. Growing Pains, a comedy by Dora Smith Conover directed by Dora McMillan, and a curtain raiser, All's Well That Ends Well, by Winifred David Pilcher, to be directed by Molly Poddington.

Guest Artists Will Perform At Swing Club Jam-boree

The Swing Club, having postponed the jitterbug contest it had planned for a date in the near future, until after Christmas, is planning for a great meeting near the middle of next week.

Bruce Harris, president, and George Carby, vice-president, are "negotiating" at present with the following musicians, whom they hope to have perform at the next assembly of swing fans: Lloyd Kerr, with his nine piece band, Bert Niosi and his Swing Quartette, Dick McDougall, commentator on swing at CKL as master of ceremonies, Harold Sweet and Oscar Hoffman, piano swingers of the Hart House class common

Delhomme Francis for Affirmative; George, Fleming will Uphold Negative Side

FRATERNITY REPS

"The modern college fraternity system has to a large extent degenerated into intellectual and social snobbery," is the stand of George Delhomme, IV St. Mike's, who is leading the affirmative onslaught in this evening's Hart House debate. He is of the opinion that fraternity life tends to over-emphasize entertainment and the social aspects of university life to the detriment of the undergraduate's studies. "Fraternity initiations," he claims, "make Black Legion tactics seem like Sunday school parties."

J. George, an Alpha Delta Phi man, who is leading the opposition, feels that the fraternity is of great importance in the emotional development of the student, that it "gives him a sense of belonging." He is firm in his belief that undergraduates tend to take themselves too seriously, particularly the freshmen, and fraternities give them an opportunity for "letting off steam."

Says Lloyd Francis, III U.C., for the ayes, "Fraternities . . . are unnecessary, expensive appendages to our campuses." "The evils of small, petty-minded groups . . . monopolizing university offices and discriminating against poorer students by the predominance of their more well-to-do members, is apparent."

M. Fleming, answering for the negative, states that fraternities are instrumental in bringing the members of various colleges and faculties together into a bond of fellowship, each partaking of the others' opinions and perspective. Says Fleming, "A lot of fellows have been reading Life magazine and the Globe and Mail and have been getting distorted ideas regarding fraternities and university life in general."

GREEK ART TOPIC OF MUSEUM TALK

The revival of classic art was compared to the Yellow River of China by Professor Thompson in his lecture at the Royal Ontario Museum yesterday. In England, in the 18th

Eyes on France

Today the course of world history for the next generation may well be determined. Even while you are reading this editorial events are probably happening in France which will determine whether that country will turn Socialist or Fascist. If she turns Fascist it means the end of Democracy in Europe, if Socialist, Hitler will probably use it as an excuse to start a war which would immediately flare to world-wide proportions. You may use your own judgment as to whose side we will be asked to fight for in such an eventuality.

It is old news that when Daladier and Chamberlain returned from the Munich conference after guaranteeing "peace in our time", they immediately embarked on the greatest rearmament program their respective countries had ever seen. Furthermore, in their talks with Mussolini and Hitler they must have picked up a few pointers on how to run a country without bothering with a meddling parliament which asked too many questions. Anyway, when Daladier returned to France he began drawing up a program which he claimed was necessary to speed up French rearmament and to make her a strong state. The plan consisted of some thirty decrees which included abolishment of the 40-hour week in basic industries and a general curtailment of the standard of living of the working class.

Labour organizations protested and demanded that parliament be convoked. The convening of parliament had been scheduled for November 15th, but Daladier changed his mind. Further protests on the part of labour led Daladier to include in his program the "liquidation" of the Communist party and the smashing of labour organizations. Labour organizations responded by calling a one-day general strike in protest of the decrees, and today about five million workers are expected to heed this call. Daladier met this challenge by "militarizing" workers in basic industries. This deprives these workers of the right to strike since it can be judged as a military offense and subjects them to court-martial.

As the day of the strike came closer the lines between pro-labour and anti-labour groups became more defined. And on the eve of that day several significant announcements are made. It is learned that Francois de la Rocque, leader of the French right wing (Fascist) party and head of the "Croix de Feu" association of war veterans, has organized his men ready for duty. Whether that duty consists of helping Daladier establish a Fascist regime in France will be seen today. It is also announced that Daladier is considering the arrest of Leon Jouhaux, secretary of the French confederation of labour, Maurice Thorez, French Communist leader, and Leon Blum, ex-premier, for inciting the general strike. Blum's offense consists of exhorting Daladier for his attempts to govern the nation without the aid of parliament and for defending the general strike with the statement in his paper that if the same issue of the Official Journal which contained the decree laws had convoked the chamber at an early date, the strike order would not have been issued.

Meanwhile labour leaders continued to demand that parliament be called (not a very outlandish demand in a Democratic country) and Daladier prepared to meet their threat of a general strike with military force. Meanwhile an interesting sidelight was exposed when it was revealed that the Franco-German pact which Daladier proposes to sign if he survives the crisis contains a clause for a common stand against Communism. France also, therefore, will agree to partake in the "Holy Crusade" which is being planned against Russia. This clause will never be ratified by a popularly-elected French Parliament, but perhaps Monsieur Daladier has a plan for overcoming such minor obstacles.

All eyes are on France today.

Quick Work

The afternoon edition of the Daily Star, Tues. Nov. 29th, carried a story stating "Toronto's Sabbath laws will not be allowed to stand in the way of New Year's merry-makers, this year, Mayor Day indicated today." "The police commission has discussed this question and will enter into the spirit of the season by not clamping down too rigorously on after-midnight parties," the mayor continued.

The Star went on to say that Etobicoke Township, where several suburban dance spots are located, has announced its Saturday night closing will be extended to 3 o'clock Sunday morning, Christmas and New Year's.

Then in true Star style there were a number of interviews with prominent clergymen, starting off with T. T. Shields, all of whom with one exception, denounced the opening up of the Sabbath, and the idea to wink at the laws for the special occasions. The reaction was quite natural, and these ministers can only be praised for their attitude. It is far too evident the trend towards the easing up of Sunday laws is fast getting to that place where it will be only a day used for commercializing by entertainment and amusement places.

Six hours later, when the first edition of the Globe and Mail appeared on the streets, the matter is all cleared up. "Toronto hotels catering to New Year's Eve crowds this year would be permitted to serve food after 12 p.m., but public dances must stop on the stroke of midnight," Mayor Ralph C. Day announced last night.

In commenting further Mr. Day is alleged to have said that when he stated the police would enter into the spirit of the season and not clamp down too rigorously on after-midnight parties he had not been referring to dancing or the serving of liquor. "I did mean that they would be able to serve food in the hotels after midnight, and in this way citizens participating in public functions would be placed on a par with those attending private parties."

What a gesture on the part of the police! They are going to ease up and allow food to be served in hotels after midnight on this special occasion although everybody knows that food is served in hotels every minute of the day, on every Sunday of the year. Always.

It seems as though the clergymen won a victory through the medium of a news story in the Daily Star. And they won it fast.

ART-MUSIC

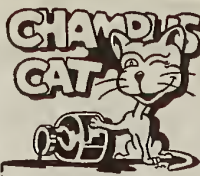

Toronto Symphony

Last night the Toronto Symphony Orchestra played at its best in response to the masterful baton and inspiring personality of Dr. Heinz Unger, the guest conductor of the evening. This is the second sensational appearance here of a truly great musical artist whose adversity has added richness and depth to the expression of his art.

It was quite apparent that Brahms' Fourth Symphony was given the most detailed reading and care in the limited time allotted for rehearsals and it was wholly pleasing. Throughout the four contrasting movements and particularly in the first and fourth, there was more elasticity of tempo and less tediousness than we are accustomed to hear. But most commendable of all was the preciseness of entries by all sections and definiteness in changes of rhythm, moods, and tonal colouring under the leadership of an expressive body which sought to portray the profoundly reflective personality of the 19th century.

It is interesting to note that the three remaining numbers on the program were by contemporaries of Brahms yet all differ in character and are popularly representative of each composer. The changing moods in Les Preludes by Liszt were clearly defined by orchestral effects. In Stegfried's Rhine Journey from

To the Editor.

Dear Sir:

The human memory is at times apt to be fickle and forgetful, but the memory possessed by certain people around this city takes whatever prize there may be for forgetfulness. They just don't seem to remember events from one month to another.

This year's session opened under the cloud of an impending war. The consensus on this campus was that there would be a general war before the end of the first term. Consequently, when Chamberlain took the initiative, and for his people's sake arranged a prolongation of peace, he was hailed as the man of the hour. But all too soon his hour has passed. Once that the prospect of war was averted, the critics came out of their bomb-proof shelters and began the tirade; and the farther away they were from the scene of the conflict, the more unsparring was their criticism.

What other course could Chamberlain have followed than the one he did? It was useless to try to withhold the Sudeten from Germany. The Runciman report, from what has leaked out about it, placed the blame for the Sudeten crisis on Benes and further claimed that if Benes had acted in a just manner last May, the terrible situation which existed last October would have never been.

It has been stated that there are only two kinds of people who are logical to the nth degree—saints and lunatics. No one would have trouble in defining the status of Hitler on this basis and that is where he had the drop on the representatives of the democracies. In his demands he was essentially logical.

True, they were hard to take but civilization was saved for the time being.

What were the factors which Chamberlain had to consider? He had to consider that a declaration of war would not have saved Czechoslovakia from annihilation; that it would not have been a quick war; that for the first time in modern history a continental war would have directly imperilled the population of England.

How could Chamberlain have done otherwise than he did?

BLUE BASKETEERS BEAT S.M.C. 40-31 IN CLOSE GAME

Bluemen Lead Throughout Game; Valiant Rally by Classmen is Futile

"MOOSE" ROGIN STARS

Varsity's senior basketball team won their second exhibition game of the season last night when they defeated Sunday Morning Class 40-31 in a keenly contested battle at Hart House. Though the score was close at the end, Warren Stevens' boys were never in any serious difficulty and clearly outplayed their rivals in both halves. LaVarnway, Rogin, Atchison, Mahoney and MacGregor were best for the Blue and White while Park, Bondy and Stronach starred for the losers.

Sunday Morning Class got off to a good start when Stronach, playing the centre, tossed in a basket from the side and put them into an early lead. Atchison, however, tied it up immediately and his Windsor buddy "Moose" Rogin, scored his first field goal to put Varsity ahead by two points. Atchison added another goal and Rogin sank two foul shots. After twelve minutes of play the Big Six team tied up the score at 12-12 but it was the first and last time that they were close to the collegians. LaVarnway broke the deadlock with a shot in close and added another basket after Rogin batted in a rebound. Varsity led 22-13 at half-time.

As in the first period the losers got first blood when Shag Park tossed in a long shot, but Rogin again got in close to put one in and two minutes later scored two foul shots to make the score 26-15. The big centre's ability to draw fouls gave him eight of his fourteen points. With the score at 3-15 the Classmen rallied and ran in four baskets. Their attempt was futile, however, as Varsity scored four field goals and one foul to end the scoring at 40-31 after the losers had run up their total to 31.

Varsity: Mahoney (6), LaVarnway (8), Rogin (14), MacGregor (2), Atchison (5), Cahill (3), Humenik, Beers, Dunn, Singer, Minehan (2). Sunday Morning Class: Maxwell (3), Rider, Brandes (2), Bondy (6), Stronach (5), Watson (1), Carter (4), MacDowell, Tonistad, Park (10), and Abrahams.

PEAKER DISCUSSES MUSIC AT FAIR

Dr. Charles Peaker, F.R.C.O., discussed Evermann's Music for the Book Fair in the auditorium of the Toronto Public Library at eight-thirty last evening. Dr. Peaker first compared the musical greatness of previous periods in English history with our present musical greatness. He spoke of the revival of music in our concerts and music festivals. Also musicians and outsiders, men engaged in other occupations such as engineering and playwrighting, have written several new books on the subject. "In the light of these present revivals," he said, "it has become increasingly passé to dismiss music." He discussed the importance of understanding music. "The more you understand the more you appreciate," he said. He suggested that one should read and then link up that reading with the musical experience of concerts, records, and radio programs to obtain a better understanding.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Sam Lipin

VARSITY 5, BROADVIEW 5

Battling to the very end, a fighting Blue team came up from behind to force a 5-5 tie, against an inspired team from Broadview V. Led by such stars as Quigley, Kelsey and Anderson, the Y team jumped into a lead after the first quarter went scoreless. The first half ended with Broadview leading 2-1. In the second half the Blue team tightened up and counters were notched by Mabec and Green, but Kelsey kept the score even by adding one to the Y total.

The third quarter saw a terrific attack launched by each team in an endeavour to take the lead. Anderson tallied for Broadview but Adams offset the goal by silencing one past the posts. A few seconds later Anderson bulged the twice again and put his team one up. With only one minute to go Doug Green pulled the fat from the fire by fooling the Y net-minder. A fierce effort by Varsity to win the game failed to obtain the needed point and the game ended 5-5.

Last night's game sees three teams threatening for play-off positions; Central in first place with 9 points, Varsity a close second with eight points and Broadview an even closer third with seven points. Central plays Hamilton tomorrow and the result should prove interesting.

Varsity: McGowan, Jackson, Laari, Earl, Green, Mabec, Menzies, Adams, McGill.

Broadview: Thomas, Davy, Waters, N. Marlow, Anderson, Kelsey, D. Marlow, Quigley.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Sam Lipin

IT'S A TOUGH GAME!

Believe it or not, despite the cold weather more students participate in aquatic activities than any other single sport on the campus. And in actual numbers, including life-savers, poloists, and swimmers, the count reaches 500. Surprising, isn't it? But then the Canadian student always was noted for being tough. But right now it isn't the number of student participants that interests us, it's the quality. And looking over the record of the senior polo team this year we find that the quality is certain Grade A.

This year the University of Toronto water poloists are playing in two leagues, a provincial one and an intercollegiate one. The intercollegiate series with the winner of the McGill vs. Queen's game playing in Hart House on Dec. 10 will probably find McGill battling Toronto for the intercollegiate championship. For five years now McGill have held the title and the Blue team feels that five years is perhaps a little too long, but anyway it's time Varsity had it. Winst McCarty, coach of the Blue splashers, is determined that this year the title will rest in Toronto. For two months the Varsity team have been practising nightly to this end and have played a total of six games in the Ontario Water Polo League.

Water polo is a he-man's game, probably the toughest game in existence and this fact, coupled with participation in the Ontario Polo League, as tough a league as could be found anywhere, has made the present U. of T. team just about the best team ever pooled by Varsity. The standing of the Blue team indicates that possibly it will finish in first place, Ontario champs, with the right to go on and challenge for the Dominion water polo title. It would be the first time that a Dominion polo title rested at the University. But perhaps that's looking a little too far ahead. At the moment Varsity is in second place behind Central Y.M.C.A. with eight points and two more scheduled games to play. To date Varsity have scored 34 goals, with 15 counters notched against them.

This Saturday the Blue team will journey to Hamilton to play just about the hardest game on the schedule. Hamilton dropped their first game to Varsity and this, coupled with the fact that the Hamiltonians will be playing in their own acre-sized pool will make them a tough bunch to beat. Hamilton crowds are always right behind their teams and the presence of hundreds of rabid Ambitious City partisans won't make the job of the Blue poloists any easier. Nevertheless it looks as though the U. of T. squad should come through the rest of their scheduled games without dropping any. Last night's game against Broadview showed that the Blue team have reached the top of their form. Let's hope they stay there.

While the water polo activity is at its height in the fall term the swimming team isn't exactly resting on last year's laurels. Last year's team are almost all back this year and it looks like another banner year. Warren Stevens has arranged a busy season for the swimmers, beginning early next year so those who want a place on the team had better be getting into shape soon.

The program for the spring term is as follows:

- Jan. 21—Toronto at Rochester University.
- Jan. 28—Senior Intercollegiate Swimming Meet.
- Feb. 4—Buffalo State College at Toronto.
- Feb. 10—Penn State at Toronto.
- Feb. 11—Toronto at Buffalo Aquatic Club.
- Feb. 18—Syracuse University at Toronto.
- Feb. 25—Senior Intercollegiate Swimming Meet at McMaster.
- March—Intermediate Intercollegiate Swimming Meet at McMaster.

FOR FANS ONLY!

Arrangements have been made so that it will be possible for a limited number of men students to take in the basketball game at Niagara Falls, N.Y., this Saturday.

The team leaves Saturday noon hour by bus and will return right after the game. Anyone wishing to make the trip should see Mac McCutcheon at once. It is quite possible that there will be a small fee attached.

WOMENS' BASKETBALL

Physios def. U.C. Frosh, 22-17.

Vic Frosh def. St. Hilda's Frosh, 18-10.

There was little to choose between the U.C. aggregation and Physios on floor play last night. Lib Secombe starred for the losers; Eleanor Fisher, Neville Hamilton turning in some stellar team-work for Physios.

Physios: Joyce Traub (6), Jean Atkinson (1), Eleanor Fisher (7), Neville Hamilton (8), Helen Burnham, Jean Keffe, Dorothy Allen, Viola Barry, Margaret Wakefield.

U.C. Freshies: Betty Kuttles (1), Eric Armstrong (2), Lib Secombe (14), Betty Christie, Edith Castle, Bea Kennedy, Joyce Lang, Jean Clement, Mary Emmett, Ev. Tanton, Agnes Kennedy.

The play was wide open and enthusiastic in the Vic Frosh-U.C. Srs. game. The intercepting of the U.C. defense was nice to behold; and Marj Pickering's coaching on the Vic Freshie forward line has produced a speedy, sure-shooting combination that is hard to guard. The passing was wild at the close, however.

U.C. Srs.: Marian Harvey, Anne McDonald, Vy Pettipiece, Kay Robertson, Kay Scott, Barb McLaren, Jamie Church, Ruth Gordon, and Mary Nager.

Vic Frosh: Jean Crawford, Beryl Pollock, Eleanor Jose, Lois Davidson, Jean Sterling, Pat Perrin, Win Hardy, Gracia Gordon, Phil Hulse.

St. Hilda's Frosh team put up a game fight against Vic Srs. last night, the outcome being a toss-up until the final whistle. In the first half Vic Srs. forward line were in good form, Eleanor Hetherington and Norah Ren breaking clean every time.

In the second half St. Hilda's changed their tactics, the forwards playing an offensive game that kept Jean Lennox and Gladys Kippen on their toes on the defense. Marj Pickering turned in her usual stellar game. Passing on both teams was loose, however.

St. Hilda's Frosh: Agnes Ireland, Eleanor McLaughlin, Betty Brodie, Nancy Pyrell, Mary Skeels, Leatha Young, Connie Harrison, Mary Combs.

There are a few corrections to be made regarding the basketball statements made in the Nov. 16th Sportsman. It was stated that Household Science was included in the group which could not play intercollegiate basketball, due to the fact that they were not proceeding to a degree. The Scientists rose up in arms at this statement and rightly so. Let it be said here and now that the Cooking Class is proceeding to a bona fide degree and is in every way eligible for intercollegiate competition. Here's hoping they all make the team. Another misstatement was that co-eds attending O.C.E. could play intercollegiate sports. While this is true at other universities, Toronto has found it necessary to make a local regulation which does not permit O.C.E. students to play. The Directorate considers the regulation fairer to the undergrads. (Sorry, but these mistakes do crop up.)

Golden-haired Alice Marble has temporarily vacated tennis fields to take up the gentle art of singing at a famous New York night club. Experts claim that the rhythm she acquired playing tennis would aid in her singing. Doesn't seem possible to us. Also Alice claims that she has no time for romance—well, thank Heaven we don't take our tennis so seriously up here.

We hear that since the Western campus is one and a half miles out of town, the co-eds there have taken to roller skating their way to college in fine weather. It's a little late for that here at Toronto, but it's a good idea for next spring. Anyhow, you don't need mad money if you have a pair of roller skates.

Play is narrowing down in the basketball field and Thursday and Monday will see the semi-finals played at the O.C.E. gym. St. Mike's, in one bracket, will play Vic Jrs. St. Hilda's, occupying the lower bracket, will play the winner of the tie-breaker between U.C. Jrs. and Vic Srs., who will play to-night at 5.45. All these games are bound to be close, but even more so if a good cheering section turns out to root for the respective teams. The finals will be played in Hart House gym on Dec. 7th and 9th.

STUDENTS OPPOSE DEMONSTRATIONS

Students are the main instruments in creating public opinion is the antithesis of the situation here, he claimed.

The Forum Club returned an almost completely negative vote to the proposition that mass demonstrations should be held on the Toronto campus. A member of the club said such meetings wouldn't be tolerated here, since there isn't the tolerance for social activities in Canada that there is in England. Members of the club were undecided as to whether the proposal should be stated with the verb "should" or "could". Whether or not they would support such a demonstration depends to a large degree, upon the purpose for which the demonstration would be held.

STUDENT OPINIONS ARE REVEALED

later life. And for out-of-town students it has definite advantages over residences.

Fraser Deacon, IV Vic, stressed the responsibility and experience which is to be found in the management of a fraternity house, and the sense of responsibility every member feels towards the property in which he has a share.

Al Ibbister, IV U.C., president of Delta Upsilon, strongly disagreed with the resolution. Fraternities help to broaden their members, he believed, while the contacts the members have with different types are beneficial. They provide an opportunity to discuss current affairs and student problems.

Don Clark, president of Sigma Chi, could find no evidences of class distinction between fraternity and non-fraternity men. Social contacts made were valuable in later life when jobs were being sought, he believed.

Don Hewitt, IV Meds, of Phi Chi, believed that fraternities are of great value to medical students in particular. Scholastic assistance may often be obtained from senior members who have had to face the same problems before, he said.

century, there was a great revival of classical art. Its influence was seen not only in architecture, but also in interior decoration.

In 1805 the common folk were given the opportunity of seeing the remains of Greek art which had since been found by excavation, when the British Museum was opened to the public. Once more there was a tendency to turn back to the ancients for inspiration. This influence was not entirely confined to England. Here in Toronto our own Osogode Hall is an example of architecture influenced by the revival of classic art, Professor Thompson explained.

city, in order that it might be made available to the unemployed.

Basic to the single tax philosophy, is the belief that "Land is the gift of the Creator", and therefore, being permanent, is the only thing which it is right to tax. Land values are created by the community, and to it the taxes should revert.

Commenting later, Dr. Young, advisory officer of the group, made the remark that Mr. Owens' point about taking the land out of the hands of the speculators was very good.

A note of humour was added, when the speaker, mentioning exorbitant sales taxes in the States, told of one gasoline station, having a large sign out in front with large print reading, "Tax Collected Here", and in smaller letters underneath "Also Gas Sold Here".

Wagner's Nibelung Ring, the orchestra for a short time had one of those unhappy experiences of being upset by a few off-key notes from the horn followed by a laxity in the entries. Otherwise this piece of program music revealed the representational power of expressionist art vividly. Humperdink's ending was altered by the guest conductor.

The love theme in Tchaikovsky's overture, Romeo and Juliet, must have brought with it many beautiful associations. Although the orchestra rendition lacked some of the technical perfection of Brahms' Symphony it carried a youthful tenderness and passion which was most satisfying.

Dr. Unger played upon the orchestra as a pianist plays upon his instrument, with complete control and understanding of all the resources of orchestral interpretation. On few occasions has the orchestra been so vitally conscious of perfecting every bar in order to make the music really meaningful. Dr. Heinz Unger succeeded in conveying his impressions to the audience using the orchestra as his medium. He is indeed of the royal line of conductors.

Phyllis Greisman

"Spring Meeting"

Only a natural caution, or wait-and-see-what-comes-next attitude about the use of superlatives prevents us from becoming slightly reckless in praise of Spring Meeting, the current attraction at the Royal. But the impulse to cheer may be in part a reaction from a not too optimistic approach, which is itself the result of our deplorable ignorance of dramatic developments in London.

Anyway it's a well-written comedy by M. J. Farrell and John Perry, directed by John Gielgud and acted by a competent English cast which will be even better when certain members are a little more sure of themselves. The plot covers a somewhat eventful twenty-four hours in the household of an Irish nobleman who chooses to spend his money on his horses, rather than on his daughters or on luxuries such as hot water. The daughters have romantic tendencies without any men to speak of, and everything becomes quite involved for a while when an old flame of their father's turns up, complete with a rather decorative son. Admittedly it doesn't sound like much, but as often happens in these stories there are a lot of other things going on at the same time, and the action never lags. The dialogue is quite outspoken and very clever.

There are really no stars in the show, but the best among nine polished performances are given by Gladys Cooper as Tiny Fox-Collier, Robert Fleming as her son Tony, and Sheila Richards as Joan Furze. No, we will not try to explain further who these people are.

It seems probable that the play will be a distinguished success in New York. Such predictions are always risky, but the combination of good writing, unusual setting and originality and credibility of plot should have its effect.

Meds Capture Arts Faculty Cup House Defeats Motion 62-25 As Fraternity System Extolled

Doctors Defeat Victoria 1-0 In Interfaculty Soccer Final

Scarlet and Gold Lose Cup for First Time in Four Years, as Meds Win Second Major Title of Season

ROUTLEY SCORES GOAL

For the first time in the long and chequered history of interfaculty soccer, Meds have captured the Arts Faculty Cup. The deciding game was played yesterday afternoon on the front campus when the men in white defeated Vic 1-0 and thereby brought to their faculty its second major championship of the fall sports calendar.

The Arts Faculty Cup, emblematic of soccer supremacy, went into competition in 1895, only one year after the famous Mulock Cup was presented as the first interfaculty sports trophy. Down through the years the soccer silverware has been captured by S.P.S. eight times, by Knox six, by Vic, U.C. and Dents 5 each, but this is the first time the Medicos have gained possession.

Dramatic Society to Give Three Performances of Comedy by Goldsmith

The Victoria College Dramatic Society will present Oliver Goldsmith's brilliant comedy "The Good-Natured Man" in Hart House Theatre tonight, Friday and Saturday. The play is under the direction of George B. Johnston, who won much acclaim for his presentation of "Michael and Mary" last year.

"The Good-Natured Man" aims at recapturing the atmosphere of the early eighteenth century. To achieve this end great pains have been taken that the costumes and mannerisms should be in period. Much of the action will take place in front of the proscenium, and in every way possible the actors will attempt to make the audience an integral part of the play. Eighteenth century songs by members of the cast will be a feature at intermissions.

Collegians Make Last Minute Rally to Capture 21-19 Win

DECIDES LEADERSHIP

Trailing Vic Srs. until two minutes before the final whistle, U.C. Jrs. rallied momentarily last night to snatch certain victory from Vic 21-19 in a thrilling race for group leadership. This win gives U.C. Jrs. a berth in the semi-finals against St. Hilda's Srs. The Srs. piled up sixteen points in the first half and U.C. Jrs., with 9 points, never warmed up.

U.C. Jrs.: Helen Gurney (2), A. M. Smart (14), Mary Kirkland, G. Evans, Bobbie McDonald (5), K. Bryans, Patsy McLaren, Fran Barbour.

Vic Srs.: Norah Rean (9), Marg Pickering (4), Kay Wallace (6), E. Hetherington, E. Wilson, G. Kippen, Mary Lou Bott, Jean Lennox.

Sense and Nonsense

"Mac West is a fraternity member," declared a speaker in last night's debate. "Other great figures include Elgar Bergen and Mackenzie King." Roosevelt and Lou Gehrig were also mentioned as alumni of Greek letter societies.

The fraternities were accused of snobbery, debauchery and inhuman initiation rites. Said a critic: "The fraternity man lives less and less for pen and book and more and more for that unutterable beer glass. Over the doors of frat houses should be inscribed the immortal words of Dante, 'Abandon hope, all ye that enter here.'"

It was denied that these organizations cater to wealthy individuals and increase the cost of education.

A horrible example of what happens to non-fraternity men was provided by the derelict who shuffled vacantly into the room with a tale of woe which began when he had been refused admission to a frat. Since that fatal day he had sunk to the depths of failure and degradation. "This is where I got," he gulped, "by not being in one."

High Scholastic Standing of Members and Inexpensive Residences Stressed by Exponents of Greek-Letter Values

HARSH INITIATIONS DEcriED

The motion, "Resolved that in the opinion of this House fraternities are a bad thing", was defeated by a vote of 62-25 at the Hart House debate last night. Fraternity men were much in evidence on the "Noes" side of the House.

After reviewing the history of the fraternity movement, G. A. Delhomme, St. Michael's College, proceeded to give the "traditional opinion" of fraternity activities, referring to alleged liquor parties. He decried the practice of giving pledges a severe hazing during "Hell Week" because a number of the unfortunate initiates have died from this treatment. "At the end of the first year in a fraternity, the freshman will find not only that the brothers have purloined his socks and his neckties, but also his best girl. Gone also are his virtuous ambitions and the purity of high school years," he said.

GRADUATE NURSES HEAR SUMMERVILLE

Canadian Red Cross Chairman Addresses Convocation on Growth of Profession

The graduating class is now facing the test of their calibre, Mr. Norman Summerville, K.C., told the Convocation of the School of Nursing yesterday.

The speaker, who is chairman of the Canadian Red Cross, traced the development of nursing as a profession from being confined to the home to the modern field of preventive medicine. "It has come to be regarded as indispensable in educating the public towards sound health, which is the great and final need of the human race."

He outlined the record of the University of Toronto School of Nursing. The Rockefeller Institute has been sending students here from all over the continent, he said. Of the 1800 graduates in public health since 1920, 850 have received their diplomas from the University of Toronto School of Nursing.

Many Fraternity Pins Discovered Sold To Downtown Pawnshops

Over twenty fraternity pins were discovered in one downtown pawnshop yesterday afternoon, where they have been sold during the past several years, but have not yet been redeemed.

Most of the pins have been brought in by girls, the pawn-broker commented, philosophizing on the shortness of love. "The boy falls for the girl, gives her his pin, and then she sells it," he added.

All pawn-brokers called, with one exception, had at least three or four pins. Values ranged from one dollar to thirty dollars for one pin with several pearls and a ruby. Two Theta Delta Chi pins, were priced at fifteen dollars each. A smart Zeta Beta Tau pin was also valued at this price, and a Phi Epsilon jewelled insignia is on sale for twenty-five dollars.

Two Pi Delta Epsilon gold pieces were found in a big loan establishment which boasted one Masonic pin, and an expensive Shriners' badge. Another small place had one University of Toronto pin, but no Greek letters.

Several places called by telephone said they had a number of University pins with funny letters on them, but were unable to give the names of the Greek alphabets.

Book Fair Speaker Recommends Fiction

"World affairs in fiction can open our horizon and increase our understanding of foreign people," Mrs. John Davidson told her audience at the Book Fair last night.

The average person cannot appreciate factual documents dealing with current events, she said, but the reading of profitable literature will make for education through sympathy rather than through the intellect. "If many of us can't read with our minds, we can appreciate with our hearts," she said. Mrs. Davidson, who is a native of Riga, was described by Chancellor Wallace of Victoria College as well-qualified to talk on world affairs in fiction through her extensive travels. She gave the second in a series of talks sponsored by the Association of Canadian Bookmen in connection with the Book Fair.

SENIOR BASKETEERS MEET BROADVIEW Y

Undeclared Visitors Leading Big Six League, Play in Hart House

NO ADMISSION CHARGE

Varsity's senior basketball team round out a series of exhibition games with city squads tonight when they meet the powerful Broadview Y hoopers at Hart House. The visitors are at present leading the Big Six League, having been undefeated in two starts. Warren Stevens' boys are in fine shape after two victories over West End Y and Sunday Morning Class, and this clash between two unbeaten quintets should provide plenty of action for the spectators. It will be Varsity's last game at home until January 21st, when Niagara University comes here to repay the visit our boys pay them this Saturday.

In both previous games the seniors have displayed an excellent brand of basketball, and in neither one were they hard pressed to score victories. That they will be a high scoring aggregation is evident from the fact that they have amassed ninety points in two tilts. This game with Broadview, should, however, show their true worth as Coach Rennie has an experienced band of players sporting the Y colours. They have been playing together for a number of years and have won successive junior, intermediate and senior titles. On the other hand Stevens' seniors have shown such a smooth style of play during the last week that it would be no great surprise if they made it three wins in a row.

The game will start at eight o'clock and in order to give everyone a chance to get a parting glimpse of the squad there will be no admission charge.

Democracy Suffers a Blow

Yesterday, democracy suffered one of its greatest defeats in the past few months. The true importance of the conference which took place at Munich is being seen now. Spain and Czechoslovakia have already been sold down the river, and now it looks as if dictatorship is inevitable in Europe's major democratic countries.

Despite what interpretation the daily press may put on it, the collapse of the French general strike yesterday is probably a defeat, not a victory, for democracy—not so much because of the event itself but of what it foretells.

In the first place, the strike was not engineered by Communists, but by workers. The working classes who put the Popular Front government into power, and who gained such signal triumphs in measures like the forty-hour week were not anxious to see the fruits of their hard-won victories lost because their premier cherished a friendship with the fascist powers.

Secondly, the strike itself was based upon the same principles upon which democratic government is based. A convocation of parliament would have meant the defeat of the Daladier program. Daladier knew it, and so did the strikers. They felt that the premier had no right to cancel their rights when it was expressly against the will of the representatives of the people.

The strike was a failure, not because the workers did not respond. It is surprising that even twenty per cent. of the CGT's five million members did respond in face of the army, and the militarization of the workers in the key industries. The five hundred or so strikers who were arrested will be tried by court martial! No more gloomy foreboding can be made as to their fate.

When the British workers declared a general strike in 1927, Prime Minister Baldwin did not dare, as Daladier dared and Chamberlain would dare, to call out the army. But 1927 is buried in the history books, and the post-war democracy, which promised even greater things than pre-war democracy, is buried there with it. It will be a long time before we see a general election in Great Britain, and when it comes, the government will have reason to believe that it will return to power. It will be a longer time before we see France a great democratic country again.

Apologists for the Munich settlement find many excuses for what is happening all through Europe to-day. They condone the defeat of democracy in France, in Yugoslavia, in Czechoslovakia and in Britain. But we refuse to accept these explanations. As democrats, we believe that the human being is fundamentally an intelligent creature, and one whose basic rights should be respected. What is happening in Britain hits nearer home than events elsewhere, but we regard what happened in France yesterday with the greatest trepidation.

Free Speech All Round

It is a curious but all too common sidelight on human nature that organizations ordinarily supporting liberty and freedom of speech should oppose this principle when they think it may harm their own particular set of beliefs. The latest threat, strange to say, comes from a labour organization.

The matter concerns the proposed visit of Adrien Arcand, national leader of the Fascist party, to Winnipeg next January. It seems that Arcand is going to try to establish his movement in Manitoba; and the Winnipeg and District Trades and Labour Council, alarmed at the suggestion, is trying its best to throttle him. It has approached the mayor with a request that Arcand be refused permission to hold public meetings in the city.

Though disagreeing entirely with this man's philosophy of government, most persons of understanding will consider suppression a foolish move. Suppression often has the undesired result of making a hero of the person whose freedom is restricted. His supporters, if any, may only be driven to work undercover where the movement may flourish unhampered. Better, we think, to leave it up in the open where it can be seen and combatted with rational arguments.

There is much to be said in favour of the old proverb about giving a man enough rope to hang himself. If his theories are good and will benefit mankind, the sooner we find out about them and put them into effect the better. If bad, the sooner they are aired and brought under the scrutiny of sane public opinion the sooner their fallacies will be revealed. The Student Christian Movement on this campus had no fear of listening to his address last month.

Admittedly there are some movements, such as Fascism, that would not be to the advantage of the Canadian people, yet naturally enough they have a following. On principle, the Winnipeg and District Trades and Labour Council should not have the power to suppress a political group; neither should the mayor, unless disturbance of the peace is threatened. By curbing the freedom of speech of a Fascist speaker, they would ipso facto lay themselves open to the charge of arbitrary rule—which is the chief objection against the movement they seek to combat.

Fascism tends to intense nationalism and tyranny, and its fallacies should be condemned, opposed and debunked by rational and constitutional means. But arbitrary force is not the method to be used in a democratic country which prides itself on its freedom to hear both sides of every question and decide matters in the light of reason.

ARTE MUSIC

Alliance Francaise

Under the able direction of Robert Finch, the Alliance Francaise presented two comedies in Hart House last night. Deux Convertis by Sacha Guitry, from the repertoire of the Comedie Francaise, the first play was excellently, if rather broadly handled. The make-up of M. Phené was somewhat too comic, tending to divert one's attention from the subtle undercurrent of Guitry's plot. Lambert Dusseau, in the lead, did a very fine job. He was by far the outstanding player of the evening. It is regrettable that his timing at the end was just a shade too fast, making the climax drop somewhat flatly. All through we felt that there was a general slurring over of some of the finer shadings.

The part of the mistress required a more dynamic interpretation than Janet Ross was able to provide.

The other play, Crime Passional, which was a farce in the accepted French idiom, was played with becoming vigour.

The team work of the two rivals was a good foil for the eccentricities of Jeanne Allen's Blanche. Solange Rochereau de la Sabliere as Flipote the maid, was a little too young and attractive for the part and in all was a little light.

Particularly delightful was the scene where Blanche is contemplating two photographs purporting to be of the two rivals, but in reality being pictures of two very handsome movie stars.

The set was well designed and engineered so that a change of pictures and doorway created a perfect decor for either play.

Ted Meek

U.C. Players' Guild

Galsworthy's powerful tragedy The First and Last, was given a sincere interpretation by a competent Players' Guild cast, yesterday afternoon on the stage at the Women's Union.

The play is divided into four scenes, and each succeeding scene adds something to the heightened

THE LAST FROITHOINDER

(A tragedy)
PROLOGUE:

What is so rare as a froithoinder in June?

Then, if ever, came perfect froithoinders.

The expedition made ready,
The warriors garnered their spears,
The traps were all set,
The hunting-hounds petted,
And the toothpaste-tubes filled to the cars.

Professor McGurk as their leader
Was chosen by common dissent.
But if only they'd known
To what deeds he was prone,
They'd surely dissentently repent.

Early and bright at the break of dawn
The hunters were deep in the hay.
At noon they still slept,
Which made them decrepit;
So they didn't set out till next day.

They came to their weird destination
And found not a civilized city.
The field-marshal's marshalled,
The hunting-dogs barked, and
And the Froithoinder cranked up his Fliv.

They managed to corner the monster
After weeks of terrific terror.
A pink toothpaste bubble,
Which isn't much trouble,
Provided the bait, through its whiff.

The Froithoinder froithed on his boinders;
The fuzz on his chest stood a-bristle.
But Twototes McGurk,
The Terrible Turk,
Shot him down with a dandelion pistol.

They picked up the Froithoinder's carcass
And tenderly packed it away
With its feet to the rear
Of an upswipe collure
And decided to call it a day.

They each got thirteen P.T. credits
For such a heroic misdeed.
So to Twototes McGurk,
The Terrible Turk,
We say, "Darn nice goin', eh keed!"
GES.

let's go places

This week at Shea's there is for your amusement the customary double bill entertainment. Girls on Probation and Garden of the Moon are the items.

Should you saunter into SHEA'S the middle of Girls on Probation don't get disgusted and walk out—the other picture is a little better from a professional point of view, and can easily be said to be entertaining. The plot is feasible and even possible. John Payne, as leader of a swing band in the honky-tonks and boiler works of New York, gets the proverbial golden opportunity to take his band west to Hollywood.

The picture, Girls on Probation, featuring Ronald Reagan as lawyer, and Jane Bryan as the girl who goes astray is the big city, is awful. However, if you are unacquainted with courtroom and prison procedure, you may get a few eye-openers.—S.W.A.

emotional atmosphere. Unfortunately, the cast did not attain the intensity that is necessary, but they succeeded in giving a fairly simple and sincere performance which is several steps in the right direction.

The play lagged in the final two scenes due to a lack of energy on the part of the actors, and the last scene of the play appeared to be purely superfluous, but in spite of the sudden drop in intensity, the play was carried through to a successful conclusion.

There was evidence that work had been put into this production, and this fact was evident from the many real moments that the play had. If the Guild will keep working this way, we feel sure that campus dramas will be on the upward swing again.

Last night the senior men's basketball team at the University of Alberta played an exhibition match for sweet charity's sake against the famed Edmonton Grads. The Grads, you know, are the world's outstanding women's cage team. We don't know who won—probably the college boys if the Grads had any heart at all. Perhaps the proposed exhibition game which the Grads are supposed to play against Varsity co-eds here after Christmas should be dropped—and a game against the Hart House quintette arranged. Maybe Varsity eds wouldn't suffer this indignity—but after all they did play the Sunday Morning Class.

Victoria Seniors relinquished all claims on the interfaculty basketball cup when they bowed in glorious defeat to U.C. Jrs. last night in a thrilling last-minute climax to their group leadership game.

Because last night's game was at the time when "us folks has our dinner", there was no gallery on hand to make or break the decision. In the semifinals tonight at which U.C. Jrs. play St. Hilda's at six o'clock, followed by St. Mike's against Vic Jrs. at seven o'clock, some fine basketball will be conjured up, so don't miss this opportunity to support your favourites—you must have one by this date.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Alan Harvey

Internes can't take money, but they can win cups.

In the short space of eight days Faculty of Medicine, the Cut-em-Up-and-Look-Tough boys, have galloped off with the two major trophies in the realm of interfaculty sports. It seems only yesterday that people were bemoaning the fact that Meds had won so few titles.

Until this fall when a blond booter named Clinkett came along. Aided and abetted by Paul McGee, a straight-shooting passer, and Lindsay, a sure-fingered receiver, Clinkett swept the Meds to a convincing 13-7 win over S.P.S. in the Mulock Cup final. Until a freshman named Boyd and a couple of old-timers named Henry Lore and Hugh Kline decided something had to be done about the dearth of soccer titles around the College Street set of learning and marched through Victoria and Wycliffe to cop the Arts Faculty Cup for the first time in history. And 44 years is a long time.

So they went out against Victoria, who had held the trophy since 1935, yesterday. Snow blanketed the front campus and over a hundred spectators watched on the sidelines (which probably unnerved both teams, as they have been used to playing to a handful of spectators including the Varsity reporter), and they managed to get one goal while holding the Scarlet and Gold scoreless. It seems likely that Emmett, the Meds' goalkeeper, is deserving of a medal of praise in here, because he held the Vic team, who pressed throughout, off the score-sheet. Emmett would probably be awarded the Venzina Trophy, if they had one in soccer, because he has allowed fewer goals than any other goaltender in the circuit in recent games.

Charlie Routley was the lad who poked in the winning goal that gave the Doctors their 1-0 margin. The goal followed a scramble in front of the Victoria net, in the second half.

One of the redeeming features of the game was the enthusiasm displayed by the spectators, and the earnest manner in which the two teams went about their work. The quality of the game, which was mediocre, was somewhat atoned for by the spirit shown on both sides.

INTERFACULTY ROUND-UP

The departure of the soccer teams from the sports scene leaves the indoor sports supreme, if we exclude Charlie Zwygand and his scantily-clad touch rugbyists. Volleyball and lacrosse are the lone standard-bearers of interfaculty sport at present. However, there is a host of players armed with cork bats waiting in the wings, ready for Mac McCutcheon to draw open the curtain on the interfaculty ping pong tournament, which will commence some time in December.

Regular patrons of the intramural volleyball series are divided between Senior Meds, Senior U.C. and Wycliffe for the Arts Faculty Cup. It seems quite probable at the present time that the finals will see either the Meds or the Artsmen opposing Wycliffe in the final. The Theologs are definitely group champions.

A star-studded line-up from O.C.E. seems likely to take down top honours in the gutted-stick game. The auto-grapher armed with pencil would do quite well for himself during an O.C.E. game, because the Teachers have Moose Rogin and Scrubby Aitchison, basketballers, along with Charlie Box of rugby fame and Dalt White, the classiest lacrosse player, albeit the most modest, in the game. The earnest efforts of the Moose, who plays all his sports to the full, and rather efficiently at that, to play a sport which is new to him are well worth seeing. Chief opponents of the Teachers seem at this writing to be S.P.S. and Dents.

AROUND THE CIRCUIT

Doug Kerr, the guy who helped give McGill their first intercollegiate football crown in 10 years, has turned down a proposal from University of British Columbia Thunderbirds to play a "Rose Bowl", East-West championship tilt during the Christmas holidays. . . . Guelph Indians jumped in and out of the Big Seven loop this week. . . . the editor of the Guelph paper came out with the statement that the Indians had been admitted to the group as the result of a committee decision, but a local newspaper reports that the assertion was not founded on fact.

OVER THE NET

In the upper gym yesterday afternoon, Pharmacy B strengthened their hold on the leadership in Group VI of the intramural volleyball race with a 15-5, 15-2 victory over S.P.S. III. The game was poorly played with Ryan of Pharmacy B displaying the only sound volleyball of the encounter.

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS... Kent State University, Kent, Ohio, experienced an "odd" registration this year. Patricia Anne James of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, provided the oddity. It seems that she broke the tie.

Since 1,204 men and 1,204 women were registered when she enrolled four weeks late... Now she is the "odd" woman at the university... However, that is nothing to boast about... WE HAVE A LOT OF ODD WOMEN HERE AT VARSITY...

CRASHERS BEWARE... There is a movement afoot to clamp down on all crashers in Princeton, and the methods they adopt down there are certainly effective... The Undergraduate Council, following a practice innovated two years ago, decided that all undergraduates attempting to crash the "Prince" Tiger dance would be fined three times the price of admission... The fine in this case being $12, and they decided that further action would be taken if necessary... The Council have a fine custom down there... Undergraduates are constantly reminded that no corsages will be permitted on the dance floor... This follows the custom that was started during the days of the depression, and we may add that THIS IS A GOOD THING!

There is a special student credit committee that fines students or can have them dismissed from school for passing these "hot" checks... AND, LET THAT BE A LESSON TO YOU.

OH, ROCK IT FOR ME... And I'm not speaking about swing either... It seems that a young U. of California physics student was arrested in Albany, Cal., last week on the grounds that he was rocking the city too much... They found him blasting a concrete retaining wall at the city dump... numerous complaints came in about a series of shocks which rattled windows for miles, and the police found the student experimenting with his new super-explosive, "RP-X", his own invention, which he claims is 15 times more powerful than nitro-glycerine... The chief of police tested the explosive and it did all that the student claimed for it... A charge of dynamite merely chipped the wall, while good old "RP-X" knocked the whole wall down...

Pharmacy Win Group Title By Beating U.C. Lacrosse Team

Druggists Win 11-1 to Qualify for Round-Robin Interfraternity Finals; Morley Scores Lone Counter for Artsmen

DUSTEN INJURED

The Pharmacy lacrosse team defeated University College 11-1 in the big gym yesterday to capture the group championship. The victory eliminated S.P.S. III who were tied with the Druggists for first place. The Pharmacists will await a decision in the other two groups. The winners of these two groups, who will probably be O.C.E. and S.P.S. I, will engage Pharmacy in a round-robin series for the title.

In the first period Seager opened the scoring with a bang, netting on a solo rush. Fry and Jones, along with Seager, piled up the score to 6-0 at the end of the first period. U.C. feeling the loss of two of their best players, could not threaten the Pharmacy net. In the next two periods both teams settled down to a steadier pace with closer checking and passing replacing individual sorties towards the opponents' net. Seager again accounting for 3 more goals and Fry and Snodgrass gathering an apiece. Morley broke through near the end of the game to notch the only score for the Artsmen. The game was called because of an injury to Dusten of Pharmacy, who was heavily bodychecked by George Meen.

Pharmacy: Dusten, Snodgrass, Jones, Seager, Merritt, Fry, Harding, Boggs, Hogan, Forsyth. U.C.: Meen, Meen, Fowler, Campbell, MacCulloch, Cameron, Somers, Liddingham, Ridley, Morley.

BLUE BASKETEERS WIN THREE IN A ROW

Bailey's Pucksters Invade Midland To-night Strong Team Visible

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

Paris: Following the walk-outs and general unrest which accompanied Tuesday's attempted general strike, Premier Daladier announced he would convoke Parliament on December 10, when his three year economic program will come under fire. Meanwhile the government is suppressing all strike movements by force if necessary.

London: In yesterday's by-election in Lancashire, fought on the foreign policy issue, the Labour candidate was defeated by a majority of over 20,000.

Ottawa: Financial circles report a considerable movement of European funds to Canada in the past few months. Purchases of Canadian securities totalled two and one-half million dollars in September.

Today the Board of Police Commissioners will consider whether or not they should accept Chief Constable Draper's immediate resignation or not. General Draper refused to comment on his action.

POET INTERPRETED BY E. K. BROWN

Robinson Jeffers Form in Poetry Seems to be Especially Appropriate to Canadian Poetry, is Observation of Speaker

PART OF WEEKLY SERIES

"Robinson Jeffers is a poet with full originality of attitude and form," said Professor E. K. Brown, speaking in University College yesterday in the regular weekly series of lectures on popular authors. "The form of his poetry seems to have an especial appropriateness to Canadian poetry in its present stage, although very little read in Canada," he said.

His father, a man of abundant means, was a professor in a Pittsburgh college. Jeffers himself attended school in Switzerland and France and graduated in 1905 from a Pennsylvania university. In 1912 he published his first volume of verse, Flare and Apple. Probably one of his best works, it is said, is a later volume, Mr. Pitt's Silence.

Harmony Is The Keynote In Intermural Umpiring

Generally speaking, a referee's lot is not a happy one, a survey of arbiters in interfaculty sport revealed yesterday. On the other hand, the men who officiate in interfaculty athletics seldom have to be hurried from the field to the security of locker rooms, there to wait for darkness or a burly constable, it was learned.

It was further concluded from the poll that the referee situation in Varsity is quite satisfactory to both player and official. It was also noted that the average university fan is willing to concede that the 'man in white' knows more about the game than he does.

The reason for this harmony between spectator and official can be attributed to the fact that the men who officiate are carefully chosen. In every instance,

Thrilling Game Expected When Strong Teams Meet

Varsity's Hopes of Keeping a Clean Sheet This Season Fades as Bill L'Heureux and Bill Morison will not Make the Trip

CASWELL FROM MIDLAND

The Varsity senior hockey team travels north this afternoon for to-night's game with Midland British Consols. This exhibition tilt is the first of four games that will be played during the next two weeks. After tonight, the Blue team is host to Oshawa (Dec. 9), Goodyears (Dec. 12) and University of Southern California (Dec. 14).

Having upset Port Colborne in fine fashion, the collegians are very optimistic about these tune-ups in their quest for intercollegiate honours. The team is in good condition generally, but tonight the line-up will not include Bill L'Heureux, who is not making the trip. Bill Morison is also laid up with a severe charley-horse.

Many Midlanders will be out to see a local boy who really made good in the person of "Bing" Caswell, goaltender for the U. of T. A regular for the last two years, "Bing" is now attending O.C.E. He is a twine-minder of the star variety.

"Bingo" Christie, the czar of athletics sponsored by the tobacco people, stated yesterday that he expects Midland to provide some real opposition. The team is in Senior B rating, but all their pre-season games so far have been with opponents of a higher calibre, such as Goodyears. Against these teams the Consols have made an excellent showing, and are steadily improving.

U.C. OPPOSITION WIN ADVERTISING ISSUE

Government Defeated when Opposition Sway Middle of Floor by Pointing Out Evilness and Fraudulentness of Modern Advertising

The motion "Resolved that modern advertising is of benefit to society" was defeated by a vote of 15-10 at the U.C. Parliament last night. The fundamental idea put forward by the opposition was that modern advertising was for the most part evil, insidious, spurious and fraudulent.

The Rt. Hon. H. H. Botnick maintained that advertising, citing the uses of various products, widened the market for these. This increase in demand necessitates a corresponding increase in supply and thereby makes the cost per unit lower.

The opposition drew attention to the fact that the press depends on advertisers and therefore is unduly influenced by these people. Also criticized was the tendency of modern advertising to stress fear, self-consciousness and selfishness, thereby making people neurotic.

At the 11 o'clock service at St. Thomas' Church, Huron Street, the Enchanter service will be sung to a brilliant setting by Basil Harwood. The choir will also sing Dr. Sydney Nicholson's "Tantum Ergo". The Rev. C. J. S. Stuart will give the sermon. At 7 p.m. the Rev. D. R. L. Clarke will give the sermon and the choir will sing Dr. Thimman's Advent anthem, "Hark! a thrilling voice is sounding", and Sir John Goss' "O Saviour of the world".

FOREIGN POLICY LOOMS AS ISSUE FACING PREMIER

Canada's Interest in This Conference Arises in Need of Unity for Protection, as Economically She Has Nothing to Gain from the Southern States

THIRD PARTY POSSIBLE

By Ross Munro
CUP Correspondent

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—Canada's policy regarding the Pan-American Union is becoming an issue in this capital.

While the Dominion will not send a delegate to the Union's conference in Lima, Peru, beginning Dec. 8, the whole question of this country's possible position in the Pan-American setup is understood to have been under review by external affairs experts for some time.

Canada is not a member of the Union, membership being restricted to republics in the Americas. However, the Union's constitution could easily be amended to include the Dominion, should the government here show a definite inclination to participate in western hemisphere policies.

The general belief is that there will be no commitments made with Latin-American countries and that Canada will continue to tend towards London in its direction of foreign policy with some understanding with Washington. From an economic viewpoint there is not much immediate gain from association with the Union for South American countries are not very good trading customers of Canada.

In Three Trial Games Test To Be In Niagara

Trip to Niagara Is Seen as Testing Ground of Abilities of This Year's Blue Team Especially of the Two Former Assumption Stars

PLAY TOMORROW NIGHT

The University of Toronto senior basketball team play their first game away from home tomorrow night when they travel to Niagara Falls, N.Y., to take on the powerful Niagara University quintet in what should be a real test of the blue boys' present strength. The Steventen will be definite underdogs in this struggle as the boys on the other side of the chutes are noted for their cage ability, and it will be interesting to see how Rogin, Aitchison and company will show up with the odds against them.

Varsity have only been practising together for a little over three weeks and as should be expected, are still green in spots. Although they showed up well in their three exhibition games with senior city teams they have yet to attain the speed shown by the squad that took the intercollegiate title two years ago. This, of course, can be attributed to the fact that the players have yet to get acquainted with each other's style of play. Lavarway, Cahill, Beers and Dunn are only freshmen and the six or seven practice games they will play in before the opening of the intercollegiate schedule are bound to give them the necessary confidence and polish which they need. REV. PARKS TO SPEAK AT NEW S.C.M. FORUM

The Present Series Finishes Next Week When Dr. Lockhart Addresses the Forum at the Usual Time

Rev. J. D. Parks, popular minister of High Park United Church, who has been giving the lectures on "Preparation for Christian Marriage" in Hart House, is speaking in the new S.C.M. Sunday afternoon forum this Sunday in the Ames Common Room, Emmanuel College Residence, at 2:30 p.m. The forum series this term has been on "Signposts to God" and Mr. Parks' subject is "Can we find God in Human Suffering?". The problem of suffering is one which perplexes many and Mr. Parks, from his wide experience, is well qualified to speak on the subject.

Broadview Almost Beat the Blue Quintet by Fast Breaking and Weak Defensive Playing of the University Team

FOUR-POINT MARGIN

By Ed Goodman

A fast-breaking Broadview Y basketball team came very close to upsetting Warren Stevens' highly-touted Varsity seniors at Hart House last night, but finally lost out 43-39. Only the poor shooting of Rennie's Rascals prevented them from handing Varsity their first defeat in three pre-season exhibitions.

Varsity, on the other hand, were sniping with fair accuracy and in spite of a poor defensive showing around their own basket, played a consistent if somewhat uninspiring brand of basketball.

Led by lanky Junior Fox, who turned in the best performance of the evening, Broadview took an early 8 to 3 (Continued on Page 4)

SPEAKER EXAMINES SEA SAGA AT FAIR

Mr. Mowat Has Studied His Subject and is also Author of a New Canadian Novel Called "Sea Biscuits"

READING AN ESCAPE

That the answer to publication and avid reading of books on the sea is escape from the constant threats and uncertainty within and without the individual today, was the central theme of Mr. Angus Mowat's lecture at the Book Fair last night.

Mr. Mowat is inspector of libraries for Ontario, and is the author of a new Canadian novel. His subject was "Sea Biscuits", not being on race horses nor yet on food, but on books of the sea. Speaking of these, Mr. Mowat said that "Sea-books are so well thumbed over they smell, and not of the sea!"

"My impression of these days is one of screaming," continued the lecturer, and proceeded to outline the various paths of escape offered by sea books, which make them of special significance today, when rest is a primary need. Through these books, we may escape, he said, into the past—the contemplation of beauty; into a dream—an atmosphere of laziness; into love—the (Continued on Page 4)

Resulting from an interview of the students on the campus on what they would like for Christmas, Santa Claus is due to be taken for a ride, if their wishes are gratified. Phyllis Greisman, 2nd year Arts, would like, "Just a little trip around the world." "Flashy ties are definitely out," said Ben Guyatt, IV year Meds. "I think that money is the most satisfactory gift."

Prof. A. McCurdy, Associate Professor of Philosophy at U.C., remarked that he would like a tent with a couple of holes to see through, to protect him from the rain when he is cycling. Peggy Beauchamp, III Arts, said that off-hand she'd like a mink coat. Jean Kidder, also a III Arts, expressed a desire for "a trip to Jamaica during the Christmas holidays." Alice Calder, a II year Theologian, said, "The way I feel now, a copy of the spring examinations would be an ideal Christmas present." "A recreation room in my home, and also some snow," was the reply Mary Cleaver, I Arts, gave. Two freshmen who wish to remain anonymous, wanted "a chance for a good sleep."

About Fraternities

It has been in the past the policy of the editorial columns of this paper to have no policy regarding fraternities. With the exception of this one comment it will continue to be the policy throughout the year.

Those present at the Hart House Debate Wednesday night may have learned some things about fraternities which they did not know before. Certainly non-fraternity members heard a great deal said in favour of the system, which they might not have realized if not members of a fraternity. Without a doubt more points were made in their favour regarding this campus, than were said against them.

However, it has been disappointing to find that a certain evening paper, which supposedly presents news in an unbiased way, enumerated the points which were made against the frats, but omitted those made in their favour. This is only another example of how University news is presented to the public in a distorted way.

As in most debates many of the remarks were made in anything but a serious vein. And as in most debates many who spoke, did so not because of any great feeling on the matter, but only because there was an opportunity to express themselves in public, and they felt the desire to avail themselves of that opportunity.

Many of the criticisms made against the Greek brotherhoods, were criticisms which certainly could not be generalized upon. Faults of the system in one University might be anything but true on another campus. Faults of one chapter might not be present in another. In fact the whole problem is one which is hard to generalize upon.

On a small campus, they might easily become a disintegrating force where the interest of one small group might tend to take away from the interest in the college itself. On the other hand there are some small colleges which have become so self-centred and self-satisfied, where college spirit has become smugness and selfishness, that the affiliation of certain groups on that campus with an international fraternity might be a salvation. Even through making friends with "brothers" on another campus visiting back and forth, and staying at one another's house, should tend to break up the localism and sectionalism of certain of our colleges and universities. In such cases fraternities fill a valuable place in University life.

It is well known how easy it is for an undergraduate to become lost in the whirl of a big University. If not in a residence of the University itself, or already among a group of compatible friends, a student may find that it is difficult to become associated with any small unit. And it is only logical that a chap needs to be a member of some small unit, if he hopes to share common interests and ideals, and get the reactions and ideas of others whose course and experiences are different. It is only in being loyal to a small group that one learns to be loyal to a large University.

This is an almost inexhaustible subject. Fraternities may easily be one of the greatest sources for good on a campus. On the other hand they may be full of abuses and upset a University. Their ideals are high, and on this campus many fine fraternities are honestly attempting to live up to those ideals. And no one is more grieved by fraternities or fraternity members who constantly break rules of good conduct and gentlemanliness, than the true fraternity man himself.

However, the statement occasionally heard, that one must be a member of a fraternity to have friends at University and have a good social life, is untrue.

We do not deal with fraternity matters themselves in this paper because they do not assume any of the controlling forces of undergraduate life as they have in some colleges. And it is a healthy sign that no fraternity ever attempts to seek publicity, or have news published herein.

But we do deplore the partiality of papers, which attempt to sensationalize on such things as the statements made in any Hart House debate, and refuse to publish both sides of a question in its news columns. In fact we can easily sympathize with one college debating society which refuses to allow the downtown press to cover its meetings.

College Elections

Most students realize that the smoothly run affairs of this University are due in great part to the efforts of a small number of executives elected for that purpose. The power to make a success or failure of business or social administration lies in their hands. In view of this, it is deplorable that so little interest is paid to the election of the officers who are to be burdened with such great responsibility.

Evidence of the lack of interest of students in elections is supplied by the fact that so extremely few nominations are received. It is not reasonable to suppose that in many cases the one candidate nominated is the choice of the whole student body. The lethargic attitude of the undergraduate body can be changed. Fewer elections can be "run" by a group of far-seeing office holders.

When the next election comes around, choose the man you consider best for the position, nominate intelligently and by all means go out and vote!

Victoria Dramatic Society

Oliver Goldsmith's comedy, The Good-Natured Man, produced by Victoria College Dramatic Society, was given a distinctive and somewhat masterful interpretation at its premiere in Hart House Theatre last night. The only disappointment was the small size of the audience for a production of such merit.

The characterization, which is more important in this play than the plot, was good almost without exception. Typical early eighteenth century roles were filled with much skill, and were amply supplemented with a keen appreciation of the humour of the period.

Tom Paton's was the outstanding performance, portraying in all its humour and pathos the part of the disagreeable old pessimist, Mr. Croaker. Perhaps a trifle farcical at times, he seemed to enjoy his misery, much to the delight of his audience. Particularly amusing were his treatment of domestic troubles, the intrusion into his love affairs of his son, Douglas Harris, and his frantic search through the house for "incendiaries".

Edwin Kirkland and Elizabeth Gray played good parts. Their over-affectation might be excused as symbolic of the times.

The easy confidence of Howard A'aphail, in the title role of the overly-generous spendthrift, and John Hilton, revealed gifted acting. The former's diction, together with Wilmont Mercer's Irish accent, might have been clearer at times.

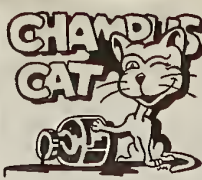

The remainder were all good, with Mary Carter and Betty McRae introducing love interests. Notable was Stanley Graves' portrayal of the drunken butler.

The clever use of the stage "apron" and other stage effects brought the audience into the confidence of the players. It enabled the cast to produce a site in the period and spirit of its original production, and spoke well for Mr. George Johnston's capable directing. Exaggerated gestures were introduced, adding to its original humour.

The naturalness of action in this production was reassuring, while the development of an eighteenth century atmosphere did much to further its success. Except at the beginning of the play, there were few dull moments.

Songs of the period, sung between acts by members of the cast, were an aid to the effects.

TO ARMS TO ARMS

"The newly organized Student Fascist Body will hold its first meeting tomorrow morning at 5.30 in an elm tree behind Trinity College," stated Umlauf Wiregaters, known to his followers as "Der Foohy."

Monday will be the scene of the big rally when Der Foohy will meet his followers and address an open meeting in a telephone booth in Macdonald's Drug Store. All out.

The Fascist leader thinks he can organize the campus into a sound organization. "So far we have been successful in introducing ersatz pies in the Tuck Shop. For my later program I refer you to Chapter Three of Mine Chumpl," he continued.

Umlauf, in a short talk, defied the campus Reds to provide absolute proof that he was in any way connected with the Daily Star Fresh Air Camp and that it was anything but a Fresh Air Camp.

At present the party are looking for funds and invite every student on the campus to attend their annual book-burning and dance held in the Hart House Library.

The Terror of Hoskin St.

Margaret Eaton Hall

Constance Vernon as the fifty year old talkative hotel servant, stole the show in the Toronto Masquers' production of Edgar Wallace's "The Old Man" in their first presentation last night.

The play, a typical mystery thriller with an attempted dagger murder and a few good screams thrown in, was the type where so many clues turn up that a good intermission has to be given between the last two acts for everyone to solve the mystery. Then they are wrong.

The plot was involved enough to sustain the interest of a baffled audience to the last, but the solving of it all was a trifle mystifying and somewhat weak. The acting itself was good.

Constance Vernon as Mrs. Harris was great. The play was centred around her witticisms, and the redeeming quality of the conclusion was her good practice of the conclusion was her good practice.

OVER THE NET

In a thrilling, spirited series, Forestry volleyball team shaded University College Thirds by scores of 13-15, 15-11 and 15-10 in the upper gym last night. The game lasted almost an hour as the two evenly-matched squads, fighting all the way, battled the ball back and forth over the net, often changing service several times before a score was made.

The two teams entered the final and deciding contest with renewed determination. The Artsmen took an early lead, but Captain Hope spurred his team on and Forestry clicked for several straight points to take a 14-7 lead. U.C. battled back gamely and took three more points before Forestry finally gained the winning score.

"From Top Hat to Slippers"

Speaking OF SPORT

By Sid Rorback

A STAR-STUDD SQUAD

Mac McCutcheon has been sending his intermediate basketballers through the paces and everything looks "great" as far as he's concerned. . . . Really, they look every bit as good as last year's team and if "looks are not deceiving" they should make it interesting for all comers during the '39 hoop season. . . . Mac has a slew of new men to work with this year who have all had previous experience in some basketball league or other. . . . Flashery of last year's juniors, Avery, who for many years was a satellite on the Harbord Collegiate teams, Bannigan, Shute, Mathews, Hearst, a former York Collegiate basketball handler, and Flynn of last year's intermediate team, are strutting their stuff for the Blue seconds. . . . This is enough to indicate the fact that the Varsity intermediate basketball team will be powerful. . . . The boys will have a few practice tilts before they enter league competition, which will not get under way until after the holidays. . . . So we say: "Good luck to youse guys!"

"POOR CHARLIE"

Little Charlie Zwygard, who teaches the gymnastic squad how to do the ups and downs in an artistic manner has been bemoaning the Varsity for not giving his gang enough publicity. (P.S. This is the fellow who sends you boys through the paces during P.T. classes.) . . . "No one," he says, "commented on the brilliant exhibition the boys gave at the U.C. Follies." Charlie is right and we apologize. . . . The boys did turn it on in fine style and should have been commended in our "daily gossip." . . . This year's gymnastic aggregation looks as tricky as ever, and along with the addition of one Simpson from Sarnia (N.B. Sarnia rugby team plays here this Saturday with Argos), who is as good a twister as any who ever donned a pair of shorts, the team looks splendid. The boys have been stretching their weary bones and are all ready for a good season of "trapezing." . . . It is highly possible that the boys will find themselves giving a display in the Maple Leaf Gardens at Harry "Red" Foster's carnival on December 23. . . . Apparently the gymnastic gang are jealous of the senior hockey team, and are endeavouring to outline a series of trips to far-off cities. . . . It looks as if you guys who have a mania for travelling ought to sign up for the gymnastic team and go off to far away lands.

WIN, YOU GUYS!

Talking about trips. . . . The Big Blue hoop squad entrain (they're going by bus and anyone can still go along for a small remuneration) for Niagara Falls tomorrow to take on Niagara University. Up to date the boys have won all their starts, winning last night their third straight by the score of 43-39. We hope the boys can emerge victorious in the Niagara tilt for we can't seem to remember the day a Varsity basketball squad beat one of our friendly neighbours from across the border. . . . Maybe we'll do it this year and if we do "Watch out Western, Queen's and McGill!" . . . A few freshmen are out with the team, and look good. Lavarway, Cahill, Beers, and Dunn are all freshmen and out with the team this year. . . . The Blue basketballers go South again on Dec. 7 to play Colgate, then to Syracuse and finally to Cornell (ain't they lucky).

JUST HERE AND THERE

The senior hockey squad head for Midland tomorrow to play the Midland British Consols. . . . Both L'Heureux and Morison will be out of the line-up. . . . Wow! ain't we ever lucky. The University of Southern California will play for the U.S. college rugby title against Duke in the Rose Bowl and our University has the honour of entertaining their hockey team here on the 14th of December. . . . Vic will play Wychlife in the final game of their round-robin series this coming Tuesday if the weather permits. . . . By the way, have all our devoted readers gotten their P.T. credits, for if you haven't the "Goblins" will get you. . . . So long.

O.C.E. TROUNCE TRINITY IN ONE-SIDED CONTEST

Scoring their second straight shut-out, a strong O.C.E. lacrosse team defeated Trinity yesterday afternoon in the big gym 6-0. Trinity held the Teachers scoreless in the first frame, but were unable to stave off a powerful second period rush as O.C.E. rammed home five goals. The winners added one more goal in the last period to make the final score 6-0.

Playing without Moose Rogin, the O.C.E. squad seemed to lack their usual scoring punch in the first frame and were unable to produce a score. In the last two chapters, however, Fraser and Donihue with a brace of counters, and Masterson with one, brought the margin of victory on clever goals.

FOREIGN POLICY FACING PREMIER

major question. With this country outside the pale of the proposed Pan-American defensive structure, the whole project would be jeopardized. Therefore there are some indications that pressure might be brought to bear, particularly from Washington, to urge Premier Mackenzie King to adopt some co-operative policy with the Union regarding the defence of the western hemisphere and formation of a strong democratic bloc of nations speaking with a united voice.

Public men are thus divided between complete allegiance and co-operation with the British Empire or adding another plank in the security platform by reaching an understanding with the Pan-American countries. An agreement on matters of defence might be reached between Canada and the United States but it is hardly conceivable, in the light of information available here, that the present government will go any further and the Pan-American dream of unity might be pretty much a mirage if Canada does not participate.

Talk of the formation of any new political party generally has many rather fantastic aspects to it, but there are rumours going around Parliament Hill these days that top them all. They concern Hon. W. D. Herridge, Canada's former minister to Washington, who many believe is going to lead a monetary reform party at the next election. The latest batch of speculation indicates that he has successfully made overtures to both the Co-operative Commonwealth and the Social Crediters and has forged an alliance. Mr. Herridge eludes newspapermen and continues to make mysterious trips around the country and to New York.

lead. Moose Rogin kept Varsity in the hunt, however, with two clever baskets and after about seven minutes the Blue squad took an eleven to nine lead that they only relinquished for one short moment during the rest of the game. For the remainder of the half neither team showed any special advantage and Varsity went into the rest-period with a three-point lead, the score being 22 to 19.

Broadview started to press as the play resumed and Bradcan gave them a 25 to 24 lead. The steady play of Scrubby Aitchison on the Varsity defence kept them down and at the seven minute mark the Blues suddenly came to life. The forward trio of Minahan, Lavaravay and Chick Mahoney, tossed in three quick baskets and the collegians were never threatened from then on. The last ten minutes of play were the best of the evening as both teams began to pop in some pretty baskets.

gave stellar performances. St. Mike's defense was their salvation, but could not compete with their opponents for superior forward line. St. Mike's forwards could not get going at all with the result that Vic forged ahead in the first half and were never seriously threatened in the last half. Vic certainly looks "good" and has a fairly sure chance of winning the finals.

To all you basketball enthusiasts the return game will be played on Monday, Vic Jrs. and St. Mike's from six to seven o'clock and U.C. Jrs. and St. Hilda's Jrs. from seven to eight.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Sam Lipin

Tomorrow night the Varsity water polo team are playing an all-important game with the Hamilton Aquatic Club in the acre-sized municipal pool in Hamilton.

The Hamiltonians are noted for their fierce playing before home crowds and the game the 15th event on a program of everything from swimming and diving to pat dancing exhibitions, should prove an exciting one.

Despite the fact that the Blue team may be considerably weakened by the possibility that Bill Laari may be unable to play owing to a severe injury to his mouth requiring several stitches, the U. of T. squad are nevertheless anticipating a hard-fought victory.

The inclusion of such stalwarts as Jackson and Green, however, will do much to make Varsity strong both defensively and offensively. Nels Earl and Menzies can as usual be depended on to play outstanding games; Taylor, in goal, despite his poor practise form, will probably be back in form (we hope).

The team will leave Hart House at 7 o'clock tomorrow and the following men will meet in the Hart House periodical room: W. McCarty, Taylor, Laari, Jackson, Earl, Menzies, Green, Mabce, Adams, McGill, Marlow.

First game: St. Hilda's Juniors defeated U.C. Juniors, 19-18.

tical philosophy. She was given all the good speeches, and captured her audience at the start, so that by the time things were well under way, anything that resembled a joke would have given everyone a laugh. One of the remarkable features about her work was the splendid use of her eyes, which sparkled with wit and wisdom.

The prologue introducing the mysterious "Old Man", and then swinging into a nice palatial fire with a breaking down of doors with axes, and carrying out of half-suffocated clandestine lovers, might have been breath-taking but it wasn't. It's hard to swing many axes on one stage, when it's small, and standing around with axes in one's hand isn't exciting.

Wallace's humour isn't as mystifying as his plots, of course, and isn't even subtle. In fact some of it is very natural if not almost primitive. On the whole the production is good entertainment, which was all that was expected, and the minor characters handling major parts of the acting, turned in splendid performances.

Nations' Positions Regarding Refugee Problem Outlined By Cohen

That Canada could easily take in 5,000 Jewish refugees from Germany is the opinion of Mr. Oscar Cohen, who addressed the second joint meeting of the Avukah Society and the Student Christian Movement Friday.

The refugee problem is increasing as the German regime becomes stronger, the speaker went on to say, pointing out that there are now 1,500,000 refugees from Germany, Austria, and Czechoslovakia.

"President Roosevelt is the only person who has made a real effort to help refugees from Hitlerite Germany," said Mr. Cohen.

Mr. Cohen cited the measures taken by other countries to admit refugees. France has more than her share, due to liberal laws. South America has refused to admit them. Australia is taking 15,000 for a period of three years, and the United States will take in 27,320 per year.

Dick Craig Nets Three Times in Locals' 9-3 Triumph

CONSOLS CARRY PLAY

Ability to make the most of their scoring chances gave Varsity's senior hockey team the third straight win of their current exhibition schedule, as they outscored Midland British Consols by 9-3 at Midland Friday night. Minus Bill Morison and Bill L'Heureux, two of their best players, the Blues showed a clever defensive system in staving off the powerful Midland team, which featured a four-man offensive.

Dick Craig opened the scoring for Varsity after two minutes of play on a solo rush. Ross and Taylor added goals to offset Midland's lone counter, to make the first period score 3-1 for Varsity. In the second frame Taylor, Craig and Callon netted to give Varsity a 6-1 margin.

Midland pressed in the last frame and scored twice through Devine and Toole. However, Varsity came back with three goals, by Craig, Callon and Boddington to leave the final score 9-3.

Dick Craig led the marksmen with three goals, while Tommy Callon and Johnny Taylor netted two apiece. Brodeur, Devine and Toole scored for Midland.

1898 Torontonensis Proves Student Activities Vary Little

Student activities of 1898 were remarkably similar to those of 1938, a survey of Torontonensis for 1898 shows. Both men and women were attending the university by that time and many of the clubs now in existence were established then.

Great interest was taken in Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. work. Among the clubs were Moderns and Classical, Literary and Athletic, the Glee Club, Maths and Physics, and Chess and Fencing.

Rugby was not then the popular game it is now at Varsity, though there were several teams. Great numbers of students did not turn out to watch—perhaps due to the lack of a stadium. The selection of the play is in accordance with the Committee's plan for a modern piece which it is hoped will have a greater appeal to the student audience than some of the older and lesser known plays. Holiday is considered by many to be the best play

Major Domo of Hart House Dramatics Has Long Experience

GRADUATE OF QUEEN'S

After several weeks of deliberation, the University Drama Committee has selected Willard Thompson to direct Philip Barry's Holiday for its annual presentation early next year in Hart House Theatre.

Mr. Thompson is the manager of Hart House Theatre and has had a good deal of experience in studying the technique of various directors who have worked here. He is a graduate of Queen's University and has been with Hart House for several years.

The Committee had considered a number of plays and directors, and the decision to appoint Mr. Thompson will make the production an all-university affair, as formerly outside directors were chosen to supervise the productions. This move is intended to centralize the activities of the Committee within the university.

The selection of the play is in accordance with the Committee's plan for a modern piece which it is hoped will have a greater appeal to the student audience than some of the older and lesser known plays. Holiday is considered by many to be the best play

Resigned Premier of Belgium To Discuss International Affairs

ANTI-WAR PLAY DIRECTED BY GELBER

Drama Committee will Stage Percival Wilde's "Pawns"

Percival Wilde's anti-war play "Pawns", will be presented by the University Drama Committee tomorrow at 5 p.m. under the directorship of Sholome Gelber, an undergraduate student who studied last year at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York City.

Gelber will utilize the technique of Constantin Stanislavski and the Moscow Art Theatre, which will be an innovation for the Drama Committee. This system is being used by all new theatre groups in the United States and Canada of which the New York Group Theatre is the most well-known exponent.

In using this technique, the actors endeavour to project the character they are playing in terms of their own experience. In this manner, they believe, that an element of truth comes forth which aids in the realism.

The story "Pawns" deals with peasants on the border line of Russia and Austria who find themselves at war with their neighbours. Gelber has carefully assembled a cast of six men to perform the tragedy which he hopes will show the worth of this technique to those students of the drama on the campus.

McDOUGALL ADDRESSES CATHOLIC ACTION CLUB

Friday night Professor McDougall addressed the Catholic Action Club at Trinity Hall, his subject being "Church and State in England and France".

The speaker described the conflicts from the time of the Roman Empire up to the present. He stated that the Reformers in their desire to discredit the authority of the Papacy unduly exalted the power of the monarch.

Paul van Zeeland, former premier of Belgium, who some observers believe was instrumental in laying the basis for the Anglo-American treaty, will give the second address in the Town Hall series at Eaton Auditorium tonight. The topic of the address will be "The Foreground of International Attention".

Mr. van Zeeland, who, until his resignation last year, was Europe's youngest premier, is a banker by profession. His special field is international banking, and he was the chief mover in the founding of the Bank of International Settlements.

As premier of Belgium, he won international recognition for the subtle way in which he eliminated Leon Degrelle's Rexist, Belgium's Nazi-inspired fascist party. Van Zeeland made the Rexist look ridiculous by various moves. This ended by his crushing defeat of Degrelle when the latter opposed him in his own constituency.

Varsity Students Brand Superstitions Foolish, Frivolous

Do Varsity students tremble at the sight of a black cat or broken mirror, and court Lady Luck when exams come round? Would mysterious lights in a cemetery fill them with superstitious awe? Do they believe the claims of the thirteen year old girl who said she could raise tables by spiritual force?

Most students are of the opinion that the balls of light recently seen in a graveyard were a practical joke, or a natural phenomenon.

"I usually believe what I read in the papers, but I was skeptical of that," said Bella Murray, II St. Michael's, referring to the thirteen year old girl's alleged powers. Tom Jarvis, II U.C., thought that most such cases are fakes, but the opposite view was taken by Ted De Wolfe, II Theology, a firm supporter of spiritualism.

An authority on superstition is Barbara Hope, II Occupational Therapy, who has a "superstition collection" numbering 470. She can tell you, among other things, just which days it is lucky to file your mails.

literary issue

Today is the dead-line for copy and sketches for the Christmas Literary Issue.

All articles must be left at the offices of The Varsity, either in Hart House, University College, or the Students' Administrative Council, Mr. Newman of the Toronto Star Weekly has kindly consented to judge the short stories, and also write a short criticism on their style and quality. The Varsity has been fortunate enough to secure the promise of Dr. E. J. Pratt of Victoria College, to judge the poetry. He also will make some brief comments on the prize-winning poems.

All contributions must be properly signed and in by five o'clock. The literary issue will consist of eight pages and will appear on Friday, Dec. 9th.

Majority of Students Avow Examinations Are Preferable After Christmas Holidays

The almost unanimous opinion of Varsity students is that examinations should be held after the Christmas holidays. The predominant reason seems to be that the work is more evenly divided when the examinations are written at mid-year. Another group believes that the holidays afford an opportunity to catch up on studies. The opposing minority is of the opinion that Christmas holidays are not meant to be marred by studies.

Jean Di Cola, a second year Loreto student, believes that the postponement is a "good idea" because it gives students "an opportunity to review their work so that they are more prepared to write the examinations when they do come. Anyway, everyone is hustled and can't concentrate; besides they can have a better time in the pre-Christmas term if the threat of examinations isn't hanging over their heads."

Jack White, U.C. II, says that "the work is divided better when exams come in the middle of the year. No one can set an adequate representative examination on the opening chapter of a book."

Margery Eastwood, Vic III, thinks that students forget much material during the holidays. "It's better for them to use what they do know at Christmas. They'll only have to learn it over anyway."

Doug MacDonald and Ron Davidson, second year theologians at Knox, both say that it is "a good thing; pre-Christmas exams cramp our social activities—but ours aren't postponed."

Railway Fares

The railway companies are issuing to students of the University, and to members of the University staff, round trip tickets for the Christmas and New Year vacation at the rate of the current one way fare and one-quarter.

Students wishing to take advantage of this reduction should leave their names with the Registrar of the college, or the secretary of the faculty or department concerned, on or before Monday, December 12th. The certificates will be issued to the students at the college, faculty or department office, beginning at 9 a.m. on Saturday, December 17th.

Members of the staff may obtain certificates at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

STATISTICS REVEAL RINGS, PINS AND LINKS AT PREMIUM THIS YEAR

Statistics show that the official university ring, the pin and the crested cuff-links are more in demand for Christmas presents this season than ever before.

For several weeks now the parents, brothers, sisters, sweethearts and even the odd grandmother have been dropping into the Students' Administrative Council office in Hart House and ordering these tokens for Christmas presents.

From far-off Australia has come an order for a pair of cuff-links. Evidently the sweetheart of some local graduate has figured out a novel means of surprising and delighting him.

Indicators are that orders received later than two weeks before Christmas will not be filled in time so greatly is the demand increasing from day to day, day, December 11 at 8 p.m.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Dec. 3—A weakened University of Toronto senior basketball team lost their first exhibition game of the season tonight when they were outscored 39-20 by a fleet-footed Niagara University cage quintet. With one of their regulars out of the game, another dependable player with a badly bruised elbow, and Coach Warren Stevens in Montreal attending a C.I.U. meeting, Varsity were unable to cope with the well-organized attack of their American hosts.

After holding their own for almost three-quarters of the game, the Blues tired fast and faded away before the determined onslaught of the purple-clad hoopers. Toronto were without the services of "Scrubby" Aitchison, who was unable to make the week-end trip, while Bill Rogin, who played the whole game, was greatly hampered in his shooting because of a stiffened arm. Truth in the Press

It is laid down as a requirement of Star news reports that they shall give a correct impression of the whole event which they describe. Except from managerial bulletin addressed to deskmen and reporters of the Toronto Daily Star.

Ah! Now the secret of the success of the Star is known. Now it can be understood why that paragon of journalists is so highly esteemed wherever the English language is spoken. For the first time, her formula for fame may be examined. The secret lies in her impeccable system of news presentation. Because down in the King Street prototype of Hollywood city rooms the reporters are ethical. They tell the truth. They write stories so that only a correct impression of the whole event is presented to the reader. Yes sir, when you read a report in the Star you can be absolutely certain that you are getting unembellished information straight from the horse's mouth. Examine, for instance, the flawless way in which they report debates. Not a single cause for criticism can be found in their reportorial technique which obeys, to the letter, the straight-laced demands of the bulletin. Notice how the truth is presented by judicious selection of quotations. Of a dozen or more speakers to whom reference might possibly be made, they choose to quote four. Then, in order that a correct impression of the whole event, hallowed by the truth-loving editorial executives, might be given, they choose the four speakers from one side of the debate. Small wonder then that the Star is looked upon as one of the most imposing structures of the Fourth Estate.

Sufficient description must be included to reveal the speaker's purpose and intention. The reporter must tell what a speaker really means. Sometimes one word will serve the whole purpose. The word(s) "ironically" . . . "humourously" . . . "facetiously" would (be) sufficient. Except from managerial bulletin addressed to deskmen and reporters of the Toronto Daily Star.

Chronicler of facts, sifter of rumours and opinions, minister of the truth that makes men free (from introduction of lesson on news writing given to Toronto Star reporters), the Star makes doubly sure that the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth will find its way through the virtuous hands of reporters and copy-readers to her immaculate front page. This system of inserting modifying adjectives can command only reverence and bowed heads. It is not surprising that it is looked upon with respect and admiration, particularly by visitors from Australia. Or by debaters who, when they facetiously say something about beer, can be sure that they will be reported as saying it facetiously, and when they say, with false gravity, something about the fate of a fraternity initiate, may be certain that they will be reported as saying it with false gravity. Never, no not ever, has the Star, the reporter of the new, herald of what is to come (lesson No. 2, City Desk, Toronto Star) been guilty of changing the tone of news by omitting qualifying adjectives.

This lesson reveals the secret of human interest news. To one who is master of this lesson, the whole of human-interest writing will be clear; recognition of colourful stories will be easy; and high rewards in the way of space will be certain. Human interest is a composite of all the instincts, and The Star, "A paper for the people", wants all human interest. Of universal appeal, (however), are stories involving the "eternal triangle"; and one adventure story is made better by the inclusion of a woman. From Lesson No. 2, City Desk, Toronto Star.

What could enliven a dull story more than the inclusion of a woman? What could be better reading than a story having a sex angle? Nothing, say the sanctioning psychologists of the Star's executive, and they are sure to have the support of any intelligent reader. Why? Because it is based in its compassion upon instincts which are common to all mankind, and touches the strings without confusing flourishes or the deadening pressure of useless facts and words. (From the same lesson.) And so The Toronto Star, reflector of every human interest (from the same lesson) delights its readers and perhaps occasions a substantial rise in its circulation figures by running a pleasant little whimsy about "lure girls" and fraternities. Recognition of this triple-threat reader-getter, this powerful triumvirate, truth, sex and human interest has gained for the Star an enviable position in the world of letters.

Material placed within quotation marks, of course, must not be changed, except to correct it grammatically. Except from managerial bulletin to deskmen and reporters of the Toronto Daily Star.

Another point for the rubric that makes people eager to talk to the Star. They may be certain that what they say will be reported exactly. They know that nothing will be put in that is not said. They know that his ideas will be transmitted to the readers with accuracy and completeness. Any person, prominent on the campus, who has had anything to do with the Star will vouch for that. And the Toronto Star always talks to the people whom they interview.

In short, the Star knows no equal. Its passionate love of truth is not approximated by any other known journal. Its discriminate choice of material has been lauded wherever two readers meet. When buildings fall, when people die, when all history begins to fade, one thing will remain, one thing will shine forever, and that is the pure ray of truth shining from one of the many facets of the newspaper business as exemplified by the Star.

ART MUSIC

Joseph Szigeti

It will leave space to consider more important matters if we say right now that Joseph Szigeti, violinist, negotiated quite faultlessly and without any apparent effort all the technical magic in his recital at Eaton's last Thursday. Some time has passed since Paganini's abilities at this sort of thing were popularly attributed to the patronage of the devil; now almost all the itinerant fiddlers who play here with such criminal infrequency display similar powers, and comment on the matter becomes increasingly more difficult. Soon we shall cease even to be impressed.

First-rank violinists must now justify their claims to prominence in other ways, and the particular way is usually as individual as the player. Szigeti's approach is that of the scholar; this is not to say that his work is cold or severe, but only that one is always conscious of a keen and sensitive intellect directing a balanced interpretation exactly suited to the music being played, whether it be classical, romantic or impressionistic. Consequently his tone may be warm and apparently unrestrained, or aloof and dignified, as the occasion demands, without ever being colourless or over-emotional and without ever lacking beauty.

To say that his program was well-chosen is superfluous, for such a man could hardly arrange one otherwise, but we must mention that, so far as we know, he is the first visiting violinist in several years to play Bach's Chaconne for violin alone, and the first not to play Chaconne's Sonata. We happen to regard the Chaconne as the greatest short work in violin literature, and would like to hear it more than once in five years. The first and biggest thing on the program was Beethoven's Kreutzer Sonata, more neglected music, about which Tolstoy, as we recall, expressed some highly fantastic ideas in a short novel of the same name. It was magnificently played, both by Szigeti and his accompanist, Endre Petri.

LESSONS IN HISTORY

Today we will study the history of the city of Rome.

Rome was founded by two guys by the name of Romulus and Remus. They were nursed on wolf's milk which was where there was only one. Two of the hills were called Naphthalene and Acetylene. The other five were called Annette, Marie, Cecile, etc.

The Romans used to wear bed-sheets and sleep in suits with two pair of pants. They also originated horse-racing. Their biggest race-track was called Saratoga because a girl by the name of Sara lost her shirt there.

The first World's Fair was held in Rome. The city was sacked by a bunch of vandals headed by Grover the Rover, who instituted the Coliseum and the Midway. In the Coliseum, they threw half-starved Christians to the lions. One of the lions got sore and threw them back. He quit the job and went to work for M.G.M.

Chief stripteaser at the Fair was a girl by the name of Popeye, whose husband's name was Nero. He fiddled, and that burned up the people of Rome. He was finally ousted but Popeye was signed up by Minsky.

Today, Rome is ruled by Mussolini, who adopted as his emblem the Roman hatchets surrounded by twigs and called fasces. This was the origin of the Rome-Berlin axes. The name of the King is Victor Emmanuel, and the Crown Prince is called Spaghetti. And so we leave majestic Rome with its goons and lagoons (Fr. for feminine goons) and pass it in the distance.

THIS IS A GOOD THING.

With a background of Strauss waltzes, the story of the struggles of Johann Strauss from obscurity to fame is unfolded in The Great Waltz showing in Loew's GREAT WALTZ at Loew's this week.

Luise Rainer is particularly appealing as the wife of Strauss, who wins back the musician's love from the glamorous opera singer.

The photography is good, showing a vivid portrayal of the old, gay city that Vienna was in the nineteenth century. The best scene is the composition of Tales of the Vienna Woods.

Vacation From Love, a hilarious story of a young couple who married under perfectly foolish circumstances, rounds out the bill.—L.G.M.

Say it in French, a light little comedy on the American plan, which offers an amusing though incredible variation on the traditional taxi cab SHEA'S dash to the departing Atlantic liner.

Ray Milland is the least dark spot, and Olympe Bradna, a pretty little brunette with nice eyes, gets by with a squeeze. Mary Carlisle is another cute blonde who also probably has never heard of Stanislas. If you're not too critical you'll laugh at points.—J.K.R.

OVER THE NET

With the interfaculty volleyball schedule one week away from successful completion, group winners have been declared in only three of six groups. Wycliffe College and Dents, the sole undefeated teams, will enter the finals from groups III and V respectively, and both teams will be serious threats for the intramural championship and the Victoria Staff Cup, which Dents won last year. Wycliffe, paced by the magnificent Maurice Murphy, who spikes with tremendous force, and his redoubtable set-up man, Rex Symons, appear to have a hold on the title, regardless of the other finalists yet to be declared.

In Group I, Jr. Vics succeeded in annexing the group championship only by means of a victory in their final scheduled game. In the other groups there may be playoffs for the right to contest the finals; in Group II between Sr. U.C. and Sr. Meds; in Group IV between Jr. Meds and Emmanuel A.; and in Group VI between Forestry and Pharmacy B. None of the teams mentioned are likely to figure largely in the finals except the winner of the Sr. U.C.-Sr. Meds playoff which will be forced if U.C. win their remaining game. Either Sr. U.C. or Sr. Meds, with five victories in six starts, if they do reach the final round, are quite capable of extending Wycliffe or Dents to the limit.

St. Mike's A volleyball team, showing punch in the pinches, defeated Trinity in two close-fought games Friday afternoon in the upper gym.

Trinity won the toss to start the first game, but showed a weak team. Tricky and sensational playing was featured by both squads, and St. Mike's ended up on top by a 15-6 score.

The second game found Trinity tightening up, but St. Mike's drew away toward the end to take the game and match 15-10.

Guelph Indians
enter
Big Seven Group

Guelph Indians, the team that nobody wanted, have found a home at last. After petitioning various hockey magazines for more than a month, the Indians finally gained admission to the Big Seven Junior O.H.A. group Friday night when a meeting of the Executive Committee of the O.H.A. decided in their favour.

The Indians operated last year in a Western Ontario Junior O.H.A. league but were faced this season with the prospect of disbandment as the other teams which comprised their circuit folded up or decided to play elsewhere.

Criticism of the inclusion of the Guelph team in the league was levelled by Ed Wildoy, representative of Lions and chairman of the group, who declared that Guelph would have to play their home games on a natural ice surface. In the event of mild weather, this condition would force postponements and disrupt the schedule, he pointed out.

With the addition of Guelph, the second out-of-town team in the present set-up, the Big Seven becomes an eight team league. An O.H.A. ruling, however, has divided the squads into two sections of four, with Marlborough, St. Michael's, Varsity and Guelph forming one division, and Oshawa, Native Sons, Lions and Young Rangers lining up in the other section. The teams will play an interlocking schedule, with the first three teams in each loop entering the play-offs.

The committee has also provided that Guelph must bear the expenses of visiting teams, while defraying their own expenses in local games.

PLAY AT HAMILTON

By Sam Lipin
Completely demoralized by a crushing attack, the Varsity water polo team bowed to a 6-0 defeat in Hamilton's Municipal Swimming Pool Saturday night. Getting off to a fast start, the fast swimming Hamiltonians notched up two counters in the first quarter.

The Blues rallied slightly in the second but were unable to prevent three more points being added to the home team's total when the Augustinus brothers sized in a brace of hot shots and Wells burned in another score. The Hamiltonians were checking hard and the shots the Varsity forwards managed to get away fell short or were wide.

Coming in after half time with their ears burning from Coach McCatty's scolding remarks, the Blues were a different team. An inspired Hamilton defense, however, prevented the Blues from scoring. Time after time the Mountain City defense broke up plays which looked like sure goals, raced down the pool with the ball only to lose it as the Varsity defense, in turn, broke up the Hamilton scoring threats.

The fourth quarter with Varsity defending the deep end, saw the best period of the game. Play moved rapidly from one end of the pool to the other and Varsity missed a tally when the Hamilton goal keeper came out of the nets, just managing to get his hands on a shot heaved by Green, who had eluded his check.

Varsity's form in the last half of the game indicates that the team will show up well in next Saturday's intercollegiate final.

FOOTBALL FADES FURTHER

Not being able to resist a football game, no matter who is playing, we dropped in on the Sarnia-Argo game last Saturday and saw the Eastern Canadian championship. There it was in the month of December and it was warm. In fact the sun came out for a while. If this weather keeps up we ought to erect a Bowl and have annual "Maple Leaf Sugar Bowl" games.

And were the Argonauts ever hot? Argos resembled "Little Abner" in the comic strip, they couldn't lose 'cause "love was on their side". They caught forty-yard passes with one hand, they dropped the ball twice on one extension, picked it up and galloped for a touchdown. They out-kicked "the Dean of the Kickers", Bummer Stirling, by ten to fifteen yards on each kick . . . why they even used the Flicker Pass play on Sarnia, the originators of the whole thing, and it worked for yards a couple of times. It was a day of surprises . . . with Sarnia using a delightful variation of the Statue of Liberty play worked from a kick formation . . . in fact, Sarnia pulled such complicated plays that they were running into each other, but it was a nice game to watch.

Argos were terrific. Their passing and receiving were outstanding, rivaling anything that can be seen on the other side of the line. The kicking by both teams could never be rivalled by American players.

But the drum major, the only girl that we have seen that actually sparks up the band, was undoubtedly the star of the afternoon. She whirled the stick like a jitter bug jitters to the "Girlfriend of the Whirling Dervish" . . . she strutted up and down the field . . . did cart wheels to the delight of the student section . . . and lifted her knees higher than Art West (which is quite an idea; if she's got speed you might be able to use her next year on the half-line, eh Hayman?). The only drawback (or was it an advantage) was that no one either heard or saw the poor band that trailed behind her up and down the field.

By the way, Argos won 25 to 8 . . . and meet the West next week . . . so come one, come all . . . it should be a real thriller if the boys don't have to use snow-shoes.

SPECTATORS WANTED

The past football season has shown a slight increase in attendance records over last year, averaging 13,000 every Saturday afternoon. In a short while the basketball and hockey season is on us with stronger than average teams representing the university in both sports. The hockey team up to date has been playing real hockey and have defeated two strong teams by comfortable margins. The basketball quintet have defeated the three Toronto Y teams without much difficulty. Now it is useless to go into the sports and describe the breath-taking speed of both games. The faking, passing, team-play and scoring ability needed to win basketball games is unnecessary to tell. The pivoting, passing, and body-checking of hockey is known to every son and daughter of the Maple Leaf.

Both these games are a hundred times wider open than football . . . both are as fast as a hare compared to football, the turtle of competitive sports. Yet the attendance at football compared to the aggregate of hockey and basketball is amazing. Schemes have been devised by which to increase attendance at these two games. Free dinnerware has been thought of as premiums to attract crowds. Even "Hockey Quizzes", naming the players in on scoring plays and the time of each goal scored has been suggested as an inducement . . . but they have been rejected. So we're going to devise a system of gold stars to be stuck on your registration card . . . one for each game attended, and when you get ten gold stars you get a free trip to California with the hockey team . . . but these plans are still in the formative stage and we will let you know when arrangements are completed.

Soon we will have an interesting program of basketball and hockey games being played at the Arena (no cost) and at Hart House (nominal fee) and these should be well attended. Especially when we play hosts to the American teams that are coming to Toronto in the next month. So, watch your Varsity for future announcements.

Received a distress signal from the U.C. Badminton Club yesterday. It seems that there is a decided indifference on the part of most of the college girls towards the efforts made by their badminton executive to rouse some school spirit. This attitude is probably because of the general vagueness regarding where and when. So for your information, Kay Burgess, who is looking after U.C. badminton, tells us that (1) the place is the Metropolitan Church, (2) the time is every Monday from 2 until 6 p.m. and every Thursday from 2 until 5 p.m. And the fee is a mere $1.00—just a trifle compared to the returns. No excuse now since basketball is practically a thing of the past (almost). Now we've done our part.

Spreading of basketball, against our better judgment, tonight will finish off the semi-finals in interfaculty competition. At six o'clock Vic Jrs. with an eleven-point lead, take the floor against St. Mike's, who are out to avenge their Thursday night defeat. This is the last chance for the Irish so the game won't be lacking in thrills.

In the second game, two evenly matched teams with equal determination will fight it out. St. Hilda's Jrs. have a point lead over U.C. Jrs. and a slight edge on the forward line.

Calling winners is not the best formula for winning friends and influencing people. At the risk of both—we won't take.

ST. MIKE'S WATER POLO—
Practice tonight, 7.30, Hart House.

O.H.A. Squads
In Review

The surprise of the pre-season S.P.A. junior hockey season, in which all of the Big Seven teams have competed, with the exception of Varsity, has been Joe Primeau's Marlboroughs. Last year, with a team led by the powerful line of Hank Goldup, Peanuts O'Flaherty and Alex Smart, the Dukes were favoured to win the title, but faded in the play-offs and were ousted by Oshawa Generals. Hardest hit of the teams in the group, with Goldup and O'Flaherty moving up to senior O.H.A., and some of the other stars ineligible, Marlboroughs were hardly given a look-in this year.

But the Iron Oaks have come through with two surprising victories over the highly-touted Native Sons and Young Rangers squads, and have once again established themselves as a definite threat for the Big Seven title. Led by the brilliant performances of Tom Stewart, lanky centre, the new line of Stewart, Mann and Frew has been highly gratifying to Coach Primeau, and this trio bids fair to attain the prominence of last year's "Powerhouse Patrol". Palmer, Rennie and Murphy have also gone well up front, and are fast rounding into form.

The Dukes' rearguard should be one of the toughest in the league with King, Mine and Dallaire standing out on defence, while Red Gilbert, youthful reminder, has been sensational in goal. This boy looks like a great prospect.

WILLARD THOMPSON TO DIRECT 'HOLIDAY'

Barry has written. It was recently presented on the screen, in an altered form, however.

Those who play in Holiday will be selected from the dramatic groups of all the colleges on the campus. Mr. Thompson will personally select his cast on Thursday at two casting meetings in the rehearsal hall, one at four p.m., and the other at seven p.m.

The Drama Committee is also holding its annual play festival early next year, and it is rumored that Queen's and McMaster Universities may send one-act play groups to compete with groups from the local colleges. This plan, it is hoped, will enhance the attraction of the festival. The complete series will be run off in two nights of entertainment.

Possibly you have wondered why so many male students have been braving the wintry blasts on the back campus to play touch-rugby this year.

In answer to that question, Harry "Red" Foster, noted sports commentator, in an informal chat yesterday, told The Varsity a bit about the popular fall pastime. He remarked that, combining passing, running, and rugby, touch-rugby was an invaluable aid to basketball, track work, and to rugby of the sterner variety.

"The beauty of this game," he pointed out, "is the way it fools fellows into getting into condition while they enjoy the companionship and team spirit involved in playing it."

Charlie Zwygard, gym instructor of Hart House, being questioned on the subject, said that he did not approve of semi-nude specimens gallivanting about the campus. He intimated that in large P.T. classes, when boys wanted to play touch-rugby he has permitted them to, on the condition that they followed the rules of common sense and decency.

The genial gym instructor, pointing to last year's activities, said that he saw no reason why the sport should not go on until after New Year's, if the weather permits.

ART MUSIC AND DRAMA

unfamiliar Sonata in A Major, almost obviously by Cesar Franck, and a group of short pieces which miraculously did not fall below the artistic level of what had preceded them.

At the risk of returning to the subject discussed in paragraph (a) it must be said that, after breaking a string in the first of this concluding group, Mr. Seigist's technical work on a new one which must have been constantly stretching, was virtually incredible.

Hollywood Theatre

As a change from the intense drama of the last few weeks, a light entertaining comedy, Millie Macart, was the French feature at the Hollywood Theatre on Saturday morning. In it we find Danielle Darieux playing a much lighter part than in the pictures earlier in this series. She proves herself a very fine comedienne. Although Mayeuling, a tragedy, was the film in which she first received notice in this country she seems ideally suited to a comedy role. With comedy goes music and as the setting of the picture is in a music store, there is ample opportunity for the insertion of much melody. However, the music is not made the excuse for the picture as in so many American films, but rather blends in sympathetically with the action and the mood of the play. Millie, Darieux sings several songs very charmingly with Pierre Mingand. However, he is not our idea of a juvenile lead. His acting seemed somewhat superficial.

The actor playing the part of the shrill's assistant was more to our liking, turning in a grand performance. It is sometimes these "bit" actors who can make or break a picture.

Although there are no great world problems solved in this picture, it is enjoyable entertainment. Ted Meek.

Sunday Evening Concert

Last night was presented the One Hundred and Thirty-first Sunday Evening Concert in the Great Hall of Hart House, George Lambert, baritone, and Frederick Silvester, organist, being the artists. A feature of the program was the use of a Hammond Electric Organ and on the whole the acoustics were very good for this instrument.

The program was divided into three parts, Mr. Lambert singing two arias from Bach's Phaebus and Pan, Mid Verlangen and Zu Tause zu Springe, followed by a section for the organ, and then the Kreustab Cantata concluding the entertainment.

The two arias were well received.

Carol singing for all women of University College will be conducted today by Mr. George Lambert, from 1.30 to 2 p.m. in the theatre of the Women's Union. Everyone interested welcome.

NATIONAL SCHOLARSHIPS

Paul Martin, M.P., to speak on Scholarships for Students, Tuesday 1.30-2 p.m., Hart House Theatre. All welcome.

SWING CLUB

The first meeting of the recently formed Swing Club will be held in the Women's Union next Thursday at 5 p.m. All undergraduate students are invited to attend the meeting, which will feature local talent.

As Mr. Lambert explained, they were the results of a contest between Phoebe and Pan for musical honours. The differences between the selections were so marked that the audience had no trouble in gaining the point. The artist really excelled in these numbers and his efforts were well rewarded.

The section for the organ alone was a quartet of Bach compositions of which Come, Sweet Death was the most interesting though the Prelude and Fugue in A Minor, played solely to exhibit the scope of the organ, was also attentively followed.

The Kreustab Cantata, very solemn and rather lengthy, concluded the program. John Henry

WARDEN ARRANGES VIOLETOE DINNER

For many years past the Warden has arranged a Christmas Dinner for those undergraduate members of Hart House who live in countries other than Canada or in distant parts of the Dominion and who are thus unable to spend any part of the Christmas vacation at home.

The dinner this year will be held at 6.30 p.m. on Saturday, 17th December, in the Great Hall. After dinner the Senior Singers will sing carols and the Warden will give each man a small framed etching especially executed for the occasion.

game was played in four ten minute quarters, according to the New York State Little Three Conference rules.

Niagara got away to an early lead after Blake and Schmitt tossed in two quick baskets to make the score 4-0. LaVarnay came back for Varsity with a beautiful flip from the side, but the Americans added seven to their total before LaVarnay and Cahill scored two more field goals to put the Blues three points behind the winners. A Niagara basket once more increased their advantage, but MacGregor sank a beautiful shot from the fifteen foot line to put Varsity within striking distance. Trailing 13-8, Rogin was fouled as he got set for a shot and he made both throws good. A minute later MacGregor brought the house to its feet when he scored another long shot to put Varsity one point behind Niagara. It was the closest the visitors came to evening the count. Cahill missed a foul shot and Niagara ran in five quick baskets to Varsity's lone free throw as the half ended with the home team leading 23-13.

The rest seemed to have done Varsity a lot of good and they started pressing again as the period started. After Niagara had made their total twenty-five, Singer sank a foul shot and came back fast to toss in a long one from the side. Singer sank another free throw and the score was 25-17. The rally was short-lived, however, and from that point on the game was all Niagara's. Rogin scored three more points for Varsity by foul throws but the classy poststers from across the border broke from their checks time and again to toss in their field goals and the final score was 39-20.

Even though they lost Varsity played a hard game and apart from their final period let-down were as good as the Niagara squad. Rogin was a pillar of strength on the defensive, as was MacGregor. LaVarnay, Cahill, Mahoney and Singer tried hard on the attack and had tough breaks on a number of shots that just bounced off the rim of the basket. In the absence of Stevens, Mac McCutcheon ran the boys from the bench.

Scholars Throughout World Respond to Appeal

CONTRIBUTIONS LARGE

Students throughout the world are uniting to aid students in war-torn China, according to reports from the "Rassemblement Mondial des Etudiants pour la Paix, la Liberte et la Culture," of Paris.

Canadian students who last year raised almost two thousand dollars, are continuing to respond to the appeal for their stricken fellow students. Mr. E. A. Macdonald, treasurer of the Far Eastern Student Relief Fund on this campus, reports that several very generous contributions have already come in.

The committee is planning to make a concentrated appeal at the beginning of the New Year. At the Oriental Party which is planned for Friday, January 13th, in the Women's Union, it is expected that the films taken by Dr. Grant Lathe, representative of the Canadian Student Assembly on the International Student Delegation to China last summer, will be shown. Besides dancing and various Chinese entertainments, genuine Chinese dishes, prepared in the true Oriental style, will be a feature attraction.

During the last year the students of Hong Kong University raised over $10,000 (H.K.) for Chinese medical relief. With this they bought and equipped a large ambulance, and supplied surgical instruments and bandages to the Fourth Route Army. They also paid the expenses of two of their medical graduates doing anti-epidemic work in Hunan under the guidance of the League of Nations anti-epidemic unit.

Schmitt, Vignola, Bello and Wood were best for the winners, the first mentioned leading the scorers with 11 points.

Varsity: LaVarnay (4), Mahoney, Rogin (6), MacGregor (4), Cahill (2), Minchin, Hummick, Beers, Singer (4), Dunn, Banigan.

Niagara: Bello (4), Campbell (2), Schmitt (11), Vignola (9), Blake (2), Wood (6), Kearney (2), Slpach (1), Fadden (2), Smith, Halligan.

Van Zeeland Discusses German Economic Problem

"Munich Pact Ended Period of History which Accepted Versailles," According to Dr. Van Zeeland

SUGGESTS REORGANIZATION

"The Munich Pact marks the end of the period in European history which accepted the Versailles Treaty as a basis of organization," stated Dr. Paul van Zeeland, author of the World Trade Reports, in his lecture last night on "Proposed Roads to World Recovery." As yet, he pointed out, no new basis for international relations has been formulated, and "Europe is going through a period of transformation whose characteristic feature is confusion."

Two aspects of world economies were suggested as a basis for reorganization; these were raw materials and colonies. "There are thirty-seven sources of raw materials in the world today," stated Dr. van Zeeland. "These should be freely accessible to all nations." Individual nations, he pointed out, cannot afford to absorb and utilize them, because there is not a sufficient market for their exports. If economic collaboration could be established, not only would nations be more prosperous, but international friction would be reduced.

Varsity Interviews Ex-Premier of Belgium, Noted Authority on International, Financial and Trade Relations

CREATOR OF TRAOC PACT

"Reports of German economic collapse are exaggerated," said Dr. Paul van Zeeland, ex-premier of Belgium, in an interview yesterday. "One must take into consideration that Germany is a strong economic country and very efficient."

He went on to say that it is true that Germany is economically much weaker now than she was before the War. She has not yet solved some of her major economic problems such as the shortage of fats and the price equilibrium with other countries. "However, it is an error to think that the country is bankrupt," he said.

Dr. van Zeeland, who is a banker by profession, was premier of Belgium until late last year. He was the founder of the Bank of International Settlement, and drew up the Van Zeeland (Continued on page 4)

Indian Students to Finance Medical Unit to Provide Vaccine for Cholera Victims in Far East

The sad plight of the Chinese people during the "crisis" has aroused the sympathy of the whole world. Students have not been behind in doing their part to alleviate the distress of their fellow-students.

Students throughout India are supporting the China Fund, opened by the Indian National Congress to finance the Indian Medical Unit, consisting of five doctors under the leadership of Dr. M. A. Ait. The Bombay government has donated $2,000 of cholera vaccine to the unit and over Rs. 30,000 has been contributed already. Typical of the international comment on this action is the message from the French author, M. Romain Rolland, "I am glad that India has emerged from age-long sleep to re-enter world activity by her generous aid. May she begin by strengthening her links with China, that wise and peace-loving people, so savagely assailed! And may they together or (Continued on page 4)

President Celebrates Birthday

President Cody, who celebrates his seventieth birthday today, asks the students to accept his best wishes and his thanks for all their co-operation in the activities of the University. "Have confidence in yourselves and country, and the God of the nations who has given you your endowments and opportunities," is his message to the undergraduates of this University this morning. This is his seventh year as President of the University from which he was graduated in 1889, and in which he has held many different positions, progressing from student to lecturer, member of the Senate, Chairman of the Board of Governors, and finally President.

Martin To Start Drive For Scholarships To-day

Resolution to Provide National Scholarships will be Subject of Hart House Theatre Address

The campaign for national scholarships will get under way on the Toronto campus today at 1.30 when Paul Martin, Liberal M.P. for Essex East, will speak in Hart House Theatre. Martin, a graduate of Varsity, has won a national reputation in government circles through his sponsoring of a resolution to provide National Scholarships. Today's meeting is part of a national campaign which has been undertaken by the Canadian Student Assembly, to organize public support for this resolution.

When interviewed yesterday, President Cody expressed interest in the campaign. He stressed the need to ensure that the funds be administered by some responsible body, preferably the universities, to avoid any possibility of political patronage.

The meeting will be asked to endorse the petition which students will take to Ottawa in February. The petition asks that the government introduce a bill which will provide one thousand national scholarships, to be of sufficient value to provide maintenance at university for the recipients.

PLAYERS PRAISE DRAMA TECHNIQUE

Technique of Moscow Art Theatre to be Used by University Drama Committee in Hart House Play

The players in "Pawns" are very enthusiastic about the new technique of the Moscow Art Theatre which Director Sholome Gelber is employing in the play of this name today. The production is being presented by the University Drama Committee in Hart House at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

The actors agree that the program of subjective study has provided an enthusiasm and professional spirit hitherto unknown here. They feel that they have become more absorbed in their own parts.

Says Director Gelber, "Our primary object in attempting this system is to raise university drama to the level of an art, whereby actors approach their parts objectively and then in the light of their own experience and imagination they transform the objective conception into a subjective one."

Songstress To Visit Varsity Swing Club

Louise King, nightly featured songstress of the Embassy and star of the C.B.C. "Music by Faith" series, will be the guest of the Varsity Swing Club at their meeting in the Women's Union Thursday at 5.

Negotiations are going ahead with Bert Niosi to secure his quartet for the meeting also. A definite answer from Mr. Niosi may be secured today. It was erroneously stated in another issue of The Varsity that this was to be the last meeting of the club. According to Bruce Harris, that is definitely not the case.

U.C. LIT. TO ADOPT OFFICIAL COLLEGE PIN

The University College Literary Society have decided to adopt an official college pin beginning this year. The pin is a red-coloured shield inlaid in a gold edge with "University College, Toronto" inscribed on it.

Attached to this pin by a gold chain is the year pin also in gold. It is a marked improvement and will remain the standard pin for the college. The lists have been posted and the pins will be obtainable by the middle of the week.

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 5 (CUP)—It was announced late last week that a Queen's student, Donald C. MacDonald, had been appointed lecturer by the Association for Anglo-American Understanding, an organization for the furtherance of better relations between the British Empire and the United States.

The association was started seven years ago by Professor Newell, sometime professor of international relations at McGill College, Constantine. It was widely organized with no emphasis on publicity, for the purpose of interpreting the ideas and opinions of one country to the people of another; this is done by addresses and discussion groups with service clubs, schools, (Continued on Page 4)

Christmas Dinner

For many years past the Warden has arranged a Christmas Dinner for those undergraduate members of Hart House who live in countries other than Canada or in distant parts of the Dominion and are thus unable to spend any part of the Christmas vacation at home. The dinner this year will be held at 6.30 p.m. on Saturday, 17th December, in the Great Hall. After dinner the Senior Singers will sing carols and the Warden will give each man a small framed etching especially executed for the occasion.

Every member wishing to attend the dinner must have an admission ticket which can be procured on signing his name at the Warden's office. These members are asked to do so as soon as possible so that all details can be arranged for the dinner.

The Warden is making every effort to get in touch with men eligible to attend this dinner, but hopes that all undergraduates concerned will consider this notice as an invitation to be present.

Fifteen-Minute Broadcast Based on News from "The Varsity" Proposed by News Commentator of C.K.C.L.

S.A.C. ACCEPT PROPOSAL

Commencing at the tentative hour of eight o'clock, the first Friday evening after the New Year, there will be a regular fifteen-minute broadcast of University of Toronto news from Station C.K.C.L. The broadcast will be based on news stories, features, and editorials appearing in the columns of The Varsity.

The suggestion for the program was first advanced by Mr. Jack Thompson, trans-radio news commentator for C.K.C.L. After collaborating with Mr. E. A. Macdonald, secretary of the Students' Council, and Mr. A. C. Forrest, editor of The Varsity, the proposal for such a program was formally presented at an open meeting of the Students' Administrative Council. Here the proposal was accepted, and the Publications Commission was authorized to supervise any further details necessary for the first broadcast which would take place before another regular meeting of the Council.

Prize-winners in the Christmas Literary issue will probably be the first to find favourable publicity through this medium, as it is expected that a great deal of the first program will be given to the results of the literary issue, with some of the prize-winning poems read. Students on the campus who achieve success in some activity or other, and find that they have gained the limelight on the campus, will be able to hear their names over the air, and some of them no doubt will be interviewed during the weekly news-ast, later on in the season.

It is believed by the Council and the members of The Varsity staff, that through this medium more favourable publicity may be given to university enterprises than has been possible formerly. For that reason as well as many other benefits which can be foreseen, (Continued on Page 4)

Canada Establishes Hostels For Young Student Travellers

Those students who enjoy skiing and travelling will be interested to learn about the recent establishment of the Canadian Youth Hostel Association which provides cheap sleeping-quarters in several places of our Dominion. Throughout Great Britain, Holland, Belgium, France and Germany the Youth Hostel Association has become popular for providing very reasonable accommodation for those holidaying in Europe on a meagre pocket-book. Now there is a Canadian Youth Hostel Association.

Where are the Canadian hostels? Many are located in good skiing districts near Toronto. There are a number scattered throughout Ontario, a few in Quebec and some in the west. New England can boast of hostels too. For those who ski it means that "you can go to a hostel for a week-end, spend only twenty-five cents for a comfortable bed, take your own food with you and cook it, using the facilities supplied, or buy meals priced very reasonably from the hostel parents," according to William D. Smith of the Canadian Hostel Association.

The hostels in Ontario contain separate sleeping accommodation, a common kitchen, dining room and recreational room. Owing to the very recent establishment of Canadian hostels they are not as elaborate as those in Europe. However, their popularity in Canada is rapidly increasing as a number of new hostels are springing up all over the country.

Anyone can use these hostels by becoming a member of the Canadian Youth Hostel Association which costs $2 if you are over the age of twenty-one and only $1 if you are younger. On payment of this fee to Miss Marie Boissonneau, 59 Victoria St., Toronto, you are entitled to use all hostels in Canada and throughout the world.

The rules for hostel users are few. Lights must be out at ten-thirty. Liquor is forbidden. Bed sheets and blankets are owned by the hostel.

"Eye Men" Favor Inclusion Of Optometry in University

"They're all for it," was the comment of Mr. J. C. Thompson, Dean of the College of Optometry, regarding the idea of inclusion of the college in the university. Although the optometrists spend much of their time in the university buildings, they do not form a faculty on the campus.

The students themselves echoed Mr. Thompson's views. Bert Heston, David Kline and Bill Johnson could see no drawbacks in becoming a part of the university. They felt that any added issue it involved would be well worth the advantages to be gained. They were enthusiastic over the thought of the privileges of Hart House, the right of competition in sports, and the general feeling of being "on the inside of university life".

A. J. Akit, in his second year, considered it "a good idea." He pointed out that the number of students in optometry is small and heartily approved the possibility of a large university life. "We pay $10 a year for Y.M.C.A. now; we would hardly object to paying a Hart House fee with its added advantages."

"The college has been trying for years," said Ross Armstrong, newly-elected optometry president, "to become affiliated with the university. We have a basketball team; we tried to get games with various faculties but they refused. Finally we had to content ourselves with playing a girls' team. The optometry men are definitely left out of things," he added.

Miss Sutherland declared that all the students are in favour of the idea but there are certain obstacles. "The medical profession doesn't like the idea of the optometrists being a part of the university," she thought. "We are having the same difficulty as dentistry had some years ago. I certainly think we (Continued on page 4)

Congratulations

The students of the University join in their hearty congratulations to President Cody today on the occasion of his seventieth birthday. We are glad that our President is enjoying good health and it is hoped that he will be able to continue the execution of his duties for many years.

During the many years of association with the University Dr. Cody has held almost all the important positions in its government that it is possible for one man to hold. He has long been renowned as an outstanding educationalist, and at the close of the Great War was Minister of Education for the province.

Commenting on the students of today, he says that they are just as good as they were when he was an undergraduate in 1889. He almost admits that they have been improved, but prefers to maintain that they haven't lost any ground.

While at University College, Dr. Cody studied Classics, Modern Languages, Philosophy and Economics. His reputation as an outstanding student is well known to all undergraduates today.

Our News Broadcast

After several days' work and discussion, it was decided in the publications committee of the S.A.C. last night to co-operate fully with Mr. Jack Thompson of C.K.C.L. in the proposed weekly radio news-cast based on articles in The Varsity.

The editors wish to thank Mr. Thompson for his co-operation and his willingness to comply with all suggestions which we felt were in the best interests of the University. In a news story in the front page you may read the details, a few of which are yet tentative, of this program. It may be added that it would be possible for a radio station to proceed and arrange a program, sponsored by some patent medicine company and broadcast without our co-operation, unless we had all the features of The Varsity copyrighted. But Mr. Thompson has attempted in every way to co-operate with us, and abide by the suggestions of the Council.

For a long time, the University has had to depend upon its publicity as far as the general run of people were concerned to the daily press. Too often this has been sensationalized to the extent that many people have a completely distorted view of University life. By means of a broadcast it should be possible to eliminate many of these erroneous impressions, and educate the public to a better idea of what University life is consisted. To that end, the broadcast will be directed.

Many high school students who plan some time to continue their studies here have a very meagre knowledge of a University unless they are fortunate enough to attend such a place as University of Toronto Schools. They should form a considerable part of the audience who will listen to this program, and should be benefited considerably. Without a doubt members of The Varsity staff will work even harder to raise the standard of their paper in order to present informative and interesting news not only to the students and the members of their families who read it, but also to the public which it is hoped will be secured through the broadcast.

Expansion Necessary

Never before has the work of the Students' Administrative Council assumed the vast proportions that it has this year. Since the inauguration of the loan fund, and the ever-widening student service department which provides employment and room service for needy students, the demands upon the council have increased tremendously.

During the summer the office staff was increased and the offices enlarged, but in some ways this has added to the difficulties of the office handling the work which comes within its scope. Consequently students who wish to take advantage of the facilities offered, are missing lectures and waiting sometimes for hours in order to secure an appointment with Mr. Macdonald, the general secretary-treasurer. Naturally the long waits in the outer office are to be regretted and the necessity for them is distressing to Mr. Macdonald. His work, which includes the supervising of all the S.A.C. business, the managing of the advertising for The Varsity, the attendance at innumerable meetings, and a score of other duties, makes it extremely difficult to interview the many students seeking assistance, and the many employers seeking students for part-time jobs. These interviews might well occupy all his time themselves.

No other university in Canada has a students' council which performs services for the students as does the Toronto Students' Administrative Council. But the system must be adapted to meet the increasing needs if the work is to continue to be done properly. At the present time both Mr. Macdonald and his secretaries have to disregard hours if they wish to complete the continual pile-up of business each day.

Feeling that the services offered to the students were of inestimable value and should be increased rather than retrenched in any way, the Students' Administrative Council hopes to be able to take some steps to expand effectively and possibly help even more students than are being given aid at the present time.

With that end in view, and on the advice of Professor Chant of the Psychology Department, Professor Chant and Mr. E. A. Macdonald have been requested at their convenience to visit some American university where the same type of work is done by the students' governing organization. There, it is hoped they would be able to study the system evolved, with the idea of modelling a similar system on this campus.

It is believed that Yale University has one of the best organizations in the world; great study, involving a survey of many European universities, was undertaken before the Yale authorities were enabled to inaugurate their organization. If it is possible for both Professor Chant and Mr. Macdonald to get away from their work together for a few days, the members of the S.A.C. are hoping that they will be able to visit Yale and study their system, and perhaps eventually establish in Toronto an administrative council which will be able to extend its facilities to every student in the most efficient way, and possibly enlarge considerably on its present benefits to the University.

ART MUSIC

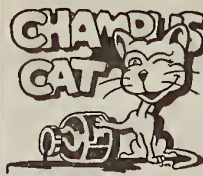

Royal Alexandra

Royal Alexandra audiences have finally been given the opportunity to watch last season's stimulating and most thought-provoking play. Last year's Pulitzer Prize play Idiot's Delight, was the presentation and a more stirring indictment of war has not been presented in such a powerfully realistic manner since Irwin Shaw's Bury the Dead.

Writing a truly entertaining propaganda play is no mean feat, and yet the playwright has succeeded in doing this very feat. Superficially, the play seems to be nothing more than a smart witty comedy, but Sherwood's admirable technique has enabled him to put across his message as powerful as the blast of a cannon.

This road-show version has been produced with a somewhat different interpretation than that of the original Broadway production. The war theme was given much more emphasis in the Theatre Guild production, but here we find the lighter aspects of the play coming through. This is mainly due to the efforts of Phil Baker, who makes his first appearance in legitimate drama. We must confess that Baker, who is well known for radio and screen work, gave an admirable performance as the American hooper, the only slight flaw being in the fact that his radio and vaudeville technique hampered him. His rapid Hendaye, Dec. 6.—Bearing a cargo of ferocious Arctic Owls, the gallant Brig Nancy is steaming at full speed to Corsica to aid the French. "I have always felt a deep affection for the French," said First Mate Moly Shyster, "after I stayed at the Chateau Laurier." The crew of the Brig Nancy is all enthused over the coming fray and is determined to run the Italian blockade with contraband French toast.

That doughy old salt, Skipper Wiregarters, in an open letter to the War Cry, stated his position, "I offered the Italians the use of the Normandie and a few other boats but Mussolini accused me of trying to hand him the old French line!" he declared. "And so I have offered my services to la belle France and she has accepted them."

EAST MEETS WEST WITHIN COVERS OF DIRECTORY

From Iceland and the Fiji Islands, from Uruguay and India, from the uttermost parts of the earth, students come to Varsity, but mostly they come from Toronto. In fact, the number of Torontonians completely swamps the sum of all the rest, Canadian and foreign together.

Americans come to Varsity too, some even from 'way down south in Texas and out west in California. They find their strongest numbers at St. Michael's perhaps because of the incentive offered by the Western course conducted there. China leads in the field of non-English speaking nations represented at Varsity.

Graduate Studies have, perhaps, the most cosmopolitan outlook; here are students from England and Ireland, Denmark, Germany and Switzerland. Medicine seems to have the greatest attraction for southerners, since prospective M.D.'s are found from Brazil, Cuba, and Ceylon. Alaska has a delegate here, too.

The Canadian students outside Ontario hail for the most part from the prairies.

WINTER SPORTS NOW TAKE STAGE

Basketball and Hockey Are Featured Activities of Mid-Winter Sports Season

The scenes are now being shifted in preparation for Act II of Mac McCutcheon's super-colossal extravaganza, "The Intramural Race". Outdoor track, football, and soccer now being over, and lacrosse and volleyball nearing the schedule's end, the winter activities of basketball and hockey will soon take the stage.

Although interest in all the many branches of athletics is higher than ever, there will be no selections of all-star teams made this year. Last season the all-star idea flopped when players who voted were blinded by loyalty to their own faculty, and voted mainly for their own team-mates.

Evidence of the great interest in sports which Mr. McCutcheon's scheme has produced is seen in the fact that this year the Faculty of Medicine intends to enter four basketball teams. Although the official entry has not yet been made by the enterprising doctors, we are informed that already they are practising regularly. We also hear that S.P.S., not to be outdone by the Meds, are contemplating a similar mass expedition into the various scrambleball games.

Intramural hockey is also ready for another great season, following yesterday's hockey meeting. The set-up this season will be a reversion to the group system wherein each group has four teams, and a twelve-game schedule. The additional entry of four new teams has necessitated the formation of a fifth group. The present line-up is as follows:

Group A: Vic, U.C. I, Jr. Meds, Jr. S.P.S.

ORIENTAL SOCIETY HEARS MUSEUM TALK ON CHINESE HISTORY

That wishbones are responsible for the revelation of a great part of early Chinese history, was a fact pointed out by Bishop W. C. White, Keeper of the East Asiatic Collection of the Royal Ontario Museum at a meeting last evening of the Oriental Society.

Bishop White, from his vast experience in Honan, dated Chinese history back to the Chang dynasty, just recently accepted as authentic. He stated that "the difficulty of Europeans in grasping things pertaining to China is the reason they hesitate to accept them." Jade, bronzes, pottery and designs were discussed in the group. Professor Staples and Dr. Meek of the Semitic Department related their experiences. President Ronald Williams introduced the speakers. After the meeting refreshments were served.

Group B: Dents, Sr. S.P.S., Trinity I, St. Mike's.
Group C: Trinity II, U.C. II, Sr. Meds, Pharmacy.
Group D: Wydliffe, Forestry, Knox, U.C. III.

The new group will consist of Aeronautes, Emmanuel, Vie III, S.P.S. III. The games this year will be played in 20-minute periods, with no time out except when called by the referee for injuries, etc. All games will be played indoors at the Varsity Arena. In the event of games going to the end of reserved time the Arena bell ends the game.

The games will not be played off, but each team will be given one point in the group standing.

Ample opportunity is given for players to make the teams since eleven men may be in the line-up for each game. The sub-goal is allowed to qualify for the play-offs without participating in a league fixture.

ON INTRAMURAL AFFAIRS

With the awarding of an exceptionally beautiful plaque to each year's winner of the T. A. Reed Trophy for intramural athletics, the Athletic Association have taken another step to widen the popular appeal of intramural athletics. Nowadays there is an ever-increasing cry among those who are termed progressive educationalists that all too great a stress is laid upon winning rather than playing of a sport. I have neither the time nor at present the inclination to discuss just how much emphasis should be placed upon either. But one thing is certain, that under the present point-scoring system that has been evolved for the faculties competing for the T. A. Reed Trophy, it pays equal attention to both. The number of teams and men playing for each faculty count just as much as the number of victories. And it is for this reason if for no other that steps such as the awarding of this plaque are to be highly commended.

The award has already been made to Trinity, the winner two years ago, and to S.P.S., last year's victor. The plaque is a replica of the trophy and an unusually beautiful piece of workmanship.

TOIKE OIKE

The current crop of Schoolmen according to all present indications are indeed men of might. In spite of their training on beer and rum like Tony Galento, at the present time no faculty can compare with them along athletic lines, even though we still think that the School At-Home was a poor third to the Meds At-Home and the U.C. Follies (but if you bring Larry Clinton here this year all is forgiven, boys).

Last year S.P.S. won the T. A. Reed Trophy and this year they are now firmly entrenched in the lead. But it was not only in intramural lines that the self-appointed bugbears of the temperance societies excelled. In glancing at this year's athletic handbook it appears that Schoolmen acquired more first colours than any other faculty, fifteen in all. University College men, in spite of a poor intramural showing, received 9 first colours. Dents were third, having 6 honour athletes. In second and third colour awards School are again leading with U.C. being the runner-up in both cases.

It looks as though Meds' football victory has pepped up the faculty for a real onslaught at much-mentioned interfaculty honours. Things are starting to hum, and the current idea is that there is going to be so much interest in the intramural basketball series that the guinea pigs of Banning Institute have entered a team.

By Marg Conlin

"History is made at night, and last night's two basketball games won't be forgotten soon around this campus. Quite frankly, both our favourites were defeated, and it's all very sad. St. Hilda's, whom we called to win the trophy this year, let us down after winning the first game in the semi-finals, losing to U.C. Jr. Then St. Mike's, handicapped by an eleven-point lead which Vic Jr. gained over them last week, won their game last night, but lost out on the round. So today there is much weeping and gnashing of teeth."

The gallery last night was all that could be desired to please the heart of a co-ord cage star. Both games had plenty of excitement. St. Mike's players suffered a few tumbles in their zeal. It is all rather complicated, but to the winners of the round and to the "game" losers, congratulations for putting up such a good fight.

The finals between Vic Jr. and U.C. Jr. will be played in two encounters at Hart House on Wednesday and Friday nights of this week. As an Added Attraction, or to make it a double header, on Wednesday night is a preliminary event St. Hilda's Frosh will clash with U.C. Frosh at seven o'clock before the main game, which is scheduled to begin at ten minutes to eight. The winners will meet the Frosh from Vic Friday night and what could be sweeter than to have U.C. Frosh battle it out with Vic Frosh Friday night before their sister junior teams meet?

Tonight is the last chance for local hockey fans to pick up some pointers on the fine art of figure skating. It was suggested to us that interfaculty games after Christmas would be more colourful if all the players donned figure skates and made the thing unanimous. At present the games are decided on the question of speed vs. grace. Sonja Henie might look graceful widdling a hockey stick, but if you haven't yet seen this feat accomplished by some of the fair pucksters around here then "You ain't seen Nothing Yet".

JR. HOCKEY TEAM PLANS FOR SEASON

Coach MacPherson Feels Team is Strong enough to Retain Intercollegiate Title

This year's edition of the Varsity junior hockey team may easily be the surprise of the Junior O.H.A., and have the best chance in years of coping off a title. Hitting their stride in the last few games of the Big Seven last year, they enjoyed a fair amount of success and went on to win the intermediate intercollegiate title. This year, although only four of last year's regulars are back, Coach Jimmy MacPherson feels that the team is much stronger and should not only retain their intercollegiate title, but make a strong threat for the O.H.A. championship.

One of the strong points of this year's team is the sturdy rearguard which the Blues will ice, and which should be one of the hardest in the league to penetrate. In goal will be Don Pentland, who replaced Tiny Blackhall when the latter moved up to the senior team last year, and with the added experience should be an even better net minder. Heading the defense men will be Thor Stephenson, Thor, who was a stand-out last year and a sure-fire senior prospect, has decided to remain in junior ranks for another year. Lining up with Stephenson on defence will be "Beefy" MacMillan of the senior rugby squad, and Boxer, who has been going great guns in practice. These two form a mighty formidable defense.

Of last year's forwards, only Bert Jones and Don Allan will patrol the boards for the juniors this year. However, Jimmy MacPherson has come up with several new stars to fill the shoes of Jock Maynard, Tommy Callon, Walter Glynn and the rest. Ken Higgins, young left winger who starred with Runnymede last year, looks very promising, as does Bill Quigley of St. Mike's, Young, Wright, and Jock Laidlaw of U.T.S., and Johnny Hogg, who played for the Victoria interfaculty champions last year.

Bowling will start the second week in January and the charge to each student to be paid at the start of the season will be $1.00, giving one hour's bowling a week for 10 weeks.

Afternoon hours only are available and teams will be made up of four or five bowlers.

Please sign immediately the list on bulletin board in Room 82, University College. Make up your own team, indicating the hour you wish to bowl each week, or mark your free time and you will be assigned to a team. (No alleys available before 3.30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Wednesdays or after 4 p.m. on Thursdays.)

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

After eling out a one-point lead over U.C. Jr. in their first encounter last Thursday, St. Hilda's Sr. were defeated 20-17 by 4th Jr. last night, losing the round by a close decision, 38-36. This win carries U.C. Jr. into the finals at Hart House Wednesday night against Vic Jr. The Saints pulled away in the first quarter last night to increase their lead over the Whitney girls by six points. Under the inspired leadership of Bobbie McDonald the latter team soon hit its stride and forged ahead to finish the game with a narrow three-point margin over the strong St. Hilda's team. Sloppy passing featured the early part of the game but both teams steadied down when mistakes proved costly. "Tibs" Amesley and Marg Large turned in fine performances for the Saints, U.C. guards did their finest job of the season in holding Joan McMaster and Joan Griffith to three points each.

U.C. Jr.: Bobbie McDonald (14), Mary Kirkland (4), Helen Gurney (1), Anna Marie Smart (1), Kay Bryans, Patsy McLaren, Peggy McLaren, Fran Barbour, Gert Evans.
St. Hilda's Sr.: Joan McMaster (3), Joan Griffith (3), Tibs Amesley (11), Marg Large, Mary Becker, Pat Scott, Jean Howson, Win Baxter, Marg Mayes, Midge Munro.

A battling Vic Jr. team bowed to St. Mike's last night 25-23 in the second game of the semi-finals, but emerged victorious on the round 48-39, to win a berth in the finals for the women's interfaculty cage trophy. The Irish, playing a more-improved type of basketball than in their first encounter with Vic, were extended to producing some brilliant plays before edging out a win over the Scarlet and Gold. Although both teams were evenly matched, Vic had the edge on the forward line until the second half when the St. Mike's captain, "M.T." Bennett, chalked up eight fast points. Mary Casson again played an outstanding game for Vic, while Jean de Cola and Kay Bennett were the pick of the Irish defence.

St. Mike's: Mary Theresa Bennett (10), Annabelle Macdon (11), "Deed" McGovern (4), Jay Bennett, Jean Grant, Vicki Longo, Jean de Cola.
Vic Jr.: Molly Moore, Berna Christie (4), Dorothy Clarke (6), Ruth Thompson (5), Ruth Danard (8), Mary Casson, Ruth Puhlow, A. Steele.

VARSITY QUESTIONS DR. VAN ZEELAND

Report on international trade conditions at the request of several European governments, including the British and French governments.

He is an advocate of moderation in all things, of a policy of appeasement and international economic collaboration. "I am always interested in any constructive effort along the line of appeasement," are his words. He felt that the recently-signed Anglo-American trade treaty is a great stride in this direction.

Asked about his own part in bringing about the trade treaty, Dr. van Zeeland said, "I would not go so far as to say that I laid the basis for that treaty, as some people have said of me, but I was very much interested in it."

He was rather reticent with regard to the new Italian colonial demands.
"I can make only one statement about that," he said. "Unless Italian demands are met, there is politically no solution possible in the near future."

The collapse of the French general strike last week came as no surprise to him. "I was sure that the government would end up the strongest. Governments must be strongest or there can be no government. I was confident in the moderation and wisdom of the French people."

"The tendency in France today is more moderate than it has been," he continued. "I don't think that the collapse of the general strike will have any direct influence on French policy.
M. Daladier does not depend on Leftist support, so he will just go on with the moderate course he is advocating."
The Belgian ex-premier discounted Nazi influence in the Balkan states. He pointed out that these countries have been making steady and rapid progress since the war, and expressed the opinion that the Balkan peninsula would never again become a source of war.

VARSITY PROGRAM TO BE BROADCAST

The Council and The Varsity have adopted the attitude of absolute cooperation with Mr. Thompson and C.K.C.L., who have agreed to have all scripts read by a committee composed of Mr. Macdonald, Mr. Forrest, Mr.
Hartford, chairman of the publications committee, and Mr. Rankin, president of the S.A.C.

At first the broadcast will be unsponsored, but as it is expected to have a considerable appeal to a special audience it is believed that there will be no difficulty in securing the sponsorship of some firm interested in selling to a university public. If the program does happen to be sold, then any extra revenue will be turned over to the S.A.C. to be used in its work, and probably to extend the features of The Varsity.

It is proposed to prepare a script each week from the news which has appeared in the daily paper, making use especially of some of the features such as the Campus Cat, the Speaking of Sport column, the Hither and Yon, and the editorials. Perhaps too, certain bulletin board announcements and coming events will be given certain publicity.

It may be possible as the program gains in popularity and public appeal, to have some of the editors of the various departments comment on their work, and read some of their articles over the air. At last credit will be given to writers of articles.

OUR EXCHANGE EDITOR can't be found at the Press tonight. . . .
Rumour has it that he disappeared into the Stacks three days ago and hasn't been heard of since. . . . Due to the floods and breakdown of the postal system, etc., our news of other campuses hasn't come through, and we find ourselves faced with the necessity of digging up some stories on our own. . . .
And we don't mean the Winnipeg Free Press!

THE TRUTH WILL OUT. . . .
It was just a racket. . . . We'll tell you freshmen now before the rest of you get stung. . . . No sooner had the pretty blue new Student Directories come off the press than a plot was hatched—a nasty plot, we tell you—to capitalize on gullible freshmen's natural instincts and separate them from their hard-earned coppers. It was all conceived in the mind, if any, of a third year Honour Science student. He hit upon the plan to seize a large number of the treasured books and sell them at two-bit apiece to freshmen who didn't know any better than to pay.
He advertised them as giving the names, addresses and telephone numbers of co-eds "that every frosh should know". . . . Latest reports of investigators indicate that his joint stock company paid dividends of 200 per cent while it lasted. . . . One frosh claims he invested all his Xmas spending money on the swindle. . . . And then he was disappointed, for she lives in Richmond Hill. . . .

THIRD YEAR ECONOMICS students are beginning to wonder just how bad their papers really were. . . .
They had an exam early last month but the marks aren't out yet. The only comment the professor will make is that the examiner just took one look at them and decided he had to leave town. . . . Now the students don't want them back.

THE NEXT STORY COMES from a fair damsel up at Vic. . . . They had an exam in English last Thursday, she says, and the professor had told them forehand to bring their own paper.
He wasn't there, but a lady examiner brought in some exam paper that went about half-way around the dais. . . .
At the end she said if they had any sheets left to hand them in. . . . Is Victoria going broke, or should the name be changed to Knox?

WE ALWAYS THOUGHT it would be a good idea to have a system of transportation to carry students from Bloor down to College St. in the ten minutes allowed between lectures. . . .
However, it remained for three practical-minded co-eds to put such a plan in operation. The three were seen last week thumbing rides on the Crescent.
All nicely groomed for the occasion, they had high hopes of being picked up by a young man with a radio in his car. Imagine their consternation when a woman stopped and asked them if they would like a lift. . . .

church groups and other organizations.
The organization was extended last year by the appointment of Mr. Leonard Miall, an English lecturer.

It has long been felt that a Canadian lecturer was desirable, not only because Canada is the interpreter of British ways to Americans, and vice-versa, but also to express Canada's problems and opinions to Britishers and Americans alike. Macdonald meets this need.

Macdonald took first class B.A. in history last year, and will continue in work towards an M.A. in Canadian history this year. He is active in student affairs, international relations club, and debating union. He was one of the team which defeated the Australians in the recent debate, at the Winnipeg conference last year and in the S.C.M.

He is expected to start lecturing in England about May, and to remain until July.

DR. FRANKS TO ADDRESS WOMEN OF UNIVERSITY

"Life and the University Woman" will be the subject of an address by Dr. Franks, Wednesday in the Medical Building. Her topic will be from a purely mental health point of view.

She will point out what she thinks the world expects from a university graduate in the way of personality and ability to cope with new situations and difficulties that are certain to arise in the course of her life.

In addition to this, she will show whether or not a girl can acquire these assets at university or if she will have to search elsewhere and find new experiences for these attributes.

EDUCATION IN CHINA

DISCUSSED BY CHANG

"A simpler language, which is evolving, is the only solution of China's cultural problem," said H. Y. Chang of Emmanuel College, speaking to the

at the School of Missions Thursday afternoon.

land as one of the main causes of strained relations. Their purpose should be the development of backward peoples as a contribution to civilization. Instead they are sought by the big powers for the sake of power and prestige they involve. Colonies should be made into international mandates, with an open door trade policy to all nations.
Raw materials and capital should be regarded as international property. He cited the recent Trade Pact between Canada and the United States as a move in the right direction.

Dr. van Zeeland stresses the point that some new basis must be found immediately. His own solution is a threefold process. Equality in armaments must be agreed upon among the nations; then there must be a general limitation. After that economic reconstruction can take place on the basis of international freedom and goodwill.

In spite of the odds against "peace in our time", Dr. van Zeeland is optimistic. The fact that every nation in the world is opposed to war leads him to believe that a peaceful solution can be found. He places faith in the efforts of the smaller nations, such as Belgium, Sweden and Canada, as well as the United States. In their hands, he thinks, lies the hope of the future.

ganize in Asia—and by their example, erational justice and of peace."

At the "Mutualite" in Paris 5,000 people heard Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese ambassador, and Professor Languevin, member of the Institut de France, speak under the "Amis du Peuple Chinois", and saw the film, "La Tragedie Chinoise", presented by Mr.
James Klugmann, secretary of the World Student Association for Peace,
Freedom and Culture. According to Mr.
Ta Pu-Sheng, Mohammedan priest from Shanghai, on his return from a recent tour in the Near East, all Moslem countries support China's cause. He was received and encouraged by the King of Egypt, and among the 90 mass meetings he addressed in India, the speakers at the Student Union of Jamia Millia at Delhi, stressed the close community of interests between the peoples of India and China.

fire gag style caused him to bring out the lighter side of his characterization, and as a result his performance lacked depth. However, aside from this defect, we were pleasantly surprised at his interpretation of the role. Baker has a personality that never failed to project, and his characterization was the most noteworthy of the large, competent cast.

The story takes place in a small winter resort in the Italian Alps near the Switzerland and Austrian frontiers.
Here we find a group of travellers forced to remain at the hotel until their passports are checked, due to a war scare which during the course of the play becomes a reality. The people thrown together are an important munitions maker and his mistress, a Broadway hooper and his act consisting of six chorines, a German scientist, a Communist, and a young married couple. With this assorted group, Sherwood has ample opportunity to present all sides of the war argument, and to present his own views most pointedly.

The play never lagged at any time.
Due to Karl Nielson's clever direction, the performance was well paced with colour and speed. Olga Bacanova, as the consort of the munitions maker, was excellent throughout. A word of praise should be given to the work of Fred Sherman as the fiery Communist.
His characterization never faltered, and he played sincerely and fully. Indeed, this is the first show from across the border that comes to us with a truly competent cast. Every member of the cast played well.

Technically, the play was excellent, so much so that the rumblings of war were perhaps a bit too realistic to suit some members of the audience. However, for an exciting and stimulating evening, we suggest that during this week at any rate, the legitimate drama is your best entertainment.

should be on the same level as Dents."
Of all those questioned not a dissenting voice to the idea of affiliation was heard. One barrier, the fact that optometry was, until this year, a two-year course, has disappeared since a year has been added. Graduates now receive a diploma; the greatest obstacle to inclusion is that they would have to be granted a degree if part of the university.

The College of Optometry, the only organization of its kind in Canada, and according to students, equal to most in the United States, is quartered on the fourth floor of an office building near College and Spadina. Now ten years old, it attracts students from the whole of the Dominion. There are about 60 in the course, of whom only four are girls.

Negro Educationalist Speaks Here Next Term

S.C.M. Invites Dr. Howard Thurman to Attend Religion and Life Week at This University

MANY MEETINGS PLANNED

Dr. Howard Thurman, negro professor of philosophy, Dean of the Chapel at Howard University, Washington, is visiting the University of Toronto next term. He will come as the guest of the S.C.M. from March 5th-12th, for a Religion and Life Week and will address a number of meetings in the university. He will begin his meetings with a service in Convocation Hall.

Howard Thurman is one of the recognized leaders of the educational movement among Negroes. His mother a slave, he is a scholar, an author, and a poet of distinction. For many years he has been in demand as a leader of student conferences in the United States, and when the Christian students of America were asked by the Student Christian Movement in the colleges of India to send an American Negro delegate to visit them in India, Howard Thurman was chosen to be the chairman of this delegation.

As a thinker and speaker Howard Thurman has achieved distinction. An ordained minister, he has preached and lectured in more than one hundred American universities and colleges, including Stanford, Chicago and Boston. He has done post graduate study in Columbia, Oberlin and Haverford.

Recent Psychology Quiz Reveals First Year Students' Pet Hates

Last week the first year psychology class were presented with fifteen groups of objects varying from apples to railway trains. In each group, the student was instructed to list, in order of preference, the samples he liked best and to give reasons why he was hostile to certain objects.

The explanations for dislikes stretched from the "squeakiness" of violins to the "sourness" of plums.

Amongst peas, string beans, spinach, asparagus, and cabbages, 66 per cent of the class disliked spinach and cabbage; spinach was too sandy and "gritty", cabbage too "smelly".

Fifty per cent of the class, the greater part ladies, preferred chicken, beef, lamb and pork to fish. One girl com-

YOUTH COMMITTEE TO HOLD CAMPAIGN

A campaign in aid of Spanish children in the Salem Bland Home outside Barcelona was planned yesterday at a meeting in U.C. Harold Aecker, as chairman, outlined the work of the Youth Committee of Canada which is similar to those in the U.S. and England, in supplying food and clothing to Spanish children. In the university it appeals especially to every undergraduate to help raise $500.00 before Christmas.

All money is sent to the Youth Committee at 9 Richmond St. E. and is then forwarded to Paris, where it is changed into francs and the required food and clothing sent to the Salem Bland Home.

Dr. Salem Bland will speak about the work being done at the Home on Monday, 1.30-2 p.m.

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR CAROL PROGRAM

On Thursday, 15th December, in the Great Hall during lunch hour, a program of Christmas carols is being presented by the Hart House Glee Club. The arrangements are as follows:

From 1.15 p.m. to 1.25 p.m. Dr. Charles Peaker will conduct community singing of carols.

From 1.25 p.m. to 1.55 p.m. the Hart House Glee Club will be present.

The time of this program has been changed from the dinner hour in the evening.

NEW LECTURESHIP TO ENABLE STUDY OF WORLD AFFAIRS

Sir Robert Falconer's Friends Contribute Money which will be Used to Bring Prominent Speakers

It was announced by President H. J. Cody that a lectureship is being established in honour of Sir Robert Falconer, president-emeritus of the University. To be known as the Falconer Lectureship, it has been made possible through a sum of money contributed by friends of Sir Robert.

President of the University for a quarter of a century, Sir Robert is a distinguished student of international affairs, and it was his wish that the money, contributed as a mark of appreciation of his 25 years' service, should be devoted to that subject.

The income from the sum of money will be used to bring to the University every two or three years, a world figure to lecture on some phase of international affairs. Unlike the Marlett, this lectureship will not be confined to a discussion of Canadian-American affairs.

The first Falconer Lecture is expected to be delivered next year.

CAROL AUCTIONS

In view of the audition by CBL at the carol concert in the Great Hall on Thursday, December 15, there will be full rehearsals on both Monday and Tuesday of next week. Attendance is essential.

Joint Meeting To-night To Introduce New Yell

At the joint meeting of the U.C. Lit. and the W.U.A. tonight the members of the college will be introduced to a new college yell. For some time it has been felt that the old yell lacked appeal as indicated by the very small number of students acquainted with it. Even at University College functions the only yell heard are from other colleges or faculties. The Lit. executive believe that with the popularization of this yell the old situation will disappear.

This yell originated in the fall of 1936 and was used by the U.C. men's residence. A committee appointed by the Lit. executive to find a new college yell chose the following:

Parum claris lucem dare,
First of all are we,
Home of knowledge, royal college,
UNIVERSITY.

Unlike former yells this one is said to reflect the personal atmosphere of the college, since it includes the college motto, and refers to its former name of King's College.

TRAINING CORPS PLANS ANNUAL MILITARY BALL

This year, the annual C.O.T.C. ball, the only military ball on the campus, will be held on Friday, January 13. An innovation for this year will be the arrangement whereby cadets who have eighteen parade credits may have the price of their tickets deducted from their pay.

Stanley St. John's orchestra will be featured at the military event, which will be held in Hart House. There are tentative plans now under consideration to decorate the gymnasium to depict Canadian defense in a sarcastic vein. These plans are not as yet official, but a definite decision will be made on this within the next few weeks.

AUSTRALIAN TEAM COMPLETES TOUR THROUGH CANADA

Robson and Thoneman Express Great Enthusiasm at Reception Given by Various Universities in This Country

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 7 (CUP)—Robson and Thoneman of the Australian Debating Team, have reached the most eastern point of their tour of Canada. Tonight they are planning to debate at Dalhousie University, Halifax. When interviewed they gave an interesting account of their trip across Canada. It appeared to them that Canada is swinging between two conflicting influences, mainly American and English. The more outstanding examples of American influence that they have seen were in fraternities and football. The University of British Columbia was the most Americanized college they had visited. The University of Toronto, on the other hand, came the closest to a British university. They mentioned Kingston, Ont., as distinctly English in atmosphere.

So far they have won sixteen out of eighteen debates, having lost to Queen's and Mount Allison; their only debate of a humorous subject was at the latter university. They found some of their stiffest opposition at McGill and Manitoba. The debaters seemed delighted with their Canadian tour, and especially mentioned the hospitality they had received on every Canadian campus.

Among other subjects discussed will be the utilization of calcium, and air-contamination.

Paul Martin Emphasizes Need For Scholarships

Railway Fares

The railway companies are issuing to students of the University, and to members of the University staff, round trip tickets for the Christmas and New Year vacation at the rate of the current one way fare and one-quarter.

Students wishing to take advantage of this reduction should leave their names with the Registrar of the college, or the secretary of the faculty or department concerned, on or before Monday, December 12th. The certificates will be issued to the students at the college, faculty or department office, beginning at 9 a.m. on Saturday, December 17th. Members of the staff may obtain certificates at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

Immediate Measures Necessary to Assist Canadian Students Says Speaker at Hart House

INSTITUTED IN BRITAIN

Paul Martin, Liberal M.P. for Essex East, emphasized the great need for National Scholarships in Canada, in his address at Hart House Theatre today.

Canada is, according to Mr. Martin, in almost the lowest bracket for countries giving scholarships to needy students.

In Great Britain, this system of scholarships was instituted over a century ago, and today 46 per cent of the students receiving university education there, are doing so at the expense of the state.

Mr. Martin believes that if some such system is not soon adopted in Canada, we will, as a country, suffer economically. To substantiate this claim, he mentioned how prosperous and what a rival Denmark is becoming in world produce since she started her system of scholarships in agriculture.

This campaign for annual National Scholarships is being supported by a number of Canadian universities, among which are McGill, Queen's, McMaster, Saskatchewan and Toronto.

In concluding, Mr. Martin stated that by arousing public interest in this question and by petitioning the Federal Government concerning it, legislation will be passed granting scholarships, if not in our time at university, at least within the course of the next few years.

CHINESE HONOUR CANADIAN DOCTOR

Dr. Richard Brown is Appointed Head of International Peace Hospital being Established

Dr. Richard Brown, a graduate of this university, has had the honour bestowed upon him of being appointed as the head of the International Peace Hospital that is being set up in South Szechwan, as a monument to the help China is receiving from all parts of the world.

Until recently, Dick, as he was known to his fellow red, black, and white gridders, has been with the Medical Corps of the Eighth Route Army. A letter just received from Dr. Bob McClure, another graduate who has recently returned to China and is Field Director of the International Red Cross in Central China, quotes a statement made by General Chu, the commander of this formerly Communist brigade, that they appreciate the assistance given to China in her struggle for liberty by missionaries, especially (Continued on Page 4)

VICTORIA FRENCH CLUB PRESENTS LIGHT COMEDY

A one-act play, entitled "La Pie Bogue", was presented by the Victoria French Club last night at Wymilwood.

The play was a comedy concerning a woman who talked continually, much to the annoyance of her friends.

After the presentation of the play, Prof. Lacy, the honorary president, led the group with the singing of French songs.

Games were played and refreshments were served.

Varied Holiday Activities Scheduled For Hart House

Students from places too distant to make it practical for them to enjoy their Christmas vacation at home, will find a haven in Hart House this Yuletide.

If they want a mid-morning snack they will find the tuck shop open. The pool room will offer them an opportunity to indulge in a game of snooker without the customary crowd of science men hanging from the rafters. The tonorial artists will be playing their trade, but only during certain hours for the convenience of those who remain on the campus after Dec. 17th. The library and music room will give them a chance to while away a few hours in pleasant pastime.

Those students who wish to attend the Warden's dinner on the 17th are advised to give Mr. Bickersteth notice to that effect.

Other social functions that will occur while the main portion of the student body are basking in the limelight of parental affection, include the University Settlement night, Friday, the 16th; Delta Kappa Epsilon convention and luncheon, the 29th; and the annual Graduates' ball, held this year on Friday, the 30th.

The last-mentioned affair is being held on Friday so that those attending won't be inconvenienced by the 12 o'clock closing law, which will be in effect on Saturday night.

For Seniors Only

Vast changes have taken place in the world since October 1935; vast too have been the changes in the body of freshmen who entered the University of Toronto at that time, with an average distribution of mental ability and potential talent. Some have fallen by the wayside, while others have risen to fame and success. Some will be glad to get out and try their luck in the world beyond; others leave reluctantly, uncertain as to what the future holds, and half afraid to leave this little world of shelter and inspiration. But already it seems to be slipping into the past, and we find ourselves telling freshmen that these are the happiest days of their lives.

Pleasant as it is to look back and sentimentalize, it is the future which must claim our attention, and there the prospect is not inviting. Nobody can look at the lot of the graduates of recent years without feelings of concern. Some have done marvellously well; but for each one of them there are many who have been forced to take routine jobs as an alternative to none at all. Fear of getting into a rut and failing to realize their ambitions lurks in the minds of most of those who are nearing graduation.

Parents and friends will tell us that we must start at the bottom and work up, like all the great men of history, and that we must not be afraid of hard work at first. But that depends on the nature of the hard work: there is a difference between determination and resignation. After four years at university many find it a dispiriting anti-climax to step into a routine commercial or industrial job. It is equally disheartening as a last resort to go to business college, or unless you are cut out for pedagogy, to College of Education. It is completely demoralizing to stay at home and wait for "something hourly to turn up".

But we cannot by wishful thinking alter the economic situation. If the business world does not enthrone us, we must restate the problem and ask what we can do without it. Those who are inclined to "follow knowledge like a sinking star" should by all means go on with their academic work. Apply for all the awards and scholarships, possible or impossible, that are offered. Beg, borrow, or steal the necessary funds rather than abandon the pursuit of knowledge for the sake of $12.50 a week in an insurance office.

Those who prefer to establish themselves immediately must endeavour to retain what they have acquired. Dean Stanley claims that if graduates do not occupy their leisure time differently from non-university people, their education has been a waste of time and money. The set of values gained from exposure to the product of twenty-five centuries of culture and inspiration is worth retaining. Into the restless panorama of twentieth century existence we must carry our lesson in controlled thinking. In a world which seems to have forgotten the meaning of moderation it is vital that somebody keep alive the standards and ideals produced by the great periods of human thought. This is our task; prior to finding gainful employment and acquiring the usual civic virtues is our duty to remember the words of wisdom we have heard and read, and try in some manner to influence the spirit of the age in which we live.

Let Them Swing

It is difficult to account for the fiery condemnation levelled against swing music and modern dance forms which appeared recently in the editorial columns of the University of Notre Dame publication.

The bulletin draws a sharp distinction between the modern craze of "jitterbugs" on one hand, and "legitimate dancing and other sane forms of entertainment" on the other. "A degenerate and demoralized musical system is given a disgusting christening as 'swing,'" the article related, quoting the opinion of an Iowa archbishop, and then is "turned loose to gnaw away the moral fibre of our young people."

Strong words these! So swing music is gnawing away the moral fibre of our young people. This is rather unexpected in the face of recent developments which would put swing on a par with other modern arts. "Jazz music," says a noted proponent, "is one of the first of art forms other than literature really to get back to the common life of mankind and to a fundamental emotional expression." Swing is a new art form with a new technique and requires different methods of evaluation.

"But," continued the archbishop, "we permit 'jam sessions,' 'jitterbug' and cannibalistic rhythms to occupy a place in our social scheme of things, wooing our youth along the primrose path to hell." And the Notre Dame weekly publication declares such gyrations "ought to be confined to the gymnasium, where muscular and physical exhaustion are in order. They are definitely out of place in the ballroom, where aesthetic and graceful movements of body follow the noble rhythms of music born of refined tastes, rather than the tom-tom fever of the jungles."

Admittedly, many people consider jitterbug dances out of place in a ballroom. But neither this nor lack of physical stamina for such dances should prompt condemnation of this harmless pastime by those who are not interested. There is nothing inherently wrong with it. Superficially, the only difference between it and so-called "legitimate dancing" is in the amount of physical energy required. Those who want to let off steam in this way should be permitted to do so.

One With Us

It is a compliment to us that from the far corners of the earth, students come to the University of Toronto. Few Torontonians realize the number of graduates and undergraduates of other races that are enrolled here.

Each year an international night is given at which the visitors from foreign shores are made to feel at home. They often meet in the home of a Canadian citizen so they may see from within the mode of Canadian living. But wherever they meet, the spirit is one of friendship. There is no creed or race distinction, no condescension or curiosity.

It is not only on this one night that such friendship should be shown our foreign visitors. In a thousand different ways, we can help make them feel at one of us. It should not be hard to apply the golden rule. Assistance in language, directions and advice, which could be given without causing the donor any trouble, might make all the difference in the world to a puzzled stranger.

Would it not be better for our visitors to carry back word of a friendly, hospitable University rather than one of cold, ungracious students?

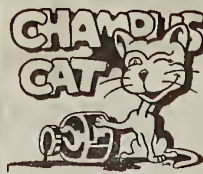

ART MUSIC

"Pawns"

The Stanislavski method of direction, which is concerned with making an actor live his part, requires time, and more time than the director of Pawns had at his disposal, it would seem. Hard work is required rather than "systems" when an actor is faced with the job of realistically impersonating someone of a different temperament, age, and outlook on life, and the youthful cast of Pawns had heavy demands made of them when undertaking the roles of simple Russian peasants.

There is no doubt that Sholome Gelber sincerely attempted to get his players into the mood of their respective roles, but against the combined psychological effects of individual interpretation, preoccupation with lines, exigency of an actual audience, and a general spirit of conventional caution, much of his

Among the relics which are to be found in the Gold Room are prehistoric drawings depicting various phases of primitive life. Another relic of prehistoric times which is to be found in the Tuck Shop's Gold Room is a man with a hat slouched over his eyes munching a sandwich. Not the hat, the man. He watches as the students toss paper bags into the basket. Anyone who can toss three in a row is signed up for the Senior Basketball team. The man's name is Stevens.

The Green Room has a relic of the art of simianthropus pekingensis. The room also has a little window or casement through which all the co-eds who pass by are pekingensis. The art is executed by Carl Schaeffer and the students are executed by the guillotine ... at the crack of dawn.

WIN IN LACROSSE PLACES VICTORIA

Winning Goal Scored in Last Four Minutes of Play; Game Disqualifies Schoolmen for Semi-Finals

In what undoubtedly was the best game of the season Vic nosed out Sr. School by a 6-5 margin yesterday afternoon before a good crowd in the lower gym.

S.P.S. took the lead at the start of the game, on goals scored by Ballagh and Murray. Casserly's goal, which put Vic back in the game, was matched by another by "Stu" Murray. Ballagh scored to start the second period, but goals by Casserly and Holman made the score School 4, Vic 3 at half-time.

Victoria now enters the semi-final that begins tomorrow along with O.C.E., Dents and Pharmacy, and on their showing to date are favoured to win. Vic: Hunnisett, Casserly (4), Aymer (1), McIntyre, Holman (1), Kimber, Tea, Farmer, Lundell. S.P.S.: Woods, Rule, Ballagh (2), Murray (3), Kirby, Atkinson, Brown, Robinson, Douglas.

No, he's not in training for the Russian Ballet nor has his reason left its moorings. He's simply registering joy over his first telephone call home. "Make it a regular weekly habit, as I do," says his more experienced room mate, "the cost is a mere hagatelle."

Expensive? Not at all; Night Rates begin at 7 every evening now, and are in effect ALL DAY SUNDAY.

Meds Take First Game but U.C.
Rallies in Last Two and will Meet Forestry Next as Part of Round-Robin Series

Senior U.C. volleyball team clinched the group title over Senior Meds last night in a match that was fraught with thrills and featured by the sensational displays of both teams. The Medicos won the bitterly contested opener 16-14, but University College came back strong to take the next two matches by scores of 15-6 and 15-12.

All three games were demonstrations of volleyball at its finest, as U.C., with Vern Charlesworth spiking in cannon-ball style, clocked out their three-game margin, despite the excellent play of Jim Emmett, Murray (Spot) Cash, and Sonny Wise for Meds. The first game was see-saw all the way, with Wise's clever "gets" saving the day for Meds on several occasions. The Artsmen had game point at 14-13 but Wise's spiced tie the score. U.C. then went out of bounds and Jim Emmett crashed down with a beautiful spike to win the contest 16-14.

The second game was a different story altogether. Paced by Munroe Murray and Ed Peart, U.C. gained a 3-0 lead. Meds put on a brief rally to knot the count, but the ultimate winners started clicking in earnest and accumulated ten straight points. After another Med uprising Peart slammed the ball into the Meds' court for game point at 15-6.

Again the Doctors played inspired ball to bring the score back to 12-11. The tide of battle shifted once more, however, and U.C. brought the score to 14-11, when Murray's spike at game point hit the top of the net. Emmett sent over a beautiful spike to make the score 14-12, but Murray clinched matters with a well-placed slam. The final score was 15-12.

By virtue of their victory U.C. meet Forestry as part of the round-robin series for the Victoria Staff Cup. Vern Charlesworth, 'Munroe Murray and Ed Peart spiked in superb fashion for the winners, with Walt McGregor and Bernie Savlov setting them up in fine style. Sonny Wise retrieved well and played a good game at the net for Meds, while Jim Emmett, hard-working captain, earned star rating with an impressive performance.

U.C. Srs.: Savlov, Murray, Silverberg, Charlesworth, Soren, Peart, Rose, McGregor.

Meds Srs.: Kyle, Gates, Cash, Wise, Floren, Shulman, Green, Emmett.

SKI TRAILS

The Ski Club will hold its second open meeting today at 5 o'clock in Room 43 of the Physics Building. As during the previous meeting, instructive motion pictures will be shown and future plans discussed.

Reports coming in reveal that eight new trails have been cut at the club headquarters just north of Aurora and plans are being rushed forward to accommodate any students who may wish to use the clubhouse during the Christmas holidays. Students are free to go up to Aurora at any time and can obtain the key to the cabin from Mr. Newton, on whose property the clubhouse is situated. The only identification required is a University of Toronto registration card.

The headquarters and trails are situated near Sir William Mulock's estate and maps of location will be distributed after the New Year. For those desirous of spending the night in the country there is a youth hostel run by a Mr. and Mrs. Edwards, where lodging and board can be obtained at a small cost.

For those who prefer competition there will be an interclub meet later on for men and women students. Rumour also has it that there is some probability of a Canadian Intercollegiate Skiing Association being formed if a reasonable number of eastern colleges can be encouraged to show some interest in the project.

DANCE TO FOLLOW WATER POLO FINAL

Following the water polo game on Saturday between Varsity and the winner of the Queen's-McGill tussle, a dance will be held in the gymnasium in Hart House.

Further entertainment will be supplied by the Mermaid Swimming Club members, who will give an exhibition of ornamental swimming and diving before the game and at half time.

This program will be an innovation for the water polo club, whose members hope to continue the practice if the attempt proves successful. The water polo game, which will decide the championship of the Eastern Intercollegiate Group, will begin at 8:15.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bruce Smith

TIME MARCHES ON . . .

Time out from this gruelling game of Xmas shopping to concoct some sports slants. And by the way, we hear that Frankie Sirdevan, Jack Holden, Ted Jarvis and company are considering a money-making scheme of renting their services in "holding that time" or running interference for any fair member of the weaker sex who wishes to go shopping among the hordes down at Eaton's and Simpson's these days. However, the fellows stipulate that they gotta drop in and see Santa Claus in order to lend weight to Warren Stevens' pleas. It seems Steve goes down every day to put in his request for one "no-injuries" season. Just one, says Steve.

But enough of that. Let's turn back the pages of Time, pardon me, of The Varsity and discover what was happening which was President Cody's birthday. At that time Wycliffe had a long lead in the race for the T. A. Reed trophy, emblematic of intramural honours in athletics. But S.P.S. came along like a house afire in the spring term and captured the coveted cup from Trinity, who had won it in '36-'37, the first year of competition. And looking at the standings which was still President Cody's birthday, we see that the brawny boys from the little red Schoolhouse are once again at the head of the heap. The point as illustrated above is that much water will pass under the bridge between now and May so that it's still anybody's affair. How's about some spirit, you other colleges and faculties, and make it interesting for the engineers? Meds, Knox, Vic, Wycliffe, Dents, all have good chances if they would only capitalize on them. And that brings us to which promises to be a red-letter one in interclub sport. For one thing, the Vic and Wycliffe soccer elevens will finally wind up the fall season with a game at 3:20 on the front campus, the purpose of which is to decide the holder of second place in the round-robin championship series. Meds, as you remember, won ye Arts Faculty Cup last week for the first time in history, and the other two teams being tied, decided to play off their scheduled match to determine who gets the honour of playing second, not third, fiddle to the doctors. And though there may not seem to be much at stake, the boys will be fighting hard to win (or as the sports writers say, "to emerge victorious"). Even if you aren't particularly interested in the result of this game, you will at least see some future intercollegiate soccer stars in action, for a number of these players will probably move up to intermediate rating next fall to fill the many vacancies there will be after graduation, they hope. . . . Also today brings the first game of the post-season lacrosse schedule which will take place at 5:00 in the big gym with the powerful power winners, Dents and Pharmacy, vying for the right to enter the finals. So help me if it isn't a sudden-death encounter. On the year's play, the dashing dentists and the fleet-footed pharmacists appear well-matched. This combination of Scager, Fry and Snodgrass for Pharmacy is a doubly dangerous one and might lead the pill-makers to victory if only a close check is kept on Smoockum and de Lagran, the two Dents stalwarts. But we wouldn't bet a plug nickel either way. . . . Likewise in volleyball, the molar-men and druggists are again coupled and their respective representatives in the realm of Over the Net will play their crucial tilt at 4:00 in the upper gym. Just a note or two now about because on that day McGill or Queen's plays Varsity for the intercollegiate water polo title. The blue naturals have had a full set of exhibition games during the past month and should be in winning form Friday. Full details of the game will appear in tomorrow's Varsity. And we still can't keep our thoughts off when the U. of T. hockey team will probably be cavorting around Hollywood or some such place. Ah me!

SPORT SPLASHES

By Sam Lipin

Redeeming their 6-0 defeat in Hamilton last week, the Varsity water poloists showed a little better form last night when they defeated a strong High Park team 5-1 in Hart House pool. The game displayed improved Varsity play, but there is still room for more improvement which the Blue team will need if they expect to win the intercollegiate water polo crown now held by McGill. With one more game to play, the players will get a final polishing for Saturday's intercollegiate final.

Last night High Park opened the scoring when Les Curry fooled the Varsity net minder with a tricky shot. Reed Menzies came right back with a Varsity counter, evening the score. The second quarter saw a fast-breaking Blue defense getting away from the High Park splashes and Menzies and McGill notched up two more points. Bob Pirie missed a shot on goal just as half time was sounded.

The third quarter opened with Varsity clicking a little better but a battling High Park defense kept the ball out of the net. Finally, however, Maboe broke the deadlock and pushed the ball past the custodian of the enemy nets. In the last quarter Maboe added the final point to Varsity's total although Green burned in a hot shot just a split second too late.

Jackson and Laari were outstanding for the home team, with Laari breaking away repeatedly to form the nucleus of Blue attacks. Pirie, Curry and Stevens were the backbone of the High Park team.

A BIG NIGHT

Not only will Saturday see Varsity fighting to regain the intercollegiate water polo title now held by McGill, but spectators, who turn out to view the game and the pretty mermaids who will display their art, will be royally entertained by several famous bands whose music has been specially secured for the occasion. McGill have now held the title for five successive years and the U. of T. squad feel convinced that it is the time the honour returned to Toronto.

McGill play Queen's on Friday to decide which team will play here on Saturday. Although McGill are expected to win, an upset by Queen's is quite within the realms of possibility. In fact, Queen's showing to date in practice games has been rather surprising.

O.C.E. gym had an abandoned air about it last night. Fie Varsity coeds have deserted it until after Christmas, and from all appearances are biding their time at the north west corner of Bay and Bloor where Begin the B'goin is now served a la carte.

The lone survivors in interclub competition, Vic Jrs. and U.C. Jrs., play their first of 2 games in Hart House tonight in what should be an epic struggle. With points to count, Vic Jrs. should be able to vouch for the efficacy of an early get-in-there-and-fight spirit. Such far-seeing tactics cinched the semi-finals for them against St. Mike's.

The Basketball Club, anxious to make the evening worth while from the spectators' viewpoint, has arranged a preliminary exhibition game between U.C. Frosh and St. Hilda's Frosh. Both these teams have excellent freshe material and only lacked experience in their quest for interclub honours. The first game is at seven o'clock, and since a word to the wise is seldom necessary we won't bore you with details of why you should be there.

St. Hilda's seem to be showing most enthusiasm for the February ski trip to the Penguin Club in Quebec. We expect that some prospects from U.C. will turn up at the Varsity ski meet after Xmas. However, "Punch" Gallie and Joan Griffith of last year's team are sure bets from St. Hilda's, which leaves two vacancies on the team. For further details about the Varsity meet don't miss the Ski Club meeting in S.P.S. today.

OVER THE NET

With Forestry already established as group champions, U.C. Thirds finished off their schedule last night in the gym, defeating S.P.S. Thirds in a long-drawn-out series 15-12, 14-16 and 18-16. The win shoves the Artsmen into a second place tie with Pharmacy B, each team having won three games and lost three.

Neither team showed any ability in the contests, but lived up matters with their enthusiastic spirit. U.C. won the first in short order, but School came right back to commit fewer misuses than their opponents, and won the second game 16-14.

School grabbed the lead in the final contest and looked to be well away with match point in their grasp and the score 14-4. However, the serve went into the net and the Artsmen started a rally that eventually ended in an 18-16 victory.

INTEREST REVIVED IN ALL-STAR TEAMS

Interclub all-star teams, which proved a failure last year because players voted exclusively for members of their own team, are in the news again. The revival of interest in such sports as volleyball and lacrosse, plus several letters which The Varsity has received requesting the formation of all-star teams, is responsible for this situation.

Therefore in order to get a line on the ability of the players engaged in current interclub sport, a poll of the referees, players and spectators interested in house-league athletics was conducted yesterday.

Despite the fact that set-up men are eclipsed by their spikers, whose task is more spectacular, it was agreed that Walt McGregor, of Senior U.C., was far and away the best "set-up" in the entire circuit. From the above survey it would appear that Sr. U.C. should have no trouble coping the Victoria Staff Cup. However, plenty of opposition is anticipated from either Dents or Wycliffe, both of whom are sure-fire contenders.

In the lacrosse loop Dalt White of O.C.E. received unanimous recognition as the best manipulator of the gutted stick. Despite his unspectacular style of play, White, with three years' experience in the game behind him, stands out head and shoulders over the rest of the contestants in the circuit. Charles Fowler, II U.C., one of the spectators interviewed, concurred in this judgment and placed Smoockum and Sprede, a couple of best forwards from Faculty of Dentistry, next in line. Aymer of Victoria and Beggs of S.P.S.

Holiday of Travel Chosen by Students

New York and Bermuda were the two places considered for spending the Christmas vacation by Varsity students questioned yesterday. Most of them, however, admitted that they would gladly compromise with an Arcadia of the "eat, sleep and be merry" type.

Vic Longo, III Arts, wanted a pot-pourri of: a goodly portion of sleep, a heaping dose of fun and a dust of study. One III Arts student is going to do a term's work. One wonders which term?

A phone call from California was the most exciting thing that happened to a girl from Pembroke at Christmas time. The Seignior Club provided the

HERE WE ARE AGAIN . . . Back with more flashes from various camps here and across the border. . . Rumour has it that we were lost in the Stacks, but this is erroneous. . . we were never lost but we were awfully bewildered. . . However, let's go to work. . . It seems that an Atlanta paper pulled this stunt. . . When a hot story is sent back to the lino-type operator, it usually goes back with the slug "more to come" at the end designating that more of the story will be sent back. . . The other week, this paper printed the story announcing that a Spanish princess had given birth to twins. . . The make-up man forgot to take out the slug at the end of the story and the last line read "more to come". . . Which reminds us of the ancient one concerning the telegram that arrived at the hotel of the anxious parent who was out of town, which stated. . . "Congratulations, it's a girl. . . And the bottom of the telegram said "For a boy. . . Call Western Union".

IT CALLED AT HARVARD. . . A student who was on his way to class saw an old woman trying to make her way across the icy road. . . In the best Harvard tradition, he ran over to her and offered his arm. . . Half way across the street, our noble hero tripped and fell, spraining his ankle in the process. . . The old lady, still standing and unhurt, helped him to his feet and guided him safely to the opposite sidewalk. . . CHIVALRY DOES NOT PAY!

THIS IS A GOOD THING. . . This Saturday after the Varsity water polo game, festivities will be the order of the day. . . There will be dancing in the large gymnasium until the Hart House chimes toll the midnight hour. . . These dance after sporting events were quite popular two years ago, but for some reason or other died last year. . . However, it all depends on the turnout whether we get free dancing after our basketball games after Christmas, so we hope that the swing-cats will turn out en masse (French).

FLASH . . . STRAPLESS COEDS TO BE SUSPENDED. . . This startling news bulletin reaches us direct from the U. of Washington. . . It seems that the Varsity Ball Committee at Washington banned strapless evening gowns as immodest. . . "If any girl appears at the ball in one of those terrific creations," warned the chairman, "the committee at the door will see that she does a pair of suspenders". . . AND THEY MEAN IT TOO.

influence was nullified. The play opened on a shaky note and rather hurriedly, with Dan Lang as Stepan coming in on his cues too obviously. Frank Shuster was hardly convincing as the father of two grown sons, mainly because of inadequate make-up and a voice which belied his fifty years. It was a case of clear enunciation versus realism and Shuster had declared for the former.

With the advent of Stuart Parker, the soldier, the play began to warm up and improve visibly. Gell's grouping of the figures was clever throughout the play and he made good use of the central figure as a point of focus. Parker was quite good, although a trifle light, again being a question of voice. A difficulty that arose from the spot lighting was the occasional phenomenon of an actor talking in comparative darkness. When facial expression is so important, this is inexcusable.

Tom Daly as Lane Peter was generally good, but burlesqued his part towards the end of the play when he broke into something that looked like a "trucking" routine. Also, no matter how expert a person may be with a cap gun, no matter how good his aim, no matter how dire his intentions, the feeble "spat" which follows the pulling of the trigger can never be anything but an anticlimax.

As an anti-war play, Pavus was a good demonstration of the remoteness of the actual participants from the motives of warfare, though it was not an over subtle piece of argument.

In view of the fact that the play was consistent in atmosphere, the foregoing criticisms must not be taken as a reflection on the general tone of the piece. It was, all things considered, a success, and the majority of those in attendance left with a feeling of satisfaction. Pavus was a more finished bit of work than the average campus dramatic undertaking of like dimensions.

Toronto Symphony

It is unfortunate that the Toronto Symphony Orchestra has such weak French horns. Last night, Sir Ernest MacMillan presented a positively magnificent Wagner program, but the horns fell down badly in two important places. However, the rest of the orchestra responded splendidly and Sir Ernest was at his best.

Beal Hobbs, the guest artist, is a rather conventional Wagnerian soprano vocally, mentally and physically. There was something stolid about her singing that made it competent rather than brilliant, and she displayed an inconsistency which brought it one notch below that. Her rendition of Die Thure Halle was her greatest achievement of the evening. But Marjorie "Lady" Liners, specially built for tropical travel, and famed as the most gracious hostesses of the Caribbean, offer the bi-piest of all festive Season holidays . . . All outside rooms—all first-class . . . excellent cuisine . . . at reduced rates.

PARKER DESCRIBES THE WEST INDIES

"The West Indies should always be treasured by those who call themselves British," said H. T. Parker, who was the lecturer at a travelogue on the Jewels of the Caribbean at Eaton's Auditorium last evening.

Coloured pictures of the various islands were shown by Mr. Parker. He remarked that the climate and scenery were the greatest assets of the West Indies.

The manufacture of sugar, which is the main industry of the Indies, was a feature of the motion pictures. Bananas which are shipped by hundreds to Canada, were shown being loaded on the ships by natives.

The greatest attraction of these islands for the general public is the fact that the trip to the British West Indies is within the means of anyone with a vacation, said Mr. Parker.

Lawrence, who by some quirk of fate actually appeared with Mr. Stewart's Promenade Symphony, made a much more convincing, more colourful, more gripping Bronze-Like in the Immolation from the Goettersdaemmerung.

A special compliment should be paid to the strings who became a virtuoso ensemble in the Forest Murmurs from Siegfried. Their performance in the Holy Grail Prelude to Lohengrin also proved conclusively that we have here the finest string section in the country, one of the finest on the continent.

Sir Ernest MacMillan's reading of Siegfried's Rhine Journey was not as satisfying as Dr. Heinz Unger's, but the additional week's rehearsing gave the orchestra a little more confidence. Mistakes were fewer, but we can think of one that has been made every time Toronto has heard an excerpt from The Ring. Siegfried's Funeral March was more enjoyable because it was less difficult and subsequently more nearly flawless. All in all, Sir Ernest had the orchestra singing last night.

The choice of program left something to be desired, however. It is a common fault with all Wagner programs that the less absolutely divine and Barmesque side of the master's music is ignored. The Rienzi overture has been relegated to the military band and the Sunday evening radio concert for tyros and philistines. Die Meistersinger is too often ignored. Last night, the only selection which did not tax one's mentality to the utmost was the Forest Murmurs.

Despite the minor flaws we have attempted to find, and the minor criticisms we have levelled, we offer our personal congratulations to the conductor and the orchestra.

Winnipeg Wheat Parley Involves Major Issue

Wheat Problem Ranks with Railways and National Defence as Major Issue for Parliament

HELD NEXT WEEK

By Ross Munro
CUP Correspondent

Ottawa, Dec. 6—The international wheat conference in Winnipeg next week is considered here to be a meeting of paramount importance.

The wheat problem ranks with the railways and national defence as major issues for the next parliament, starting Jan. 12 and any decisions reached at the Winnipeg parley will carry considerable weight in any debate in the alternative is a radical revision of Canada's wheat policy.

The Canadian farmer and urban dweller are both vitally concerned with the growing of wheat. Everyone in the Dominion is in the wheat business whether they like it or not. While the prairie farmer harvested a good crop this year and is being paid 80 cents a bushel for No. 1 northern at Fort William, the government is losing more than 20 cents a bushel because of this guaranteed price and the fact that world wheat prices are flirting with the 50-cents-a-bushel mark.

It is generally conceded that the fixed price saved the west this year, but in the saving process the rest of

'UNDERGRADUATE' APPEARS TODAY

Coincident with a riotous U.C.W.U.A. joint meeting, and the announcement of the profits of the University College Follies, the fall issue of The Undergraduate made a preview appearance last night. Examination showed that the magazine actually lived up to the promise of its editor-in-chief Harry Tattersall that it would be "good and better than ever."

With three short stories, seven articles, a dozen poems, sketches and messages, it is probably the largest and most interesting Undergraduate published in a long time.

"In this issue," say the editors, "we have tried to present a magazine of interest, in a style which is palatable. Accordingly, we present articles, stories and poetry to appeal to all interests, and we have sought to improve the appearance of the magazine by the inclusion of a greater number of illustrations. In short, we have tried to please."

The short stories, by Mavor Moore, F. D. Blackley, and "D.C.C.", are interesting although unsensational, competent although limited. Articles range from a plea to Santa Claus for a department of drama in the university by Sholome Gelber to an examination of the case for isolation by "I.D.S."

More than a dozen poems, showing that the creative forte of the undergraduate really lies in metre and rhyme and several pages of the magazine. A veteran contributor, Miriam Dworin, has four of her works published. Winifred Hillier shows thought and ability in several which she contributed.

Appealing to varied tastes according to the editorial dictum, the publication contains several cartoons by G. S. Patchet, who takes a fall out of A. Hitler, and "J.A.T." who illustrates his whimsy on Scholasticism and the Good Life with half a dozen illuminating sketches.

After Seven Swim Lessons Boys Disport Like Dolphinets

Mr. W. W. Winterburn, swimming instructor at Hart House, told The Varsity yesterday that the "learn-to-swim" class is designed, first of all, to meet the needs of those students who cannot swim. "It used to be," he said, "that the swimming instructors were men of brawn who jumped into the pool, showed the students what to do, and then told them to do it. However, we have a different way now, but it is difficult in a tank which is six feet deep at the shallow end."

There are 114 men in the class. Of this number very few had ever swum in their lives, but now, after seven lessons, some of them are disporting themselves like veritable dolphinets, he said.

For the purpose of teaching swimming, the whole stroke is broken up into its component parts, each of which is taught separately, and later co-ordinated with the others.

"The first thing to do," Mr. Winterburn explained, "is to have the whole class get the feel of the water." To do this he has them step down onto the ledge which runs along both edges of the pool about two feet above water. Next he tells them to put their faces under, open their eyes, and look around.

The students learn the leg kick while hanging onto the edge of the pool, and then the theory of breathing with relation to swimming; next the two are combined. Out of the pool along the arm stroke is practiced, and then later in the water. There again breathing is co-ordinated with the stroke.

By Christmas fifty per cent of the class who have the ambition and confidence will be able to swim without any difficulty.

APPLICATIONS DUE FOR KYLIE AWARD

The secretary of the Edward Kylie Trust has announced that applications will be accepted by him on or before January 31st, 1939, by candidates for the Edward Kylie Trust award for the year 1939-40. These applications should be made in writing and should give particulars of the qualifications and record of the applicant with a view to the following requirements.

The Edward Kylie Trust award is made to a male student who is a British subject, either a graduate or an undergraduate of Arts, preferably in the course of Modern History, at the University of Toronto, to enable him to pursue his studies in Great Britain. The Trustees make their award to that candidate who appears from his record at the University, to be most likely to occupy a position of leadership and influence in the community.

Eight Hundred Dollars are available for the year 1939-40 and the Trustees indicated that they may renew the award for a second year if they are satisfied with the first year's record.

The Trustees, upon receiving applications, will arrange for the examination of the candidates and if the Trustees are not satisfied as to the suitability of any of the candidates they will have the right to withhold the award.

MUNICH PACT SEEN AS DISORGANIZING NERVOUS SYSTEM

Dr. R. N. Franks Sees Lack of Organization as Cause of Nervous Breakdowns in Young People

"KEEP SUCCESS AS GOAL"

Lack of organization and faith are two causes of nervous breakdowns among young people today, said Dr. R. N. Franks of the Toronto Psychiatric Hospital.

Immediately after the Great War, he continued, there was a great increase in the number of breakdowns. When the Treaty of Versailles brought a degree of sanity and quiet to the world, the number decreased. But now since the Munich Pact has destroyed the Versailles Treaty the world is again in a state of disorganization. This upheaval leaves us uncertain what to think about our civilization. We lose faith.

When anything disturbs us we are thrown off balance. It is in the months of June and December that the hospital has its greatest number of patients. The changing from winter home to summer home, the excitement of Christmas, bring about the collapse of a nervous system already taxed, said Dr. Franks.

In his opinion the first requisite for remaining normal is to keep success as your goal. But that success must not be attained too quickly. To be able to use success normally it should be won over a long period of time.

MORE GAS YIELDED BY NEW PROCESS

The physics department of the University of Toronto announced that it had perfected a process for increasing the yield of gasoline from crude oil. It claims that this new development will bring immense benefits to the gasoline industry and those branches of manufacturing and transportation which depend on it.

Dr. C. Barnes, assistant professor of physics in the department which is headed by Dr. E. F. Burton, has been largely responsible for the new development in the production of gasoline, it was said.

The discovery, it was explained, had been applied particularly to processes used in increasing the yield of gasoline from those residues in crude oil which are themselves too heavy to be used directly as motor fuels.

At the present time, it was said, the direct output of gasoline from crude oil would not suffice to operate even one-half of the automobiles and aeroplanes now in existence. In view of the increased yield that should result from the invention, the discovery should be of enormous benefit industrially, it was stated.

VICTORIA S.C.M. HOLD CHRISTMAS TEA SUNDAY

The annual Christmas tea sponsored by Victoria S.C.M. will be held in the Ames Common Room, Gander House, Emmanuel College, on Sunday, Dec. 11 from 4.30 p.m. to 6.30 p.m.

One of the main features of the program will be the reading of Negro plays by Prof. Robins, who, says the committee in charge, is renowned for his prowess in this field. In addition, songs will be rendered by two Negro guest artists, Miss Grace Price and Miss Mary Berry.

All members of "The Varsity" staff are invited to attend an afternoon tea at the Women's Union today at 4 p.m. This is a very important meeting and it is hoped that no one will be absent. It will be possible to leave in time for 5 o'clock meetings or engagements.

SWING CLUB MEET FEATURES NIOSI

Bert Niosi's swing quartet and Louise King will be the guests of the Swing Club at its Christmas meeting today. The executive felt that they are fortunate in being able to bring Niosi down, since they feel that he is one of Canada's leading exponents of swing. They feel the same way about Louise King, who is featured song stylist on Percy Faith's CBC presentation, Music by Faith.

Niosi has just finished an engagement at the National Motor Show and has taken his band to the Palais Royale on the waterfront. The leader is a very versatile musician who plays all of five instruments and specializes on the clarinet and saxophone. Besides Bert, who adds the trombone to his quartet work, the swing foursome includes his brother, Johnny Niosi, playing the drums, Harold Gray, who beats it out on the piano, and Keith Heffer, who is considered one of the best tenor saxophonists in the business.

The executive of the University of Toronto Swing Club issued an urgent appeal yesterday to all swing fans. If the club is to continue, they say, today's meeting must see as big a turnout as possible. In addition they announced that the "very nominal charge" which will be made at the door goes to defray expenses.

Alumni Federation Announces New Scholarship Award To Students

The Scholarship Committee of the Alumni Federation of the University announced yesterday that it will award a scholarship of seventy-five dollars to a student studying Occupational Therapy. The award will be made to a first year student who intends to complete the course.

The bases of the award consist of academic standing, merit in dramatic, athletic and other extra-academic activities, and general qualifications, including any relationship to active service in the war.

Hart House Glee Club Gives Carol Program Next Thursday

The Hart House Glee Club made its first public appearance under Mr. Allan B. Mr. Sly was re-appointed conductor in 1934, but in May of the same year he accepted a position in the United States and his place was filled by Dr. Charles Peaker who since that time has conducted the club with outstanding success.

February 1934 was the turning point in the history of the Glee Club. Following their first Sunday Evening Concert the Board of Stewards were so

LOU SKUCE ENTERTAINS

A profit of approximately $235 was realized on the University College Follies of 1938, it was announced last night at a joint meeting of the University College Literary Society and the Women's Undergraduate Association. According to Phil Benson, Social Director of the society, gross receipts from sale of tickets totalled over $1430. Net profit, when expenses were accounted for, came to $235.85, nearly the same as that of last year's Follies.

The statement of the financial benefits of the Follies, with the reports of the Secretary-Treasurer, the Sports Director, and the presidents of the various years, preceded a lively entertainment featured by a famed cartoonist, a skit lampooning the W.U.A., the formal introduction of the new U.C. cheer, refreshments and dancing.

Parliamentary Club Holds Final Session

The Prime Minister, the Hon. H. H. Botkin, declared, "It is agreed on the part of all competent observers, that the tri-partite trade agreements recently signed by British, American and Canadian representatives, will have a considerable beneficial effect on every commercial and industrial enterprise in Canada. Again, the natural fusion between Great Britain and the United States, which position Canada has enjoyed for so long, has been reinforced, and will make for closer co-operation between the two largest English-speaking nations, which co-operation cannot possibly affect Canada adversely."

The Hon. William Wood, leader of the opposition, affirmed however, "That while it is true that Canada's co-operation was necessary for the successful completion of these treaties, nevertheless such co-operation was given at the price of significant sacrifices. Such sacrifices as the loss of the small but important wheat preference in Great Britain were too much, to my mind, for this nation to give in return for privileges which, after all, are extended to every nation enjoying trade treaties with the U.S."

For Women Smokers

Joseph Byrne, managing director of the National Beauty Shop Owner's Association, has said:

"The features of women who smoke grow sharper as the nicotine habit fastens on them, the skin becomes taut and sallow; the lips lose their rosy colour, the corners of the mouth show wrinkles, the lower lip shows a tendency to project beyond the upper lip, the eyes acquire a stare, and the lids rise and fall more slowly."

Dr. Daniel H. Kress, in a book entitled "The Cigarette as a Physician Sees It", Ch. 3, remarks:

"The most painstaking scientific research on the part of the medical profession both here in the United States and abroad, has proved the fact that the infant of a smoking mother is always handicapped."

Dr. Charles L. Barber of Lansing, Michigan, in a paper read before a convention of the American Association for Medico-research, said:

"A baby born of a cigarette-smoking mother is sick. It is poisoned and may die within two weeks of birth. The post-mortem shows degeneration of the liver, heart, and other organs. Sixty per cent of all babies born of mothers who are habitual smokers die before they are two years old." It is an accepted fact among medical authorities that the nervous system of a woman is more highly organized than that of a man, and is more easily damaged by the use of any narcotic. Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, former surgeon-general of the United States Public Health Service has declared:

"The cigarette habit indulged in to excess by women tends to cause nervousness and insomnia . . . it may ruin her complexion causing her to become gradually ashen."

Dr. Kress continues: "Cigarette smoking among women is in part responsible for the rapidly declining birth rate noticed the past few years in all civilized lands." Dr. Holstatter, the noted Vienna physician, points out that women who work in tobacco factories seldom have children and when they do have them, the children are unhealthy and usually die early in life. "In Vienna women smoke because of a superstition that when they do so they are not likely to have children." He is convinced that this belief has a scientific basis.

No comment is necessary. Women form the bulwark between the vices of mankind and the future of the race. Woman has always been one of the great forces for good in the world. In her is to be found the hope of the future. There is a halo around her head. But it is not a halo of smoke.

Student Co-operatives

The fact that the term was opened in October with enough applications to fill the Co-operative Residence twice over, is an indication of the increasing popularity of the enterprise, and a testimony to the advantages it has to offer to the student who cannot afford the ordinary cost of residence. For example, the approximate cost of a double room for the university year is $190, including credit given for meals not taken in the residence. Last year a dividend of 15 per cent was declared, which gave a substantial return to each student. Victoria College is instrumental in this success in that the building is used at their convenience, at the cost of its upkeep.

Plans were made to expand the residence this fall, but suitable building arrangements could not be made. Expansion will be sought again next year, with the assurance that there is a need for it. In order that such interest may be furthered a definite educational program is being undertaken. An open meeting is held once a month. Mr. Herb Hannom of the U.F.O. will speak to such a meeting on Monday, Dec. 12 at 5:00 p.m. in Room 19, U.C. All students are invited to this meeting.

The co-operatives have been operating on this campus for three years, and this year two more have been started, one at Queen's and one at Saskatchewan. The Saint Francis Xavier book exchange is another example of a student co-operative which is running in a satisfactory way, and it is believed that in the near future many other campuses will attempt to follow the examples set in these four universities.

A Canadian Student Co-operative Committee has been organized to forward the enterprises in the other universities of the Dominion. Through it many students are learning that Co-ops have something to offer students who wish to lower the cost of their education without foregoing too many of the privileges of a full undergraduate life.

Pan-American Unity

From the Oklahoma Daily

The century-old dream of complete Pan-American unity may become a reality when the 1938 Pan-American conference meets in Lima, Peru. The first definite step taken in this direction by the American nations occurred in 1889 when they met in Washington following nearly five decades of agitation for such a movement.

First started during the administration of President Benjamin Harrison, the hope for such solidarity has been fostered and promoted by every president since that time—regardless of party policies or prejudices.

During the outbreak of the World War the concept of solidarity received the acid test. Today, faced with conflicts in the Orient and the pending crisis in Middle Europe, delegates to the conference realize that at no time in the history of the nation has such a united front been necessary.

The appointment of Alfred Landon to the conference is within itself a gesture of friendliness among the leaders of the political parties of the nation.

With the foreign situation within its own ranks, it may be expected that the conference will accomplish much toward a Pan-American unity which may ultimately lead to a new-world peace.

ARTE MUSIC Drama

Playwright's Studio Group

Well, at least we broke even on the Playwright's studio Group presentation last night—two good plays and two bad ones. The program opened with a non-entitled called "Ah 'Andles it, not 'Ari"—you know the kind of thing—and was followed by Arthur Burrows' powerfully written and directed "The Trap". The cast was without a flaw, and the set merits mention. Much the most interesting offering of the evening.

Dora Smith Conover's little modern cocktail was very amusing, and excellently handled. If we had left after it we should still be feeling pleased; but no, the program promised Leonora MacNielly's "They Come to Tomashee". And we stayed. It was an unindigenous Irish folk drama, dull and unrelieved except by earnest acting. We really thought our local playwright aspirants had got beyond the scene where the priest with raised finger says to the weeping mother "Tut, tut, Rosanne, etc."

INSULIN DISCOVERED BY WIREGARTERS

Famous Medico Solves Diabetes Problem with New Discovery

BANTING SILENT

Toronto, Dec. 8: The whole medical world was astounded today when Doctor Umlauf Wiregarters made the astonishing announcement that he had finally succeeded in finding a fluid which would prove efficacious in treating cases of diabetes. The Herr Doktor also announced that he would name his discovery "insulin" after his second cousin Sam Insull.

It is a little known fact that Umlauf boasts of many degrees including a B.A. (Vienna) Before Anschluss, and also a M.L.M.H. (Mentioned in Microbe Hunters).

We found the doctor's laboratory adjoining the dual suite in the Orillia Mental Hospital. He greeted us effusively and invited us to stay awhile.

"My approach to the subject was very simple," he explained. "After all what is diabetes? . . . just a flash in the pancreas. I treated it as such and after six months of gruelling laboratory work we tried our discovery on some diabetic White Russian rats. The effect was simply overwhelming. Why, we even got a telegram from South Africa telling us that Mafeking was somewhat relieved!"

But the brilliant experimentalist does not intend to stop here and sit back to rest on his laurels. Oh No. Already he and his assistants are hard at work on a new theory, which he says will revolutionize the milk industry. The idea, he explains, is that for the sake of the public health, all milk should first be put to a boiling point before being bottled.

He intends to call this method pasteurization after his favourite actor, Paul Muni. . . .

Colgate Pushed Hard As Varsity Defeated

Varsity Leads 18-16 at Half-Time but Fades before Brilliant Playing to Lose 62-43

ROGIN SCORES 16

Syracuse, N.Y.: Varsity senior basketball squad threw a scare into the Colgate University team by pushing them to the limit before fading in the last minutes to lose 62-43.

The Toronto team led at half time by the score of 18-16, but the Colgate squad, led by Clinton and Collins, drove away in the second half.

Lavarway broke the ice for Toronto in the first half by scoring a long one. The first frame was characterized by close play, with Rogin and Aitchison leading the Toronto team.

Following is the line-up and number of points scored by each player:

Toronto: Cahill (3), Lavarway (10), McGregor (1), Rogin (16), Aitchison (6), Mahoney (5), Singer (2), Mincham, Humenik.

Colgate: Clinton (16), Sawyer (8), Hazard (17), Stevenson (3), Collins (4), Fowuth (4), Goshin (2), Ustusovich (4), Macharg (4), Gilson, Leonard.

In the second half Clinton and Hazard, playing sensational basketball, scored three quick baskets. Lavarway got going and with Rogin kept Toronto in the running.

Cahill and Mahoney scored on nice passes from Mincham. With eight minutes to go and the Colgate team barely holding their 43-37 lead, Aitchison was hurt and had to go out. The fast-tiring Toronto team finally fell before the fresh attack of the Colgate players.

Outstanding for Toronto were Lavarway, Rogin and Aitchison. Clinton was the outstanding Colgate player both in scoring and setting up plays.

DRUGGISTS BEATEN BY DENTISTS 21-12

Molarmen Advance to Final Round after Troughing Pharmacy 21-12 in Free-Scoring Tilt

SEAGER SCORES SIX

Yesterday in the big gym Dentistry lacrosse team won their play-off game with Pharmacy by the score of 21-12. This victory means that the Molarmen meet the winner of Friday's clash between O.C.E. and Victoria in a best of three series for the lacrosse championship.

As the scoring indicates, play was wide open all the way. However, few penalties were handed out, and neither team made much use of their chances when the other side had men in the corner.

After a lone rush by de Lagran of Dents to open the scoring, Bill Jones of Pharmacy retaliated with a foster which completely fooled the Dents' goal-tender. George Smockum, high scorer for the Dentists, then tallied twice, and his team-mate Jack McCartney, also added a brace of goals. A perfect shot by Harry Seager of the Druggists from the side wall brought the first period to a close, making the score Dents 5, Pharmacy 2.

The second period saw heavy scoring, with Dents led by Smockum, gaining the net six times to four goals gained by the Druggists. In this session McKay played an alert game, getting one goal when he caught the pass-out from the Pharmacy net-minder and slammed the ball back in. A minute later he snagged a fast rebound and added another counter. The half-time score was Dents 11, Pharmacy 6.

The third frame featured the beginning of a scoring duel between George Smockum and Harry Seager, for Dents and Pharmacy respectively. Following a

SPORTS STAFF MEETING

Be sure to turn up for the meeting in the Women's Union today at 4 o'clock. You can get away in time for five o'clock assignments.

By Win Flanagan

U.C. Jrs., rated as underdogs throughout the season, came through last night with a surprise victory over Vic Jrs. Rallying after a shaky start, U.C. played inspired basketball, led by diminutive Helen Gurney, who was definitely "on" last night. Bobbie MacDonald's accuracy on her foul shots brought forth many admiring "ahs" from the gallery. Vic could not seem to get going, although Dorothy Clarke and Ruth Danard played their usual heads-up games. Towards the end of the game Vic passed up "umpteen" chances to tie the score through wild shooting. The next game is on Friday at 8 and it will be Vic's last chance to try their luck. If U.C. play the type of game they exhibited last night they will coast through to the championship, but you can expect a do-or-die attitude from Vic which often proves effective. However, U.C.'s 10-point lead is nothing to be sneered at.

The officials of the game were disconcerted to say the least, at the similarity of the red and white outfits of the two teams, and experienced no little difficulty in spotting the players, especially when play was close. So congratulations to Phyl Griffith and Marion Henderson for their fine refereeing under such trying conditions.

With regard to the proposed trip east of the Edmonton Grads, the deal is all off as far as the University of Toronto is concerned. The Athletic Directorate took the matter into considerable consideration and found too many reasons to the contrary. In the first place they are not interested in promoting boys' rules (under which the game was to have been played) for women. It would wreck any attempt at team work and all in all would be unfair to the university team. Well, it was a nice idea while it lasted.

OVER THE NET

Last year's volleyball champions, Faculty of Dentistry, defeated Pharmacy A 15-6, 15-4, yesterday in the upper gym in a game that had no bearing on the group standing. Dents have already been declared champions of their section, and this Friday meet Emmanuel A in their first game of the round-robin series.

SPORT SPLASHES

Hitting the best form they have shown all season, the Blue splashes held the mighty Central Y team to a 2-2 draw in the Y team's home pool last night. If the team can play the way they did last night McGill will be a sorry team after this Saturday's intercollegiate encounter.

Forty-eight seconds after the game opened last night Adams whipped in a hard shot but Central followed this two minutes later by a goal from a throw by Gord Devlin, fast breaking Central defenceman. In the second quarter Varsity took the lead when McGill fished the Central net-minder on a tip shot from Menzies.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Alan Harvey

THE TROJANS ARE COMING

A striking example of the American brand of publicity and showmanship came into our hands recently through the enterprise of Sid Ruckebuck, our demon reporter. This sports chronicler cornered Warren Stevens one day and received a copy of the advance notices which the University of Southern California hockey sextet forwards to every team they play.

The history of the team, the biographies of coach and players, and the records of the squad since 1927 are all faithfully set down in this charming little brochure, embellished with full length cuts of the entire team. The cover of the magazine pamphlet is set up a la Esquire, and the genius in charge of publication could probably win a spot as managing editor of the Winnipeg Free Press. The Southern California team, known more familiarly as the Trojans, visit Varsity Arena for a game with the local seniors in mid-December, and it should be a game worth going miles to see.

The handsome fellow in the inset to the left is Benny Novicki, free-skating forward of the Trojans. Benny is listed in the bulletin received from the U. of S.C. as the most popular player on the team and he also leads the team in the scoring records this season. Novicki succeeds Earl Robson of Vulcan, Alberta, whom the pamphlet lists as a sure-fire professional prospect, as the most prolific goal-scorer on the squad.

Another player of whom the brochure speaks highly is Eric Beauchamp, hard-working member from Edmonton, Alberta, who was schooled in the same hockey kindergarten that sent Neil Colville and Alex Shibicky to the Rangers. The youngest player on the team is Johnny Richardson, another Calgary boy, who is a sophomore at seventeen, thereby rivaling our own Beefy McMillan.

This column spoke recently of athletic scholarships. The Southern California team presents exhibits A to Z in the case for athletic scholarships, as eleven of the fifteen players on the team are natives of Calgary, Alberta, or Saskatchewan, who have found the puck partime more lucrative and more fascinating in the neighbourhood of Hollywood. One of the players on the squad is described as being of French descent, while a second hails from Fountain City, Wisconsin. Carlos Escadero, diminutive forward, comes all the way from Peru, South Africa, to chase pucks for the Trojans. The remaining player on the list is out of place in this set-up.

Since the 1927-28 season the Trojans have been six times winners of the Southern California title, five times winners of the President Hoover Trophy, (awarded in 1930 for outdoor intercollegiate championship in hockey and in speed skating), and twice champions of the Pacific Coast Conference, which is not bad.

SIDELINE SIFTINGS
George Smockum and de Lagran, Dentistry's ace forwards, helped the Molarmen fashion a free-scoring 21-12 victory over Pharmacy last night in the upper gym. The Dentists will now meet either O.C.E. or Vic in the best of three lacrosse finals which will commence Saturday, at one p.m. . . an unfortunate incident marred a thrilling lacrosse game between Vic and School Tuesday afternoon when Kirby and McIntyre were banished for fighting . . . the incident is not yet cleared up . . . a scribble from the Faculty of Forestry urges us to put in a word for the Foresters . . . there are thirty-four students enrolled in this faculty and they have won their group in the volleyball circuit . . . Sam Lipin of "Sport Splashes" fame is steamed up about the events slated for Hart House pool and environs on the evening of Saturday, December 10. It seems that there will be a display of ornamental swimming by the mermaids, a water-polo final between Varsity and the winner of the Queen's-McGill clash on Friday night, and finally a dance . . . whether it is the mermaids, the water-polo or the dance that is responsible for Sam's interest we cannot say . . . Lipin also points out that the Blue swimmers have yet to lose a game in Hart House pool.

WOMENS' BASKETBALL

In a devastating second half attack, U.C. Jrs. overwhelmed Vic Jrs. 24-14 last night in Hart House gym in the first game of the finals for the women's intercollegiate basketball trophy. Petite Helen Gurney, at centre, played an inspired game for U.C. Jay Bryans, U.C. guard, repeatedly foiled the Vic forward line. Anna Marie Smart, U.C. forward, played heads-up basketball throughout. Molly Moore turned in another strong game and led the Vic defence, in holding U.C. to 24 points. Ruth Danard and Dorothy Clarke starred for the Vic forward line.

A starry St. Hilda's Frosh team skied out a close win over U.C. Frosh 19-17 in an exhibition game at Hart House gym last night.

Both teams got off to a slow start, and sloppy play featured the first half. Play speeded up in the third quarter, however.

Eric Armstrong, U.C., was the outstanding player on the floor. Eleanor McLaughlin, and Yvonne Wells were the pick of the St. Hilda's forwards, but lacked accuracy.

The winners gained the right to meet Vic Frosh in an exhibition game Friday, preceding the final event between U.C. Jrs. and Vic Jrs.

St. Hilda's Frosh: Agnes Ireland, Betty Brodie, Yvonne Wells, Eleanor McLaughlin, Nancy Tyrrell, Leahna Young, Mary Skelles, Connie Harrison, Mary Coombs.

U.C. Frosh: Lib Secombe, Eric Armstrong, Betty Christie, Edith Carter, Joyce Lang, Jean Clement, Mary Emmett, Betty Kettles, Agnes Cameron.

Budding Advertising Men Given Chance to Test Their Ability

In a competition which closes January first, budding ad-men among the student body are being given a real opportunity to test their ability and make themselves some money.

This offer comes from N. W. Ayer and Son of Canada, Limited, agency which handles advertising for Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited. Students in Canadian universities are invited to prepare original, amusing advertising ideas and material featuring Ford V-8 cars.

The best five advertisements submitted to the agency will be purchased and will be used in a series of Ford advertisements in college papers in 1939.

The invitation portfolio received from the Ayer agency is available to interested students who apply to the Students' Administrative Council. It gives examples of Ford advertising in college publications as well as the rules governing the competition.

Remember, your work must be in Toronto by January 1.

WHEAT PROBLEM A MAJOR ISSUE

the Dominion paid for it through the Dominion treasury to the tune of about $45,000,000.

Agricultural authorities here clearly see that this situation cannot continue and some express the hope that a solution might be found in the establishment of a minimum international price for wheat.

This would provide a stable price and render the export farmer independent of the political uncertainties of public support and the price fluctuations in the world market. There is no chance the Winnipeg conference could establish such a price, but the ground-work may be laid for an international fixed price structure in the wheat trade.

Falling this, there is an opinion in some informed circles here that the only alternative is a radical revision of Canadian agricultural policy in the west. They feel that the wheat question cannot continue much longer in the critical stage in which it has existed for the past eight years.

While government officials here said they were unconcerned about the recent sale of 20,000,000 bushels of United States wheat to Britain, some members are looking into the transaction to determine if the loss of the six-cent-a-bushel wheat preference had anything to do with the matter.

It is believed that the U.S. wheat was sold at a much lower price than that offered by Canadian exporters, but questions likely will be asked early in the session about this deal and Agricultural Minister Gardiner will be requested to inform the house why Canada did not get the business.

With such grave issues of public importance, parliament will scarcely be able to prorogue before the King and Queen arrive May 20. Adjournment will be taken and the members will return late in June for another stretch. The impression has been growing that a general election will be held next fall but the rumours are being discounted in some quarters.

There was another burst of scoring in the last period, both goals being drawn out of their nets time after time by the dodging tactics of the rushing players. de Lagran, McCartney and Smockum piled them on to Dentistry, while Hogan and Harry Seager pressed hard for Pharmacy. Hogan scoring once while Seager garnered three more goals. Final score: Dents 21, Pharmacy 12.

Dents: Goodison, Sproule, Smockum, Goffin, Shand, Loye, McCartney, McKay, de Lagran, Benson.

THE TRIALS AND TRIBULATIONS of a professor are indeed great . . . so much so that a University of Tulane prof, recently broke down and assailed the ears of a critic, asking him if he ever had to:

(A) Sit and listen while a dumb dean teaches you how to teach.

(B) Laugh at the president's jokes—vintage 1880.

(C) Eat your lunch in the college dining hall where you have to remove the halfback's feet from your table.

(D) Associate on terms of equality with the hairy-necked coaching staff.

(E) Dance the polka with the dean of women.

(F) Give an all-American grade for two attendances in four months.

(G) Listen to more than one commencement address.

"If you have never had to do any of these things and a million more of the same kind," concluded the Tulane man, "then what the h— do you know about teaching?" . . . we agree.

... A PROFESSOR'S LOT IS NOT A HAPPY ONE. . .

THE VARSITY SWING CLUB will be going full blast today at the Women's Union. . . Their last session proved to be somewhat of a fiasco because Duke Ellington failed to show up on time. . . However, this meeting promises to be a good one, and we are looking forward to seeing Louise King warble, and Bert Niosi and his quartet swing out. . . The committee informed us that there will also be some Varsity talent around also, so you jitterbugs and rug-cutters are in for some real jam. . . SO HELP ME.

THERE IS A NEW FAD that is gaining popularity in the American universities. . . The fad is having your shirt front autographed by all those who attend the formal party. . . The idea lies in the fact that memories of that important date you had will come back when you gaze upon the autographed shirt, which you will never wear again. . . The fad started on the Princeton campus and is spreading rapidly. . . If it reaches Varsity, I'm finished. . . I'VE ONLY GOT ONE SHIRT!

MARRIED FOOTBALL STARS are out at Marquette University. . . The athletic board there barred married athletes from future competition on Marquette intercollegiate teams. . . Oh well, there's always room for a good man in the interfaculty leagues.

chorus girls' legs, addressed to the Dean of Women, proceeding from the top of a Christmas stocking.

Suitably padded, painted and clothed, the executive of the society cuttishly satirized a meeting of the Women's Association. George Stoddard as the morose maid almost stole the show from the other characters, who rendered some charming but altogether surprising ballads.

ORCHESTRA PROBLEM DEBATED BY SCHOOL

For the past few years, students at the Little Red Schoolhouse have been arguing the relative merits of Canadian and American bands for their social events. The conflict raged so bitterly that the Engineering Executive discussed the problem in a five-hour meeting which was closed to the public. No statement has been made as yet.

Tonight, the S.P.S. Debates Club is putting out feelers to find out how the School's undergraduates stand on the question. Chairman Partridge confided that he expected an enthusiastic turnout when the problem of Canadian or American bands is discussed tonight in the Hart House Debates Room.

George Joel, fourth year, pointed to the great expense of an American band which he considered too great to obtain the whole-hearted support of students. Park Reilly, first year, argued that School should maintain a buy-at-home policy.

Rowell Greer, leader of the opposition declared, "A good price for a good show." His partner, W. A. Scott, fourth year, raised the slogan, "Out-do Meds".

VICTORIA DEFEATED BY WYCLIFFE 3-0

In the final soccer game of the year Wycliffe defeated Victoria on the front campus yesterday afternoon by the score of 3-0 to take second place in the playoffs which Meds won by defeating Victoria last week.

Wycliffe started off the first period with a terrific burst of speed, forcing the play deep into Searlet and Gold territory. Morris scored the first goal for Wycliffe on a long kick by Johnny Kerr. Piercy repeated the same play from right end to allow Morris to score another point for the Theologs. Bill Simpson, on a rush alone, broke through the Vic defence to score Wycliffe's third goal, ending the first half with the score 3-0.

In the second half both teams played a much closer game and with the exception of one or two brilliant attempts to score, the play consisted of kicking the ball around centre field. Vic broke through once to almost score in the closing moments of the game, but a sensational save by Bill Coleman in the Wycliffe net, who skidded 5 feet on his stomach, kept the eager Vic men from making any score.

Small and Menzies played the best games for Vic, trying their best to even the score, while Morris and Piercy were outstanding for Wycliffe.

Victoria: Hoffman, Vashoff, McDonald, Menzies, Woodsworth, Small, Patton, McKenzie, Cummings, McLeod, Cane, Pollock.

Wycliffe: Coleman, Hooton, Vance, Kerr, Abbott, Simmonds, Piercy, Shaw, Simpson, Suthers, Morris, McDonald, Park-Taylor.

MURDEROUS MEMBERS DEMAND EXECUTIONS IN RIOTOUS SESSION

Government Overthrown by Rebels as Botkin Seizes the Reins and Sets Up Military Tribunal, Instituting Gory Purge

"Have the rebels shot!" was the ruthless cry in yesterday's session of the U.C. Parliament, while the Speaker was absent, the government was overthrown on suspicion of Fascist tendencies, and a temporary military tribunal set up under the leadership of Rear-Admiral Harold Botkin.

The rebels in question were those members who supported the old regime, and were accordingly tried for treason; one of them, Don Blackley, the Duke of Whitney, attempted to insist on his right of trial by the House of Lords, but this was denied.

Damaging accusations were fired at them by the counsel for prosecution, who advised the judge representing the Supreme Court that the usual penalty in such cases is death at dawn. In fact, one rebel so vigorously and persistently

UNIVERSITY LAWYERS HEAR R. C. KELLOCK

Subject of Royal Commission is Discussed by Man who Has Served on Several of Them Probing Public Business

The Law Club of the University of Toronto met last night for the last time before Christmas. The guest speaker, R. C. Kellock, K.C., addressed the club on the subject of Royal Commissions. He has served on various commissions and thus was able to discuss them to the advantage of the listeners.

Mr. Kellock dealt with the purpose and function of Royal Commissions, pointing out that they were investigations into problems affecting public business or good government, for the information of the public. "On the other hand," he continued, "they are sometimes made for the converting of public opinion in favour of a certain policy. Through newspapers and reports, one formulates opinions which are often in contempt of the investigated parties as their defence is not published until weeks later. The public forgets so easily that condemnation (say slander) and its defence are not readily assimilated."

A discussion lasting as long as the address itself ensued, the audience asking many pertinent questions.

Library At Columbia Has Largest Stacks

Building in Style of Italian Renaissance is Nine Stories High and Was Built at Cost of Four Million Dollars

By Arthur J. Benson
Special to "The Varsity"

New York, December 9.—In view of Varsity's great need for an adequate library building it might be interesting to give a short sketch of the library facilities here at Columbia University, facilities which might be well approximated at Toronto if the money were forthcoming.

The main library is known as South Hall, a beautiful and well-equipped nine-story building of overburned brick and limestone, in the style of the Italian Renaissance. Completed in 1934 at a cost of four million dollars from funds given by E. S. Harkness, it measures 260 by 170 feet. The book stack, the largest ever to be constructed in a single unit, consists of fifteen air-conditioned tiers capable of accommodating four million volumes. At present Columbia's collection is the fourth largest university library in the world, and comprises more than one million books.

So delightful is the interior and ex-

Xmas Vacation

Varsity closes early for Christmas this year. One week from tomorrow at the stroke of noon, the buildings and premises of the university will be officially closed. On or before December 17, students and professors must exchange their commitments of the season, for they will not see each other again until January 3.

Monday, January 2 is set apart for recovery from the after-effects of ringing in the New Year. Many of the recoveries will take place on board train as the extended holiday will send more students than ever home for the holiday.

The Varsity anticipates the rest of the university by closing for Christmas today. The first issue of the Easter term will appear on Friday, January 6.

LECTURER DISCUSSES T. S. ELIOT'S POETRY

Professor MacCallum Uses
"The Waste Land," a Poem of Post-War Disillusionment as Example for Critique

T. S. Eliot, the famous expatriate American poet, was the subject of the last of the University College modern authors series given yesterday by Professor H. R. MacCallum.

In 1932, said Professor MacCallum, The Waste Land—a book of poetry depicting the disillusionment of the post-war period, was published. The primary sense of The Waste Land—a tale of sin and of living death—is murder. Every detail of the poem is intelligible or packed with multiple meanings, declared Professor MacCallum.

"Eliot must appear to be either confused and inconsequential, or one of the most agile minds of our time," said Professor MacCallum. "He is a defender of intelligence, and an admirer and imitator in poetry of Dante. His work is made up of cross-networks of meanings, with echoes of other poets found in the footnotes. He is extraordinarily economical in his use of words, and seldom uses them unnecessarily."

Record Edition

Thanks to the kind co-operation of Mr. E. A. Macdonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council, the staff of The Varsity is able to bring to you a ten-page edition.

CAMPUS GHOST TOWN AS STUDENTS LEAVE

More than Half of Those who Study Here Come from without the City. They Leave at Xmas for All Parts of the Continent

The campus of the University of Toronto will be a veritable ghost town next weekend when approximately thirty-five hundred students and professors—slightly less than half of the entire University population—return to their homes in all parts of Canada and United States for the Christmas holidays.

While cities, towns and farms in every province in Canada will be the destination of most of the students, it was learned that Miami, California and other points south were attracting many. With reduced train fares to all parts of the country in effect for the holidays, most students are expected to leave the city by train. Already about fifty per cent of departing students have signed the lists. Many more names are expected to be added.

VICTORIA ANNOUNCES SCHOLARSHIP AWARDS

Lincoln A. Hutton Scholarship

Jerome Buckley of Fourth Year Modern Languages

The Senate of Victoria University yesterday announced the award of the Lincoln A. Hutton Scholarship for 1938 to Jerome H. Buckley of the fourth year Modern Languages course in Victoria College. This prize, valued at $100, is offered annually for an essay submitted in a competition which is open to all undergraduates of the college.

SPEAKING OF VACATIONS,

Despite the fact that examinations are due early in February, a majority of the students questioned yesterday intended to take things easy during the Christmas holidays.

Books are going to be shoved into the darkest corners, and skis, skates and hockey sticks will be brought out, and waxed, sharpened and wielded, respectively.

One exception is found in Bob Ledington, Commerce and Finance, who intends to do some studying—of the culinary arts. "Instead of using travel and education to broaden myself, I am going to try turkey dinners," he said.

Norm Sawyer, Philosophy, English and History, is not forgetting the Fel-

INTER-NATION GROUP CONNECTS INTERESTS OF WORLD STUDENTS

One Hundred Dollars Collected by Local Committee of I.S.S. for Needy Central European Students

The approximate sum of one hundred dollars for the relief of university students in Central Europe has been collected since last Thursday by the International Student Service Committee of the University of Toronto, it was revealed yesterday. The contributions have been in response to a letter sent out by J. B. Bickert, Warden of Hart House; Professor Norman Mackenzie, Professor R. G. Riddell, and E. A. Macdonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the S.A.C., who are members of the local committee.

With headquarters in Geneva and committees in thirty-one countries, I.S.S. performs three particular functions. Enquiries into university problems such as graduate unemployment and student self-help are carried on. International conferences for the serious discussion of political, social and economic problems by students of different nationalities and outlooks are held periodically. The most important part of the work is still the relief of war-distressed students, especially in China, and the aid of refugee students from Central Europe.

Economics is the Choice
For Vacation Reading Of Students

Books for the Christmas holidays may be reserved at the University Library any time between now and December 17th.

About five hundred books have already been signed for and it is expected that another five hundred will be spoken for. Books may be taken two days before the end of the term unless they are in great demand. They must be back on January 3, the beginning of next term.

The heaviest run seems to be on history and economics, with other subjects close runners-up.

Literary Prizes

Cheques won in the literary issue may be obtained in the Hart House office of the Students' Administrative Office, after three o'clock this afternoon.

'THEATRE OF ACTION' PUTS ON LEWIS PLAY

"It Can't Happen Here", Satire on Fascist Threat to United States, is First of Season at Margaret Eaton Hall

The week of December 12 marks the opening of the Theatre of Action's first major production of the season, "It Can't Happen Here" by Sinclair Lewis and John C. Moffitt.

The play, as it is presented at Margaret Eaton Hall, tells of a typical American middle class family who because of tradition refuse to accept any innovation, allowing fascism a freedom of growth because of their unwillingness to take sides. The Jessup family is subjected to the horror of fascist atrocities. Only by the experience of concentration camps and killings does Doremus Jessup awake to the issues of the day, only to find it's too late. The play ends on a note of youth and their vested responsibility to carry on the fight that Jessup so miserably failed to wage in his attempt to be fair while unmeaningfully aiding reaction in its growth.

CLUB HEARS McLEAN OF CANADA PACKERS

At Annual Banquet of Commerce Club, Canada Packers Head—Ex-Graduate of University College, Addresses Members

Addressed by Mr. J. S. McLean, president of Canada Packers Limited, the Commerce Club held its annual banquet last night in the Great Hall of Hart House. Francis Deacon, vice-president of the club, proposed the first toast of the evening, the toast to the University, and Dr. H. J. Cody, president of the University, replied. Wes Cutler, who graduated in 1934 from the Commerce and Finance course at the head of his year, and is known for his playing as a member of the Argos football team, toasted the Commerce Club. The reply was given by Bill White, secretary of the club.

"Mo" Murray was presented with the Crocombe Cup emblematic of the squash championship of the club, by the president of the club and toastmaster, G. R. Gardiner, in the absence of Professor Crocombe, the donor.

Fiction Editor of Weekly Finds High Standard in Manuscripts Submitted by Students for Varsity Christmas Issue

Commendation of the work of undergraduates who contributed prose to the Literary Issue of The Varsity, as work is indicative of ability and potential fame was expressed yesterday by the judge of the prose department, Archibald Newman, fiction editor of the Toronto Star Weekly.

Chief faults he discovered in the short stories included the lack of sufficient plotting which failed to remove the efforts of the student authors from the incident category, and a general carelessness in the mechanics of writing, such as spelling and choice of words.

"Surprised by the comparatively high standard of the manuscripts," Mr. Newman awarded first prize to Robert Greer Allen for his Coffee at Eleven, second prize to A Jar of Raisins by Miriam Dworkin, and third prize to William B. Wood for his contribution Hit and Run.

In the opinion of Mr. Newman, only two of the essays submitted were worth publication: Competitive Medicine, a controversial work by Michael M. Litterer and Accusation by J. A. Romeyn. "I must say I was pleasantly surprised with the comparatively high standard of the manuscripts submitted," said Mr. Newman.

"I have had the fortune or misfortune on previous occasions of having had to judge other contests and in no case have I seen so many submissions nearly good" (Continued on Page 10)

ALUMNI SCHOLARSHIP PRESENTATIONS MADE

Four of the five U.C. Alumni Scholarships were presented last Wednesday night at the joint meeting of the U.C. Lit. and the W.U.A., held in the Junior Common Room.

The presentations were made by Mr. E. A. Macdonald, president of the organization, who told of the fine work the alumni group had been doing. Each year they distribute five scholarships to worthy matriculation students entering University College, each valued at one hundred dollars in cash and a hundred dollars off their annual tuition. To date, the organization has distributed over five thousand dollars in scholarships.

The recipients of this year's scholarships are as follows: Mr. Calvin Godlieb, First Scholarship for General Proficiency; Mr. E. A. Macintyre, Second Scholarship for General Proficiency; Miss E. J. Mory, Fourth Scholarship for General Proficiency; Miss Pauline R. Storey, The Morris Hutton Scholarship in Classics.

Because of illness, Mr. J. S. Wright, who was awarded the Third Scholarship for General Proficiency, was unable to attend U.C. this year, but will be able to take advantage of the award next year.

Flying Club Members Hear Percy Lewis On Aviation

Members of the University of Toronto Flying Club last night held an informal discussion with Percy Lewis, chief instructor of the Toronto Flying Club.

After dinner in Great Hall, the members assembled in the West Common Room of Hart House, and satisfied themselves on several points relative to flying in aeroplanes, from Mr. Lewis, who was introduced by E. E. Robertson, president of the club.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 9th, 1938

The Staff and Editors of The Varsity are happy that the final issue of the term has been reached. They will now be able to concentrate a little more upon the various aspects of college life, including such things as over-due essays and belated reading assignments. We wish to extend to all our readers the compliments of the season and best wishes for a happy holiday.

We hope to be back in print again on the sixth of January, and that night to have presented our first news broadcast over C.K.C.L.

It has been an interesting and worthwhile term as far as we are concerned, and we wish to thank all those who have co-operated with us, especially the members of the Students' Administrative Council, the heads of the various societies, and those members of the faculty who have offered very constructive and acceptable criticism.

The editor himself is aware of the fact that he has one of the best staffs ever to grace the paper, and a masthead with which it is a pleasure to work. It would have been impossible to have got a thrill out of editing a daily paper, had there been the slightest bit of friction or lack of co-operation among the few score of scribes who have been associated with The Varsity during its fifty-one issues.

The Varsity bids the University a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

A Record

Today's literary issue of The Varsity marks the first time that we have ever had a ten-page issue in fifty-nine years of publication. On the fiftieth anniversary, there was a special large number prepared, it but at no other time have we exceeded eight pages. Today we have made another advertising record also. There is more advertising than in any previous issue, and of course this was one of the deciding factors in enabling us to have an extra two pages. The first issue of this year still holds the all-time high for advertising, although this is within two hundred lines of that mark, and is the second highest ever attained in any regular issue of the paper. Some people may complain about the amount of advertising, but at least our policy never needs to be affected by our advertisers; also it is what makes it possible for the students to receive their daily paper for one hundred days of the year, at a cost of about twenty-five cents per student.

The Prize-Winners

We wish to thank all those who have contributed to the literary contest, and congratulate not only those who were fortunate enough to win prizes and have their articles published, but also the many who submitted first class material which was not printed. The judges have our sincere thanks for their co-operation in a task which would have been impossible for the editors themselves.

POETRY

Judging by the number of contributions, the poetry competition was the most popular. Over seventy poems were submitted and of these more than fifty could be classed as in serious vein. Most of the reading and elimination in this class was done by Mr. N. F. Langford, M.A., formerly editor of Acta Victoriana, and associate editor of The Varsity. This was the most difficult part of the work.

We were fortunate enough to have Dr. E. J. Pratt, illustrious Canadian poet, make the final selection and offer some remarks upon which the following criticism is based.

Dr. Pratt was very impressed by George Delhomme's prize-winning poem, "An interview with Gertrude Stein". This, he said, one of the finest parodies he has seen, and he is only sorry that there are not more of them. To quote: "It is by far the best verse in the collection. Gertrude would have been glad to have fathered or mothered those sixty-six lines. Besides, Mr. Delhomme offers a very interesting corrective for the mania in his final stanza."

"Miss Hillier's 'Biscay' is exceedingly light but as such is the nature of the competition it merits praise." Honourable mention is given to "The Appendix" by J. A. Romeyn. The conclusion of this especially is a very clever bit of parody, although some of the lines of the sonnet are out of step. "Prelude in B.A." by Wilbur Howard, is also a clever piece of writing, but here again the rhythm breaks down by the awkward misuse of a syllable or two.

In the serious verse it was difficult to decide between "To you, Afar," by Frances MacLellan and "The Wind and I" by Gladys Kippen. Mr. Langford especially was impressed by the smooth flow of the latter. "To you, Afar," was worked out with fine consistency, although an occasional cliché is noticed. By declaring these two equal in merit it will only be necessary to divide the first and second prizes equally. In this class honourable mention was given to Miriam Dworkin's "Early Snow," and A. E. Maloney's "Brief Communion".

The chief criticism of the contributions was their sentimentality, halting rhythms, clichés, and in many cases the attempts at the intricate constructions and difficult rhythms of certain poets who are not easily emulated.

ART

Although the Christmas Issue is a literary issue, there has usually been found a place in it for art. On some occasions there have been photography contests, and we believe that it would be advisable to return to that in future, and perhaps endeavour to have someone contribute towards a prize for the best campus photograph.

Very few sketches were submitted, and what were turned in were in two very different classes. Professor H. Wasteneys kindly acted as judge for the pen and ink sketches, the best of which was the one we have reproduced by L. H. Whitley. Some cartoons were submitted also, and a special prize is awarded to Marion Walker for her cartoon entitled "WELL!!!"

PROSE

It was very pleasing to see the fine quality of some of the prose which was submitted, especially the short stories written by R. G. Allen. Some time ago it was announced that the prose prizes would be awarded for serious and humorous articles, but we have taken the liberty to alter that classification somewhat. None of the articles could be classed as distinctly humorous, although there was considerable humour in the short stories. The essays submitted were of course serious enough, but none of the better contributions were labelled for any special class.

The criticism which Mr. A. H. Newman, fiction editor of the Star Weekly, was kind enough to make, appears in the news story on the front page. We are very grateful to him for his kind co-operation.

ART MUSIC

Ballet Russe

The two pieces done by the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo on its opening program last night at Massey Hall were not such as to inspire a very profound review, and we shall not attempt to write one. It was just a case of a stageful of people, for whom dancing is apparently the most natural means of locomotion, having a perfectly marvellous time for a little under three hours.

Coppelia by Delibes and Gaite Parisienne by Offenbach were the ballets presented. Both are quite literally musical comedy, the former being whimsical fantasy based on the theme of the animated doll, and the latter just what the name suggests, romantic frivolity in a Parisian cafe. A charming feature of this type of ballet is that story seems merely to provide situations for dance-episodes, and nothing else matters greatly. The choreography in Gaite Parisienne is by the artistic director of the company, Leonide Massine, who also last night took the part of a wealthy Peruvian; the dancing involved in the part is not spectacular, but he acted with amazing vitality, drawing all one's attention even on a crowded stage.

The featured dancers of the evening were Alexandra Danilova and Michel Panassié, in Coppelia, but the uniformity of effortless achievement shown by the company leaves us with little doubt that any other two members of suitable age could have taken their places. Coppelia is particularly interesting from a musical standpoint. Such a concentration of Delibes is distinctly unusual, but not in the least tiring—definitely a good idea. There are many familiar passages, such as the Dance of the Hours. The Offenbach work seems a bit more hasty, working in most of his catchily operatic tunes, but this does not detract from its entertainment value.

The orchestra was enthusiastic, if a little rough. The company remains until Saturday night, and we don't hesitate to recommend it without reservation.

Coffee At Eleven

By Robert Greer Allen

I

It had often been suggested to Hugh that he should get himself a girl—a nice, intelligent, companionable sort of girl—to take to concerts and plays and things. "Something to make you want to get up in the morning," Campbell had said, and Hugh agreed that he needed an incentive of some sort. He was doubtful, however, that a girl would be adequate, because the girls he knew—Dorothy, for instance—didn't inspire in him any aggressive qualities like rising early in the morning. So he continued to drift into hopeful despair.

Life blazed anew in his breast when he met Sondra. It was almost an awakening, to know Sondra. One was suddenly aware of so many new sensations, like the scent of a woman's hair, or the softness of her arms. One was painfully conscious, too, of a great disquietude. Unrest and constant speculation plagued Hugh with the persistence of a midsummer fly.

In any relationship between man and woman, there comes a crucial day which determines the future course of their affair. Woe to him whose climax occurs before noon! In Hugh's case, unfortunately, the end began with the green-to-yellow flicker of the ten o'clock traffic light, on an otherwise unuspicious December morning.

II

As the light blinked into a steady red, Hugh regained the safety of the curb and began that endless process of remembrance. The night before, the dance, music, people, chatter, Sondra in his arms briefly, laughing—all these began to make a pattern in his mind. The night's adventures assumed form and chronology. He relived, in the diluted and undetailed manner of a day-dream, the first of the evening's incidents—the argument with Sondra about her wanting to play Hamlet. He was, in fact, cosily reminiscent, when the spell was broken by a direct and unequivocal "Good morning how are you today?"

The transition from past to present was painful, and somewhat delayed. Hugh glanced around vaguely, his eyes glossy with pre-occupation, and recognized no one. He was about to resume his entrapment, when the brittle air was shattered by "I SAID, GOOD MORNING HOW ARE YOU TODAY?"

There was no hope then. Hugh reluctantly let slip the past in favour of the more prosaic present. He surveyed the cluster of commuters who waited impatiently for a green signal, and noted incidentally how their frosty exhalations seemed like silent chatter in the air. Then, just behind his left shoulder, he found the author of the solicitous query.

It was Campbell.

"Oh, it's you," Hugh said. And added, somewhat as an afterthought, a disinterested "Hello."

Campbell was the sort of person who introduced himself at public gatherings. Perhaps you know the method—cut off the victim's escape by standing embarrassingly close, catch the selected one's hand

A Jar of Raisins

By Miriam Dworkin

Lotti was hungry. She was often hungry since she had come to America. Chicago was cold, the factory was cold, her room in the attic was cold. Ah, it was not like France—not like warm southern France from where she had come. The whole family—fourteen they had been—used to sit down at the square wooden table and eat to their fill of the thick slices of fresh steamed bread and the great chunks of yellow butter. And, afterwards, her mother would fill the old porcelain pitchers with frothing warm milk that still bore its sweet animal smell. And then, at the very end, Lotti would reach out and dip her hand into the bowl of raisins. She used to scatter the handful into her apron and run out into the fields.

Now she longed for those shining impossible meals. Here in Chicago she was always hungry, and instead of the familiar feeling of pleasure every evening she felt a sharp disappointment in her stomach. And it ate deeper and deeper into her. Every day that little feeling went farther into her—from her stomach into her heart and then into her hands, and finally it became one huge and important fear possessing her completely; for they said at the factory she was slow, and would have to go if she could not sew more shirts in a day.

Then she remembered with sudden delight that she still had something from home. A jar of raisins. Sweet white raisins—her mother had put them into her box, into a little corner of it because it looked empty. At the last minute before Lotti had gone off to the strange train with her brothers, her mother had said it wouldn't hurt to eat raisins from home over there in America, in fact she wasn't even sure that they grew such raisins over there; and she had taken a jar off the shelf, just like that, and had popped it into the box. Now, remembering her mother, Lotti went and dragged her box out of its brown corner, and found at last the raisins. She opened the jar, and poured some of the fruit into her hand, tenderly, lovingly. Should she eat them after all? They were the only things she had from home. But it was so cold and she was so hungry.

Lotti carried her precious handful to the basin and poured water over it—to wash away the dust from the fields. Then she tipped the raisins into a cup—but in her hand remained a dozen grains of sand. Fine red sand. Lotti looked at it and felt even more homesick than before.

Her father's farm had been along a road of red sand. She and Petro used to run along it and hold hands. Sometimes she broke away and ran ahead and Petro chased her—he always caught her, and often at such times he would kiss her. She loved him to kiss her, it made her feel so good, like getting between warm sheets on a winter night. His face and neck used to smell queer—like the smell of a certain grass that grew in the meadows, and yet not exactly like it. It gave her a dizzy feeling in her stomach even now when she thought of it. O Petro had been a fine lad and a merry one. But he had not always been merry; often she would find him in the vineyards after sundown. She would come back on purpose to find him, for perhaps she knew his ways. There she would find him, sitting under the vines, looking far away at nothing at all. Nothing that Lotti could see. His

The Wind and I

By Gladys Kippen

It's a great wind to be rocking me
When it has the world for a ball;
And there's little need to be mocking me
And I alone, and all
The little sighs at the windows sighing
At the cold without the weatherstrip tin
And the chill within.

It's a great wind to be watching me
Waiting for nothing at all
And there's little need to be matching me
A Will so big—and so small.
But maybe its strength will sweep him there
And maybe my strength will keep him there
And the world will think that the storming Meant nothing at all.

Hit and Run

By William Wood

The light from the ceiling lamps reached down to illumine the grey monotony of the courtroom. Flickering shadows moved, pattern-like over the bald head of the magistrate, the row of impassive counsel and the weary, lined faces of the accused. Young Russell Laturney, charged with manslaughter, charged with killing a man, killing a man and running away, sensed, though he did not see, the weaving, gliding shadows. He kept his eyes closed, the better to remember. Already the wheels of justice had started to roll and these few, shabby people waited, waited anxiously, wondering, perhaps whether the bald head had had a good breakfast or whether the wheels of justice, moving slowly, ever so slowly, would brush them lightly aside or crush them, slowly, ever so slowly. But young Laturney was not thinking of the future. He sat with his eyes shut, remembering.

Remember? You step into the open roadster the cool wind of the October night, rushing through your hair, chilling your bare hands. The engine sputters and you give it more choke. It rumbles half-heartedly—then more choke and a sighing, dying sound. The engine is flooded. You wait for a moment. The car is old, its headlights dim, and the streets dark and untravelled. But there is no doubt that you need more practice and to-morrow you try the test. It is a pity no one could come with you to-night, and you should really have some person, and if you are caught—but come, you are not afraid.

You try once more. The engine rockets with life. The gears grind into position. Jerkily the car moves out into the street and down the hill slowly. Now, into second. Again the clash of gears, rupturing the quiet of the night. Slower, next time, slower. Ah! that is better. In high, the car rides the black road. It is very dark—your lights,

Competitive Medicine

By Mitchell M. Littner

Since the boom period beginning in the middle twenties, we have witnessed the gradual decline of the old family doctor. This decline, while it has been slightly retarded by the prestige lent to the general physician by the Defoes, has been greatly accelerated by the depression. Stern economic stress has altered for many people, the Darwinian formula of the "Survival of the Fittest", into the "Survival of the Shadiest". For the society that expects the doctor to act as unselfishly as a saint, gives him prestige and responsibility—yet denies him economic security.

The most serious source of the decline of the general physician lies externally in the competition that the medical profession is forced to carry on with pseudo-medical groups. This conflict is inexorably leading to the moral degeneracy of the medical practitioner. One of the most dangerous reasons for this loss of self-respect and public confidence is the tremendous campaign of propaganda that has encouraged the laity in self-diagnosis and self-medication. In our era of widespread want, economy is the watchword. Hence the majority of laymen have misused well-intentioned health columns and health articles to avoid paying the doctor's fee. This tendency has been exaggerated by the printing of news items of scientific interest without any attempt to check their conformity with fact. For example the late Mr. Arthur Brisbane of the Hearst press never hesitated to comment—usually quite wrongly—on any medical subject. In addition, the motive of economy has been stupendously exploited to the tune of billions of dollars (uneconomical as it may sound) by the patent medicine vendors. These vampires who feast on human suffering have incited the public with a profound distrust of the general practitioner to whom they may come only in times of extreme distress and as a last resort.

But the cultists have run these jackals a close second. Christian Science is an example of such a cult, practising medicine under the guise of religion as the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association has demonstrated. The cults of chiropractic and homeopathy have the advantage over the careful doctor in that they "guarantee" a cure, and even go so far as to fix the price in advance. Like the specialist, the cultist has the fake superiority of a glittering and impressive mechanical armamentarium. The poor doctor, never knowing whether the patient will return, often "hangs on" to him. Thus, the patient, paying by the visit, may suspect the doctor—and often correctly—of prolonging treatments for mercenary reasons. In addition a licensed physician is loth to provide explanations of his patient's malady either because of the complexity of the subject, or because he is honestly uncertain, or because his diagnosis may turn out to be incorrect. He knows that if the patient suspects a lack of omniscience on his part his prestige may be suddenly deflated. The cultist, on the other hand, untroubled by professional ethics, adopts no annoying air of superiority, but gossips with his "cash customer" and promptly offers a "bellyful" of bogus but satisfying "dope". He is never hesitant in his diagnosis, one look being usually sufficient. Thus the

Accusation

By J. A. Romeyn

Youth, in the form of a university student, stood before Maturity, gazing into his eyes.

"You have asked to see me," said Maturity, kindly, "and I am glad to receive you. Your radicalism interests me and I should like to hear your ideas. I have taught you to endeavour always to be impartial, to avoid being egotistical and self-seeking, to use the power that is yours for the good of others as well as for yourself, to be restrained and courteous even in the face of discourtesy—these and many other things have I taught, and I am pleased with the use to which you have put my teaching. Speak."

Youth drew back a step, and pointed his finger at Maturity, and looked him in the eyes.

"I accuse. I accuse you not of being hypocritical, but of making me hypocritical; not of being biased, but of making me so biased that I am blind; not of being self-centred and egotistical (though you may be all of these things), but of making me self-centred and egotistical; not of advancing your interests in spite of, and in opposition to, the interests of others, but of making me think that I was not doing this; not of being restrained and courteous when this means treading the powerless underfoot, but of making me tread them underfoot in my courtesy."

"I accuse. I accuse you of making me think I am radical, when I am really reactionary, self-centred, powerful and unscrupulous."

"I thought that by not taking sides I was being non-partisan. Is it non-partisan to stand and do nothing while one of my fellow men is being done to death? Is it non-partisan to say 'I have no time for social action—I must work and get a basis for later action'? That may be a wise policy, but why did you lead me to believe that I was non-partisan? You told me to be unbiased in my judgment—I am I, who have received so many of the benefits of modern society and seen so little of its horror, able to be unbiased?"

"I do not mind so much that the rich are self-centred and egotistical, but why did you lead me to believe that they were not? Do not answer me with reasons for the poor being poor, or the rich being rich, but tell me why you have made me believe that the rich are doing everything they can for the poor? If you are not averse to living in this kind of society, why is it that you produce all the justifications and reasons for society being as it is? Why should you be ashamed to see these things around you, when you do not seem to want to take the obvious measures to relieve the situation? You have the necessary power to do this. Why do you tell me you do not know how to do this? Why do you not say you do not know how to change it without inconveniencing yourself?"

"I accuse. I do not mind your being wicked, but why do you tell me you are good? I don't mind your wanting me to act in certain ways for your benefit, trying to force me to do so, but why do you do it with words dripping with honey, why do you say it is for my own good, instead

To You Afar

By Frances MacLellan

Down the black lake the round moon spills its light
A star walks close beside her in the sky,
Black stands a pine alone against the night
And love am I

What does it matter that the dark storm clouds
Gathered in velvet folds along the west
Glow with the crimson of a flaming sun Sinking to rest.

What bodes it that the jagged tips of trees
Cut lacy silhouettes against the dim
Yellow of sunset's afterglow, along
The world's far rim.

There is a pathway, cool and glimmering
From some far shore here to my very feet,
The moon walks on it all across the lake,
Her steps are fleet.

A star looks down and sees her shimmering self
Deep in the water, like a fire-fly,
She has the moon beside her all the night
And none have I.

There is such beauty here and well I know
Such beauty I may never see again,
Yet would I shut my heart against it all
In bitter pain.

An Interview With Gertrude Stein

Let Lucy lily Lucy let Lucy lily lily

—Four Saints in Three Acts.

By George Delhomme

"What think you, pray, Miss Stein," quoth I,
"Of laborites in France?"
With charming ease she winked an eye,
Stepped from a table four feet high
Nibbling crusts of hot mince pie
As she slowly whispered, "Ants!"

Somewhat abashed, I tried once more:
"What think you, then, of Spain?"
Humbly seated on the floor
She hurled a plate at the nearby door,
Set her head for a thunderous roar,
And yodeled, "What a pain!"

Surprised and for the nonce deterred,
I shrank behind the table,
Nor ventured yet another word
While Gertrude murmured, "Ah, a bird!
A very birdy hurdy-gurdy
With feathers on the label.

"My kangaroos with Neon lights
Crow delicately thinner;
Ah! I can weep push-me-tights
Disturb my luscious grammar flights?"
Whereon with avaricious bites
She tore into her dinner.

A bit chagrined, to say the least,
I gazed in nervous wonder
As she smacked her lips in noisy feast
On tissues of a well-cooked beast,
And when the mastication ceased
She broke her prey asunder.

Then brandishing in warlike style
A leg of lamb aloft,
And grinning broadly all the while,
Around the room for many a mile
She walked in measures juvenile
To music sweetly soft.

"It's time," she cried, "for powdered backs
To smile at many things:
At shoes and ships and sealing-wax
And artichokes and carpet racks,
At whiffle-whams and waffle racks
And cabbages and kings.

"We'll smile at politicians' clubs
And muddy paper knives;
At ginger ale and washing tubs
For darling purple lion cubs,
Or Swedish alcoholic rubs
For legislators' wives."

"By all that's sane, what can it mean?"
I thought, but dared not utter.
My puzzled look Miss Stein had seen—
The dancing stopped; her eyes grew green,
And like an angry Tudor queen
Miss Stein began to splutter:

"What ho, you ape! By gad, what chalk!
O human dogs! O beings!
O lovely gurgling speechy talk
In crying bloody butcher balk
Before the wispy wispy stalk
Of planting soupy treeings!"

"O Saints," I breathed, "O reeling face,
O puppy lambs and frisky—
Ye Gods! she's got me off my base!
Let me outta this damfool place!"
I reached the door in a single pace
And stopped below for whiskey.

Senior Stickhandlers Meet Oshawa To-night

Blue Team, in Fourth Came of Year, will Play in Varsity Arena, as Hopes Rise for Local Pucksters to Cop I.L.H.L. Championship

By Ed Goodman
The University of Toronto senior hockey team makes its fourth appearance at the season tonight when they meet Oshawa at Varsity arena. As the season slowly gets under way student opinion around the University is becoming more and more enthusiastic about the team's chances of cupping the I.L.H.L. championship.

Their games to date have shown that the Blue pucksters are a fast skating band with a strong scoring punch. For in their first game they defeated Natives 6 to 2. Port Colborne, a senior O.H.A. team, were their next victims, and they fell 6 to 3. Ace Bailey's charges then journeyed to Midland for a 9 to 3 triumph.

In their victories the team has been paced by Dick Craig and Bill Morrison on the forward line, and Bill L'Heureux on the defence. But anyone on the squad is capable of breaking out in a scoring rash. The club's hopes were also brightened the other day by the news that Jack Maynard's injured knee (Continued on page 6)

Guess you're just as surprised as we are, about us "making" the Literary Issue we mean. Well, it won't happen again, and since literary ability and sports writing are not supposed to be compatible, we won't even attempt the sublime after the ridiculous. However, to wind up the first term it might be appropriate to revive some of the highlights of aforementioned first term.

Sports highlights, of course. Much as we'd like to branch out and include all a co-ed's first term thrills, it just wouldn't be sporting. However, it was quite a day last fall when U.C. took the golf tournament, then Victoria won the tennis laurels and now they're both fighting it out tonight in the field of basketball. The indoor basketball title was clinched by the "A" team at Vic last night, and way back in the season St. Hilda's Frosh won the "best-dressed team" title. To Marg Pickering and Claire Walsh should go degree cum laude for "hardest working executives"; to Marg for her interest in the Basketball Club, and to Claire for her work in the interests of tennis. To Miss Parkes, who is our most reliable source of information and inspiration, go the thanks of all Varsity women who are enjoying the varied sports program,

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shifman

IT WAS SIXTEEN DAYS BEFORE CHRISTMAS. . . . To-day's issue of the Varsity is this term's last paper. Thus the guardian angel of "the season of peace on earth, good-will to men" (don't ask me where) Santa Claus has to make a pre-season personal appearance so that we can give away our gifts.

HERE'S ONE FOR YOU. . .

Dipping into the well-filled bag, Santa, with a chuckle and a hoho, comes out with his gift to the undergraduates of the University of Toronto. To you, the gift is the reminder that some of the finest hockey games are going to be played for you up at the 'Ole Ice House. The first of these games is to be played to-night at the usual hour, 8.30, and the Oshawa G men will provide "the Cause." Monday night you have the opportunity of seeing this year's Goodyear squad. But the treat of many a hockey season comes on Wednesday night when the Trojans, who come all the way from California, meet the Blues. This highly publicized team comes to Canada bringing her native sons back to play under the colours of the University of Southern California (eleven of the fifteen players come from either Edmonton and Calgary). This team, as you already know, is the pride of the Pacific Coast, the toast of Hollywood, the light of Los Angeles, and will probably be the stumbling block in the road of Varsity's unbeaten record.

Another gift to the students came wrapped up in a white package. In fact if we don't get that white cover soon all the plans and promises of the Ski Club, which has gone out of their way to put the Club in the position it should enjoy at the University, will evaporate like an inch of snow in Tunis (we hear its quite hot there). But should it ever snow then the skiers of the school are in for a swell time at the University Club. New trails have been cut, accommodations for sleeping has been set up, the cabin has been equipped and everything point towards a superb season. Yes everything but snow. . . .

AND LOOK WHAT I'VE GOT FOR YOU. . .

Looking at his list compiled from the letters handed to him at Estor's and Simpson's (that'll keep both Santas from getting mad at me) Santaighed deep in the bag and came out with the gift Stevens has asked for. The gift to Coach Stevens is the news that Murray, Ottawa, Griffin, Londoners of Peterborough, Golab of Sarina, and Sammy Sward of the Beaches and probably a few more east-enders are going to get an education next fall and you'll never guess where. . . . What? you can guess? . . . Yep they're all going to Queen's, and we know what you are thinking but it isn't that at all. Its just that they live a little closer to Kingston dwelling out there in the east-end and maybe Santa threw the boys in Queen's better than he does here in Toronto.

The coaches of the other universities haven't been forgotten by any means. Why Teddie Reeve has just been sent a copy of all the All-Star football selections in Canada . . . he seems to have missed up on a few players. . . . Johnny Edwards, basketball coach at Queen's, has been sent a carload of aspirins for the coming season because after Toronto and Western get through he'll be wondering whether Queen's are still in the league.

I DIDN'T FORGET YOU

The Athletic Office is also on Santa's list because they have been so helpful at all times. Their gift is complete freedom from the annoying and pestering sport reporters who troop in and out the office all day asking silly questions like how many ping pong balls have been used up to date.

A way down in one of the folds of the bag is the sport star's gift. To all those who have made it possible for us to print daily reports of the teams is given the most precious of gifts at school . . . time. You can now go into a huddle with yourselves, figure out which essay to do first and then let 'er go. . . . You lucky guys.

Intramural Highlights Of Sports Reviewed

OVER THE NET

By Hal Rubenstein

U.C. Seniors naved a step closer in their parade toward the intercollegiate volleyball championship last night when they humbled the Forestry septet in two straight games by scores of 15-2 and 15-1 in the upper gym in Hart House.

Forestry put up a much better fight than the score would indicate but stood no chance against the superior team-play and spiking of the Arsenians. At the start of the first game the serve went back and forth with neither side scoring, but soon afterwards U.C. jumped into a 5-0 lead and were never headed.

The second tilt started off as though it would be a real dog-fight with Forestry rallying, but U.C. soon began to ring the bell, with Savoy serving 8 straight points. After that the woodmen never had a look-in, the game winding up 15-1. Prominent in the Arsenians' victory was Charlesworth, who turned in another stellar performance. Savoy and Rose also distinguished themselves. For the

Standings of Various Colleges at Mid-Season Point is Considered in Light of Interfaculty Contest for T. A. Reed Trophy

By Owen Prichard

As the Michelson term draws to a close, a glance in retrospect over the season's activities shows some interesting highlights in Intramural Athletics. The faculty men have played well for their respective teams, on the campus and in the pool and gyms. The T. A. Reed Trophy, emblematic of interfaculty supremacy, is a coveted prize, and the different colleges are contesting keenly for its possession. There are also a number of interfaculty championships in individual sports which are yet to be decided.

S.P.S. is maintaining a comfortable lead in the T. A. Reed Trophy race, their 1949 points giving them a good margin over the second place Knos men, who have 1209. Nyctelic, last year's runners-up for the title, trail Knos with 1221 points.

SENIOR BASKETEERS BRUSH WITH CORNELL

Warren Stevens' Hoop Boys Are Bound for Ithaca, N.Y., Where They will Play Their Fourth Game in U.S.A.

By Mike Greenstein

Warren Stevens' senior basketball team culminate their second invasion of American colleges tomorrow night when they travel to Ithaca, N.Y., to take on the powerful Cornell quintet. It will be their fourth game below the border and they may be without the services of "Scrubby" Aitchison.

On the 17th of this month they meet Buffalo State on the latter's home floor and then rest up till January 13th, and 14th, when they once more pack their bags and invade St. Lawrence U. and Clarkson Tech. This will be their final appearance in the United States. A week later Niagara University come here to repeat the visit our boys paid there earlier in the season and on the 27th the intercollegiate season opens at Montreal with Varsity playing McGill.

In spite of the formidable array of hoop stars assembled at Western University, chances are bright that Toronto will regain the laurels they lost last year to their rivals from London. Varsity was pretty fortunate when Bill Rogin and Aitchison decided to make teaching their profession and enrolle at O.C.E. The husky centre and scrappy guard have been playing together for many years both at Assumption College and with Windsor and Detroit teams. They are the veterans of the squad in point of experience and can be depended upon to hold their own in any company.

Pooling the strongest team Varsity has had for a good number of years, Coach Winst McCatty will send his mermen to battle tomorrow night with high hopes of winning the intercollegiate water polo crown. Whether the Blue team will be playing Queen's or McGill, who have held the title for the last five years, is not yet decided. McGill and Queen's will play off to-night in Kingston and the winners will journey to Varsity to meet the Blues for this year's championship.

Meanwhile, the Blue team has been playing a strenuous series of games in the Ontario Water Polo League. Their showing has been good although on occasions they have run into decided slumps. This week, however, the Blue-nators have been right in form. On Tuesday night they defeated High Park 5-1 and Wednesday night, playing their hardest game this year, they held the mighty Central Y team to a 2-2 tie, showing a slight superiority in their passing plays.

Weeks of hard training, early retiring, and proper nourishment has the team in a peak of condition, which is, as Coach McCatty says, "the biggest threat we have seen for years." The personnel of the squad is as follows: Bob Taylor: On the team for his third and last year, a phenomenal, well-nigh unbeatatable goal-keeper.

Bill Laurs: On the team for his second and last year, a stalwart defence-man who forms an almost impenetrable defence when coupled with—

Tom Jackson: A new discovery who is in his fourth year.

Ledie Earl: Captain of the team, and one of the fastest swimmers and hardest checkers on the squad. Ledie, or Nels, as he is more intimately known, is playing for his third and last time.

Reed Menzies: Playing his first out of a hoped-for 5 year period, bears watching.

Doug Green and Oliver Maher: Both playing for the first time, are the scoring threats of the team.

John Adams and Bill McGill: Two forwards, will probably ally in dispelling any designs Varsity's opponents may have on the championship.

For five years now McGill have held the title and out of the past twenty-five years have lost it only six times, to Varsity. The fact that in the past two years Varsity haven't lost a single game in their own pool indicates that the seventh victory in a quarter-century will probably lodge in Hart House. The dance following the game will see lots of jubilation for some team.

The much publicized trip down to California that the team takes during the Christmas holidays has been revamped and widened during the past few weeks.
After their game with Goodyears on Monday and the season's attraction on the fourteenth when U. of Southern California come to the Arena, the Blues head down to Spokane, Washington, to play Glensoga U.
From Washington they head westward to British Columbia for several engagements. Then down to California to meet Loyola, the Pacific Coast champions. Then they work their way home via New York, Boston and Cambridge. To make their next home appearance on Jan. 14th with U. of Montreal.
It is a long tough schedule and the boys in blue will have to show a great deal of class to win the title they lost six years ago.

"Too bad!" He's a complacent little fool. Probably he means he writes passionate letters to Greta Garbo and is afraid of a live woman.

Why doesn't he grow up?

"Well," Campbell said briefly, "there's always hope."

Hugh got rid of Campbell at the College, for Campbell always went to lectures. Hugh watched his precise little walk carry him out of sight, and sneered. Maybe it's my fault, he wondered, that I want to bash his silly face. I'm not tolerant enough. Not sympathetic. Don't care a damn for my fellow creatures. Maybe it is me, not him, that's wrong. Maybe, but not likely—no one who embraces all humanity in his regard can claim intelligence. There's no discrimination in him, no judgment. That's it, no discrimination. Now if I go for coffee, perhaps Sondra will be there. We'll settle this Hamlet business.

His pace quickened.

III

The coffee shop was singularly empty, devoid not only of Sondra but of any of Hugh's acquaintances. Hugh drank his coffee alone, stirring with a rhythmic spoon the incidents of the dance. Those minutes of uncertainty while Sondra danced with Ray, his bitterness on their hand-in-hand return, the explosive quarrel which followed his sarcastic greeting. He'd said something about her playing the Dane—some reference to the costume and the shape of her legs, a minor thing—and she'd blown. That had been no minor tiff, but a duel of barbed and caustic words, with Ray playing an aloof and highly amused witness. Ray was a menace, with his pose of imperturbability. There was always something superior, even condescending, in his demeanour, as though he were disinterested. "He must be as indifferent to people," Hugh thought, "as this coffee is to my stirring it."

Hugh sighed tentatively, his lips involuntarily retracting from the hot liquid. A voice disturbed his concentration.

"I always use a saucer. Let's it cool faster."

It was Dorothy.

even before he sees you, and pipe earnestly "How do you do, sir? I am so-and-so." The victim is usually so startled that he reveals his own name without thinking, and then is doomed. So with Hugh.

There was no telling when Campbell would ask those painfully intimate questions to which an evasion is an admission, nor when he would expound, as confidentially as a street beggar, certain personal experiences of his own. "Campbell," Hugh told himself, "is definitely a menace."

But he was a menace from which there was no escape. Hugh realized that as soon as he saw Campbell peering at him. Neither monosyllabic reticence nor autobiographical verbosity deterred Campbell; neither sarcasm nor insult would drive him away once he had attached himself. Hugh had tried, with all the devices of suggestion, to nip acquaintance in the bud before it flowered into what passes for friendship, but finally resigned himself to an acceptance of Campbell's existence coupled with a fluctuating resistance to Campbell's advances. Apprehension, I believe, is what you'd call it to-day.

On this morning, the more so since it followed last night, Hugh was particularly resistant. But Campbell was insistent. His boyish, not-yet-broken voice continued to deprecate the air's clarity.

"An invigorating morning, Hugh, isn't it?"

"Huh." Why did this have to happen so early in the day?

"Doesn't it make you feel—well, invigorated?"

"Yes, very." If he begins one of his monologues, I can go back to last night and not bother to answer him.

"A morning like this," Campbell discussed, "makes your skin tingle. It makes you feel good all over."

"Yes." Now where did I break off when this ass appeared? Yes, Sondra was saying she wanted to do Hamlet for the Spring Show, and I told her she was an exhibitionist. Then Ray cut in. Strange that I should resent his cutting in. Then when they danced together—

"It's like a cold shower," Campbell explained, "or even like being in love. Have you ever been in love?"

"Huh." And while they danced, I was alone—that loneliness you get in crowded places. And after—

"I said," Campbell repeated, "Have you ever been in love?"

"What? Oh, have I ever been— Well, I don't know." That's honest, I don't know. Love? He probably thinks it's a spiritual enlightenment. Well, for that matter, what do I know about it? I wonder if I'm in love with Sondra?

"You usually know," Campbell assured him. "Sometimes everybody else knows too."

"Do they, now?" If everybody else knows, Sondra would know. And Ray. He could tell me.

"Oh, yes, everybody." Campbell was confident. "They see it in your eyes."

"You can't hide it?" Perhaps that's why Ray stares at me so much. My eyes, eh? Ray could tell me if I'm in love with her. Unless— Unless he is too. I wonder—

"You might hide it if you're clever," Campbell assured him. "But usually the woman can tell."

"They're more subtle, aren't they?" Then Sondra would know. She hasn't given any sign—but then, how would I recognize a sign?

"Yes, they're subtle," Campbell agreed, "and very difficult to understand."

"Very." He closes his mouth with the same finality as a Victorian aunt pronouncing on a niece's immortality. I wonder if he knows what he's talking about? "Look here, Campbell."

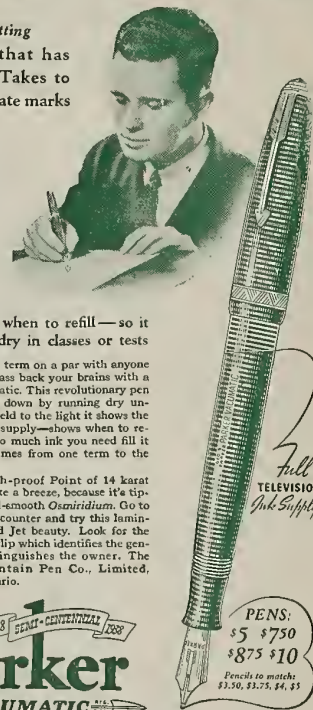

"Yes, Hugh?"

"Have you ever been in love?"

"Well," Campbell pondered, "only from a distance. Yes, only from a distance."

Without looking up, Hugh said "Sit down, brat. We'll have words."

Dorothy was the sort of girl you could have a platonic friendship with. She made a good companion, an amusing talker, a sympathetic confidante, without intruding her sex into the relationship. Hugh often marvelled at her lack of predatory ostentation. So different from Sondra who was continually aware of herself and the impression she was making. Women, as Campbell had said, are very difficult to understand.

Dorothy, Hugh realized, as her morning face descended to the level of his eye, Dorothy was less confusing than some. Perhaps it was because he wasn't tormented by recurring doubts about Dorothy. Perhaps he hadn't thought of her as much, nor in the same way. Perhaps—

"The saucer gives you more surface. You can blow pretty ripples in it, like a lake."

"But," said Hugh solemnly, "it makes such a stirp when you drink." I wonder who she dreams about?

"How are you on advice to the lovelorn?" Dorothy's eyes were mischievous.

"Articulate but inexperienced." This sounds like more than chit-chat. "Why?"

"Tell me, as one with a fraternal disinterest in my welfare, what shall I do?"

"What's happened?" What does she mean by fraternal disinterest?

"I have been approached."

"The S.P.C.A.?"

"Worse."

"Who?" Is she telling this as an anecdote, or a suggestion?

"His name is Campbell."

"Oh, yes, Campbell. Does his mother know about this?"

"I think he's doing it on his own." Dorothy leaned across the table confidentially, and stage-whispered: "Do you think his intentions are honourable?"

"He wouldn't know about anything else." She can't be serious, but how in hades do you know when a woman's serious?

"I think he's using me." Dorothy subsided, struck a pose Self-sacrifice, and said with beautiful resignation: "I'm a fool to make another woman jealous. That is my fate, to be a means."

"Bravo, Miss Bernhard!" The damnable thing about women is that you never know whether they've stopped acting or merely slipped into another role. "Who is this other woman?"

"I would spare you this, but my grief cries for utterance." Again the stage-whisper: "Her name—is Sondra!" Dorothy widened her eyes into a meaningful glare.

"No, no, I am undone!" This is all very fine, this play-acting, but there's fire behind it. What the devil does she mean,—Sondra? She must be driving at something I'm too dull to get. Better play up.

"You lie, wench. You malign my lady. Fie, you slut!"

Hugh lifted a salt shaker threateningly and half rose in the booth. Dorothy cowered. They held the tableau for a moment, glaring and immobile. Before they came out of it, a voice mocked with faint amusement:

"Very pretty. Very pretty, indeed. Let me pay the rent."

It was Ray.

With the three of them in the cubicle, there wasn't the same room for expression. After a minute's polite conversation, Dorothy left them. Her eyes were brimming.

TO YOU AFAR

The tree leans on the bosom of the sky,
The clouds in deep embrace the sun unfold,
The moon and star together walk, and I
Have none to hold.

Such loveliness cannot be born alone
Its weight is far too great for me to bear,
And now I sit enfolded by it all
With none to share.

If there were none in all the world around
And I were used to being quite alone
I would have learned to taste of loneliness
And take it for my own—

But there, as far away as is the moon
Gliding her stately way along the sky,
You are, as inaccessible as stars,
And here am I.

I cannot shut my heart against the night,
This beauty seeps even in the unwilling eye,
Yet could I be no sadder were I damned
Blind to eternity.

IV

"Pleasant game!" Ray said. "Interesting example of the attraction of the sexes. Stimulating exercise."

Hugh stirred his coffee impassively. "If you're referring to your arrival, you're carrying Freud to extremes." What does he mean, interesting example?

"Not at all. Perfect illustration of the display-of-prowess technique. Similar to the peacock's strutting, with reversed initiative."

"Doesn't make sense." I wonder if he's baiting me? If Sondra comes in now, there'll be a cold ten minutes. "What do you mean by reversed initiative?"

The female pursues. Characteristic of our species."

"You mean Dorothy?"

"Who else?"

"She's chasing me?"

"Didn't you know?"

"You're crazy." He may be trying to divert my interest from Sondra. He'd do that if he wanted her. "Dorothy's otherwise engaged."

Ray smiled tolerantly. "She's been after you since term began."

"What about Sondra?" I'll ask him "What about Sondra?" I'll find out whether he's interested in her. If he's evasive, I'll know. If he twitches an eyebrow, I'll know. I'll ask him "What about Sondra?"

I suppose she's chasing somebody too?"

Ray was amused. "She seems to be running away from most of the time. I can't tell whether it's a stratagem or whether she means it."

"Who's the victim?" Now I'll know.

"Seems to be this chap Campbell."

"CAMPBELL?"

"Yes, know him?"

"He's a stupid little beggar." He must be pulling my leg. That's it, he's trying to side-track me. If Sondra would come now, we could have this out. It wouldn't be pleasant. If Sondra would come now—

"Women," Ray said, "are very difficult to understand."

There was a lull while Hugh sought a new approach. Ray relaxed comfortably, preparing to embark on a dissertation on women. Hugh opened his mouth, and closed it. Ray cleared his throat. Before he spoke, a third voice interrupted:

"Hello! Mind if we join you?"

It was Campbell again.

Hugh looked up belligerently. The beaming smugness on Campbell's face infuriated him, but all the anger ebbed when he saw Sondra. It was painful to know that Campbell was holding her elbow protectively, and that she didn't mind.

"Hello, Sondra," Hugh said.

She ignored him.

"Hello, Sondra," Ray said.

"Move over, Ray, and let me in." Sondra said with warmth.

"Remember last night, when I told you about the way I'd do Polonius' murder? Well, I've changed my mind."

Before Small Crowd, the Blue Basketeers Suffer Tremendous Shellacking in Archbold Gymnasium at Syracuse

Syracuse, N.Y., Dec. 8.—Syracusans senior basketeers shellacked Warren Stevens' '38-'39 issue of Blue hoopsters 50 to 17 before a slim crowd in the Archbold gymnasium tonight. This game marked the opening of the Orange court season, the fifteenth successive term under Coach Lew Andreas. Captain Bob Stewart and Wilmet Sidat-Singh sparked the Hill attack with 13 and 11 points respectively. Moose Rogin, burly Varsity guard of senior rugby fame, was the only Torontonian to shine. All of Toronto's seven points in the first half were garnered by the newcomer from Assumption College.

The half time score was 29-7. McGregor and Mahoney each scored baskets in the second session, while Minehan made two gift throws count.

Syracuse (50): Stewart (13), Twiford (6), Sidat-Singh (11), Jensen Kouray, Haler (7), McMillen (2), MacNaughton (2), Schroeder (6), Konstanty (2), Thompson (2), Marcus, Toronto (17): Cahill, Mahoney (2), Lavarney, Minehan (2), McGregor (2), Humenik, Rogin (10), Acheson, Singer (1).

man, you forgot your lights! Out reaches a weak stream of yellow cleaving the night for but a few feet. They might as well be out, those lights—remember to get them fixed in the morning.

Ah! but the wind is cool on your face. Let your body relax. Free your mind from its worries and let this speeding monster take you where it will. Next week you think you will take the car to Hamilton. You will have your license then. That is what you are thinking of, and the stars look down—cold October stars—as the wind gives you new life. Step on the gas! See how fast it will go. The poles slip by. The streets come quickly and pass quickly. It is time to go back.

You are looking at the stars, you are thinking of Hamilton and your driver's permit, when you see it—a black shape moving in front of you. Hamilton, driver, stars and—someone in front of you. Someone in front of you! Jam on your brakes. Your foot goes down, uncontrollably on the gas. Too late you reach for the emergency. The car leaps under you. The black wheels skid in unison. The car sweeps sideways. And the bumper hits the black shape, hits it hard. Out of control the monster hurdles the sidewalk. You wrench the wheel around. You are on the road and moving quickly. Bewildered thoughts whistle through your mind and are gone. What are you to do? The lights were dim. I have no license. They would send me to jail. I cannot go back. But there is confusion in your mind. Go back, go back before it is too late. I am not going back. He may be dying, in pain, and you can save him. I must go home—quickly. They will find you there, make no mistake. There is no escape unless you turn back. Pity, strength, honor, have you none of these? What you were going to do when the war came! Medals, wounds and glory. And how you dreamt of ending the cruelty in the world and the pain—even should you die in such attempt. Remember! And here there is pain, but no glory, here courage is needed and you have only fear.

Yes, I know—but I can see my mother's eyes and the deep hurt in them. I can hear the whispers of my one-time friends. Yes, and I can feel the hate of some, those who cannot understand, who do not know how hard it is, how terribly hard. They would arrest me and people would come to my trial and they would look at me and then they would put me in jail, for a month, two months, a year. It would not matter how long—it would be too long. No future again to think of—only the past rising to haunt me. No, it is impossible, I cannot go back. I will not go back.

They had come for Russell Laturney the next day. A fat little woman walking home from a church tea saw the accident and her sharp eyes caught and registered the number on the license plate. A few minutes after she had looked down on the broken bones of what had been a man, the police arrived and asked questions. That was two weeks ago, two weeks ago and Russell Laturney sits in the courtroom charged with manslaughter. The lights flicker . . . flicker over the strained waiting face and the magistrate wipes sweat from his forehead. Laturney's lawyer touches his client on the shoulder. The magistrate has finished wiping his brow and is speaking. "Russell Laturney you are charged with having recklessly and without excuse caused the death of one D. J. Harris on the night of October 17th while driving an automobile. How do you plead? Guilty or not guilty?" Russell Laturney looked through the ghoully questioning eyes of the bald head on the bench. He was thinking of his future while his lawyer stood up to make answer.

Honourable Mention

Brief Communion

By Arthur E. Moloney

Life that walks with quiet feet,
So softly we forget how fleet,
Shall bring to me before I die
A peaceful summer day, when I Shall pluck the thorn of duty out,
Free my heart and, running, shout
With long forsaken glees,
In solitary revelry.
Through fields and flowery meadows
green
Alone, alone, to dance unseen,
Mad with the joy of light and shade
And all the beauty God has made.

In the mountain's rocky sides
Is a cave wherein the fides
Of time unheeded flow and ebb;
There shall I lie, caught in a web
Of agelessness. The cosmic heat
In which all joy and sorrow meet,
Echoing greater power, shall heal
Futility and folly's woe!
Peace and calm shall come to me
Through vision of eternity.

Then, happy once again, I'll leap Nimble-footed up the steep
To the mountain-top, where I,
Hands up-lifted to the sky,
With singing heart may thank the sun
For this, my brief communion.

cultist, trained to be a high-pressure super-salesman, easily outshines the physician in his bedside manner.

But the most tragic reason for the decline of the general practitioner comes from within the medical profession itself. In the past two or three decades, the specialist has insidiously tended to displace the old family doctor. The situation has come to such a pass that the layman has as an essential part of his medical mentality the absurd notion that the family doctor cannot be entrusted with any serious malady. Thus, where formerly the family physician performed a tonsilectomy for a routine fee of five dollars, the specialist often requires an overnight stay in the hospital and a fee of many times that amount per tonsil—a polite form of robbery. Yet the treatment in both cases may have been identical. But the only advantage in being treated by a high-priced operator for a simple ailment is the "social distinction" conferred. The rise of specialization has dangerously narrowed the role of the general practitioner to that of a "pill doctor" or at best to that of a clearing house for the specialists—a glorified information bureau who provides a "sucker list" for the latter. Surrounded as he is by an arsenal of formidable mechanical apparatus—which the ordinary doctor cannot afford—the specialist, like the cultist, has convinced the patient that the more elaborate the machinery the better the doctor.

The physician also suffers from the competition of public clinics. The patient, on the assumption that clinical treatment is both cheaper and more adequate than treatment in the physician's office, and often driven by economic need, forces himself to overlook the poor-house atmosphere of a public dispensary, the long hours of waiting when he should perhaps be in bed, the insufficient attention, the lack of courtesy and sympathy. Public clinics have been responsible for the rise of the pseudo-specialist. Even though there may be no remuneration, the young doctor, seeking recognition and developing claustrophobia in an empty office is quite anxious to get a clinical position. He often secretly imagines that patients taking a liking to him, will become private clients. Because the doctor often treats the disease—usually a chronic one—and not the patient—the routine drudgery may be demoralizing and not necessarily make him an expert in a specialized field of medicine. Thus, by long servitude in clinical medicine, a flood of semi-specialists has been let loose on the market, with resulting harmful effect on the practice of the general doctor (and it need hardly be added, on the practice of the genuine specialist).

Yet another factor which explains why the general practice of medicine is becoming moribund, is the fact that a visit to or by the doctor is a separate business transaction. When the doctor was retained by an annual or semi-annual fee, the patient went to him as soon as he felt the slightest illness. In the Chinese tradition, the physician felt ill when his patient became sick. But when the patient must pay so much per visit he either attempts to ignore his ailment—depending on the self-healing capacity of the body—or tries self-medication, trusting what the advertisements say about his symptoms and their cure. Often enough (although illegitimately) the corner druggist is only too happy to recommend some patent medicine or may suggest his own concoction. If the sick patient develops serious symptoms such as the inability to swallow, or if he suffers unbearable pain, or expectorates blood, someone, despite the lack of finances, in desperation sends for a doctor. Usually the patient is only worth one visit. If he dies, almost invariably through no fault of the doctor, the latter's reputation has been seriously damaged. If perchance the patient recovers, the doctor may be pestered for weeks over the phone on the strength of that one visit.

FAR EAST STUDENTS IN DUGOUT SHELTERS

Chinese Students, Professors Travel a Thousand Miles on Foot to Seek Shelter in Cliffs from Japanese Bombs

It is only about a thousand miles from Changsha to Kuning in Yunnan, yet 337 Chinese students and professors walked the distance when bombing raids made it impossible for the "temporary university" to carry on there and no other means of transportation was available.

At the new site accommodation was limited. Caves were dug in the cliffs for classrooms and dormitories. These had the advantage of being fairly warm and relatively bomb-proof. Temporary buildings of bamboo matting also served as dining-halls, and filled with three-deck beds, were used as barracks.

In order to aid these and many other students who are carrying on under great difficulties, the committee which is charged with raising funds for Far Eastern Relief are holding an Oriental Party on Friday the thirteenth of January at the Women's Union. Novel and distinctively Chinese entertainment is being planned, as well as modern dancing and Chinese dishes. Contributions to the fund may be left at the S.A.C. office in Hart House.

The second of the 1938-39 series of Victoria College Chapel services will be held on Sunday, December 11 at 11 a.m. Rev. W. C. Lockhart, Ph.D., will be guest preacher, and will continue the new series on "What Does Christianity Say?", with a sermon presenting "The Christian View of the Bible". Dr. Lockhart is a graduate of the University of Toronto and of Emmanuel College, and obtained the Ph.D. degree at Edinburgh. He is at present secretary of the Student Christian Movement at the University of Toronto.

eyes looked dark and dead, as though a fine veil of ice had been drawn over them. When she spoke to him he did not answer, and when she took him by the arm he still remained silent and stony. Then she would shake him, not hard at all, but quietly and gently until at last he would turn around and gaze at her and slowly recognize her. And for a long time afterwards he would be still and gloomy, and kiss her abstractedly, and his eyes would be remote and troubled with dreams that Lotti could not fathom.

People said Petro was queer. It was even whispered that Petro was a dark evil-looking Italian, and it was hinted in obscure sources that he had beaten his poor wife to death. Nobody knew much about Petro's father, and though Petro was a lad well-enough liked, many were suspicious of him by reason of his strange foreign parentage.

But Lotti hadn't cared. She had laughed at all of them, all the silly old women who had nothing to do but talk! She had her Petro and she loved him for the way he looked and the things they had discovered together—the little birds and the secret berry-patch, and best of all, their hidden pool in the forest.

Yet, in the end, people had turned out to be right about him, about that very Petro. Suddenly he went off to a neighbouring town, without a word to anyone—not even saying anything to Lotti. Then came the astonishing news that he had married a widow, rich and much older than himself. When she heard this, Lotti fled into the fields for three days and there she hid herself until they found her. For a long time afterwards she would grieve and weep about the house till her mother said she would drive them all mad, what with her tears and her incessant moaning about the place. But Lotti could not bear to face people, she was so ashamed and heart-broken, till her mother said it might not be a bad thing if Lotti were to go to America. And it wasn't as if they would be sending her into a wilderness over there in America; no, for didn't she have an aunt, her mother's own sister living in a big city? And the tears her mother had wept at parting were only foolish mother's tears, and not those that come from real sorrow. For little could she know that Lotti would find her American aunt strange and cold and surrounded with the clamorous hunger of her own children.

Ah, they knew little indeed of the factory and city on the farm at home. Lotti looked down at the dozen grains of sand that still remained in her open palm, and she shivered. Here was no Petro, and no sunshine to race about in; there was no red sandy road winding past this American city. Here were only hunger and foolish memories, and the dreary future of not being able to sew enough shirts.

terior of the building that one can spend several interesting hours about the building without even looking at a book. Itrian nuage marble, decorated plaster dome ceilings, classic busts, murals by modern masters, quotations from the classics, rooms tastefully finished in cherry, walnut, pine, oak, maple or teak, portraits of great men, all contribute to giving South Hall an appearance worthy of its purpose—the storing of mankind's wisdom.

Among the many special rooms and departments included in this majestic edifice are the Columbia College Library (undergraduate), the Butler Library of Philosophy (housed in a beautiful room with a mezzanine gallery, a room somehow both austere and cheerful), the Library of the School of Business, and the Modern Language Reading Room. On the third floor is the main delivery desk, the heart of the library. Direct communication is effected with all stacks by the electric book lift, the book conveyor, the pneumatic tube system, and telephone.

Also to be found on the third floor are the Main Reading Room with a seating capacity of 300, the Periodical Room with shelf space for 1300 publications, the Catalogue and Reference Rooms, the administrative offices, and the Browning Room. This latter, finished in pine in Early American style, has a purpose similar to that fulfilled by Hart House Library, is furnished with easy chairs and sofas, and is set off by a large wood-burning fireplace.

defied the tribunal that it was deemed necessary to execute and bury him then and there, to prevent further outbreaks. Another insurgent expressed his dissent at the counsel's remarks on the character of rebels by the reserved but meaningful declaration, "I may be a traitor, but I'm still a gentleman."

Just as the court was preparing to order the death penalty, George Stoddard, the Speaker, entered, barely in time to rescue his supporters, and adjourned the House. The prime minister resigned "under pressure", to be replaced by the Hon. William Wood.

The Governor-General then delivered an address in which he stated his pride in the efforts of the House for peace, order and goodwill in the government, and declared its sessions for this year at an end.

Honourable Mention, Serious Verse

Early Snow

By Miriam Dworkin

What if your first love passed with rain
A year or two ago?
She may return with wind again,
And winds so vagrant blow;
She may return with wind again
And wake the old heart's woe.

What if she dreams her way to you
When April nights are high?
Secrets that the memory knew
Remind the heart to sigh,
Secrets that the memory knew
Will live before they die.

And if your first love comes in spring
Then silent I must go,
And walk my careless ways and sing
The strange things that I know,
And walk my autumn ways and sing
My song of early snow.

On First Experiencing An Accute Appendix

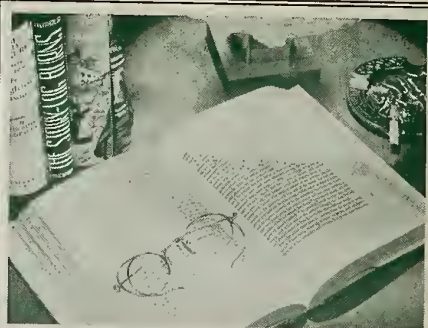

By J. A. Romeyn

Oh have I travelled in the realms of cold,
And many goodly coughs and sneezes seen;
Through many influences have I been
Which I in fealty to my doctor hold.
Oh of one great disease had I been told
A cute appendix ruled as my demise,
Yet never did I feel its pure serene,
Till I let appetite the hand of hunger hold.
Then felt I like some doctor hearing cries
From a new patient entering his den,
Or like the surgeon, when with eagle eyes
He gazed at my eclyptic, and all his men
Diagnosed it with a wild surmise:
Silent—he plunges in—my abdomen.

enough for a commercial periodical to considering using.

"To say that not one of the manuscripts was word-perfect and spelling-perfect is no very great censure. Across my desk every day come scores of fiction manuscripts from all over the world, a considerable proportion from really famous writers, and only on rare occasions do I get a manuscript which approximates the ideal from the standpoint of good English and correct spelling. I feel, however, that there is very little excuse for university undergraduates making obvious errors in English. In fairness to the contestants, I shall not pick out any one example. Instead I shall give it as my opinion, for what it is worth, that there is a grave need for improvement either in our language itself or in the teaching of it. Otherwise the editor's job on any periodical would not be half so difficult. Perhaps this is something that your specialists in English and pedagogy would do well to take under their wings."

"Robert Greer Allen, whose short story, 'Coffee at Eleven', appealed to me as meriting the first prize, submitted three short stories. All three show promise of greater things to come, but of the three 'Coffee at Eleven' has the most interesting plot, keenest penetration and most readable style. Its chief fault lies in its staccato treatment—staccato not only in style but also in presentation. By this I mean that the author has seized on several good ideas and in the process of translating them has his character jump from spot to spot like a jazz pianist striking an arpeggio.

"Perhaps Allen should lend his abilities to the stage. Several of his epigrams, if they appeared in play form, would most certainly delight any sophisticated theatre audience. One that stood out in the prize-winning story is worth quoting: 'The damnable thing about women is that you never know whether they have stopped acting or merely stepped into another role.'

"The second best story submitted was also by Allen, but no doubt he himself would agree that no prize is enough for any contestant.

"Miriam Dworkin, whose fictional sketch, 'A Jar of Raisins', merits the second prize, is another contestant who, if she decides to serve her apprenticeship in the grueling business of fiction writing, has, it seems to me, a chance of becoming a 'big name'. She submitted four fiction manuscripts, one of which she calls a prose poem. All four have that certain something which lifts them out of the ordinary, but in no case is her plotting sufficient to grip the reader's attention. Her prize-winner, 'A Jar of Raisins', is what we in the business call a 'typed' story. When she reads this she will probably hold up her hands in horror, not realizing that the sort of fiction which appears in Story or any such 'highbrow' magazine can be just as 'typed' as the old 'girl meets boy' formula.

"William B. Wood, whose 'Hit and Run' deserves the third award, also shows little plotting ability. His story is merely in the nature of a sketch and even as a sketch shows certain amateurish traits. One such is his use of punctuation and italics to cover up an inability to convey the time element properly.

"Of the essays submitted only two were worth considering. The prize-winner, 'Competitive Medicine' by Mitchell M. Littner, has some controversial appeal but is hardly important enough to be thoroughly convincing, nor dramatic enough to stir the reader to action. Littner states a good case for reformation of the medical profession and of medical treatment in general, but he could have done better had he indulged in fewer generalizations and given a few case histories written in a human-interest way. Perhaps, however, my judgment in this connection is biased by the fact that as a newspaperman I have learned to avoid all but factual statements.

"I have a feeling that the author should put aside his essay and read it after he has spent about ten years in practice.

"J. A. Romeyn, whose essay, 'Accutation', in my opinion is worthy of a second prize, also deals with a controversial subject—notably the ever-recurring quarrel between the ideas of youth and of age—but he does it in a somewhat different, even though didactic, manner."

THIRTY-SIX STUDENTS FROM AFRICA SEE FIRST SNOW

S.A.C. Entertains Men from Witwatersrand University who are Here to Study Mining Conditions

Thirty-six undergraduate students from the University of Witwatersrand, who found snow to be the most impressive thing in the northern hemisphere, were entertained here by the Student's Administrative Council last week.

All of them students of mining engineering, they had come to Canada under the leadership of Professor Jesse to study mining conditions in Northern Ontario.

Under the auspices of the S.A.C., the South African students were conducted on a tour of the University and Hart House by E. A. Macdonald, on Saturday afternoon they were welcomed to the University by President Cody.

They also met Dean Mitchell of the School of Engineering and Professor Williams of the Mining Department.

Although they had been previously entertained in New York, they voted their visit in Toronto the best of the whole tour because of the snow. They were escorted to Riverdale Park by Mr. Macdonald to try out new toboggans, skates and so on, which they had bought for the occasion.

Dean of Boston University and President Cody Arrange Additional Grants in Aid of Medical Research

The bursar of the University has announced receipt of a cheque for $625 from the Supreme Council of Scottish Rite Masons of Boston and the promise of additional grants to total $2,500 to aid the department of medical research.

The grant is said to have resulted from a conference between Dr. Cody, president of the University, and Dr. Melvin M. Johnson, dean of the Law School, of Boston University and Supreme Grand Commander of the Northern Jurisdiction of the Masons.

Dr. G. E. Hall, associate professor in the Department of Medical Research, provoked the interest in the department by his work on dementia praecox, and the Mental Hygiene committee of the Scottish Rite Masons recommended the grant to aid Dr. Hall in his work.

Fred Evis will Officiate as the Scarlet and Gold Freshmen Inaugurate the New Social Season

The 472 class at Vic will hit a new high tonight as its second party of the college year takes the form of an Aviation Ball.

Burwash Hall, scene of the event, will be decorated to produce the true airy atmosphere with aeroplanes suspended from the ceiling illuminated by spotlight.

Fred Evis' band will tear down a few numbers like "The Dying Young Man" and "Flying Down to Rio" to further the effect. The revellers will dress accordingly or not as the inclination strikes. The presentation of a number possibly from "The Pinafore" by the Vic Music Club is another feature of the evening.

Mary Carter, vice-president of the class, said that the aim at something new and different resulted in the idea of the Aviation Ball. She added that "of course it will be a no-crasher party." Activities begin at 8.15.

Political Economy Department Co-operates with Sales Club In Lecture Series

A series of lectures on marketing is being offered by the department of political economy of the University of Toronto in co-operation with the Advertising and Sales Club of Toronto to commence on Thursday, Jan. 12. The lectures will be given as a result of requests made by a prominent oil company and several other business groups. They will be given by experts in their respective fields from Canada and various parts of the United States. The first is to be delivered on Jan. 12 and will be given by Professor K. W. Taylor of McMaster University.

EIGHT BUCKS PER HEADACHE

As 1938 passed into history with the stroke of a pen the New Year's Eve some 2,000 students of the university celebrated the arrival of its successor.

These celebrations were of many different types, in many different places, and of varying degrees of cost. In this latter department, the average cost of the evening per student was about eight dollars, which means that over fifty thousand dollars of the students' money went into circulation to mark the passing of another year.

Today the students are wondering where the next fifty thousand is going to be obtained.

The celebrated celebrations were scattered over all parts of the continent. During the holidays students found their way to such widely-scattered places as Miami,

RICHARD HIMBER TO SERENADE SCHOOL AT HOMERS

Trump Davidson's Band Added as Two Floors Secured at Royal York Ensures Plenty of Space for Guests

Richard Himber and his orchestra will appear at this year's School At Home, according to information received from the Engineering Society yesterday. Assisting this American band will be Trump Davidson and his orchestra.

The final date set for the annual dance is January 20, and the place is the Convention Floor of the Royal York Hotel, where the School At Home has been secured, and while Himber is playing in the Crystal Ballroom, Trump Davidson will supply the music in another of the rooms, so that there will be no crowding.

For several months, the campus has been speculating about the band that would appear at the School At Home. Larry Schinton and Artie Shaw were mentioned, and many other American "name" bands were considered.

Richard Himber, the final choice, is the creator of a new style of playing known as "the rhythmic pyramid." This style, which features a broken sequence of trumpet notes, has been hailed by the new day they take the door among the band-leaders from Abe Lyman to Jimmie Dorsey, and is being adopted by many of the newer bands. He was also the first man to use harps in a popular orchestra.

Trump Davidson, Canadian band-leader who will share the honours with Richard Himber on January 20, spent last year in England, playing trumpet in Ray Noble's orchestra. He has appeared in several local "spots" and throughout the Dominion.

CAGEMEN PREPARE FOR FINAL TOUR

Blue Basketmen Tangle with St. Lawrence, Niagara and Clarkson Tech. before McGill Engagement

With four victories and an equal number of defeats marked up against them Varsity's senior basketball team resumed training last night for their final trip to the States a week from today. On the 13th they travel to Canton, N.Y., to take on St. Lawrence U. and the next day they take the door against Clarkson Tech. in what will be their last exhibition game away from home. On the 21st they play Niagara and the blue and white were leading at half-time, were five points behind at three quarters and the American quieted had to go all out before emerging the victors 62-43. On the following day they met

After taking the measure of three senior city league teams Varsity lost to Niagara U. early in December. In their second trip south they dropped three more decisions to Colgate, Syracuse and Cornell. In the Colgate game the blue and white were leading at half-time, were five points behind at three quarters and the American quieted had to go all out before emerging the victors 62-43. On the following day they met

Los Angeles, Vancouver, the Maritimes and the northern mining areas.

As for the types of celebrations, they ranged from a quiet chorus of Auld Lang Syne in the front parlour to hectic evenings ended in the "temporary end of service" department.

If all the New Year's Day headaches were laid end to end on the campus, the manufacturers of aspirin would seriously consider starting a College Street branch of their factories.

By this time all but a hardy few of the undergraduates are back at lectures, busily laying plans to divide their time between the winter social season and the postponed Christmas examinations.

After viewing 1938 in retrospect, the almost-unanimous opinion is that the best thing about 1938 was saying goodbye to it.

C. E. HIGGINBOTTOM IS NEW BURSAR

Successor of F. A. Moure has been Prominent in Sport Circles and was Formerly Acting Bursar

Charles Edward Higginbottom, accountant, who has been prominent in local sport circles and member of the track and field committees of the Canadian Olympic Association, has been appointed bursar of the University of Toronto.

Mr. Higginbottom, who succeeds Dr. F. A. Moure in his new post, has been acting bursar of the University during the 1937-38 session and acted in the same capacity during 1919, 1927 and 1931.

The decision of the Board of Governors, as announced by President Cody, followed Dr. Moure's resignation, and has been effective since January 1 of this year.

ENGINEERING SOCIETY TO HEAR DUNCAN

Manager of Process Service for Dominion Oxygen Company will Cover Various Aspects of Welding in Talk

Mr. W. A. Duncan, manager of Process Service for the Dominion Oxygen Company, will speak on "Modern Acetylene Welding and Cutting Application" at the first meeting of the year of the Engineering Society at 4 p.m. Jan. 9th, in Room 43 of the Physics Building.

His speech will cover such subjects as flame hardening, flame softening, deformed and automatic shape cutting and will be illustrated by motion pictures, slides and demonstrations of many recent discoveries.

A special motion picture dealing with the most recent developments in electric welding which has been shown only twice previously in the United States, will also be shown. This picture should be of special interest to schoolmen.

Theatre of Action will Repeat Performance of "It Can't Happen Here"

The Theatre of Action will present a repeat performance of "It Can't Happen Here" by Sinclair Lewis and John C. Moffitt tomorrow evening at Margaret Eaton Hall.

Adapted from Lewis' best seller, the play tells of a typical American middle-class family who because of tradition refuse to accept any innovation, allowing fascism a freedom of growth because of their unwillingness to take sides.

This powerful satire on the fascist threat is being presented as the Theatre of Action's first presentation of the current season. The cast includes many well-known local actors, and the production is directed by Daniel Mann.

Board of Trustees Awards Toronto a Quarter Million Dollars toward University School of Nursing

President H. J. Cody announces that the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto have accepted with pleasure and gratitude a gift of a quarter of a million dollars provided by the Rockefeller Foundation towards the endowment of the School of Nursing of the University of Toronto.

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Rockefeller Foundation held on December 7th, 1938, upon the recommendation of the Foundation's International Health Division, an appropriation was made to the University of Toronto providing $250,000 towards the endowment of the University's School of Nursing, this amount to be payable on July 1st, 1939. With the notification of this gift came assurances of the interest of the Rockefeller Foundation in the education of the University's School of Nursing and an expression of its gratification at the splendid results already obtained under the leadership of Miss E. Kathleen Russell, B.A., B.Sc., who is Director of the School, and Miss Florence H. M. Emory, who is Assistant Director.

The School was established in 1933 to carry on the work formerly maintained in a smaller teaching department which the University had been able to set up in 1920 through the generosity of the Ontario Red Cross Society. It is hoped that, in response to the magnificent gift of the Rockefeller Foundation, additional endowment and support will be given, an increasing measure from local sources. Since this work was begun in 1920, public health nurses, trained at first in the small department and later in the School, have gone to all parts of this province, including the far north, and also throughout the whole Dominion and to other countries where public health nursing has been in a rudimentary condition.

HARVARD NEXT STOP FOR BLUE ICEMEN

Many American Universities Included by Toronto Skaters in Long Holiday Exhibition Itinerary

Winding up a holiday exhibition tour which included stops at Spokane, Vancouver, Los Angeles, and New York, the vagrant Varsity puckmen packed their bags yesterday after a game with the Olympic skaters, and headed for Cambridge, Mass., where the University is the first game of the International Intercollegiate Hockey League Saturday evening.

Despite the toll which the thousands of miles of travel has taken on the players, the Blues will be in fair shape for the season opener with the American college teams. Casualties to date include Cam MacLachlan, hard-hitting defenceman, who strained shoulder tissues in the game at Vancouver, and Bill MacLachlan, forward, who tore his hamstring, who came out of the McGill lineup with a severe charley horse. Manager Fraser Deacon wired Toronto for reinforcements, in answer to the summons of Warren, a seven-foot, 250-lb. Morison and Jack Simpson to fill the gap.

The first lap of the Blues' long pilgrimage took them to Spokane, Washington, where they met Gonzaga University. After trailing in the first period Varsity popped in five quick goals in the last session, to secure a 5-3 verdict over New Westminster Blues.

An enthusiastic reception awaited them in Vancouver, but a thick fog kept the crowd down. The Blues moved out of Vancouver with a 3-2 verdict over New Westminster Blues.

Glamorous California was the next stop on the itinerary, where two games were scheduled against Loyola University. The locals had little trouble in the first affair, kalsomning Loyola 6 to 0. In the second tilt, however, the Loyolists pulled a fast one, packing five men behind the blue line. Bob Copp, the University time marvel who starred on the defence following the injuries to MacLachlan and L'Heureux, finally sneaked through to score the only goal in the game in the last twenty minutes.

A Big Chance

Announcing an end to the policy of isolation, President Roosevelt clarified the stand of the United States as regards international affairs, and gave the democratic powers a new chance to reorganize on the basis of collective security. The President made clear the point that although the United States has been persuaded by circumstances to take an active part in European affairs, she will not take up arms in defence of democracy. Her weapons will be economic.

There is nothing new in the policy of fighting military aggression with economic sanctions. What is new about the present situation is the fact that the United States, economically the strongest of the democratic powers, has come out into the open and announced its intention of joining the struggle against Fascism.

It has been suggested that the threat of economic sanctions not backed by armed aggression will be greeted with derisive laughter in Rome and Berlin. But the U.S.A. is capable of brandishing economic weapons at the European powers as destructive as any machine guns and cannons.

The economic sanctions of a single powerful state can be effective. The effect would be multiplied one hundred fold could the three democratic powers organize a water-tight blockade. If exports from the democracies and their colonies were kept out of the Fascist states, it would deal them a terrific blow. Such a blockade could be organized and kept ready as a potential means of defence. But co-operation is required. Mr. Chamberlain has cabled his thanks and it is to be hoped his gratitude will result in some action. Now is the time that democracy has at its disposal the machinery to take a stand against Fascism, and the European war-lords.

The Magone Commission

The Magone Commission investigating conditions in Provincial hospitals is prepared to submit certain recommendations, among which it suggests an amendment of the Medical Act in the matter of sterilization. Evidence was submitted to the commission to the effect that a large number of girls had been committed to the Ontario Hospital at Cobourg in a condition of pregnancy, and had it not been for this circumstance they would not have found themselves in an institution for the mentally defective.

The commission, according to press reports, recommends "for the consideration of the government an amendment to the Medical Act providing that no action shall be brought against a doctor who performs such operation (for sterilization) with the consent of a parent or guardian of a mentally ill or defective person, or against a parent or guardian for giving such consent".

It seems on the surface that this is a rather ineffective gesture. One is inclined to ask about what percentage of these girls are justifiably to be classed as mental defectives. And if no considerable percentage can be shown to belong to this category, there is little advantage attached to a procedure which necessitates such drastic measures. It would probably aggravate the harm such young women can do, by allowing them to resume their illicit affiliations, with its venerable implications, without even the possible protective inhibitions of their natural sex reactions in a measure to restrain them.

It appears on a little reflection that even a mentally deficient young woman should be vouchsafed more deliberate consideration than the casual agreement of physician and parent to subject her to sterilization and all its implications. Especially so when there seems to be omitted any effective measures against the masculine element, who are evidently permitted to perpetrate their deficiencies under marriage contract or otherwise.

Apparently, improvement of the race, if possible, must be along negative principles, since there is at present no systematic procedure in terms of eugenics. We must therefore not be too optimistic in dealing with the effect of a prevailing condition. We must not forget that the mental delinquent is merely a victim of biological inheritance and may appear outwardly quite normal.

We are disposed to believe on analysis that the purging of the race by this proposed system of sterilization is a process unconscionably slow. Anything like an accredited accounting, even under the most unremitting governmental supervision, would obviously require many dreary generations to realize, and Ontario physicians, and authorities on the subject, should give much consideration before rushing into anything of such a nature.

"Professor Mamlock"

One of the most gripping stories of Nazi terrorism ever told is to be seen in the film "Professor Mamlock" opening at the Strand Theatre Sunday midnight. "Professor Mamlock", the drama of some of the brave German people who have had to endure the persecution under the Hitler regime, is not the type of thing to come out of Hollywood. The change is interesting.

Because it is not in one of the larger theatres of Toronto of course does not mean that it is not a first-rate picture either, as some of the splendid reviews by prominent newspapers would indicate. "A picture of this kind is long overdue," commented "The New Outlook", which claims that it is really a mild indictment of affairs as they really are in Germany.

There are those who will say that it is merely Communist propaganda, and for that reason will condemn it. However, the emphasis is not put upon Communism, but upon the sufferings of those who have learned what Nazism is, and have been driven to revolution against it. This is a picture, powerful in tone, intensely interesting, although a trifle disappointing in technique, and terrifying in its truth, which every student may well afford to see.

Post Mortem

It has been our intention to comment briefly and separately on the various musical events which took place during the Christmas season, but consideration reveals that some of them are hardly now of sufficient interest to warrant such treatment, while some of those that are we either did not attend, or attended only in an unofficial capacity.

We must, however, report that in its final concert on December 10 the Hart House Quartet was completely back in form after its not altogether satisfying work the previous month. The reading given the difficult Quartet in D minor (Voces Intimae), by Sibelius, was most impressive—a sensitive, distin-

INTRAMURAL SPORT

With more interest than ever before being centred in intramural sport, hundreds of Varsity students begin action next week in the race to the T. A. Red Trophy. Last year's champions, S.F.S., are out to lead again this year, with Wycliffe, Knox and Victoria following in that order. But School will be hard pressed to keep their lead, with record entries in the basketball, baseball, hockey and water polo leagues.

Leading the way with a record entry of 29 teams, more than have ever been entered in an intramural sport, is the basketball league, which has a 22-game schedule. Meds, winning the championship last year when their third team came through with a surprise victory, have entered a team this year, along with S.F.S. guished performance. Then at the Toronto Sports Club on December 13 Margaret Brown, pianist, played Saint-Saens' Concerto in G minor very capably and intelligently, with almost flawless co-operation from the orchestra.

Contrary to established custom the holiday period was not entirely dormant musically, thanks mostly to the T.S.O., which maintained a sort of under-current of life by making, in some form, its regular weekly appearance. Even in such a busy period there is surely always a potential audience for good music, and we trust that this increase in activity will be continued in future years. Herbert Cowan

Plan NOW for the big U. of T. WINTER SPORT WEEK-END AT LIMBERLOST LODGE

FRIDAY TO SUNDAY—JAN. 13-15 (inc.)

Special C.N.R. Snow Train leaves Toronto 5.30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 13 (arriving Limberlost at 9.45 p.m.) Returns Sunday evening.

THIS coming Friday Limberlost Lodge inaugurates its Special Winter Sports Week-Ends for the 1939 Season. The first Week-End (Jan. 13-15) has been made over to University of Toronto students who are being offered the special combination of "Vagabond Week-End" Rates and accommodation in the Main Lodge and the near-by Log Cabins which have been reserved for them exclusively.

All this—and heaven too.

Here is an opportunity—not to be missed—of enjoying a week-end sport-stay at one of Canada's foremost winter resorts. Tucked away deep in the lake and forest highlands of Ontario, 15 miles from Huntsville, yet only four hours from Toronto, the Limberlost setup is a "natural". Practically every winter sport (including dancing, table-tennis and fireside boasting, but excluding curling) awaits the holidayer.

Skiing—downhill, on the Top of the World Hill a few hundred yards from the Lodge; cross-country, over 150 miles of well-marked trails through the bush. Free group-instruction, along with the use of the new "Practislope" (flood-lit in the evening) built at the door of the Lodge.

Tobogganing and Bob-sledding—on the new Mercury Chute erected at the door of the Lodge with the runway extending away out over the ice of Lake Solitaire.

Snowshoeing—an almost lost art being revived this year at Limberlost. Snowshoes obtainable at the Lodge for a nominal rental.

Sleigh-riding—snuggly wrapped in furs in a cutter skimming over the white road behind a bell-jingling horse.

Fishing—through the ice of Lake Solitaire, behind a shelter of spruce saplings.

Dog-sledding—behind a team of huskies.

RATES The "Vagabond Week-End" Rates mentioned above have been introduced this year with a view to putting a week-end at Limberlost within the reach of a greater number of sports-lovers. These rates have been designed for those who are willing to rest content with meals that are wholesome but not "frilly"; who are willing to serve themselves at table, make their own beds, sleep dormitory style, etc. Under such circumstances the Lodge is in a position to offer accommodation and meals from Friday evening till Sunday evening and train transportation from Toronto to the Lodge and return at a per person rate of $7.75

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Skiffman

Time to Spare? . . . Read This

(Time seven minutes)
We take this opportunity in the first column of the term to thank all my friends (?) in the university for not sending me any Christmas cards or greetings this year. This sounds a little queer but I know it will all be quite clear when I explain that your humble servant served His Royal Majesties as a part-time helper from twelve midnight to seven-thirty in the morning, so you understand my sentiments. . . .

But this job had its recompensations for during our employ a number of letters passed through our hands, which if you'll promise to keep to yourself (it means a three year stretch if you talk see?) I'll reveal. You see I really didn't want to steal these letters but it was the only way I could keep up with the sport wheel that kept spinning even though your favourite morning newspaper (and it isn't the Globe and Mail) was closed down tighter than the Toronto night spots on New Year's Eve. These letters are quite interesting.

Taking a Beating at Basketball

Sick Children's Hospital
Dear Ace,
I know that you being blessed with one win after another you don't care about me. In fact nobody cares about me. It's been cold here ever since you took the team south for the winter . . . and for me this coldness has been exaggerated by my basketball squad. Now don't get me wrong, I think they are a swell team . . . but things don't add up right.

Ever since we left the Y league we have won one game. Now that would not be so bad but those Colts or Horses from London have been giving me bad dreams, beating teams all over the continent. Honest I'm getting old . . . I must be . . . I used to laugh when we lost . . . not much but at least I didn't cry. Now I'm weak after every game, but more about my grief a little later.

You know we started the season against the big three with Colgate. Here we played our best game. At three quarter time the score was 4-38 in their favour but then Atchison got hurt and the team was demoralized. They were smothered by the reserve strength of the Colgate Twenty and soon were swamped. Syracuse was next on our list. Here we were up against a team that is representative of America's finest, even travelling to the Gardens to play. Led by their coloured football hero, Sidat-Singh who "with cat-like tread" was instrumental in taking us with plenty to spare. This team was the best we met this year. Defensively they were the strongest team we have ever met and it really didn't hurt us badly to lose to them but I would have liked to beat my old alma mater. Just like you would like to beat the Leafs, Ace.

Two nights later we met Cornell. You know I put the team on the floor and when I looked again I had lost them. I just couldn't find them. This place is one of the largest floors on the continent. The floor is large enough for eight regulation courts. The game was close the first half with the score standing Cornell 25 and Moose Rogin 18. The Moose had a cheering section of his own with everyone cheering him along. Cornell would score a basket and Moose would score one. When the game was over the Moose had scored 25 out of 30. But I didn't mind losing the game as we had a 75 piece band welcome us. Gee, it was fun when they let me lead the band.

Against Buffalo State I finally broke down. There was a little over a minute to play and Buffalo were three points up and were freezing the ball. It looked as if the ball game was over. The team forced a jump ball and Mahoney got the ball and threw in one basket to give them the ball and one point lead with 50 seconds to go. I got an attack of the chills. I couldn't look. When I heard the gun go I was covered with sweat and the score was 36-35 in our favour. Little Percy Singer, who scored eleven points, my little pal of the milk bottle, scored the winning basket to finish the scoring. Overcome by this amazing finish I hurried to Singer's locker, where we killed the last two quarts of milk that he had brought from Toronto. After that I went home and was laid up in bed sick. Note my address and write me there. . . . I'm sick. . . .

Just Warren Stevens.

but I don't remember being on a train both Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve with a hockey club, but we were. This changing around of climate has ruined my health, but as long as we win who cares. If you put all the film that we used end to end it would cover the distance we travelled by train, airplane and boat, but I guess you're more interested in the results of the games than our visit to Deanna Durbin's home.

We got into Vancouver with a heavy English fog hanging over the city. We crept into the rink. We took the gang here 5-3 and left for the south without a real chance to see the city. We did meet the mayor, etc.

You know just ever since we left I have been playing bridge with the boys and we are going to be the first bridge game to complete a cross-continental game. Around Chicago my game was fair. . . . I got better hands while passing through the Rockies but went back to my original playing form somewhere around Hollywood. As I told you we spent Christmas on the train and the boys exchanged gifts and the boys got Joe and me gifts. Gee, I was thrilled. We took Loyola 6-0 but Cam MacLachlan hurt his shoulder. We played to a full house and it helped build up a big gate for the second game that we won by the small score of 1-0. New Year's Eve we were on the train and (Continued on Page 4)

Crimson Wave Stopped As Blues Take Opener

Varsity's Senior Squad Stages
Impressive 11-1 Victory Over
Harvard Crimson in First Scheduled Hockey Clash

Special to The Varsity

Boston, Mass.: University of Toronto's senior hockey team opened up their official International Intercollegiate Hockey League schedule with a snatching eleven to one victory over Harvard's Crimson pucksters on Saturday evening. The win was one of the most impressive garnered by a Varsity hockey team in many years and stamps Ace Bailey's squad as undoubted titular contenders.

Although the Harvard squad was badly outscored their constant fight was one of the game's outstanding features. But the Crimson team lacked the finish of Varsity, who in spite of a slow, watery ice surface, completely outskated their opponents.

Starting strong, Harvard prevented the Blue team from scoring in the first period, chiefly due to the brilliant net-minding of Freedley, although Cassels and L'Heureux came close several times for Toronto.

The second period had barely started when Varsity's superior combination started to count and after four minutes Dick Craig opened the scoring on a pass from Taylor. A minute later L'Heureux counted on Morison's pass. Goals by MacLachlan and Boddington finished the period's scoring. Harvard had only one good scoring opening during that canto.

The last session was a parade of points with Harvard getting their only goal with two minutes left to play. Harding scored on Patrick's pass. Toronto scored seven counters with the Morison-Taylor-Craig combination figuring in five of them. Art Boddington also turned in a stirring exhibition. MacLachlan and L'Heureux, the Toronto defence combination, were stand-outs, performing well both offensively and defensively. Both defensemen scored two goals and L'Heureux had several assists. For Harvard, Harding and Irvin never stopped trying, and Freedley in goal, played brilliantly.

The Varsity squad play Dartmouth in Hanover tonight, in another league game, before they start their trip back to Toronto.

Border Clash Renewed

Badapest: Czech and Hungarian troops renewed their fighting over the week-end along the Czech-Hungarian border. Hungarians declared that Czech troops bombed a Hungarian town.

Mooney Welcomed

Varsity Broadcast

The Varsity broadcast which was scheduled to take place over CKCL last Friday night will be initiated this Wednesday night at 8.15. The broadcast, which is to be a weekly fifteen minute feature, is to be entitled "The Varsity Speaks" and will be conducted by Mr. Jack Thompson, announcer for CKCL and newscaster for Trans-radio News.

The change was necessary in order to comply with station arrangements, and it is believed will be more suitable for a university public than Friday evening. The program will take the form of a newscast based on news, features, announcements and editorials appearing in the week's issues of The Varsity.

VISIT OF ROYALTY STILL CONJECTURE

No Definite Word Received of Inspection of University by the King and Queen During Their Stay in Toronto

At the present time it is not known whether or not the King and Queen will visit the University during their stay in Toronto this spring.

President Cody said on Friday that no word has yet been received regarding such a visit, although he thought it probable that their Majesties would be taken on a tour of the city, and in such a case would no doubt make a brief inspection of the college buildings, inasmuch as they are architecturally and educationally important among the city's showplaces. However, this is purely conjecture, as the provincial government has not yet announced its plans for the entertainment of the royal party during its brief stay.

Concert Tickets

Norman Wilks, pianist, will be the artist at the Sunday Evening Concert at 9 p.m. in the Great Hall on Sunday next.

Representatives of the various colleges and faculties are requested to call at the Warden's office between 12.30 and 1.30 p.m. today for their allotments of tickets.

Every member is urged if he finds he cannot use his ticket to return it to the Hall Porter's desk if at all possible before 1 p.m. on Thursday.

OSHAWA GENERALS WHITEWASH BLUES IN FIFTH DEFEAT

Varsity Juniors Are Given Decisive Drubbing at Motor City, Losing Fifth Game by Score of 10-1

Varsity's junior hockey team suffered their fifth loss in as many starts last Friday night in Oshawa at the hands of last year's champions and present group leaders, the Oshawa Generals. The Generals handed the Blues their most decisive defeat of the season, and finished on the long end of a 10-1 score.

For two periods, the collegians held their own with the powerful Oshawa team, and going into the third period were trailing by a 3-1 score. Early in the third period, Thor Stephenson, who had stood out on defense, was penalized for pulling down Sawyer when the latter was in a great position to score, and while the big blonde ace was off, Sawyer scored once, and Knott twice. From here on there was no stopping the Generals, who pushed four more goals past Paul Pentland, who did a good job limiting them to that number.

"Beefy" McMillan, Blue defenseman, saved the collegians from a shutout when he took a pass from Stephenson in the first period and rammed the puck past Calvin in the Oshawa net for the Toronto team's only goal.

Conservative New Water Jugs Confront Great Hall Diners

Diners in Great Hall who have been painfully aware of a certain aching void pervading the gustatorial atmosphere since their resumption of patronage of the local bannery, have at last ascertained what the discrepancy is. Much to their surprise diners have noticed that the usual red pottery was replaced by a more conservative model, of a similar type to those discovered in rural hotels. They create a curiosity that is not to be satisfied. The rest of the bucolic ensemble cannot be found by looking under the tables.

Operators of Great Hall made firm denial that the move was in any way connected with displeasure of Moscow at capitalist activities of the local communitarians. We are not trying to thwart the masses, they are reported as having declared. Nor is the move an attempt to assuage the righteous indignation of Toronto's rightist press over alleged Communist activities on the campus.

Exhaustive research on the part of several chemical engineers (second year) yielded disappointing results for those who hoped that the change of chinaware was accompanied by a change of beverage. Unfortunately the fluid is still only water.

Further questioning of the Hall's culinary experts revealed that the substitution of white jugs for the scarlet ceramics of last season is merely aesthetic in purpose. We just thought that a change of scenery would be nice, they are reported as having said.

Customers of Great Hall see advantages in the use of the white receptacles. From now on, whenever they set the water-jug down they will be sure that it will stay put, and not go rolling down the table and into the lap of some unsuspecting diner. This eventuality always lurked with the vermilion vessels. Nor will the feelings of students of fine arts be so violently outraged when, after a session among the relics of ancient Greece, they are compelled to return to the relative mundaneness of twentieth century water-containers.

ILLUSTRATED TALK GIVEN ON SCIENCE

Use of Photography in Study of Radio Activity is Discussed by Dr. Wilkins at Convocation Hall

"The Use of Photography in the Study of Radio Activity" was the subject of the lecture given Saturday evening in Convocation Hall by Dr. T. H. Wilkins, Professor of Physics, University of Rochester.

The lecture was interesting from an historic as well as a scientific point of view because the 100th anniversary of the discovery of photography by Daguerre was being celebrated in Paris on January 7.

Dr. Wilkins' motion pictures and lantern slides of the radio activity of the new element, samarium, discovered in 1934, were of special interest. This is the longest-lived element, having a life-span of a million years. The lecturer explained that no atom is simple and the rare samarium has seven different parts. "Atom-smashers" such as shown at Rochester University, are being built all over the country.

Uranium, said Dr. Wilkins, is the heaviest known element and is the parent of radium. There are three (Continued on page 4)

By Ed Goodman

The current movement in University College to develop the college's school spirit in general and to improve its athletic prestige and influence on the Toronto campus in particular took on major proportions today with the announcement by the college Lit. that President H. J. Cody of the University of Toronto had donated a trophy that is to be awarded annually for athletic activity in behalf of University College.

The Cody Award will be given annually to a man in the U.C. graduating year who during his four years at the college has done most, both by actual participation and general support for University College athletics.

Although a definite design for the trophy has not been chosen, according to Athletic Director Ken Stewart, who has been the leading spirit in the college's athletic drive and who has been greatly responsible for the U.C. athletic renaissance, the award will be similar to the Johnny Corp Trophy, and each year's winner will be given a shield replica for permanent possession.

The winner will be selected on recommendation of the U.C. Athletic Board by a committee composed of the Principal and Registrar of University College, the Supervisor of Intramural (Continued on page 4)

NO GHOST WRITER FOR ESSAYS HERE

Local Counterpart Lacking for Yale Man who Made Living
by Writing Brilliant Essays

Varsity students will have to continue writing their own essays, it appears, since no ghost writer, such as the one at Yale, is known in this vicinity.

The one there advertised that he would, for a fee, write anyone's essays, guaranteed to be in expert polished style. This lightning of the students' quota of work, he stated, would leave more time to devote to more useful constructive effort.

Some students here think that such a career would be short-lived. The suspicious reputation, they claim, of brilliant essays (such as are promised by the ghost writer) following the students' own paltry efforts, would soon rouse professors to action.

Some students may benefit by this latest twist in a labour-saving device and turn their extra time to more advantage. However, we can't help thinking, it is primarily a get-rich-quick scheme by some talented person at Yale.

It would be interesting to know how (Continued on page 4)

Hart House Clock
Back to Normal
After Striking Spree

The Hart House clock is back to normal today after its period of unconventional behaviour.

Students returning from the holidays were surprised and even frightened in some cases, to hear the clock striking the wrong hours with reckless abandon. Twelve strokes at one o'clock was said to be its most disconcerting trick.

Repairmen at work on the clock rectified the trouble Friday, and the hours are now struck correctly.

SWING CATS PLAN LARGE JAM-BOREE

Prominent Local Swingsters will be Featured at Next Session of the Swing Enthusiasts' Association

Something big is hovering on the Swing Club horizon, is a report from the Swing Club. Some time about January 18, there is going to be a jam-boree with artists galore in attendance. But it hasn't been decided exactly when and where it will be held; that will be announced at a later date.

Lou Lewis and his Jam Band—that famous little four-piece outfit from the Onyx—is going to be there with piano, drums, bass fiddle and trumpet.

Phyllis Marshall, dusky songstress from the Silver Stipper, will be present to do her little bit. Two years ago she was discovered on an amateur show, and since then has been appearing on a number of CBC sustaining programs.

Ron Sorely, accordionist and swing pianist "a la Teddie Wilson" will have a corner of his own to fill. At present Ron is the assistant at Howard White's School of Music.

And then there will be Dick McDougall—Dick has gained fame in swing circles through his CKCL "sweet hot" program, and is regarded as a commentator of no mean repute.

But something even bigger and better is in the offing—"a big feature!" However, Bruce Harris and George Carby, president and vice-president of the Swing Club, won't say what it is—they don't want it to overshadow this immediate session.

The last meeting in the Women's Union drew numerous favourable comments and requests, and a crowd of one hundred and twenty. Double that number is expected this time.

Relief Social

Under the patronage of President and Mrs. Cody, Chancellor and Mrs. E. W. Wallace, Miss M. B. Ferguson, Dr. and Mrs. K. C. Evans, and Dr. R. D. Deifies, an Oriental Party, in aid of Far Eastern Student Relief, is being held in the Women's Union this Friday evening.

Authentic silk hangings will transform the cafeteria, where dancing to big name orchestras, playing all the favourite tunes, will be continuous all evening, and the theatre into a veritable Eastern fairland. Chinese and Indian students in their respective costumes will sing characteristic songs, do native dances, and perform national airs on their flutes. A Suggestion

For some time we have felt that the University of Toronto, should inaugurate a system or organization, whereby outstanding students would receive some honour in recognition of their contribution to University life, through non-athletic extra-curricular activities. For that purpose we have made a survey of the honour societies of the Canadian universities, which, almost without exception, have seen fit to elect students to a special body, significant of the highest honour which the undergraduate body is able to bestow.

Many of these systems were organized several years ago, but during the past fall, the student governing bodies in Queen's University and the University of British Columbia, have seen fit to initiate honour and award systems. Naturally with so many different types of student government as Canadian universities have, different camp require different systems, and it can be understood that in the University of Toronto, where so many colleges and faculties cause so much disintegration, a campus-wide society is difficult to organize. However, this should be one of the most important parts of such an organization . . . it would tend to a greater unity throughout the entire University. The University of Manitoba has a satisfactory system even though their Student Union is organized on the Federal System.

Outstanding scholarship in almost every university is recognized by means of scholarships, fellowships and awards. In sports the Athletic Association knows that the award or colour system stimulates interest, both before and after graduation. It is believed that an honour system for students who have made special contributions to their university life through the medium of executives, debating societies, bands, orchestras, dramatics, scientific societies, and the many other undergraduate activities would create a greater loyalty to the University of Toronto, than could otherwise be expected of her graduates.

Some of the colleges on the campus have for some time recognized senior students for their ability and work in these activities, but often these awards are given through a popularity vote, which does not exactly serve the purpose. Be that as it may, if the colleges can recognize such activities and make their students more conscious of the fact that they are graduates of Victoria, St. Michael's, Trinity, U.C., S.P.S., or any of the others, the University too should be able to make her students conscious that they are to be the graduates of U. of T. as well as of the smaller colleges.

In some cases athletic awards have been combined with the non-athletic. However, the colour system here, is too well established and works so satisfactorily, that it would be inadvisable for it to be combined with anything else. The University of Alberta, where such a combination functions, finds that the athletic, literary and other awards work well enough, but indicates that honours for executive services may tend to develop a class of campus politicians, of those eager to fill enough positions to win recognition, with little thought or care for the way the students are governed. In organizing a system it would be necessary to consider election programs carefully, in order to avoid any possibility of this occurrence.

American College Football

Football enthusiasts who enjoyed following the gridders from Duke University and the University of Southern California into the famous Rose Bowl gridiron epic, will be interested to read what William Allen White has to say about college rugby, and these two teams in particular. Ed Ainsworth, in the Los Angeles Times quotes Mr. White at length, and dubs him the All-American Stink Bomb Thrower.

We have an idea that Mr. White was just having a little bit of fun with his public . . . but he certainly has been getting himself quoted.

"Just now the American people and particularly those west of the Mississippi are enjoying an exhibition that is a disgrace to the college life in this part of the world. The exhibition is the preliminary stage of the football contest between Duke University in North Carolina and the University of Southern California, to be pulled off in the so-called Rose Bowl, the football classic, Jan. 2. Here are two institutions which have nothing but money back of them. Academically they are fourth or fifth raters in this country. They are notorious for the beefy morons who play on their football teams.

"Every academic ideal is prostituted by an institution that stresses football. The ideal is to keep these brawny numbskulls in some kind of class standing. Money stinks all over the campus of such institutions. People raise their eyebrows when anyone claims a degree, earned or unearned, from one of them. Their football classics are nothing but sporting events. Its academic flavor is imitation and a poor grade of imitation at that.

"To this low level has college football sunk in this country. The Gazette is glad of it. It should sink lower. Just how much lower it will have to sink before intelligent college presidents, college faculties and college trustees wake up to the fact that football has no place on the college campus, we shudder to think. Of course the whole trouble with college football is not the campus but the alumnus. That trouble goes back to the kind of material the college accepts and holds in classes and finally graduates. A good 20 per cent of the people who go to college go there for social reasons and they bring out what they take in—a slimy social veneer, an assurance in their ignorance, and a brass that is a disgrace to their academic training.

"The spectacle of the University of Southern California and Duke University putting on a 22-man prize fight in the so-called Rose Bowl is a gorgeous example of what our academic ideals in this country have brought colleges to. Duke and Southern California are not unique. They are just caricatures of realistics, bitter realities, in our college life."

Although tending to extreme exaggeration of a sweeping nature, Mr. White has expressed the ideas of a good many other people on this continent. He was probably thinking he was exposing something, drawing attention to one of the great weaknesses of the system where athletes are subsidized. But that a game of football is an exhibition which is a disgrace to college life, is something with which very few agree. And the American football heroes, campus idols we suppose, probably aren't used to being called "beefy morons".

But we would like to know whether Mr. White's quarrel is with football in general, or with the colleges which stress football above scholarship. Perhaps he doesn't know either.

To Write as They Please

Today we are introducing a new column to give staff-members an opportunity to advance some of their own ideas . . . and also write in the style in which they want to write.

You are invited to make any kind of replies through the correspondence you see fit, and in fact we would appreciate more suitable correspondence during the winter term. But please keep letters within two hundred words, and abstain from personal remarks.

Casual reading in the press of the daily tales of horror and persecution which take place in present day Germany seem to dull our realization of what

UP WITH THE NEW REGIME

Did you hear the Hart House clock Friday? It rang seven thousand times. Do you know what that means? That was the sounding of the tocsin—the signal for the overthrow of the regime, the establishment of a new order, the dread revolution.

Saturday morning, as the Hart House tocsin pealed its warning note through the cold, grey air, the violent downtown mob tore up the cobblestones on Bay Street and erected barricades to meet the oncoming rush of the soldiery sent out by the governor. Musketeers and arquebuses were used against the pitchforks and flails of the populace and havoc was wrought among the lowly born.

But still they were not daunted. With unlagging fury they charged the hired soldiery and cut to pieces the Swiss and Prussian mercenaries who were guarding the City Hall. They stormed the Don Jail under the leadership of a woman who was a star and burned it to the ground.

In the evening they stormed and captured a radio station. Comrade Atkins, recently appointed Commissar for Propaganda, issued a proclamation to the proletariat proclaiming that a new regime had come to free the people of the country from the yoke of the oppressors.

Later that day, at the head of a gang of jailbirds who had been set free by the revolutionaries, Comrade Atkins, wearing his now-famous astrakhan cap, led an attack on the Stock Exchange and blew up the mining building on the campus. Leading statesmen of the old regime were carted down Yonge Street in tumbrils and the howling populace shouted threats and insults at them. The guillotine took its deadly toll and as head after head fell into the basket and was raised by the executioner for all to see, the bloodthirsty "widows of the revolutions" shouted imprecations at the decapitated capites and sang their gruesome ditty, "shave and a hair-cut, two-bits."

Meanwhile the Hart House clock pealed forth its ominous notes over the turbulent and bloody city.

The Scarlet Pumpernickle.

is really happening under the banner of the Third Reich. Vaguely we deplore the treatment of the Jews and the asinine "nationalizing" of art and music and literature which is part of the Nazi scheme of "purification" of the German nation. The events seem too distant from us to be the cause of a just and active indignation.

It is only when we see such films as the Russian Professor Mamlock that we are brought into what is almost immediate contact with these persecutions and are made to realize acutely what sorrow and needless tragedy follow in their wake. When the social and personal import of the Nazi program is impressed upon us by the live medium of the modern talking picture we get a taste of the brutality and irrationality of the Hitler regime, which is a dirty taste indeed.

Science knows no political boundaries, neither does human sympathy and good fellowship. The distortion of science and the arts in Germany is making that land the laughing stock of the world. The German people we still believe are very similar to the rest of us, and it is a great tragedy to see the destinies of what was once a great nation becoming the plaything of a small group of thugs who are fortunate enough to be at the blunt end of the bayonet.

We strongly urge students of the University of Toronto to see this film and to get a clearer idea of the unbelievable atrocities of modern military dictatorship.

The feature presentation this week is worthy of note. Featuring James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan and the Dead End Kids, IMPERIAL the picture may be ANGELS WITH classed as one of DIRTY FACES the best productions of 1938.

It is rumored that Cagney is getting special recognition in the manner of an award for outstanding acting in this production, the prize being put up by some official organization of film-don.

Cagney plays the part of a dyed-in-the-wool and incorrigible gangster who is regarded in hero-worship as an idol by younger lads who are well stated on the path to city jails and state prisons. O'Brien, boyhood friend and confederate of Cagney in former minor escapades in youth, portrays the well-wishing priest who works hard in an effort to turn these boys aside from the ignoble path, and thus runs amuck with Cagney. The girl-in-the-picture, Ann Sheridan, has no very pertinent part, outside of providing a bit of scenery and atmosphere. The Dead End Kids are as horrible and bad as ever and represent the group of lads who look upon Cagney as a god. They are very genuine and provide a high degree of humour and wit. With a huge amount of action, suspense, and a bit of sentiment thrown in, the picture is excellent. For your added enjoyment is an Edgar Kennedy comedy and a cartoon entitled "Pop-eye the Sailor's Old Man". S.W.A.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shifman

WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW . . . RE HART HOUSE

That Hart House has by far the largest attendance of any building on the entire campus and there isn't one solitary girl wandering in its corridors. (Note to the girls of U.C. rotunda) . . . That as many books are read in Hart House as in any library on the campus with the exception of the main library. Hart House has one of the most comfortable conducive to reading rooms we have ever seen, with some of the best books published gracing its shelves (who'd a thunk it?). . . . That when the Athletic Board of Mr. Stevens, Mr. Winterburne, Mr. Chesty Martin, Mr. Charlie Zwygart and Mr. Mac MacCutehon troop through the corridors on their way to work more than one undergraduate has to restrain himself from whistling the Dwarfs' Marching Song from the picture "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs". . . . That if you took all the champagne that was drunk at the coming-out party of the beautiful Brenda Frazier and all the rest of the debutantes in the United States and dumped it into the Hart House swimming pool it wouldn't come close to being filled (it is a silly idea anyway). . . . That between the hours of 12 noon till 4 o'clock in the afternoon every time the clock clicks one minute, Hart House Billiard Academy is richer by 7 1-2 cents (boy, do I know it). . . . That there is a game played in Hart House called squash which resembles Jui-Jui which resembles handball—which resembles squash only squash is played with a racket, and is a game that I've been trying to ridicule for years but I just can't so let's drop the whole subject. . . . That there are two bicycles that have travelled the distance equivalent to a trip around the entire globe at its widest point (the earth is not a perfect globe—Science Speaks!) yet have never moved from their position. They are the mechanical bikes which were added to the equipment last year. . . . That at last there is a movement afoot to bring the Hart House gymnasium up to date. A public address system for the basketball games is going to be an innovation this year if things work out and should help the fans to follow the game a little better, besides lending a little music during the half-time intermission. Next step is room for spectators, eh? . . . That the barber shop in Hart House is one of the busiest in the city (you wouldn't think it the way these guys walk around the campus, would you?) . . . That the boxing room is so crowded these days that if you walk in you're almost sure to get a hay maker on the chin. It seems that none of the boys ever fight each other but go around fighting their shadows (so I think even I'd be pretty good fighting my shadow). . . . That 90 per cent of all undergraduates have never seen the cups and trophies at the top of the west end staircase, that have been won by the university and their faculties. . . . That every week the janitors clean one and three quarter miles of hall (well, what do you know). . . . That 98 per cent of the students in their first year get into Hart House and can't find the way out (even in second, third and fourth years you get lost in the pool room and can't seem to get out). . . . That 92 per cent of the students that fail (Meds excluded, they fail everybody) blame Hart House as the prime path to the pruning knife. . . . That there is an Art Gallery, a Music Room, a Magazine Room, Common Rooms in Hart House, yet the Pool Room is always crowded. . . . That Hart House is unique, in its completeness and architectural perfection in North America and has been a model for many architects in the planning of other similar buildings. . . . That today three of the heaviest schedules in the history of inter-faculty sport start when basketball with the largest enrollment, baseball and water polo get under way and Mac MacCutehon deserves full credit for it. . . . That the sports staff of The Varsity, whose office is in Hart House is going to start agitating for an interpretation of a football ruling which is successful a certain coach in Kingston with initials T.R. will hoist the white flag.

Dear Chief:

I certainly am overjoyed to be back working for you this term. I am awfully sorry that I missed the train and could not cover the hockey team's trip down south. Please forgive me. I hope that you will understand that it was not because I wasn't given a private car. Thanks very much for your beautiful Christmas present, like someone on the radio I just couldn't wait to exchange it.

To make up for my not writing the hockey features I am going to send you a series of continuous articles about intramural athletes picked up at random (the way you make your dates Chief). This is to help turn the spotlight on those who never have played in big time, but nevertheless deserve my much desired press praise as much as the intercollegiate hero.

First fellow I bumped into was Johnny Yarekoff of II U.C. He says he is in law but he doesn't play pool. I have my doubts. Johnny broke his ankle playing football two years ago, but he intends to play at end again next year and to play basketball this year. He used to play for Hamilton Central.

But here is why I got close to him, and am writing him up. He says that he likes girls in general, peti Venuses with auburn hair especially. And he has one in Hamilton where he comes from. Well, Johnny and I are motorizing to Hamilton tomorrow, I have a much business a ghost writer at Varsity would get. For, although there are many who claim that essays are the bane of their existence, still, most people have just enough optimism to think that perhaps their next essay will go down in history as an example of the high standard of literature of the period.

Still, all must remain pure conjecture, for as yet there is no ghost-writer at Varsity.

DR. CODY DONATES ATHLETIC AWARD

Athletics, the President and Athletic Director of the U.C. Lit.

According to general rumour the announcement of the award by President Cody, who is a graduate of University College, has given rise to a great deal of comment and satisfaction among the student body. And it is expected that it will be a vital factor in building up U.C.'s challenge for future T. A. Reed trophies, emblematic of intramural athletic supremacy.

The Athletic Director also announced that two more trophies are to be awarded. One will be given to the person of any year gaining the most points for U.C. in the T. A. Reed Trophy competition, the Cody Award winner to be excluded, and one to the person winning most championship points in the "B" interfaculty swimming meet. All three of the above awards will be made this year. The exact point scoring system will be announced at a later date.

Captain Craig is said to be one of the greatest living authorities on submarine life. He has stroled miles of ocean floor while photographing octopus, manta ray, sharks and other denizens of the depths, and knows from actual experience what these cruel monsters do and how they act under given circumstances.

"As a story teller he makes one feel one is right along with him photographing dangerous man eating tigers in the jungles or equally ferocious sharks in the depths," concluded Mrs. Ruse.

NEW LECTURE SERIES ANNOUNCED AT MUSEUM

Another series of illustrated public lectures, under the auspices of the Committee of Directors, has been announced at the Royal Ontario Museum.

The series begins Tuesday, January 10, and will be given Tuesdays at 5.10 p.m. The final lecture in the series will be on March 21. The lectures are held in the Museum Auditorium.

ART MUSIC AND DRAMA

Happen Here", by Sinclair Lewis and John C. Moffitt, proved to be, in the main, masterly and convincing.

Adapted from Lewis' best-seller, the play deals with the rapid growth of Fascism under an apathetic, somnolent democracy. Though the written lines are weakly amateurish at times, yet under Director David Mann's skillful handling the play builds up to an electrifying and impressive climax. It achieves its purpose; it arouses us from the apathy into which the daily stories of Fascist horror have sunk us; we are made aware of the imminent dangers to heedless complacency.

Richard Bingham, as the elderly editor who awoke to a true realization of the menace almost too late, gave a masterly performance throughout, although hampered at times by a few of the players who tended to fall out of character. Sydney Banks developed from the house drudge to the Fascist sergeant in the most convincing fashion. Jules Ross gave an excellent characterization as the brutal Commissioner Swan. The play proved to be well acted in that the weaker actors who tended to lose the inner spiritual content of their role and resort to stagey, mechanical effects, were cast in parts where they displaced very little.

Despite many minor defects in staging and acting, both the set designed by Peter A. York and the acting of the majority of the characters were sincerely convincing. The play had a freshness and truthfulness of emotion found only too seldom where the Stanislavsky Method of direction and acting are not in use.

Friday Afternoon Recital

Playing to one of the largest audiences in this series of Friday recitals, Muriel Donnellan enlivened herself to all present with a delightful program of harp music. It is seldom that we are privileged to hear this instrument played solo and after this recital we've made up our mind to hear more.

Many of the numbers were her own arrangement because, as Miss Donnellan pointed out, there is not a great deal of music written for the harp in solo, although the moderns have written quite extensively for this instrument in their orchestral works. However, in spite of the difficulties experienced in arranging her numbers from piano music she has been very successful in retaining all the shadings and moods of the original. Au Clair de la Lune, by Debussy, was one of these. It was a truly sparkling interpretation.

Au bord du ruisseau, originally a violin solo, seemed well suited to the harp. In this one could almost imagine there was another instrument in the next room supplying a background of a rippling stream to the melody, such was the depth she achieved.

Unfortunately, she did not have time to play the last part of the program, but we hope to be able to hear her again soon.

in the Great Lakes Region including the Toronto Gallery, have assembled a collection representing or at least purporting to represent the indigenous painting of the various centres.

In certain instances one most emphatically agrees with Mr. Washburn in the foreword to the catalogue that "though the regional painter may be painting his region, he is not yet painting for his region." Perhaps the zeal for working out new techniques without borrowing too much from "European" models may be blamed for results which are to say the least difficult to understand.

As Canadians we can be justly proud of Charles Comfort's "Lake Superior Village", which secured first prize. The hanging committee are to be congratulated for placing it and A. J. Casson's "Autumn Evening" where they could be viewed from the longer galleries. Mr. Lismer's pattern is characteristic, and both Miss Daly's and Mr. Harris' portraits have character. On the whole, perhaps Toronto has less to be ashamed of in her exhibit than some of the other cities.

In the second prize, "Charlie's Wheelbarrow" is replete with atmosphere. One can almost feel and smell the damp heat. "My Grandfather" was one of the few impressionistic pieces and perhaps its semi-uniqueness may have influenced the judges. As Mr. Washburn points out Charles Birchfield's "Love" for old houses enables him to penetrate into their very being.

Various local trends may be observed and perhaps the most obvious is the contrast between the atmospheric clearness of most of the Canadian and northern scenes; a mistiness was almost general in some of the other groups, notably Milwaukee.

Introducing a Column

A new year and the launching of a new (and we hope successful) column. The title, although not very original, expresses our purpose very clearly—the column is intended to be a pot-pourri of journalistic hodge-podge. In it you will find expressed news, views, and ideas which could not (for technical reasons) appear in the regular news or editorial space of the paper but which we feel should nevertheless be published (even if only to satisfy our own ego). The column will have many contributors whose views will probably be as different as the subjects they will deal with, which, we believe, is a good thing. However, enough for an introduction and into column No. 1.

In launching this column we have ensured its success by gathering a board of experts which will be in charge of its publication. Being eminent authorities in all fields of Canadian life these experts feel that it is their duty to outline their stand on current problems. The "Board" therefore presents the following platform.

1. The right to vote
 In bygone days, during a moment of weakness our predecessors gave every Tom, Dick and Harry the right to vote—of course with the implicit understanding that they would vote for the "right" people. This worked swell for a while and everyone was happy. Recently however, certain persons began casting their votes for individuals whose ideas were definitely of the "wrong" kind. Voting as you like in such a matter is an inexcusable offence against democracy and such irresponsibility must be punished. To correct this situation and to eliminate all danger to democracy all persons who refuse to vote for the "right" people will have their vote cancelled. The "Board" will name the right people in all elections. No others need run. Only in this way can a democratic form of government be preserved.
2. Taxes
 (a) All taxes on business hurt the country. Business men must be left alone.
 (b) Since workmen form the greatest percentage of the population of this country (see any Communist propaganda) it is only fair that they pay most of the taxes.

(c) Taxation as a scheme for redistributing the wealth is based on an entirely erroneous principle. This country has an economic system which gives everyone an equal chance of succeeding. It all depends on the individual's ability. People should be smart enough to choose parents with money. If they're too dumb to do that it's their own fault. Furthermore, we know of some great men who started off as bare-footed boys and became tremendous successes. Anyone who disagrees should read Horatio Alger. Those who fall by the wayside because economic insecurity brought on illnesses such as tuberculosis, pneumonia, rickets, or merely malnutrition are weaklings who wouldn't have amounted to any good anyway.

3. Communism
 The Bolshevik menace must be obliterated. Our aim is to take the "red" out of the red, white, and blue. Our motto—"What this country needs is a good three-cent Padlock Law".

4. Unemployment.

The "Board" entirely solves the problem of unemployment. The unemployed are to be organized into corps and put on the state payroll. These corps are to be under the command of the members of the "Board" who will use them in applying "pressure" which will eliminate such undesirable elements as foreign agitators, Moscow sympathizers, (are you scared Mr. Atkinson), pacifist maniacs, and other persons the "Board" may consider dangerous (including such dim-witted individuals who will want to know what is the difference between the above platform and a Fascist one). (Signed)

The Board.

Fear for the personal safety of the members of the "Board" compels us to withhold their names. For any reader who may be of a suspicious turn of mind we wish to add—The above policy is entirely fictional. Any resemblance to newspapers living or dead is purely coincidental, is not intended, and should not be construed.

Chamberlain will Visit Rome to Discuss France-Italian and Other Problems

PLANS APPEASEMENT

By H. Nelson Lecheid
IT'S ROME IN JANUARY

Mr. Chamberlain, accompanied by Lord Halifax, is going to Rome next week to discuss with Mussolini, British mediation between France and Italy, and Italian mediation between Britain and Germany.

Great Britain is anxious to secure peace in Palestine and in seeking the services of the Axis she will have to pay the price Mussolini demands.

It is expected to ask for a more definite recognition by the British of Italian interests in the Mediterranean which will be defined widely, Italy has her eyes on Hunis, and since Tunis is French Mr. Chamberlain will have to talk very fluently and cleverly.

Italy wants a revision of Suez freight charges and might request a share in the control of the canal.

The National Government feels that relations with the Vatican should be improved, and the first steps will be taken when Chamberlain and Halifax are received by the Pope. The Prime Minister has not forgotten the Pope's willingness to broadcast a plea for peace during the September crisis.

BERIGAN TO PLAY AT DOCTORS' DANCE

Famous Goodman Trumpeter Hails from Hotel Savoy in New York

SINGER FEATURED

According to Mr. W. L. C. McGill the forthcoming Medical At-Home will be quite the dance of the year. He divulged the information that Bunny Berigan and his orchestra from the Hotel Savoy, New York City, will supply the music. The well-known American was a trumpeter with Benny Goodman. "So . . ." said the vice-president of the Medical Society with a voice full of meaning.

Advertising will arrive from New York tomorrow. He could not remember the name of the female singer who will accompany the orchestra.

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

London: Premier Neville Chamberlain and Viscount Halifax, together with a band of Foreign Office experts, leave today for a four-day visit to Premier Mussolini in Rome.

Prague: A temporary agreement was signed yesterday at Chust between the warring factions on the Czech-Slovak and Hungarian frontiers.

Washington: Colonel Lindbergh's report on Germany's air force may be used by the United States' ambassadors to overcome Congressional opposition to the President's armaments program.

Barcelona: Loyalists advance continuously; their offensive is even greater than it was thought at first. Heavy fighting is expected.

MAOOP SHOE MOOE CONQUERS OKLAHOMA, LEAVES TORONTO COLO

While Varsity co-eds cling to conventional sameness—in shoes at least—the girls from the University of Oklahoma sally forth in original, bizarre footwear.

The latest madcap slipper modes feature square, barrel, spool or Dutch heels for street or informal wear. In Toronto the very occasional pair of saddle oxfords and platform soles cause comment.

But even in the University of Oklahoma, where gold cellophane, silver brocade and chiffon ties dominate the evening scene, the experts revert to Toronto's conventionalism. When in doubt as to the propriety of any shoes, they advise the perplexed co-ed: stick to the old stand-bys (patent pump for dress, spectator pump for sports)—they are always good.

Shaw Play "Pygmalion" Makes Movie Premiere

Irish Playwright Appears on Silver Screen for First Time

LESLIE HOWARD STARS

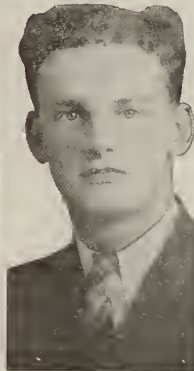

By Arthur J. Benson
New York: At long last the bearded Irish sage has crashed the movies, for last night saw the American premiere of George Bernard Shaw's Pygmalion. Produced in English by Gabriel Pascal and starring Leslie Howard, who is also billed as co-director, the film had a private showing at the Astor Theatre, the proceeds of the performance being donated to German refugees.

The movie follows Shaw's witty, wise and romantic play very closely (the Master himself wrote the screen adaptation as well) and should rank as one of this year's mightiest films. Leslie Howard's superb performance as the callous but delightful professor of phonetics who transforms a Cockney flower girl's accent and palms her off as a lady of breeding will silence for all time those critics who have failed to recognize him as one of our greatest living actors.

Wendy Hiller portrays the pathetic little guttersnipe with a sincerity and mastery which is frequently breathtaking. Unknown to audiences on this side of the water, she puts one in mind

H.M.S. PINAFORE EXPECTED TO DRAW CAPACITY CROWD

It looks like a complete sell-out for H.M.S. Pinafore. It is to be put on next Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Hart House Theatre, by the Vic Music Club under the direction of Thos. J. Crawford, Mus.Bac, F.R.C.O.

At noon yesterday approximately 1800 tickets had been sold out of the 2,000. One or two are left for Friday and Saturday nights, 115 for Thursday and 40 for the Saturday matinee.

Incidentally the tickets are sold by eight teams. According to the Ticket Team Temperature the greatest number sold by one team to date is 162, the last Pinafore put on by the club was five or six years ago, Jean Ross, secretary, stated. Practices for this one have been held since October. She attributed the Pinafore's success to its colour and the popularity of the music.

WORTHY CITIZENS TO RECEIVE TITLES

New Year's Honour List Released Last Night by House Clerk

TITLES ISSUED THURSDAY

Twelve prominent citizens will have titles conferred upon them at the opening of the U.C. Parliament on Thursday, it was revealed last night when the New Year's honour list was released by Don Bladdy, Clerk of Sessions. The patents for the newly-donated titles will be issued by the lieutenant-governor in the House on Thursday.

Official circles had long felt that the Barony of Baches and the Baroness of the Beer Hall would be given to Eric Hardy. It is generally agreed that there could not have been a more worthy recipient of that particular office.

Great concern was voiced over the appointment of Al Rose as Rear-Admiral of the Czech-Slovak navy. The international significance of this office is greatly enhanced by the fact that Czech-Slovakia is an inland country and therefore has prodigious naval requirements.

Fellow parliamentarians literally turned green with envy when they learned of the position to which R. D. Wolfe had been elevated. On Thursday he takes up his duties as Lord High Panhandler of the Privy Chamber.

THERAPY COURSE, UNIQUE IN CANADA, FORMS ASSOCIATION

The forty-eight girls in the two years of the Occupational Therapy course announce the formation last term of an Undergraduate Association. At a general meeting held at Wymulwood in November the project was discussed and approved, and the following officers were elected: Honorary president, Miss H. LeVesconte; president, Miss Isobel Robinson, '39; secretary, Miss Pauline Tancook, '39; treasurer, Miss Patricia Carson, '40.

The Occupational Therapy course was instituted in the University of Toronto in 1926 through the influence of Professor Haultain, formerly of the science department. As it is the only one given in Canada, and its standards are as high as those of any training centre in the world, the Toronto course has attracted girls from all parts of the Dominion and from England, and its graduates hold positions in many American and European hospitals.

Cam MacLachlan Nets Twice to Stall Off Home Squad

GOING IN GOAL STARS

Special to The Varsity

Hanover, New Hampshire, Jan. 9.—Despite the handicap of a slushy ice surface which slowed up their smooth-functioning attack, Varsity's senior puckmen recorded their second straight score in the I.H.L. loop here tonight, overcoming Dartmouth Indians 5-2. Symed during the first two periods by the sensational goaltending of Godding in the Dartmouth nets, the Baileymen were held to a slim 3-2 margin entering the final frame, but last-period goals by Copp and Callon assured victory for the locals.

Dartmouth went out on the head end of the parade after three minutes of the first period, Merriam hammering home Maloon's pass from close in. Reliable Cam MacLachlan evened the count for Varsity three minutes later, and at the half-way mark in the first session the Morison-Craig-Taylor trio gave the Blues a first period edge, centreman Bill Morison getting the marker. Airlight netminding by Godding and Caswell featured the opening stanza.

Play started off at a cautious pace in the middle canto, with both teams retarded by the sloppy ice. A triple passing play between Morison, Craig and MacLachlan gave Varsity a 3-1 lead at the thirteen-minute mark, Mac-

Chinese Students Believe in Future

"The final victory will be ours," the conclusion of a patriotic song epitomizes the spirit of the Chinese, according to Bernard Flood, representative of the Student Committee of the British Youth Peace Assembly on the International Student Delegation to China.

He shows that since more than two thirds of China's institutions of higher learning have fallen to the invader the provisional universities set up are not just the Oxford and Cambridges of China moved into the peaceful interior to continue their academic studies in seclusion. The theory that, given time, Chinese culture will, whatever the results of the war, eventually prevail over the Japanese is not one which appeals to the Chinese student; he knows, in many cases from personal experience, what Japanese domination has meant in Manchuria. These new universities are designed not only to keep culture alive, but also to be of immediate value in the present crisis.

At Changling, the new campus buildings were constructed entirely of wood, like an army encampment, by the students and professors themselves. In the lecture rooms the students sit on rough wooden benches or stools; in

Free Americans

Taxi companies in many of the American cities announced their keenness to co-operate with drunken drivers on New Year's Eve. Many companies, it is said, manned a great number of their cars with two drivers, so that when a motorist found himself too inebriated to drive home without endangering his own life (and all others who might happen in his way) he might be able to have a taxi call, with one man to drive his automobile home, and the other to conduct him to his doorstep.

Another company is alleged to have announced the willingness of its drivers to take its patrons home, carry them in over the doorstep, undress them, and put them to bed.

Many of these special arrangements were made, for those who started out for the evening's drunken celebrations, with their own motor cars, hoping to have the car see them home again safely. But apparently a few of them were expected to be wise enough to call a taxi, after they found that they had let themselves out of control. The wisest, it is supposed, left their conveyances within the doors of the garage, rather than risk their evening marred by a slight reprimand from a traffic officer, or maybe the worry over a murdered pedestrian.

Nothing could be a stronger indictment of American Society on Parade than the prevalence of supposedly intelligent human beings, having to become hopelessly intoxicated in order to see a New Year ushered in.

If we draw up a list of popular New Year's celebrations for the average citizen; describe the fifty-thousand dollar, four-bar coming-out party for Manhattan's beautiful seventeen-year-old debutante; take a cross-section of the misery created in the homes of city-slums, by the life of the drunken fathers appearing in Monday morning city courts; and emphasize it with a few life portraits of American gangsters, and the life-history of Mr. Musica, New York's respected citizen, with his Vienna degrees, and drug stores, revealing how he climbed to a position of wealth and influence on the crest of a wave of illegal alcohol; and we have some small idea of what the "booze" business is doing to Western civilization.

Take these minor points, describe them in their lurid details, and you will have an article which will give Scotland Yard a huge laugh, and Hitler reason to snicker up his sleeve, at the self-righteousness of a young continent, unable to control the alcohol trade because police forces and governments are influenced by gangsters and politicians interested in the brewery and boot-legging businesses.

In Germany, Nazi officials asked the youth to follow the example of their dictator, and refrain from the use of alcohol, tobacco and other drugs, as the proper way to develop into good German citizens.

On the North American continent, however, we are free, and in order to emphasize our freedom we endanger half of our society and tempt the racketeers to do their worst.

Like a New Year's drunken brawl, we are having a whale of a time, but a quarter of the population is already suffering a terrific hangover.

An Aviation Improvement

Probably no department of present-day mechanical interests has realized a greater number of innovations than that of aviation. Vast and varied as these improvements have been, this department has always suffered one conspicuous disadvantage, which has to do with recording the height of an airplane above elevations of land areas.

The present altimeter unerringly indicates the distance of a plane above the sea-level, but is no adequate criterion of the flyer's actual height above a rise of land, unless the pilot knows precisely where he is and can make his own deductions from the actual height above sea-level.

This notorious gap in the completeness of air navigation promises now to be closed. Recently there has been devised, according to press accounts, an altimeter depending on the principle of the projection of radio beams, which promises to be a distinct scientific improvement over the conventional barometric altimeter. Test flights have shown that this new instrument will dial the altitude above an elevation of land. Short-wave radio beams are directed downward and reflected back to the instrument, the time required for their return being translated into linear measurement, thus accurately signalling the distance in feet between the flyer and the ground.

Comparing the readings of the two altimeters the barometric instrument shows the plans for instance at a height of 1500 feet, while the "absolute" altimeter dials only 1000 feet, informing the pilot that he is moving over a land elevation of 500 feet.

In the event this new accessory to aviation equipment realizes the scientific claims made for it, flying over mountainous regions will be attended with fewer hazards, and one more of the serious handicaps of aviation will have been successfully overcome.

A Liberal Education

From the Argosy Weekly

The opinion has been voiced on this campus that one must have a knowledge of Greek and Latin in order to be truly educated. This is clearly a carry-over of the die hard attitude of the English public schools which long stood for classical learning as opposed to scientific. But such an attitude, it is felt, has little place in a university from which are to go the leaders of the country; such an attitude forms a bar to progress, elevating as it does the customs and ideas of a long dead past at the expense of a progressive future.

And if such an attitude is held, in what manner must it reflect on the university? Are all the Bachelors of Science, all Engineers, all Pre-Meds, and many others who pass through a period of university training, uneducated? If so, the university has failed in its purpose or else must admit that the term "university education" is of little significance.

It seems, however, that the idea of Latin and Greek being necessary for the educated person is rather ridiculous. The two old arguments for teaching them have been disproved; no longer are they needed as "disciplinary" subjects, as it is now realized that any subject may be taught in such a fashion and psychologists have shown that there is little actual "transfer" from these subjects to the field of actual life. Any cultural value to be obtained from a study of these languages may be more easily obtained through the medium of English translations and histories prepared by specialists in these fields.

"I call, therefore, a complete and generous education that which fits a man to perform justly, skillfully, and magnanimously, all the offices, both private and public, of peace and war."

Such was the idea of education held by Milton—poet, puritan, and statesman. How applicable is it today?

In Milton's day the study of Latin was considered necessary in the performance of the offices of peace and war, but since then has very largely died out of common usage. This has been recognized by many of the American universities in which Latin is no longer compulsory for a degree, and the graduate may feel educated according to Milton's definition without it. Such a step we feel to be in the right direction, and look forward to the time when such will be the case nearer home.

Hurrah, vaudeville is back! And with a vengeance this time. The stage show at the Shea's Theatre this week is something to look at. Fast-SHEA'S moving and amusing from VODVIL start to finish, the presentation bears the title Hollywood Star Doubles. The doubles of Hugh Herbert, Joan Crawford, Bing Crosby and many other screen stars appear. Of the assisting cast the most outstanding performer is Cass Daley. Billed as the Cyclonic Songstress, she brings the house down with her song styling which is a cross between Fanny Brice and Martha Raye.

The picture is Storm Over Bengal featuring Patric Knowles and Rochelle Hudson, and deals with how a British officer saves Indya (dear old Indya) from the clutches of a Khan who had an Oxford education. Typical line: "Very well, you will find our torture is effective if not subtle." We win.

Mickey Rooney steals the show from the rest of the Hardy family, when he goes out west and becomes a mail-order cowboy in a hurry. The LOEW'S OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS meant for entertainment and has plenty of laughs, with Judge Hardy (Lewis Stone) doing a bit of philosophizing, and sacrificing for his friends on the side . . . all creating a nice little plot, to fascinate very amateurish plot-detectors.

STUDENT SURVEYS POLITICAL ARENA

SPANISH PROBLEM

A few weeks ago Lord Halifax stated in the House of Lords that Mussolini would not quit Spain until Franco won. Despite the fact that Il Duce called home 10,000 soldiers in October, Franco has told Non-Intervention Secretary Hemming that he will not send another man home until he has the belligerent rights which with the command of the sea would enable him to starve out the enemy by sinking supply ships. Mussolini has backed this demand in the hope of ending the war quickly.

The widespread appeal for shipments of food would seem to indicate that Republican hopes are fading. The government is now selling silver to pay for imports, indicating that their supply of gold is almost exhausted.

Chamberlain hopes for a truce, to be followed by mediation resulting in the restoration of monarchy in Spain. Don Juan is favoured as the future occupant of the throne. Alfonso, however, refuses to abdicate feeling that the next king risks almost certain death and he wants to be the first person to take that chance.

PLANS FOR APPEASEMENT

The main reason for Nazi expansionism is not psychological but economic, according to Mr. Chamberlain. He points to bad trade in Germany, the inability to obtain raw materials and the absence of a free currency. The Prime Minister believes that the German people will prevent Hitler from waging war. He has received more letters of appreciation from Germany than from any other country.

Chamberlain's appeasement plan not only affects Germany, but the entire world. It is a scheme, in fact, for the restoration of world trade, and embodies three points.

(1) Loans from Britain and United States to Germany; the stabilization of the mark, lira, pound, franc and dollar.
(2) Lower tariffs.
(3) Germany must be permitted to organize the economy of Eastern Europe as a unit.

WHAT WILL HITLER SAY?

If Hitler is to accept this plan Chamberlain thinks he must be offered colonies. Those suggested are: Southwest Africa and Tanganyika; part of the Belgian Congo, French Equatorial Africa and Angola, Togoland, Nigeria and French Cameroons. Opposition to this plan has been offered by France, Belgium and Portugal.

Chamberlain, it appears, was ready to go so far as to accept the German proposal of an air-force limitation at an Anglo-German ratio of 1:3, in return for the Anglo-German naval ratio of 3:1, already fixed in the 1936 pact. Cabinet protested and criticism in the House of Commons resulted in the defeat of this proposal and England is to have air power second to none in Europe.

AFRICAN NAZISM

Interesting to note is an article in "Die Neue Weltbühne" which states that Nazism could spread all over Africa from the German colonies. The plan is outlined as follows:

"The Cameroons, German Southwest and German East Africa could co-operate in war with Libya and Abyssinia as bases for the conquest of Africa. The Cameroons could threaten Nigeria, French West and Equatorial Africa and the Belgian Congo. Being only 1,000 km. from Libya, the Cameroons would be ideal for air warfare. A co-ordinated German-Italian offensive is almost irresistibly tempting when such prizes are to be won."

MODERN MIRACLE

The German radio announced two days before the funeral of Vom Rath at Dusseldorf that Hitler would deliver the funeral oration. Hitler, arriving at Dusseldorf offered his sympathy to the murdered diplomat's father and suggested that the German people would avenge the death of his son. Vom Rath senior replied that the dictator should not use his son's death as an excuse for Jew-baiting. Hitler did not make the scheduled radio speech!

Damaged Goods, currently appearing at the Madison Theatre after a run at the Royal Alexandra, is the type of picture that DAMAGED GOODS would never have been shown locally as recently as three years ago. The film, adapted by Upton Sinclair from Eugene Brieux' controversial novel, dares to approach the problem of venereal disease, a subject taboo in tight-censored Toronto of former years.

This independently produced movie succeeds in handling a delicate subject in a dignified, mature manner, without pulling any punches. In the course of its unfolding it shows the devastating effect of the dread affliction, while managing at the same time to point an object lesson to parents and youth. Its purpose, defined by the sponsors in a brief summary at the play's conclusion, is to rip off the false wrappings which obscure the real issue of venereal disease and to illustrate that syphilis is a disease to be talked about rather than whispered about. The definitely educational character of "Damaged Goods" is not, fortunately, achieved through sacrifice of its highly dramatic quality.

The members of the cast, most of whom will be unfamiliar to local audiences, turn in uniformly good performances in a highly effective film that is a distinct credit both to the producers and to the movie industry. Four carefully selected shorts, a cartoon, a pictorial and two comedies complete the program.—A.H.

WARDEN WILL DISCUSS "BORSTAL" IDEA TODAY

Bickersteth Speaks on "Young Prisoners and Their Treatment"

Mr. J. B. Bickersteth, popular warden of Hart House, is speaking today from 1.30-2 p.m. in the Music Room, Hart House, on the subject "Young Prisoners and Their Treatment". This subject inaugurates the S.C.M. noon-hour series for this term.

Warden Bickersteth has made a special study of the Borstal system for the handling of young prisoners in England and has been very active in promoting its adoption in Canada. The recent investigation of penitentiary systems in Canada and the report of the Royal Commission has brought the matter of Penal Reform once again to the attention of the Canadian public.

Pipe Players

An organization meeting for pipe players will be held at 5 p.m. on Thursday, 12th January, in the Music Room of Hart House. Mr. Weldon Kilburn, conductor, will be present. Last year's pipe players are particularly asked to attend as well as those who have made their pipes this year.

MEDS-PHARMACY BALLS

By Les Vipond

Christmas night is a terrible night to go meandering around the countryside and so we stayed home and missed—Bob Crosby. We also missed Berigan's loss and Artie Shaw's gain—George Alt, ace tenor sax man, a Torontonian, who was in town a few days last week and sat in with the boys at the Onyx Club Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. He had some hot news to report both from Berigan's band which he has just left and from Artie Shaw's outfit which he has recently joined.

Good news came over the telephone last night to the effect that arrangements have just been completed for Don Redman to provide the music at the Pharmacy At-Home. We immediately dashed off a column on Redman but decided to hold it a few nights in favour of Bunny Berigan who precedes Redman by appearing at the Meds At-Home on January 26th.

India Seeks Understanding with Rest of World Says Ali

NOTED EASTERN SCHOLAR

The world is too full of ideologies and old superstitions, Mr. Ali pointed out in his address on India yesterday afternoon, and it is the duty of those who claim to think to point out the way to understanding and reasonableness. India seeks this understanding with the rest of the world.

India's size and diversity alone are often unrealized: its overcrowding, due to the closed door policy of other countries, does not deter people from returning to it. Mr. Ali attributed to the country's beauty and to its variety of climate. Besides the seven British provinces, there is the old India of the princes, a number of large and small states left from the Mogul Empire. The present problem is to unite the whole of India in a federation; this dream is complicated by several factors.

"On the whole any people who wish to reconstruct their social and economic system should have self-government." (Continued on Page 4)

IRISH LACE BLUES IN BIG EIGHT GAME

Varsity Juniors Lose Sixth Straight by 9-1 Margin

MCMANARA A STANDOUT

Melancholy Jimmy McPherson, the coach of the winless Varsity juniors, is still crying the blues. Last evening at the Gardens Jerry Laflamme's classy St. Michael's sextet skidded the Blueshirts further into the cellar of the Big Eight group, ringing up an unequivocal 9-1 verdict. By the loss the Varsity team preserved its unblemished record of six losses in six starts for an average of .000.

Summer Camps Provide Students' Work and Fun

May Spend Vacation in Working Class Community

CONSTRUCTIVE WORK

Chiefly in the interests of university students, the American Friends Service Committee has instituted an annual Work Camp Project, in which students are invited to spend two months of their summer holidays as members of a working class community.

The students earn the right to be members of this community by devoting their days to some constructive work in it—the men working in the mines, the construction work, or whatever local industry there is; the girls instituting playgrounds and nursing schools, and looking after the "cuisine" and other household duties of the camp, which is set up in some place agreed upon by the community, i.e., empty apartments.

Local Version of "Snow White" Directed by Victoria Student

A German version of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" directed by Enid Jernyn, was the feature of the German Club, which met last night at the Women's Union. Jean Graham, IV Arts, played the part of Snow White and seven other girls those of the dwarfs. Misses Hand and Conforti provided the music which consisted of songs from the motion picture.

Another interesting item of the program was "The Return of Professor Quizz". The professor, Gerald Buckley, IV Arts, appeared at the last German Club and was brought back by popular demand. Schmitzbank was also on the program and refreshments and dancing concluded the meeting.

Haven of Peace Becomes Scene of Social Whirl

Again the busy season has rolled around to Hart House, and night-life will be the order of the times. During the next month and a half scarcely a week will pass when its halls will not echo with muffled laughter and music.

The first big function of the season is the colourful C.O.T.C. Ball on Friday, January 13. Dancing will be in the big gymnasium to Stan St. John's ten-piece orchestra, and dinner in the Great Hall. Further colour will be added to the spectacle by the presence of a number of officers in dress uniforms from various contingents throughout the city.

On January 20, the Trinity College Conversation will be presented. Jack Farrigan's twelve-piece orchestra, and his songstress, Betty Lloyd, from the Royal Connaught in Hamilton, will furnish the music for the evening in an elaborately camouflaged gymnasium. Supper will be served in the Great Hall where tables may be reserved for parties. So far, ticket sales have surpassed corresponding sales this time last year.

MILITARY COLOUR FOR ANNUAL BALL

Hart House will be Scene of the Most Formal Event of the Year

CARICATURES ADORN GYM

The annual ball sponsored by the University of Toronto Contingent of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps will take place on Friday, January 13 in Hart House. Stanley St. John's orchestra will supply the music and a three-course "sit-down" supper will be served in the Great Hall.

The ball has been characterized by the committee in charge as the most formal event on the campus, even the seats for the supper being reserved. The gymnasium has been decorated by the Art Group of Hart House with drawings depicting Canada's armed preparedness in a satirical manner.

The guests will be received by Lieut-Col. H. H. Madill, Commanding Officer of the contingent, and President Cody, who is honorary colonel of the contingent. The patronesses of the ball are Mrs. H. J. Cody, Mrs. H. H. Madill and Mrs. W. S. Wilson, and the committee in charge consists of Capt. R. D. Barron, Capt. W. E. Carswell, Capt. E. G. Moege, Lieut. M. J. Egan, Lieut. P. G. Cornell, 2nd Lieut. R. R. Ireland, 2nd Lieut. J. H. Gilbreath, and Cadets E. Routley, G. H. Parke, J. Clarry, J. A. Macintosh, and S. J. Key.

Broadcast

The first of the series of broadcasts, "The Varsity Speaks" will be heard with Jack Thompson over Station CKCL tonight at 8.15.

MAESTRO PDULAR HERE

Richard Himber, the 28-year-old maestro who with his "Rhythmic Pyramids" Orchestra is to officiate at the School At-Home on January 20, has been making music since he was 14 years old. Manager of Rudy Vallee for two years, he next toured for two years, leading the "Kings of Syncopation" orchestra for Sophie Tucker.

He followed this by playing on the Studebaker hour for two years with his "Essen House Orchestra", during which time he was voted one of the five most popular band leaders. After a period directing the "Hit Parade" he originated his "Rhythmic Pyramids", voted one of the most distinctive dance styles ever created. In this style of playing a chord is broken into six different notes, each of the six brass instruments playing one note, using different mutes.

Stewart Allen, who has been with Himber for four years, is the vocalist. He is noted for singing the songs as they are written, without adding any embellishments of his own.

Recordings of Himber's music will be played outside the School building from 1 to 2 p.m. this week, and will also be broadcast over CKCL at 6.45 p.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 18.

Holiday Funds Lacking as Aftermath of "Crisis"

FINANCIAL-MENTAL STRAIN

Special to The Varsity By H. Nelson Lockard

London, Eng.: The shop-keepers in London will tell you that business at Christmas was bad, and explain why. During the crisis it was expected that at any moment the school children would be transported from the schools to hostels outside the city. Mothers, wishing their children to be comfortable, withdrew the money they had deposited in the Christmas funds to purchase blankets and clothes for their children.

There is something of the comicality in the stories told of mother cutting father's underwear to make two or three pairs for her children so that they would be "respectable". This is not an exaggeration, for there were thousands who could not afford to do otherwise.

It is difficult to realize that such conditions actually exist in a civilized country, but a survey has shown that for seventy per cent of the working people in London the top salary is a little under twenty dollars a week.

For these people the crisis was not only a mental strain but a financial one as well. They had to buy equipment which they could not afford, and (Continued on Page 4)

CONVERSAT PROMISES GALA EVENING

Rugby Rival of Varsity Band to Entertain with Torrid Trumpetings

For some years, students of the university who attended the rugby games in Varsity Stadium have been entertained by the versatility of an unknown trumpet. From time to time Capt. Slater has shaken an angry fist at the interloper who delighted to interrupt the best efforts of the Varsity band with soul satisfying arrangements of his own.

The Trinity College Conversat is proud to announce that this demon trumpet will appear at the dance and burn up the music with his torrid notes. Some day we all will graduate, and this is the last appearance of the mysterious figure who made our rugby games a little more enjoyable.

Mr. R. R. Easton, in charge of supper arrangements, is now ready to receive your table reservations. From the present indications a large number of graduates will attend and are anxious to sit with their respective years. The Conversat each year becomes the Mecca for more graduates, as many year reunions are planned at this time.

The ticket sales to date are on a par with last year but it is hoped that as the dance draws nearer past attendance records will be smashed.

Fees for Easter Term

The final date for paying the scholastic fees for the Easter term is January 20th.

According to Mr. Higginbottom, Bursar for the University, the fees for the last term, with a few exceptions, were paid promptly, and it is hoped that this term, payments will be just as satisfactory.

Many of the students, no doubt, have been so immersed in their academic studies as to have overlooked this important duty. Hence, in order to avoid the final rush in paying their fees, they are requested by the Bursar and his staff to come in soon and make their payments.

Awakening of China

When one sees how relatively simple it is for certain European nations to increase their territory, power and prestige at the expense of their more democratic neighbours one must almost shudder if he considers at all seriously what might happen if the Japanese military machine were to subjugate China and let loose her four hundred million men for the purpose of bringing the whole world to the feet of the Mikado.

Perhaps we may point with a sort of optimistic fatalism to the fact that the Nipponese are wearing themselves out and the Chinese are gradually winning back their land. We are not sufficiently aware that the crisis has aroused China from her slumber. The leaders in this national awakening have been the relatively very small portion of the population who have had the privilege of education, very many of them in institutions founded and endowed by funds from this continent. The leaders of the Jap military aggression astutely have realized the vital importance of these educated leaders, and all college institutions, the foster mothers from which they come, have been marked out for destruction. This has been the case even where such buildings were no longer of any purely tactical value to their adversaries. In the subjugated areas persecution of all intellectuals who would not forswear themselves has been unrelenting, and in Peiping for instance, the possession of even certain standard text-books, especially in the fields of economics and political theory, has been a capital offence.

The students of China, like the youth of any invaded country, have rallied to fight in the defence of their homeland; but Chiang Kai-Shek wisely has said, "Students can best serve their country by completing their education." Temporary universities have been set up in the unconquered west under very pioneer conditions. Students, many of whom have lost everything in the war, are not only preparing to lead in the reconstruction of China but in their spare time are strengthening the forces of national unity by fostering patriotic spirit. Presenting plays, teaching national songs, organizing and leading guerrilla units, and conducting mass education projects for literacy, public health, and better agriculture, in all accessible villages and hamlets, they are helping China to make a firm and enlightened stand against aggression. Despite their heroic resistance of invasion, the Chinese armies have in a singular way refrained from unnecessary acts of retaliation against defenceless civilians. The bombers which flew over Japanese cities carried, not explosives, but leaflets, calling on the Japanese people to unite with the Chinese in throwing off the yoke of their militaristic oppressors. Despite a strict censorship many of the Japanese, perhaps the majority of the intellectuals, have in various ways expressed their sympathy with the Chinese.

A giant of this kind, which has shown, not only in recent days, but through history, that she does not want to use her power to crush and dominate her neighbours, can be counted on as an asset to the family of nations. The danger lies, not in her great size, but in the possibility of her being led astray.

Her dangers are numerous, but throughout the ages China has been able to rise above adversity, and has refused to be conquered. Even today there are those who are optimistic in their faith, that should large parts of her people be subdued by the Japanese, in another half century her civilization will be supreme once again, and her conquerors will be absorbed into that old Chinese culture, remodelled.

She herself is fighting hard, and her courage in the face of adversity should evoke world-wide admiration. All those admiring her stand should be willing to aid in the appeal now being made for the relief of Chinese students, who are using the weapons of peace with which they hope eventually to be triumphant.

Lecture Baiters

"Dialectic is the way to definition," said the Greeks, and through the ages men have agreed with them. But they might well have added, "Too much dialectic gives no definition." Argument is a fine constructive method of clarifying an issue, but like most good things, it can be overdone. There is a difference between a genuine desire to approach a problem from all its angles, and a crude display of intellectual exhibitionism. Into this latter class fall a certain group of persons known as lecture baiters. The lecture baiter is the student who insists on blocking all progress by refuting each point as it arises merely for the sake of argument. He will not let the professor put across a single statement without raising all the possible and impossible arguments against it. He protests against a theme before the professor has had a chance to present it in full, and is a master in the art of destructive criticism. Sometimes he is witty; more often he is superficial.

Lecture baiters are thorns in the side of the professors who, although interrupted by bootless questions, maintain their courtesy and attempt to carry on with the side-tracked lecture. They are even more annoying to the other ninety per cent of students who are attempting to follow a guided line of thought and find the issues incomplete and confused at the end of a two-hour session. A superficial argument which goes on and on is enough to drive any interest in the work from the minds of the enforced listeners, and make them long for the end of the period. The purpose of the group is entirely defeated.

This is not an argument for "pill-swallowing"; professors are only too glad to answer genuine and intelligent questions. But the student himself knows, and everybody else in the group knows, when he is being sincere and when he is showing off. Questions not connected with the immediate issue can always be brought up with the professor in private, instead of wasting the time of several other people, who all have their own problems. Or professors will often hold open forums when questions will be answered. But the practice of one or two pseudo-intellectuals to delay the progress of twenty individuals for a skirmish of wits is unintelligent, selfish, and quite childish.

DARING EXPOSE

Pursuing its policy of last year the Champus Cat again brings to its three readers, a scientific analysis of some of the propaganda that is being forced down the throats of the children of the city. This is the first of a series of Cats by the estimable Wiregaters in which he will analyze the pernicious and UNSCIENTIFIC approach of the school teachers of Toronto.

MISLEADING POETRY

Hi-diddle diddle the cat and the fiddle. This is an excellent example of the degenerate poetry that is rapidly undermining the morale of our youth. IT MUST BE STAMPED OUT.

The cow jumped over the moon. Thousands of scientists the world over have denounced the above statement as fantastic nonsense. "No cow is capable of jumping over the moon"—Isaac Newton. Such obvious fabrications CANNOT BE TOLERATED. The little dog laughed to see such fun. "Absurd" . . . The New Yorker.

"Rot" . . . Punch.
"Piffle" . . . Ladies' Home Journal.
"Errumpph" . . . Fortune.
And the dish ran away with the spoon. Such action is certainly condemned by and has NOT the approval of Good Housekeeping Magazine.

Are you in favour of a movement to stamp out the vicious nonsense rhymes that are being forced upon our youth? Why not write to

to the soloist, Emanuel Feuerman, a cellist who combines a consummate artistry of interpretation, based upon an obviously instinctive understanding of the qualities peculiar to his instrument, with a technical mastery comparable to that of a virtuoso violinist; and last night he was apparently surrounded by some sort of aura that influenced the entire orchestra to integrate its work almost perfectly with his. The concerto was Dvorak's B minor—unfamiliar but delightfully jolly stuff, pleasantly lacking in the banality which afflicts many of the composer's more frequently played works.

It's a bad thing to drag politics into a music review, but we can't help but feel that it is a little unfortunate for the people whose countries produced among others, Beethoven, Mozart and Schubert, that Mr. Feuerman must, of necessity, fail to meet the cultural requirements of the Third Reich.

The orchestral part of the program was notable in itself for its precision and balance of parts; and someone has been teaching the violins how to play pianissimo, with the result that Mendelssohn's Midsummer Night's Dream really sounded as though it had to do with fairies. Till Eulenspiegel, by Richard Strauss, was given one of the most dramatic readings we have heard, perhaps because MacMillan made a point of bringing out all its programmatic significance.

Toronto's premiere showing of "The nothing to be desired in EGLETON the way of good entertainment.

VANISHES Starring Marg Lock-

Dame May Whitty, the picture is packed with thrills, mystery, action, and the best of good acting. The scene is laid on a European railway train, the occasion as is usual in British films, is a spy racket, the accompanying effects are faultless and the lady really vanishes.

As an added feature is the showing not so good from its love aspect or

TWO TOP BANDS ATTRACT CAMPUS

this year will be no exception. Some students (not us) have felt that the Society should change their policy of bringing coloured bands, and the change had to be made what better could happen than that the greatest hot white trumpeter since the immortal Bix Beiderbecke should front his own band here.

Bunny is still a young man, but he has packed into his musical life a wealth of experience that will ensure him a place with the "greats" of jazz.
He first came into the public eye as trumpeter with the Dorsey Brothers Orchestra, which outfit many of the old time swing enthusiasts claim was better than either of the present brother bands. From there he went to Benny Goodman just as the King of Swing was on the rising tide. Some of Goodman's hit records such as *King
Porter and Blue Skies* show Berigan to good advantage. After that he fronted his own band and was immediately acclaimed in big time. His recordings with Victor, such as his theme song
I can't get started and The Prisoner's Song are swing classics. Before his own band was formed he endeared himself to thousands of dial twisters as leader and soloist with the Saturday Nite Swing Club Session.

As an up and coming young cornetist he was an understudy and protégé of the great Miffy Spanier who in his turn owes a similar debt to Louis Armstrong. Although Bunny derives so much from Negro inspiration his style is still essentially that of a white man for, with his simple economic sense of phrasing, his trigger imagination and almost inexhaustible supply of ideas, he deserves to rank in the same class as Bix. No one has ever successfully duplicated his tone, with its brutal, almost nervous quality and its characteristic husky vibrato.

Record collectors are eagerly awaiting his latest recordings which, according to George Alt, exhibit some of the finest swing in recent years. The personnel of the band has changed in the last few weeks and we were unable to get a listing of the new set-up before going to press. However, we hope to get it within a few days and when we do we'll pass it on. Berigan is always careful in picking his men and his outfit is bound to be danceable and versatile.

hither and yon

With Frank Shuster

SPEAKING PERSONALLY, we like our professors and lecturers . . .
but it has come to our attention that there is a certain prof down at Grinnell University, upon whom abuse is being heaped by the unfortunate students. . . . It seems that this professor assigns a quiz every so often. . . .
When the class meets, he asks if everyone has studied. . . . When he gets an affirmative reply, he states that he guesses there is no need of giving one.
So he doesn't. . . . WE ASK
YOU, IS THAT SPORTING!

A DARING EXPOSE (darn it, we can't make an accent on the linotype) on women may be found in the Mountain Eagle. . . . In case you don't read that paper, and who does, we will give their impressions. . . .

Women are like:
A book—Always bound to please. . . .
An automobile—needs choking every so often. . . . A train—often gets off from the main track. . . . a party platform—subject to change without notice.
A stove—often needs a new lid.
A chair—often needs sitting on.
A callous—it takes hard work to get it, it hurts when you have it, but you sort of miss it when it's gone. . . .
Aw shucks, stop it, will you. . . .

ANOTHER STEP in the right direction is the banning of corsages to week-end dances at William and Mary.

And another school to come to the fore with a similar ruling is Washington State. . . . NEED WE SAY THAT THIS IS A GOOD THING?

WHEN STUDENTS PROTEST,
they really protest. . . . At Kenyon College, a new type of strike took place. . . . It seems that the faculty decided to take a few days off the students' vacation, and this is how they protested. . . . They brought a cow into the library. . . . they filled the swimming pool with ducks. . . . and a pig went to chapel. . . . Speaking of animals, a mouse paid a surprise visit to the Social Psychology class here at Varsity yesterday afternoon. . . .

The rodent was first noticed by a jittery coed in the first row. . . . She began to giggle violently until the professor asked whether she had just seen a mouse. . . . She said she had.
This baffled the professor, and on trying to capture the innocent animal, the latter disappeared. . . . It is rumoured that the animal was one of the mice down from the Psychology Lab, who was very much interested in Social Psychology. . . . For those who wish further details, we suggest you read your local lab report. . . .

SPEAKER SHOWS RIVALRY OF RELIGIOUS GROUPS

This boon Britain has introduced in some measure. "On the other hand as each province develops its own life, there is the danger of the provinces flying apart; you face somewhat the same problem in the diverse interests of eastern and western Canada," Mr.
Ali said.

But aside from economic difficulties,
India's unity is complicated by the rivalry of the two major religions,

Hindu and Moslem. Each group must vote within itself so that minor constituencies split the country. The ideal is to minimize them and to work out a franchise based on citizenship as a whole. Thus India desires first to work out brotherhood within itself.

Finally, Mr. Ali stated that India desires to extend this co-operation and understanding to other countries, seeking to be part of the Empire as an individual is part of a family, to respect other members and be respected by them.

as a result Christmas was a dreary day in the majority of English homes.
The children were told that Santa Claus, along with the Czechoslovakian representative, was not present at the Munich tea-party.

Earl Grey once said "Great armaments inevitably lead to war". The National Government is evidently taking little notice of this statement for it has endorsed a rearmament policy which will entail the expenditure of millions of dollars, for airplanes, anti-aircraft guns and other instruments of war.

A careful survey has shown that in London, number one target, miles of trenches have been left unfinished, and that there is an acute shortage of fire-fighting equipment. It is also consoling to learn that if the Germans attacked London in the next few days no arrangements have been made as to what sections of the population would be evacuated.

The munition manufacturer must be grateful to the crisis. He will no longer have to worry about the money for his new Rolls-Royce. It is conceivable, however, that somebody must profit by the stupidity of an insane policy designed for mass destruction.

HART HOUSE WARDEN ADVOCATES ADOPTION OF BORSTAL SYSTEM

Address on Young Prisoners
Opens New S.C.M.
Series

OUTLINES ENGLISH SYSTEM

Warden J. B. Bickersteth of Hart House inaugurated the new series of S.C.M. Noon Hour addresses yesterday with a talk on "Young Prisoners and their Treatment". The main theme of his talk was the Borstal system for the handling of young prisoners which has been used in England.

"No boy under twenty-one years of age should ever know the prison cell," he said. "But in Canada, our treatment of criminals lacks human thought and conscientious workers. Little chance under Canada's present system, has a released convict for a renewed life."

Mr. Bickersteth went on to describe the workings of the Borstal system. Under this system the individuals are educated for two or three years and ninety-five per cent of them are provided with jobs. He refuted the opponents of the plan with the statement that criminals are mentally ill and should be treated with the same sane treatment as those who are physically ill.

In England, the Borstal system is administered by several schools, operated with the strictest discipline of an English public school. The juvenile delinquents are classed according to their age and the type of case, and each school handles its own class.

"What should Canada do?" asked the speaker. "She should establish a Borstal committee in every principal town and in definite localities, graded Borstal schools. These schools should provide salaries, religious encouragement, and S.C.M. ADDRESS

Campus Plane Will See Service This Term

For the first time the new airplane on the campus goes into service. It will be used in the aerial navigation course starting this term in the Faculty of Science to teach the details of construction and the proper method of rigging.

The plane, a D-H Moth, was donated to the university by the Dominion government for use in the new aeronautical course. The plane is to be used for ground instruction only—the danger of an airplane swooping down on us as we cross the campus will not have to be faced.

Varsity Hockey Team Come Home Unscathed

Puckmen Have Best Time of Their Lives while on Vacation Tour

CAME HOME TUESDAY

By Sid Roebuck

Yesterday afternoon your humble reporter took the liberty of interviewing two of the fourteen stars making up the 1938-39 Varsity hockey roster. In a little corner in Hart House "smoker laboratory," the boys wholeheartedly confessed that "it was the best experience of their lives" and after listening to an account of their adventures one can hardly disagree with this statement.

It appears that Johnny Taylor supplied a bit of fearful anxiety by turning up at the station just when the train was beginning to leave. Once on the train, Johnny spent half the time from here to Vancouver talking about the beautiful weather experienced in British Columbia, and was nearly massacred when it was raining cats and dogs on their arrival. The mayor of Vancouver was there to meet them when they entered the Pacific Coast city and took them on a personal tour through New Westminster. After the boys packed down a hearty feast supplied by the Toronto alumni in B.C., they were the honourable guests of a tea given by Mrs. "Cyclone" Taylor. It seems that Cam MacLachlan's smiles

Director is Satisfied With Progress
Of Cast of "Holiday"

A brief visit to the rehearsal of "Holiday" yesterday afternoon revealed that the members of the cast are making rapid progress in preparation for the annual production of the University Drama Committee. The play, one of the most popular of Philip Barry's works and recently portrayed on the screen, will be presented in Hart House Theatre on February 9, 10 and 11.

Willard Thompson, director of this year's presentation and also director of Hart House Theatre, expressed satisfaction with the progress being made. "Every member of the cast is well into his part now," he said, "and all the rough edges have been polished off. We have a capable cast of twelve, representing dramatic groups in Trinity, Victoria, S.P.S. and University College. Things are moving smoothly and well, and we are confident that this production will be among the best."

Professor Nonchalant As Persian Cat Invades Law Lecture

The lecture on Land Law for the second year of the law course yesterday was interrupted for a time, as an oversized Persian cat majestically walked up the aisle of the room. The first intimation of its presence was an almost inaudible cry by one of the female students.

Brushing the legs of several startled students, the feline came to the front of the room where the professor was in the midst of a sentence. Absently he stared at the intruder as he said, "As long as it doesn't make any noise, it can stay." The lecture continued, while the boys amused themselves with passing the cat from one to the other.

Tiring of such play, the cat finally took up a position on a window sill and gazed idly out at the passing traffic.

Varsity Symphony Orchestra Premieres Work By Student

The University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra, in its annual concert next Wednesday, will present the world premiere of a "Piece for Orchestra" by Louis Applebaum, student in the Faculty of Music. To keep the first performance of the selection for the concert here, Brock McElleran, conductor of the orchestra, has decided not to include it in the program at Guelph tonight.

Louis Applebaum, who is in his graduating year in the Faculty of Music, claims that the "Piece for Orchestra" has no meaning. "It is not program music," he said yesterday. "It was written expressly for the University orchestra with nothing else in mind. In my own opinion, it is musically not very important, and contains nothing new."

ANNUAL MEDS EVENT TO FEATURE BERIGAN AND KATHLEEN LANE

Leader Dreams of "Hot Licks" as Toscanini Plays Debussy

PLAYED IN DORSEY'S BAND

Bunny Berigan, the terrific young trumpeter who formerly played with the orchestras of Hal Kemp, Rudy Vallee, Tommy Dorsey and Benny Goodman, has been engaged to bring his orchestra and songstress Kathleen Lane to play at the annual Meds At-Home on January 26.

The dance will be held on the convention floor of the Royal York Hotel where Berigan will entertain the medical students in their annual party. Last year Duke Ellington played for the doctors and it is in keeping with this tradition of bringing name bands to their parties that the committee in charge of the dance decided on Bunny Berigan.

The blonde and handsome band leader is a prime favourite with the college students throughout the State where he has played at many proms. Berigan has gathered about him a group of musicians whom he met in his undergraduate days at the University of Wisconsin as well as those who came under his notice while playing for Goodman and Dorsey.

He claims his greatest thrill came when someone dared him to tickle a high C and he came through with an F over high C.

Bunny says he has two ambitions which bother him a great deal. One is to hide himself somewhere in the New York Philharmonic Symphony some day and while Toscanini is conducting Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun", suddenly stand up and "get hot". The other daydream is to go to the military academy at West Point and do "revue" and "taps" in the hottest way he knows and without warning. He figures that would startle the future generals.

FORREST INTERVIEWED

"The Varsity Speaks", a series of weekly broadcasts based on news and features in The Varsity, was inaugurated last night by station CKCL. The program was conducted by Jack Thompson, well known to radio listeners for his Transradio news broadcasts, and is to be heard every Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. Mr. Thompson said he would try to make the program of interest to the general public as well as to Varsity students, while describing the news, traditions and humour of the campus.

The Rockefeller Institute's $250,000 gift to the School of Nursing and the reception given thirty-six South African university undergraduates who saw snow for the first time in their lives when visiting Toronto were reported. Mr. Thompson mentioned the choice of Richard Himber's band for the School At-Home, giving his opinion that the "rhythmic pyramid building" appealed to the Engineers. About the coming Trinity College dance, he said that probably Trinity men like chaperones, as they try to get as many graduates out as possible.

An interview with Al Forrest, editor-in-chief of The Varsity, was a COLLEGE EDUCATION FOR WOMEN UPHELD PRAISED BY BROWN

Worth of Higher Education
Questioned by Co-ed
Debaters

At the women's interfaculty debate on the subject "Resolved that a university education is not advisable for women who do not intend to engage in a professional or scientific career," the judges upheld the negative, supported by Katharine Bryce and Winifred Hillier, University College. Betty Kirk and Katherine Rouse presented the affirmative for Trinity.

Katharine Bryce pointed out that a university education fits one for other vocations than scientific and professional careers. Many women, upon graduating, enter the business world and find that the ability to think clearly and to meet people with poise, abilities acquired at university, is more than useful. Furthermore, she said university women with their knowledge of history and political science, must, in the near future, assume the leadership of women in all fields—in business, in the home and in the community.

"University offers an opportunity for men and women to meet on common ground. The ideas of both sexes are modified and reduced to a common denominator," said Winifred Hillier.

On the other hand, Betty Kirk and Katherine Rouse, who debated for the affirmative, felt that the woman who attends university for no other purpose than rounding out her education or acquiring culture, is a menace. "She is," said Betty Kirk, "nothing more than a frozen asset—costing much and yielding nothing. The only true student is a student with a purpose."

"The audience is not spoken at, as in an address and possibly this psychological difference sustains interest for a wider public. Information is imparted and varied views given. It is up to the listener to draw his own conclusions," he said.

For Student Employment

The Varsity wishes to thank the President of the University for the very acceptable praise which he bestowed upon the paper in his recent report, when he spoke of its power for good, and its value as a unifying force in the University. It was especially flattering to have an editorial quoted in a report which is of such importance.

But more encouraging was the praise given where it was due when he commended the work of the Students' Administrative Council, and indicated the importance of the work and the ability of its secretary, Mr. E. A. Macdonald. We are hopeful that this special praise of the Council may raise it even more in the estimation of the governors of the University, so that at some future time it may be possible to extend the work of the Council to that place where it will be of still greater service to the students.

There is no doubt, as results of student employment work already done is shown, that it would be possible to do much more in supplying part-time employment for undergraduates, were the facilities and help available. Employment services in some universities are such that almost every graduate of suitable standard and personality is placed immediately in positions where they are able to make the best possible use of their university training. And undergraduates who need financial assistance during the school year, are able to secure employment of such a nature that their work does not suffer to any considerable degree, and yet they are able to earn sufficient funds to continue their education without time out to save money.

We look forward to the day that students will be able to come to the University of Toronto, and if they are reasonably able and efficient will be able to do much towards "working their way through". Many, of course, do it now, but there are many who find both winter and summer jobs very difficult to obtain. And we are also optimistic enough to believe that in the future undergraduates will be able to expect with reasonable assurance that they will find the type of employment they desire soon after they have been granted their degrees. There is no doubt that many employers will be able to make use of some well-organized system whereby they can discover, without the trial and error method, the type of man they want to fill certain positions.

But if this ideal is to be fulfilled, it will be necessary to develop some department which will be able to specialize in studying students with a view to meeting the requirements of employers, creating good will between alumni and students, and making contacts with business men who should be able to supply employment for new graduates.

High School Training

One of the big needs of our secondary educational institutions today is some system whereby prospective candidates for a university education might be able to find out a little more concerning our higher seats of learning. The absolutely fantastic ideas which some fifth-formers in high school have about the University of Toronto, reflects very badly on the teachers in those schools, many of them graduates of this University.

The results are seen every year in the freshman classes. They start to show as soon as a student arrives at the campus. The various colleges do as much as is in their power at the first of the term, when it is impossible to do very much to steer aspirants to degrees on the right paths; but these things should not be left until college is reached.

Some of the private schools and University of Toronto Schools, of course, do a great deal to familiarize their students with the university system, but there are others who don't know very much more about this campus than the fact that there is a rugby team here, and that when it plays Queen's there is always a big crowd. It cannot be denied that they also have very weird ideas regarding rugby players, how they get their fees paid and get through their examinations, whether they know anything about the subjects or not.

Some high school teachers seem to be in that class of people who believe that the first year in college is a time when all the rough edges should be taken off, that everything should come to the freshman in the hardest possible way, and everything should be kept secret until after the initiations.

Students come down from out-of-town schools, not knowing what course they want to take, but perhaps a little fascinated by some course in science, for example, and certain that they will obtain a high standard in that department because they got high marks in science in high school. They may also be influenced by the fact that they liked their science teacher in high school. After about ten days, maybe more, maybe less, they realize they are in the wrong course. Some do not realize it until the following May or June.

Some students go into such courses as Maths and Physics, spend a hopeless year, and fail. Their teachers in high school have foreseen such a calamity and warned them against the course. We admit the difficulty of their task however, and realize that students who show no particular promise in days of secondary education, may prove to be the most brainy students in a university. But that is one of their tasks, to find out these things, and guide the student in the last days of high school, so that at least he will be warned of some of the difficulties he has to face.

Even small matters, such as expense, sports, extracurricular activities, which some teachers do take the trouble to discuss with prospects for university, should form a part of their education. Our secondary educational system has been criticized severely because it has not given enough specialization for those who do not intend to continue for a university education. It has been criticized for keeping Latin on the curricula, and for fashioning the course with university training in mind, and nothing else. But there is room for criticism on the other side also. For those who do hope to gain a university education, there are many other things which should be done for their special advantage.

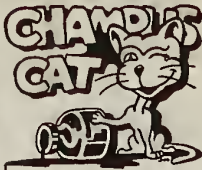

Naturally the blame does not all lie with the teachers. The students themselves do not show very good judgment, or they would attempt to find out more about university, as many of them do. But this is something which is neglected by the average collegian, unless someone stimulates his interest and curiosity. This is a task which the university itself might well undertake, in order to acquaint prospects with what is to be expected of them when they aspire to a university degree, beyond that which they may obtain from a cursory examination of the university calendar.

Oriental Music

The musical styles of India and China are among the oldest still extant. Police Courts To-day

(Men's Police Court—Magistrate Thistlethwaite)

Magistrate Thistlethwaite today sentenced two men to five years in the penitentiary for bank robbery. The two convicted men were John Smith alias Claudius Van Tulip and William Brown alias John Dillinger. The pair were captured as they were leaving a local bank with three thousand dollars in cash. They alleged that they were students at the University of Toronto and were "just trying to scrape some money together in order to attend the School-at-Home."

ASSAULT AND BATTERY

Police testified today that following a radio call, they discovered Oscar Flannagan, an engineering student, standing over the body of a medical student with a club in his hand. During the cross-examination in court, the schoolman admitted beating the medical student over the head with the club. Pleading that he was unjustly provoked the engineer explained that the medical man had asked him what he did with all his time. Case dismissed.

INDECENCY CHARGE

Ignatz McFish was severely reprimanded by His Worship Judge Thistlethwaite when he appeared in court charged with indecency. Morality Officer O'Rourke testified that the accused had entered the Hart House Library for his customary afternoon nap and absent-mindedly changed into pajamas. He was convicted and remanded until Jan. 18.

Correspondence

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

"Competitive Medicine", a prize winner in the recent essay contest, published in the Christmas number of The Varsity, contained an incorrect reference to Christian Science.

The contest judge, Archibald Newman of The Star Weekly, declared the essay to be "hardly impartial enough to be thoroughly convincing" and added that "the author should put aside his essay and read it after he has spent about ten years in practice."

The statement to which this letter takes exception is that "Christian Science is . . . practising medicine under the guise of religion."

Christian Science is not the practice nor a pretence at the practice of medicine or materia medica. It is the restoration to the world of the spiritual method of healing practised by the prophets, disciples and apostles and demonstrated in its fullness of Christ Jesus. It is based upon God, Spirit, the fixed Principle of all true being, and upon His invariable, ever-present, ever-operative, omnipotent laws, and is therefore divine, not human. Its success as a prophylactic and therapeutic agency is sustained by unimpeachable proof.

In Christian Science is to be found fulfillment of the Scriptural command ". . . preach the gospel to every creature, heal the sick," and the Master's promise "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also."

While Christian Science differs radically from the system of healing known as materia medica, it nevertheless renders the highest respect to sincere medical practitioners, including as they do, some of the noblest characters of penta-tonic scale. This fact, that there are only five notes instead of eight, imparts a haunting quality to even the simplest tune, which is not unpleasant even to ears on which it falls for the first time. Even though the strangeness may make complicated compositions difficult to understand, the simple pieces, far older than any of our classics, have a straightforwardness and charm that captivates the auditor.

If the Great Outdoors is your natural setting, you can be right at home and having a wonderful time this week-end as a "Girl of the Limberlost". The joys of Huntsville and Muskoka are usually somewhere in your Summer Souvenirs, but now you have a chance to visit the north and spend a grand week-end returning to Nature.

Ringside Chatter

Snappy workouts, and hard, brick battles are the daily lot of the boxing and wrestling hopefuls at Mel Gionna and "Chesky" Martin prepare their charges for the first intercollegiate meet against O.A.C. on the 21st of January. The junior interfaculty assault of early December brought out some clever new competitors. The elimination bouts for places on the Blue and White squad should provide some blistering battles. The lighter wrestling weights have been thrown wide open by graduation.

"Stew" Phoenix, intercollegiate light-heavy champion now at O.C.E., may have the task of defending the Blue and White against his own alma mater. Don Scott and Bill Schwenger will provide him with keen competition for this berth. Failing the light-heavy Schwenger may be able to reduce to the middleweight limit at 167 pounds. Esson of S.P.S. and Thompson of Vic finalists in the junior assault, are both hot after this spot.

The boxing team looks little changed from the squad which fought at Kingston last spring. "Chuck" Tidy, who won the lightweight division in the junior assault is out for the season, leaving "Stew" Parker still tops at this weight. Tidy was almost a hero, fighting two bouts after breaking his right elbow—but he didn't know he'd broken it.

"Cudge" Dillon, 118 lb. intercollegiate champion, is whipping himself into the best shape of his career. In two years of college warfare Cudge has suffered but one defeat. That was at U.S. Coastguards. Coastguards invade Hart House on Jan. 28 just one week after the battling Angles. Boy, is "Cudge" training!

British Columbia. New Year's and Christmas Eves were spent in gala fashion on the train en route from Washington to California, Spokane, Washington, being the place where Coach "Ace" Bailey was initiated into the "Sportsman's Round Table Club", a club termed by Dick Craig as being "boggy".

"The best time we had was in California," said Dick Craig and Johnny Taylor in the interview. To start the day right the boys met Mr. Durbin, father of the famous canary-voiced Deanna Durbin, who gave them a personal introduction to his renowned daughter before taking them on a tour through the Hollywood studios. After this occurred what Taylor termed as the "Case of the missing manager", Fraser Deacon losing himself for almost a full day. Some of the boys spent an afternoon at the house of Zasu Pitts where they had been invited for tea. The next day a few of the lads spent the afternoon at a home next to Shirley Temple.

Led by "Jock" Maynard the boys went to pick lemons and oranges in a back yard next door to Pat O'Brien's house. During their tour of the studios the boys met Bob Brown while he was making his picture "I'm from Missouri". The boys in blue had their picture taken with John Howard, who has taken part in many of the "Build-Good-Drummond" pictures. During their free nights in their stay at the tropical haven the boys tripped the light fantastic to the "bubbling rhythm" of Slep Fields, the scintillating swing of Rudy Vallee, and the corny twanging of Clyde McCoy. The Trocadero and Coconut Grove were the night spots frequented by the Varsity gang.

For the night of Feb. 10, the Great Hall of Hart House will be decorated out in the red and white college colours. Small tables will be placed at each end where a three-course supper will be served in cabaret style. On the dais the patrons and patronesses, Dr. and Mrs. Cody, Principal and Mrs. Wallace, Registrar and Mrs. McAndrew, Prof. and Mrs. L. A. McKay and Dean and Mrs. A. F. W. Plumptre will sit along with representatives of other faculties, guests and the executive of the U.C. Literary Society.

Tickets will be on sale in a week. An announcement of when and where they may be obtained will appear in The Varsity. It is said that the price has been considerably reduced from that of last year. As the ticket sale is limited, the committee advises an early purchase, for they expect the largest crowd ever.

Bidding a sorrowful farewell to Hollywood, California, the boys mounted the train for Chicago. At Chicago they took a plane for New York in time to dance to the "kayes you want to dauce music" of Max Kysner. From New York the travellers went to Boston where they purchased eight radios. Apart from the riot caused by the evil smelling cheese and itching powder placed in the boys' sleeping bunks, everything ran off smoothly. The boys played to capacity crowds on all occasions, and at one time in Hollywood had Joe E. Brown, Ricardo Cortez, Mr. Durbin, Hedy Lamarr and Alice Faye cheering them on.

Speaking OF SPORT

GLAD TO HAVE YOU BACK

Shaking the dust of summer climes from their corduroys, your footloose senior hockey team returned to Toronto Tuesday afternoon. A total of ten games was played during the coast-to-coast tour, with eight of them ending in victory for the Blueshirts, which is nice work. McGill dropped them by a 2-1 count, while St. Nicholas scraped out a 3-3 deadlock. And it's all to the merry that two of the contests which found the Blues on the right side of the ledger were scheduled I.L.H. contests.

Elsewhere in these pages will be found an interview with Johnny (Come Closer Folks) Taylor, spotlighting the features of the trip to fabulous Hollywood and rock-ribbed Maine. (Sorry we left you out, British Columbia and New York and New Hampshire.)

GUESS WHO?

Life holds plenty of surprises for the sports observer who is foolhardy enough to sell himself on the outcome of certain sporting events. We remember a case, this very season, of a guy who was heard to observe that Sr. U.C. was a leadpipe, a shoo-in, a mortal lock, to take down the Victoria Staff Cup for volleyball supremacy. He weakened visibly when he saw Dents slap down the Artsmen, and went overboard for the Molamenn. However, a couple of gentlemen named Patterson and Murphy of Wycliffe fixed that for him, when they edged out Dents in a close fist last Tuesday to capture interfaculty volleyball honours.

In the realm of interfaculty lacrosse he did not confine himself to the spoken word. Bravely he hinted via this space that O.C.E. was a mortal lock, a leadpipe cinch, a shoo-in and to go—to take the Defoe Cup. But Vic moved them down 11-0 and took on Dents in the finals. Vic won again, and this time he picked—all together, class—Dents.

LULL

Interfaculty sport, the life of the party, has not yet picked up momentum after the holiday lay-off. However, the opening salutes have been fired in baseball, basketball and hockey, and Mac McCutcheon promises definite word on the ping pong tournament, which has been hanging fire since December, within the next few days.

DRUGGISTS TROUNCE TRINITY BASKETEERS

Pharmacy B Team Takes 24 from Trinity A's in Wild Game

The Trinity A team was trimmed by Pharmacy B yesterday in the upper gym at Hart House in a wild interfaculty basketball game which ended 24 to 12. However, Pharmacy did not have as much edge in the play as the score suggests.

Pharmacy opened the scoring early in the game and maintained a lead throughout. The play was fairly even during the first half although Pharmacy seemed to be a little smoother and more confident. At half time Trinity was down 8 points but during the second period they threatened Pharmacy's lead.

For Trinity, Muir, Roberts and Edmonds played the best game, getting 13 points between them. Levitt, Callahan and Barkey were outstanding for Pharmacy and collected 18 points altogether.

Trinity A: Muir (6), Roberts (5), Rooke (1), Grieves, Strathely, Edmonds, Gardiner.

Pharmacy B: Barkey (4), Wood (2), Callahan (6), Levitt (8), Ryan, Freedman (3), Waltman (1), Hogan, Sluiterman, Warner.

POLITICS The European Manner

Special to The Varsity
By H. Nelson Lachord

London, England.—The peaceful little land of Denmark is now in danger. One of the few countries in the world in which democracy was more than a name, Denmark is receiving the attentions of the man all Europe fears, Hitler.

At first sight it would seem incredible that a quiet contented people, for many years accustomed to liberty, could be persuaded even by force to become part of an empire famous for its atrocities and suppression of free thought.

Denmark is economically sound at the present time. The people for the most part are happy. They can sell their produce. They can buy the goods they need. And if this is true, why should they reduce their standard of living to become an insignificant part of an ever growing German Empire?

Suppose, however, that they could not sell their produce. What would happen? A different situation would exist. The people would have no money. They would become discontented. Anything would be better. They would listen then to the Nazi agents.

Great Britain is Denmark's greatest market. Mr. Chamberlain is seriously considering the imposition of duties on Danish farm products, and he is not thinking of the protection of the English farmer!

Chamberlain cripples Danish trade. Hitler follows up closely by massing troops on the Danish border. The Germans in Denmark must be protected. Denmark, like Sudetenland, becomes part of Germany.

Hitler, aided by his colleague Chamberlain, marches on!

Time will tell.

Germany is short of money. Hitler knows that the twenty million dollars he stole from the Jews is a mere fraction of the amount that is needed urgently. So, Dr. Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, was sent to London to talk matters over with Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank of England.

Dr. Schacht, like Field Marshall Goering, is a moderate, opposed to the extremist policies of Hitler, Himmler, Hess and Goebbels.

The German banker was given his chance to do things the moderate way, but unfortunately he was not able to impress Montagu Norman and he was compelled to return to Germany without any British gold in his pockets.

His defeat was hailed by the extremists, who recently persuaded the Fuehrer to make an order that all postcards of Chamberlain and Hitler should be withdrawn at once from public sale.

The extremists in Germany are not alone in their dislike of Chamberlain. Earl Baldwin, noticing that the masses in Great Britain are becoming very allergic to the Prime Minister and his National Government, invited the King and Opposition leaders to a private dinner.

Baldwin realizes that if the present government were to go before the country, the results might be disastrous. For, as Lord Byron said in 1812, "You may call these people (the Ludites) a mob; but do not forget that a mob too often speaks the sentiments of the people."

Like many of his colleagues, Baldwin feels that the mob of 1939 would vote with malice toward some, and Chamberlain in particular. A Labour government, in his opinion, could not cope with the crises which are bound to occur when Hitler and Mussolini start misbehaving as they promise to do early this year.

When the Prime Minister said in his address to the Foreign Press Association, "No form of government ever remains the same. The change may come by slow degrees, or it may come suddenly," he was referring to Germany. Prophetic words, when applied to his native land!

The formation of a Coalition government brings up the problem of securing a suitable leader. Anthony Eden has been suggested by an influential section of the Conservative Party, and his supporters have already started the campaign.

The December 18 issue of "Sunday Referee" carried a full page article singing his praises, entitled "Anthony Eden's Letters to His Mother". Commenting on one of his letters, Mrs.

method of discussing problems of the day," he continued, "and believe that it has its place on the air in Canada. It originated and was worked out at Chicago. It caters to all who read the newspapers, but its usefulness and educational value must be decided by those who listen in."

Considerable preparation takes place beforehand, but, contrary to what might be expected, all the conversation during the half hour is entirely extemporaneous and there are no scripts. The main topics are outlined and discussion on each is timed. Views are exchanged by the three observers beforehand, however. Indications are that a remarkably varied type of audience enjoy these broadcasts.

CKCL INAUGURATES CAMPUS NEWS CAST

The Varsity, Mr. Forrest said that the paper concentrates mainly on campus events, and on news from other universities which students cannot get through regular newspapers. He stressed the value of experience gained in writing for the college paper in preparing for a journalistic career, pointing out former U. of T. news writers who are now successful authors, including Stephen Leacock, B. K. Sandwell and Arthur J. Stringer.

"The Varsity Speaks" is identified by a short selection of marching music, and the various news items are punctuated by short bursts of dot-and-dash radio code. It is expected that broadcasts will include news from issues of The Varsity right up to the day they go on the air, ensuring up-to-date coverage.

PIPES PLEASE PLAYERS

Students of the University of Toronto will have an opportunity to join the increasing number of bamboo pipe players with the formation of a players' group at Hart House under the musical direction of Mr. Weldon Kilburn.

All through the fall term men have been labouring diligently with saws, drills and files at the construction of pipes. A number were made last spring and now there are forty or fifty of these instruments, made at a cost not exceeding twenty or thirty cents each, ready for rehearsals. The treble pipe in D, about a foot long, has been the most popular and there are some alto in D and a fair number of big tenors in D with a round mellow tone.

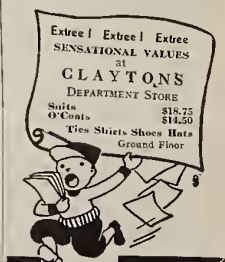

All the men who are interested in piping are being invited to meet Mr. Kilburn at an organization meeting in the Music Room of Hart House at five o'clock this afternoon and to bring their instruments if completed, though it is understood that there will be some extra pipes for the temporary use of those who have not finished making

Toronto College Orchestra Receives Enthusiastic Reception at Ontario Agricultural College

Guelph, Jan. 12th: The University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra received a royal welcome when it played before a packed house in the War Memorial Hall at the Ontario Agricultural College tonight.

AFFIRMATIVE SIDE WINS COLLEGE DEBATE

House Votes in Favour of Motion "Resolved that Certain Toronto Newspapers Are Trying to Raise the Red Hooey"

The U.C. Parliament held its first debate of the new year yesterday afternoon in the Junior Common Room with Prime Minister Wood leading his government to a 22-20 triumph. The house voted in favour of the motion, "Resolved that certain Toronto newspapers are trying to raise the Red hooey."

The Prime Minister, the Hon. Wm. Wood, declared that "In the recent civic elections certain Toronto newspapers descended to the depths of ridicule and ignominy in belabouring the issues which were in actuality before the public. The issues before the public were those involving a lowering of the tax rate, the question of the expenditures of public moneys and it is significant that despite the newspaper campaigns over 52,000 voters registered their discontent in casting votes against the present mayor."

The Leader of the Opposition, the Hon. I. Sussman, stated that, "Those papers referred to by the Prime Minister ought certainly to be congratulated by all members of the House." (Continued on Page 4)

EMMANUEL OWNED IN BASEBALL FIXTURE

The epidemic of free scoring in inter-faculty baseball was continued yesterday by a slugging Knox College nine, who pasted the offerings of Andy Lawson on the Emmanuel mound to ring up a 16-2 triumph.

Thomson, Calder and Renshaw crossed the plate for Knox in the first inning to give the Presbyterians a lead they never relinquished. Emmanuel pushed across a run in the second frame to make the score 3-1, but Knox went on a scoring spree in the third frame and piled up eight runs as eleven batters faced the Emmanuel twirler.

Forbes Thomson and Bert Ducher went well for the winners, while Eluslie and Thompson were best for Emmanuel.

Knox: Thomson, Mallion, Cochran, Calder, Steer, Renshaw, Dutcher, Williams, Currie, Ross.

Emmanuel: Lawson, Gifford, Eluslie, McKinnert, Currie, Thompson, McKinn, Thrower.

GREGOIRE STATES ASIA MINOR CRADLE OF CHRISTIANITY

Professor from University of Brussels Bases Claims on Findings of Sir William Ramsey of Oxford

The great cradle of Christianity is not Palestine, but Asia Minor, stated Professor Henri Gregoire of the University of Brussels, in a lecture entitled "Constantine and the Fall of Christianity" at the Royal Ontario Museum last evening.

This great discovery has been made by Sir William Ramsey of Oxford University. Sir William has found Christian inscriptions in Asia Minor dating long before the time of the coming of Christianity as accepted by the Latins.

Maps of Asia Minor at the end of the second century show that the eastern world was filled with Christian settlements. This is the result of the work of Saint Paul. In the year 325, half the population of Asia Minor was Christian, whereas Palestine was re- (Continued on Page 4)

RHOODES SCHOLAR WILL PRACTICE LAW

One of the Rhodes Scholars who will be Oxford-bound next fall will be Fabian O'Dea, son of J. V. O'Dea of Newfoundland. Fabian O'Dea, who is known to his intimate friends as "Fabi Ducky O'Dea", is in fourth year Political Science and Economics at St. Michael's College.

This winner of the Rhodes Scholarship for Newfoundland hasn't decided what college he will enter at Oxford. He plans to enter the law school, though, and after completion of his course, he will return to his home-town, St. John's, to practice law.

After receiving his junior matriculation at St. Bonaventure's College, he entered Memorial University College. Spending two years there, he came to Toronto and began in the second year Political Science. This May "Fab" will receive his B.A. in Political Science and Economics, and will be the first St. Mike's man to receive the Rhodes Scholarship.

Throughout his undergraduate days he has not only maintained a high academic record, but also has managed to devote considerable time to extracurricular activities. Last year he was the secretary of the St. Mike's S.A.C. and a member of the Oratorical Club of St. Michael's College. This year he is on the House Committee of Hart House and is also a member of Theta Delta Chi, the Foreign Affairs and Political Affairs Club.

Blast of Propane Gas Shatters Science School Of Winnipeg College

Force of Explosion Originating on Third Floor Breaks Windows, Capsizes Walls and Causes Damage Estimated at $55,000—Two Workmen Badly Burned and Large Part of Botany Museum Destroyed in Explosion

LOCKED DOORS ON FIRST FLOOR BLOWN OPEN BY BLAST

Special to The Post by the CUP
University of Manitoba—An explosion of propane gas which practically wrecked the Science Building of this university, caused damage estimated at $55,000, and sent two men to hospital, occurred here Thursday morning at twenty minutes past eight. The blast, which originated in the botany laboratories on the third floor, shattered all the windows on that floor, hurled down partitioning walls and destroyed part of the ceiling.

Friday Thirteenth Leaves Co-eds Cold

Of the thirteen Arts co-eds interviewed on what they thought of Friday 13th, only a few confessed that they were superstitious, which leads to the conclusion that the weaker sex are by no means timorous.

Barbara Black, II Arts, on being interviewed, replied that "Friday 13th is my lucky day." While her companion Jean Byrdone, II Arts, stated that "she was frightfully superstitious, but nothing ever happened to her on Friday 13th."

Mary Braiden, I Arts, intimated that she would feel better when Friday 13th was over.

Eleanor Lowe, I Arts, replied that "There couldn't be a luckier day for me. I would try anything on it."

The thirteenth co-ed interviewed stated that she was so superstitious, that she wouldn't like to have her name in the paper on Friday the 13th.

Two workmen, trapped in the building, were badly burned and later removed to Victoria Hospital in Winnipeg. Among the havoc wrought was destruction of the larger part of the botany museum and of the experiments in the building. In addition the stained glass windows and marble tiling of faculty and common rooms were badly damaged, is the report.

Walls on the second floor were shaken and cracked, and plumbing wrecked. Tops of tables, drawers, window frames, botanical specimens were among the debris forced through windows by the strength of the explosion. The force of the blast may be gathered from the fact that the locks and hinges of doors on the first floor were smashed, and locked doors blown open.

A last word at the time of the explosion by one of the injured men was found in a football field one hundred yards from the site of the tragedy.

The cause of the explosion has not yet been determined. Pending investigation the building has been closed to the public.

MEDS HOOPSTERS TAKE DOUBLE BILL

Faculty of Medicine third and fourth basketball teams won both starts of an inter-faculty basketball double-header in the upper gymnasium of Hart House last night.

The fourth team started the ball rolling by downing a hard fighting Trinity B team 13-12. After Trinity had taken a 10-9 lead on a fluke shot by Goodman, Levitt for Meds came back with a long shot to make the score 11-10 in favour of his team. McLure added two free throws to his team's total and two free throws sunk by Cowan brought (Continued on Page 4)

Skiing, Tobogganing and Snowshoeing Listed on Varied Itinerary for Week-end Party at Limerlost Lodge

The stage is set for what promises to be a double-dipper winter sports week-end at Limerlost Lodge for all university ski-enthusiasts. Information from the Students' Administrative Council Office is to the effect that there are already over 50 people who have purchased tickets and that the remaining pastebars are selling like hot-cakes.

The snow-train leaves tonight at 7.50 and returns Sunday evening. In the two-day interim at Lake Simcoe the local winter sports addicts will enjoy to the full such things as splendid skating, bump-tions bobslighting, torrid tobogganing, dog-sledding deluxe and snowshoeing, skijoring and skiing ad infinitum. Conditions are reported as being ideal with almost 20 inches of snow, miles of wind-swept ice and plenty of cool weather.

Facilities for skiing include 150 miles of well-marked cross-country trails, hills of all sizes and even a "practislope" for beginners. Members of the Ski Club are holding high hopes that this Limerlost trek will become an annual event. Rumours are even circulating that more than one trip to the north a year will be held, depending upon the success of this week-end, for there is always snow at Limerlost.

Importance of Staples Stressed in Taylor Talk

First in Weekly Lecture Series Considers Commercial Policy of Canada, its History and Trends

The commercial policy of Canada, its history, present trends, and future, was discussed last evening by Professor K. W. Taylor of McMaster University in the first of a weekly series of lectures on marketing problems, offered by the Department of Political Economy in co-operation with the Toronto Advertising and Sales Club.

The speaker emphasized the position of staples in our Canadian economy, and our dependence on them. "Canada lives, and will continue to live, by foreign trade," he said. "The fundamental basis of our trade and our whole economy is provided by our greatest staples. We must attain the highest possible efficiency in the production, transportation (Continued on Page 4)

Returned Missionary To Discuss Experiences In War-Torn China

Father James P. Leonard of the Canadian China Mission, recently returned from China, will lecture on his experiences and on Catholic mission work at Newman Hall Sunday evening.

Under the leadership of Monsignor McGrath, he aided in the relief of multitudes of refugees who flooded into the foreign quarters of Shanghai when they were bombed out of the native quarters and the war zone around the city.

PLAN YOUTH CITY CENTRING IN LONDON

"For the biggest empire in the world we have not been taking enough care of our youth," said Miss Lillian Watson, secretary of the Overseas Education League, in connection with Major F. J. Ney's projected "City of Youth."

"Youth City to be established in London is to be not only a centre for the constant use of the children and youth of Great Britain, but also a home for visiting youth of the Empire who will have to pay no board or rent," explained Miss Watson. She went on to say that Youth City is designed primarily for the vast body of young people from secondary schools, the majority of whom do not go on to the universities. With suitable cultural facilities it might become a valuable educational centre, providing specially recommended students with a brief "finishing" period at the conclusion of their normal time at school.

"Our plan," continued Miss Watson, "is to have a great number of students go over who will have to supply fare only. But we are even attempting to give scholarships which will pay their passage as well."

Plans are being made for a central building in London, which will be donated by Great Britain, surrounded by other houses of the different dominions. The various houses will, it is hoped, be provided through funds raised in different parts of the Empire or perhaps by contributions of private citizens.

BLUES MEET FLYING FRENCHMEN TO-MORROW

By Ed Goodman

Tomorrow afternoon University of Toronto's senior hockey "Wanderers" having finally acclimatized themselves to their own city, meet the Flying Frenchmen of the University of Montreal in their initial home appearance of the official season. Tomorrow's contest, which begins at 2.30, is the Bluesquad's first league game against a Canadian team.

When Varsity appear on the ice they will be endeavouring to show to their own followers what they have been flashing before various hockey crowds across the continent, a fast finished attack and a hard-hitting defense.

The Toronto team already have one victory over "le bleu et or" in an exhibition game at Rye, N.Y., when they defeated the Montrealers 8 to 5. Led by the redoubtable Roger Gagne, the Montreal team in the past two years have always turned in their best performances against Varsity. And the press reports have shown that with a little luck their defeats of the past few weeks might have been victories.

The personnel of the Toronto team is not yet known, for in this game they will just be allowed 11 men, as it is a game between two Canadian teams. But in all probability the starting line-up will read Caswell, MacLachlan, L'Heureux, Morison, Taylor, Craig.

that followed continue to point to a Toronto victory. For Varsity has registered two impressive victories over Dartmouth and Harvard, while Dartmouth defeated the Frenchmen.

Although indications point toward a Blue victory, the result of the game is by no means a foregone conclusion. Led by the redoubtable Roger Gagne, the Montreal team in the past two years have always turned in their best

Problem of Youth

The problem of unemployed youth is one of the most important, if not the most important, facing Canada today. The youth is cut off from relief at sixteen years and can obtain no further government help until marriage. This is to discriminate against him during what should be the most constructive period of his life.

Leaving school full of hopes and ideals, he finds himself in an indifferent society, which not only refuses to employ him, but refuses to give him the assistance necessary to keep body and soul together. The result is obvious. The youth becomes hostile to that society, and is driven to petty crime to keep himself alive. We cannot blame him for a loss of morale.

It is true that attempts have been made to remedy this condition. The federal government has devoted some $1,000,000 to classes in vocational training. There is in a Toronto garage a class where some thirty boys are paid $7 per week to take a course in welding, and in Galt there is another small group taking a machine shop course. These measures may be adequate as far as they go, but obviously they are a mere drop in the bucket. The question is not one of a few hundred boys but of many thousands. Besides, the training of boys in a field which is already overcrowded with experienced men could in the long run have no better effect than to lower the standard of wages in these vocations.

As the situation now stands, we are building for our own destruction. Figure the future cost of an indigent class, the cost of penal institutions to hold the petty criminals who will be produced by enforced idle loafing. The problem is ours to solve. It is better to give our youth a break than to break our youth.

A recent suggestion has been made to the effect that these boys be taken off the streets and given courses of approximately six weeks in physical drill in the government armories. Such a course, it is argued, would send them out well set up, healthier, alert in mind, body and spirit. This suggestion does not pretend to be a panacea, but is a provisional measure towards remedying a situation in which immediate action is necessary.

The obvious drawback is that ardent upholders of democracy will cry "This is Fascism"! Admitted, regimentation of youth is one of the primary steps in the development of a Fascist regime. But if it were clearly understood from the outset that the aim of these drill courses was merely to benefit the youths physically, and that the government would not exploit the military aspect of such an innovation, there is no reason why it should indicate Fascism. Physical well being is essential to the morale of the nation, and certainly the condition of that morale calls for immediate action. The government might do well to accept this suggestion as a provisional measure.

Political Martyr

Back in 1917 at a San Francisco Preparedness Day parade there occurred a bomb explosion with a fatality of several lives and many injuries. Tom Mooney and Warren Billings were duly sentenced to life imprisonment. The defendants claimed that they were accused unjustly and on perjured evidence by reason of their reputations as being "direct action" labour unionists.

Tom Mooney has been given his liberty after more than twenty years at St. Quentin, California. News reports say that the trial was prosecuted with considerable vigour. Mooney has sought pardon previously without success. He has finally been granted his freedom.

Governor Colbert Olson appeared to be convinced of the prisoner's innocence. If Mooney is innocent today he was guiltless twenty years ago. He should not then have entered upon a long term of punishment. Of course the labour leader himself knows, and all along has known, whether he has been the victim of an outrageous miscarriage of justice. Assuming he has been unfairly punished, as his belated liberation implies, what must have been the thoughts of Thomas J. Mooney for a whole score of years? Emphatically he could not have been cherishing any surpassing respect for the administration of justice in sunny California. One wonders if the commonwealth which was so zealous in punishing him will now in some way make amends for Mooney's martyrdom—for his "stretch" of twenty years.

The Federation of Labour obviously believes Thomas Mooney was the victim of political intrigue. Some of Mooney's detractors might even intimate that Governor Olson is playing his political cards. In this doubtful event, Mooney owes both his incarceration and his liberation to politics... a great tribute to California.

Striking at the Base

Gang warfare is a form of lawlessness par excellence and there is only one way to combat it. The method does not consist in bringing in another armed group to shoot it out with the gangsters in the streets of the city.

The money spent on guns, ammunition and salaries for the gang-busters could be more sensibly expended by the authorities on eliminating the causes of gangsterism rather than in eliminating the gangsters. Proposals such as the one brought forward by the leader of the Ontario Conservative party arise from an approach to the subject which is clouded by feeling, and indignant as Colonel Drew may be, it is not enough to strike blindly back at these lawless elements.

The causes of gangsterism are the things that have to be fought. These are (incredible though it may seem to many politicians), malnutrition, overcrowding, and poor educational facilities. G-men know little of these affairs, and it follows that this is also the case for the people who sponsor them.

We have been suffering too long from the results of short-sighted political policies. It is up to us to put men in governmental positions who are going to treat such disorders as gangsterism rationally, and not with righteous indignation and counter-gangsterism.

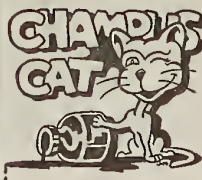

Kathryn Meisle

From the first note of the National Anthem, which was apparently quite unfamiliar to her, to the last cadence of the last encore Kathryn Meisle held spellbound the capacity audience at Massey Hall last night. It was not only her beautiful contralto voice, with faultlessly clear high notes and resonant tones on the low registers, and her clearness of diction, but also the vibrant personality, finding expression through the artistically restrained yet deep emotions savoured with an almost divine sense of humour, that endeared her to her hearers.

The program was well rounded out and provided ample scope, not only for Miss Meisle's technical accomplishments but also for her emotional finesse. Commencing with Torelli's sad and deep "Tu lo sai" the effortlessness of her singing was seen in the simple rendering of "I dream of Jeanie" by Foster, the seventy-fifth anniversary of whose death occurred this week. In "I've been roaming" the singer warmed up in the sprightly rhythm. In Gluck's Aria the phrasing was well accomplished and the haunting poignancy fully expressed.

The Wolf numbers were charmingly done. In "Nimmersatte Liebe" the humour of the ending was fully expressed, and the reckless abandon of "Iel hab' in Penna" was clearly brought out. The

TITLES

Have you ever picked up an eighteenth century book and noticed anything peculiar about it? Come, come, come, think hard. Haven't you noticed that the title of the book is almost as long as the book itself? Let me give you an example. If Gone With The Wind had been written in the eighteenth century the title would have probably been as follows:

The Sad But True Tale Of One Scarlett O'Hara Who Spent A Most Tragical Existence Upon This Earth And Who Following Much Disaster Met Up With One Rhett Butler Who Made Her Life A Happy One And Finally After Much Ado Told Her That He Did Not Love Her Any More.

There are cases of titles of eighteenth century novels actually being longer than the novels themselves thereby forcing the publisher to issue the work in two volumes.

A good example is the following poem written in 1781 by Guy de Cochon:

The Manner of Beast And Type of Animal Upon Which Paul Revere, Hero Of The American Revolution, Rode Forth In Order To Warn The Brave and Gallant Colonists About The Impending British Invasion Of Their Own True Country Which They Later Were To Defend With Might And Main Against the Selfsame British As They Had Slowly Declared In Their Bold Declaration.

Charles Laughton is at his bewhiskered best in the title role of "Beachcomber" playing at the Uptown this week. As UPTOWN "Ginger Ted" he BEACHCOMBER is the rolling-stone son of an English vicar, who spends his time in drinking the governor's beer and annoying the natives.

How he is converted to respectability by the efforts of a rabidly-religious missionary nurse forms the plot of the story, backgrounded by scenes from the south seas.

The plot is not particularly outstanding, but the acting of Laughton, Elsa Lanchester, the island governor, and the missionary, are worth seeing. The trick ending seems out of place, incidentally.

The March of Time, dealing with the refugee problem, and a colour cartoon complete the offering. Go along, especially if you want to hear Hitler hissed. L.G.M.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shiffman

IF I WERE KING

I'd get a ruling put on the intercollegiate football rule book to the effect that men attending university for their first year would be ineligible for any first team, thus preventing a college from securing services of the pros. In the other leagues to come to school for a year, play and if failed transfer courses. I'm not saying anything about any college having done this but it might happen and it would be unfortunate for intercollegiate football. Wouldn't it Reeves? I would have the showers in Hart House fixed immediately. There are in all sixteen showers in Hart House, whose roof by the way is now held up by the means of wooden beams. Of these sixteen, eight when turned on full blast give a trickle of hot scalding water and promise of things to come and never do... this has been going on for a while and I'd show them—I'd also give small chips of soap with every towel, but that's another question. . . . I'd order everyone at the university to turn out for the hockey game being played at the Varsity Arena Saturday afternoon, as a welcoming gesture to the senior squad who have returned from a campaign of hockey and propaganda throughout the States. They deserve everyone's support, especially as they are going to win the old cup or whatever they play for, this year. . . . I'd make everyone laugh at this column when it is supposed to be funny and restrain them from laughing when it is supposed to be serious (all three of my readers). . . . I'd arrange more basketball games at home with nearby colleges and give the Varsity crowd a chance to know their team and give the game a chance to grasp some hold on the shallow soil of Toronto's basketball crowds. I would go out of my way to publicize, build up interest in this sport because while there are a hundred different leagues of hockey going on in the city with teams as good and better than the Blue team playing every night there is no basketball league superior to intercollegiate basketball in this city. . . . (Here I go again. . . . If I were king I would close the snooker room for seven months from October to April (no offense, Phil). . . . I would favour giving financial aid to needy students who want to go to school and who excel in sports. They deserve aid as well as needy students who are proficient in other lines, for remember, "the battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Oxford". But I would give these athletic scholarships (which is a wrong term) only to those who have the necessary educational qualifications and I would do it openly and announce the scholarship beforehand. . . . If I were king, well then I wouldn't have to write essays or make case annotations and I might find time to go over and see the girls play basketball and hockey. I've been at the school three years and never seen any game played by the girls at the university. . . . I'd get bicycles that move and start a six-day bike race on the track in the gymnasium (boy, what an idea). . . . I'd even rearrange School, Meds and Dents time-tables so that they might be able to use Hart House a little more than they do. . . . If I were king I'd make that trip up to Limberlost this week-end but since I am not and there's no use kidding myself any longer I'll just hope and hope that there's some snow in my back yard so that I can have just a little fun. . . .

THE DURNAN TROPHY

Next Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock competition for the Durnan Trophy, emblematic of University of Toronto undergraduate swimming supremacy, will get under way. Unlike other years when the competition was held at the end of the current swimming season as a sort of anti-climax, the competition begins early this season, and each week two events will be run off, beginning Tuesday with the 50 yard free style. Competition for the Durnan Trophy is open to all undergraduates in any faculty and consists of 6 events. Points are awarded based on the time in which the distance is covered with reference to times established in intercollegiate records. In order to get points for the T. A. Reed Trophy a swimmer must score at least 2400 points and compete in a minimum of 4 events. In each event points are also given for first, second and third places and in the final standing first, second and third positions carry points. In the event of 15 or more entries, fourth place also counts and if there are more than 20 entries, fifth place will also be awarded points.

That short snowfall you perhaps saw yesterday morning would give you only a slight indication of what lies north round the region of Limberlost Lodge. Snow (or so the advertisement runs) lies 18 inches deep in that fair region, with the temperature 15 degrees above zero. Well, the setting seems to be perfect and the major problem of one young co-ed who is anticipating the trip north is "Will I ever be able to finish my angora mitts before train-time on Friday?" Don't let that worry you, just take 'em along with you. It's a good four-hour trip (to a wonderland of snows).

Bowling enthusiasts got off to a flying start Wednesday, with many newcomers taking advantage of this healthful exercise. There are not as many players this year as there were last, but the number of players on each team is larger. Of course there is plenty of room for newcomers and their more experienced sisters. Such keen "makers of the bowl" are the girls in Social Science that, despite the fact that they could not arrange to play on any afternoon, have huddled every difficulty and are now playing Wednesday mornings—and this is their first attempt at the game of nine pins. We could do with a little more such enthusiasm. St. Mike's have entered a team, as have U.C., Household Science and Victoria. There is one girl from Dents. Three cheers for her. This gives you some idea of the growing appeal of bowling to the different sections of the university. Bowling makes a nice filler pastime especially when it's so handy to the Uptown Bowling Academy at Bloor.

ART MUSIC AND DRAMA

Rachmaninoff numbers were rendered with the rolling yet gay grandeur characteristic of the Russian's style. Here Stuart Ross took a well earned bow, for restrained yet sympathetic work at the piano.

The singer seemed to enjoy the reaction of the audience to the unexpected climax to her encore, "Five Eyes", by Armstrong Gibbs. The concluding number on the program, "Habanera", from "Carmen" was a fitting climax. The dynamic changes of emotion were so adroit and complete that they seemed natural with the art that conceals art.

Hart House Gallery

Chareols by Goodridge Roberts are the offering now hanging in the Hart House Gallery. His still-lives are perhaps the most interesting part of the exhibit. The table arrangements feature brilliant high lights and dark shadows.

The man with the cigarette catches more of the distinctive French Canadian atmosphere than some of the others. The residential street is a bold treatment with much lively interest. The sitting figure in the half-shadow displays beautiful flesh tones.

Among the quick figure drawings by students in the print room, Milne's billiard player with its dashing lively lines is outstanding. Russell Gordon

When interviewed yesterday, he said that the announcement of his winning the scholarship was "an unexpected, though welcomed, twenty-first birth- day present".

Fabian O'Dea has enjoyed his three- year stay in Toronto, but he is glad of the opportunity for "moving on" for variety's sake. He will not be totally alone in Europe, for he has a brother studying medicine in Dublin. TAYLOR LECTURE EMPHASIZES STAPLES

tion, and sale of these staples." Professor Taylor expressed the opinion that perhaps we are sacrificing attention to staples in order to develop secondary industries. These secondary commodities are needed, but they must not be emphasized to the detriment of the staples. "Take care of your staples and other things will more or less take care of themselves," he said. "If these decay, all the tariffs in the world will not save our manufacturing."

The basic cause of the breakdown of Canadian unity is attributed by Professor Taylor to the shift in the balance of economy. Western wheat as our dominant trading commodity is being supplanted by the "new economy", paper, power and mining, which are generally Eastern interests. Thus we find western Canada still bound economically to Europe while the east has drifted towards an economic axis with the United States and two different economies have developed. "Our future commercial policy must be a national policy working for unity," said the speaker. This can be achieved, he closed, if we have internal compromise, a peaceful world, lower international trade barriers, stable tariffs, and an increasing diversification of markets and commodities, yet with emphasis on our staples.

luctant to adopt Christianity. The east was very slightly touched by Christianity. There were a few centres of Christianity in Italy and Spain. The only Latin speaking country which was Christianized was Carthage, in the north west corner of Africa. Professor Gregoire stated that the first language of the church was not Latin but Greek.

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

BRITAIN PROTESTS

London: In a strongly worded note made public last night, the British Government, while offering to consider modifications of agreements regarding China, declared that they would not agree to abrogation of the treaty of 1932 which guaranteed China's sovereignty. Since France was consulted before the note was issued, observers see a line-up of Britain, France and United States against Japanese economic penetration of China.

RELATIONS STILL STRAINED

Rome: An official bulletin said that Mussolini informed Mr. Chamberlain during his visit last week that there could be no conciliation of the French-Italian quarrel until the end of the Spanish civil war.

Paris: Premier Daladier, defending the Munich settlement, declared that his government would not allow the position or interests of France to be in any way diminished. He firmly opposed territorial concessions in North Africa.

POLITICS

The European Manner

By H. Nelson Lockhead

London, Eng.—(Miss Antonia van Paaszen, daughter of Pierre van Paaszen, noted author and journalist, offers in this interview her own candid opinions of European affairs. A keen student of politics, she has travelled extensively in Europe and knows conditions as they actually exist in present-day Germany, France and England.)

The daily papers in London chose to avoid any description of the bronx cheers which greeted Prime Minister Chamberlain on his arrival in Paris last November. Miss van Paaszen, commenting on this behaviour of the French people, pointed out that love of England in France was never very strong and that at the present time, in spite of the royal visit, was practically nonexistent.

SKI FANS RETURN INTACT

Think of a few square miles of rugged country and of steep snow-covered hills near Algonquin Park. Think of 150 miles of fast ski trails snaking their way through a dense forest and of a dozen snug log cabins lining the shore of a smooth frozen lake. Think of them all together and you will get an idea of Limberlost Lodge as it welcomed skiers from the university over the week-end.

Taking advantage of a special rate which included train fare and lodging, seventy-five students became "Vagabonds" for two days and left a lace-work of ski tracks over the hills surrounding Lake Simcoe, 15 miles from Huntsville. This Varsity week-end inaugurated a series of sports week-ends which is to continue at least until the spring thaw. And according to Norton W. Kinsland, a lodge director, the series will be marked by more Varsity week-ends if the reception the first one got is any standard of judging.

Although skiing was by far the favoured sport, it was only a matter of choosing to go skiing before a rickety but competent old Ford, tobogganing and bob-sledding down young mountains, snowshoeing, skating, riding, skeet-shooting or what have you.

For the skiers there were about 150 miles of all kinds of trails. And all kinds of hills from a gentle practice slope in McMaster's Clearing to a precision run down from The Top of the World. Only casualties reported: two skiis shattered on a tip-snooring devil's elbow and one shattered thumb belonging to Ted MacDonald.

The snow was fast on all the hills, and there was many a run that melted the wax from the hickory.

To see that the diffusers were competently instructed the lodge engaged one of the best skiers in the district. Nineteen-year-old Howard Payne, who has copied practically all the junior titles available in the north, guided the co-eds through the intricacies of the Christy, the stem turn and the Tele-march.

Although students were housed together in cabins in groups of six, everyone ate in the main lodge. Hart House's Great Hall probably never saw so much food packed away in such a short period of time, the flame being placed upon the weather, which sunk somewhere below zero and didn't come back.

Debaters To Question City's Administration

Controller will be Cuest When Hart House Discusses City of Toronto's Government

The next Hart House debate is scheduled for January 23, and will be based on the topic "Resolved that this House has confidence in the present administration of the city of Toronto."

Speaker R. G. Allen will be in the chair, and Controller F. J. Conboy of this city will be the Honourable Visitor.

Ross Hofmann, fourth year Trinity student, will uphold the negative, and so far as is known Paul McGillicuddy, third year U.C. man, will support the affirmative.

The number of official debaters has been reduced from four to two in order to allow more to speak from the floor.

Ross Hofmann, of the negative, is taking the floor for the first time as an official speaker. As a student in the Municipal Government Course, he believes that "there is plenty in this city to be attacked—not the personnel, but the system".

He is sure he will win by pointing out the weaknesses in the administration—"not that Toronto is worse than any other city, but so far a perfect system has not been introduced. The only hope is that the present system be criticized and changed until we reach, as nearly as possible, perfection."

Hart House Military Event Attended by Many C.O.T.C. Cadets and Guests

Dr. Wace to Begin Armstrong Lectureship At Victoria College

Professor A. J. B. Wace, LL.D., Laureate Professor of Classical Archaeology at Cambridge, will deliver the first in a new series of annual lectures at Victoria College when he speaks at 5 p.m. today and tomorrow in the college chapel. Today's lecture will be "A survey of the Aegean world down to the fall of Troy", and tomorrow's will be on "The Coming of the Greeks".

Known as the Armstrong lectureship, this new series was endowed by bequest of the late Mr. Geo. H. Armstrong, and will be devoted to subjects educational or religious. This year's lectures will be of special interest to students in Classics.

BLUE JUNIORS LOSE 3-2 IN HOCKEY GAME

Loss Marks Seventh Straight Defeat for the Varsity Seconds' Hockey Team

Still rutted in the groove of dismal defeat, Varsity's faltering juniors succumbed 3-2 against Young Rangers Saturday afternoon at the Gardens for their seventh straight reverse in as many games.

The somewhat second, scenting their first victory when they led 1-0 at the end of the initial frame, went all out against Willey's warriors and came very close to victory in their best performance of the year. Dark-thatched Bill Quigley, clever Varsity playmaker, shot in the first goal in the middle of the first period on a pass from Stephenson. Following this score the Blue-shirts' second line of defence stiffened and held the Rangers scoreless for the balance of the period.

However, it just wasn't the Blues' afternoon. Carnegie levelled the count in the second frame on a pass from Trotter and the latter let loose a long drive in the last frame to give Young Rangers a 2-1 lead. Boxer revived Varsity's hopes with a solo rush minutes later but Halder salted the game away for the Rangers on a lone foray late in the piece.

Stephenson, Hignell and MacMillan were best for Varsity, while Davidson, Hawkey, Carnegie and Trotter went well for the winners.

NO TICKETS REMAIN FOR VIC OPERETTA

A "record sellout" of tickets has taken place this year in regard to the Victoria Music Club's production of "H.M.S. Pinfore", it is announced by Stewart Bishop, president of the club. Those who had planned to attend but have not as yet secured tickets are bound for disappointment. With the sale of the last available seat last Wednesday morning—eight complete days before the opening of the show, and much earlier relatively than in past years—many inquiries for tickets since then have had to be turned down.

The production, which is dated for January 19, 20 and 21, will be given four performances, including a Saturday matinee.

COLUMBIA EMPLOY MEDICAL SERVICES SUPERIOR TO OURS

Medical Service Attends to Needs of Students, Faculty, and Employees in Efficient Manner

By Arthur J. Benson
(Special to The Varsity)

New York, January 14th.—A marvelously efficient and sympathetic medical service is but one instance of the manner in which Columbia University, despite its tremendous size, displays sincere interest in the welfare of its more than 30,000 students. Even making generous allowance for Varsity's size, a comparison of the two universities in this respect leaves Toronto woefully out of the running.

Thanks to the untiring energy and competency of white-haired Dr. William H. McCawline, the organization has grown from typical college inadequacy in 1912 to its present unparalleled excellence, and even now plans are being laid for the centralization of the medical office and two great infirmaries in one magnificent building.

The entire service, which attends to the medical needs of students, faculty and employees, is financed by an annual grant from the trustees of the university, and is responsible to them only, being under the jurisdiction of neither deans nor department of physical education, nor medical school. Not a penny is paid by students for this attention, except for prescriptions, which may be filled at any drug store of their choosing, or where extraordinary hospitalization is necessary, more than can be taken care of in the men's or women's.

J. P. LEONARD GIVES LECTURE ON CHINA

Catholic mission work in war torn China was the subject of an address by Father James P. Leonard of the Canadian China Mission, at Newman Club yesterday evening.

With a aid of slides and motion pictures Father Leonard vividly described the poverty and misery which Christian priests and sisters are trying to alleviate. Some of his pictures showed the wreckage of schools and churches while others depicted the sisters nursing the wounded and teaching Chinese children. Many of these children had been left outside the convent door by their refugee parents, who could no longer provide for them.

War comes very close to the mission workers. On one occasion, a bomb fell through a chapel roof among a group of sisters, but did not explode; on another, a bomb was found in their rice. However, the missionaries' endurance of discomfort and danger when they might easily return to the safety of their homes, has given the Chinese a greater confidence in the Christians than ever before.

Blue Pucksters Take Lead In Hockey Derby

Women's Union is Scene Of Colourful Party For Eastern Relief

A program of Far Eastern music, a bazaar, an auction sale and moving pictures were the features of the Oriental Party in the Women's Union last Friday evening.

The halls were hung with scarlet silk embroidered with vivid Chinese figures. Several people in native costume bore out the Oriental atmosphere.

Songs, dances, a flute solo and monologue were contributed by natives of China and India, with words in their own tongue. Keen interest was aroused in the course of the sale by auction of scarlet silk squares bearing Chinese characters.

The Chow Mein—a Chinese dish of bean sprouts, meat and fried noodles—proved very popular. Everyone mastered the art of using chopsticks readily and seemed to enjoy the strange custom.

University Symphony

The University Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Brook McElheran, will present its fifth annual concert Wednesday evening in Convocation Hall. The orchestra is approximately the same size as last year, but is reported to be much improved in quality, particularly in the brass and woodwind choirs and the lower strings, and this year it gives its home concert after a successful tour in Guelph, the first out-of-town appearance in its history. In an interview with this department Mr. McElheran intimated that the players are more confident as the result of this preliminary concert.

The program is an interesting one, including a new composition specially written for the orchestra by Lou Applebaum, and three Bach arrangements by the conductor.

The complete program is as follows: Marche Militaire Schubert
Ballet Music from "Rosamunde" Bach

Piece for Orchestra Applebaum
Symphony in C major, No. 82 Haydn

Fughetta on "Praise to Almighty God" Bach
Choral Prelude, "Christ Lay in the Bonds of Death" Bach
Fugue in D Bach
(Above group orchestrated by Mr. McElheran)

Valse Triste Sibelius
Londonderry Air Old Irish Melody
"Thousand and One Nights" Waltz J. Strauss

War comes very close to the mission workers. On one occasion, a bomb fell through a chapel roof among a group of sisters, but did not explode; on another, a bomb was found in their rice. However, the missionaries' endurance of discomfort and danger when they might easily return to the safety of their homes, has given the Chinese a greater confidence in the Christians than ever before.

Saturday's Tussle Marks Third Straight Win for Toronto Hockey Team

By Ed Goodman

The Flying Frenchman of the University of Montreal had their wings closely clipped by Varsity's flashy senior hockey squad on Saturday afternoon in the Blue team's debut at their home arena. Varsity turned in a finished, polished performance and were never in trouble, the final score being 10 to 3.

The Blue team appeared to much better advantage than in any of their exhibition tilts before their trip and Ace Bailey seems to have his squad welded together in a manner that has not been seen around here for half a decade.

Montreal, on the other hand, seemed to lack finish and outside of a short flash in the second period when they notched two goals, their play was unorganized. But the Frenchmen tried hard all the way and as a result the game was interesting throughout.

The Blue team's defence turned in an exceptionally fine performance and figured in five of the Toronto goals. The outstanding player on the ice, had a goal and two assists. Bob Copp also had a goal and two assists and Cam MacLachlan scored on a solo effort.

MEDS BASKETEERS DEFEAT U.C. TEAM

In one of the most exciting basketball games to date, Sr. Meds squeezed out a 23-18 victory over University College seniors Friday afternoon at Hart House. Close checking and fast passing defeated the tussle as both teams fought desperately to open their interplay season with a win.

The first half was evenly matched and neither team could gain a steady lead. The score at half time stood 10-8 in favour of the Doctors.

Play became rough as the second frame opened and fast baskets by Scott and Axon put the Artsmen ahead by 14-10. However, Meds came back strong and Wise, Metzler, Denne and Kyle combined to put them in the lead again 18-14. The winners added five more points to their total and with two minutes of play left, U.C. tried a barrage of long shots which netted them two more field goals before the game ended.

MORALITY MARCHES ON!

are strictly taboo. Far be it from us to suggest that this regulation was ever broken. Amnesia holds open house every night up till midnight, but Burwash men must supply a senior girl of two years' standing or else a married person as a chaperone for their Sunday afternoon receptions. Trinity men assure us that they do not invite members of the fair sex to penetrate their portals because they have no quarters suitable for receiving them. We wonder how the mothers whom we see going in and out of Trinity House preserve their youth and beauty so well. Knox does its entertaining between the strictly respectable hours of 2-5 on Sundays while St. Michael's can but offer the hospitality of a Queen's Park bench. Morality marches on!!!

Fascist Unemployment

The Anglican Archbishop of Rupert's Land made a few statements last week, that are worth careful examination. Among other things he said in effect that Hitler is the world's greatest statesman, that he has disciplined the democracies, and that Italy and Germany are all right because they have no unemployment.

It is rather bewildering to hear a prelate say that the man who put Niemöller in a concentration camp and had Innitzer stoned is the world's greatest statesman. And in view of the strongly anti-Hitler policy that the leaders of the Anglican Church in England have been folling for some time, it is even more bewildering: The Archbishops of Canterbury and York have denounced Hitlerism publicly more than once, they have lent their names to causes in aid of German refugees as much as a protest against the Nazi regime, as out of humanitarian ideals, and the Bishop of Chichester is a veritable anti-Hitler crusader.

It is quite true that Germany and Italy have no unemployment—if you consider the tens of thousands of young men and women working for pittance in labour camps under appalling material and moral conditions as employed; if you consider the overwhelming number of government employees (ten times more than the number before 1933) who are paid from the taxes ground out of the people as employed; if you do not consider the tens of thousands of opponents of the Hitler regime who have been forced into retirement or even the concentration camps as unemployed. If you do, then Germany and Italy have solved the unemployment problem. But we don't all favour regimentation, discrimination and drastic lowering of the standard of living as a very suitable means to an end.

And as for disciplining the democracies—there is no doubt that Hitler has done a great bit of work along that line. Czechoslovakia has been disciplined out of existence; Britain and France are in danger of being disciplined out of democracy; fascist parties are being heavily subsidized throughout the western hemisphere so that we can have a bit of disciplining for our own democracy. So all in all, the Archbishop of Rupert's Land has some ground for his opinion that Hitler is a great fellow.

Public Speakers

Every day in every way, people are beginning to realize that Mr. Barnum's famous comment with regard to birth percentages has finally developed from a theory into a law. The appellation "sucker" might well be applied to those poor unfortunates who pay a few dollars for the privilege of hearing some prominent ex-duke-premier-m.p., etc., dilly-dally over the political situation.

Let us take for example any of the lecture series. Some weeks ago a distinguished member of the moth-eaten nobility of some country was visiting Toronto to hold forth on the topic "War? Good Heavens, No!" A few well-meaning students of the international situation invest a king's ransom in a ticket and hasten to hear this "keen analyst" give his views on the crisis.

One can imagine their surprise when the following bits of astounding information are delivered:

1. Hitler is dictator of Germany.

- Neville Chamberlain is an Englishman.
- The speaker is hysterically overjoyed that Canada is a democracy.
- Daladier is connected with France in some remote way.

5. The international situation is regrettable. Having concluded this brilliant analysis, the speaker then goes on to denounce the "isms", concluding each sentence with "on the other hand" or a perplexed shrug of the shoulders so delightfully continental that Mrs. Upjohn seated in the front row swears they both had the same governess.

Masquerading as authorities on world politics, people, who have at some time or other had something to do with the administration of some country and made a horrible mess of it, are descending on Toronto at the rate of one a week.

This situation is even more regrettable than the international crisis. Almost every speaker that has visited here has spent two hours dilly-dallying about nothing. Some of the speeches have been so boring that the audience have with great effort restrained themselves from jumping up and screaming, "Yes yes yes we know where Europe is, but good heavens man say something!"

But alas, to date, few speakers have ever said anything or have taken any decisive stand. The only speakers that have any firm convictions are the poor misguided street-corner Demosthenes.

Music Criticism

The initials N.F.L. as the signature of today's review of last evening's Sunday evening concert in Hart House, will be familiar to many who were accustomed to reading the musical criticisms in The Varsity some five years ago. N. F. Langford used to write musical criticisms which were rated highly throughout the entire city, and as a one-time feature editor he wrote "Cats", of which we have our own ideas. However, we are glad to be able to welcome Mr. Langford back to the column again, and we hope that he will be able to do some more work for us in the future, for we are especially anxious to keep the A. M. and D. column up to the standard which it has reached and is maintaining under the capable direction of Herbert Cowan.

ART-MUSIC Drama

Sunday Evening Concert

Outstanding marks of Mr. Norman Wilks' piano playing are general good taste and an unusually intimate appreciation of the organism of romantic music. He sets a proper boundary around the compositions that he plays, and within that sphere exploits with skill and understanding the resources of the music and of the instrument.

Mr. Wilks' playing of the Beethoven Sonata, Op. 26, at Hart House on Sunday night, well illustrates his style. One hears so many Conservatory students struggle through this work in the manner of people lost in a trackless waste, that it was pleasant to hear it presented in a unity of form not, after all, in this case very difficult to attain. And over against the impression given by the same Conservatory students, of a sense of some unparalleled grandeur and pathos and solemnity to be discovered in this Sonata, one likes to set Mr. Wilks' placing of the work at its correct level of seriousness.

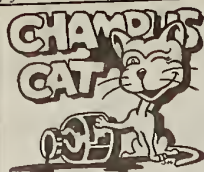

A happier illustration is his performance of the familiar Schumann Carnaval. Mr. Wilks is entirely at home with the romantic nuances and pianistic subtleties of Schumann's music. Deftly and authoritatively he weaves together the intricate structure of sound which makes up Schumann's piano style. Just considered technically, this is a considerable feat: it being the studied conviction of the writer that had Schumann not ruined his hands—a parable, surely!—by means of a device invented for his own self-improvement, he would have done so in the effort to play his own compositions. But there is more to be said than that. The correct exploitation of this composer's tonal complexities is the mark of a sound understanding of the piano. And in this work Mr. Wilks' scholarly—and, one might add, gentlemanly—sense of both instrument and music made itself altogether apparent.

WIREGARTERS ELECTED DALAI LLAMA

TIBET OR NOT TIBET

Lhasa, Tibet: Following a bloody and hectic election, Umlauf Wiregarters succeeded in being railroaded into the position of Dalai Llama, defeating two C.C.F. and one Communist candidate. Ably supported by Paul Muni, recently released from prison after having served twenty years for the Preparedness Day bombing the Dalai-elect thanked his electors amid cheers and the singing of "She was a bonnie Lhasa" . . .

The climax of the election was the colorful installation scene which featured the dancing of Fifi Larose, pride of Osgoode Hall, and the dance team of Gunga and Dirty Din. "I will see to it," said the Llama, "that the tunnel from Osgoode Hall to the Casino Theatre is completed." (Cheers and cries of "woo woo".)

The first of the Dalai's program will be a Holy War, he announced. "We march on Victoria College tomorrow to wipe out the Reds!" he shouted. "They are Reds. That was what I was told by the Whirling Dervishes (Rotarians)."

The Llama also wishes it to be announced that he is in no way connected with the Dalai Star.

Correspondence

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Mr. Fulton's defence of Christian Science is "hardly impartial enough to be thoroughly convincing". While I do not expect complete proof from him, I do expect consistency.

He asserts that Christian Science does not pretend to practice "medicine nor materia medica". It employs a "spiritual method of healing". That is just the point. Medicine takes all healing for its province. By pushing the doctor into the dank cellars of healing the cultist attempts to occupy the more comfortable (and more expensive in cost to the patient) upper stories. Where is the poor psychiatrist going to go—

Stevens' Hoop Squad Beaten By U.S. Teams

Bill Rogin Paces Blue Team's Scoring in both Tussles as Varsity Loses Twice Over
Week-End

Warren Stevens' senior basketball team ended their pre-season tour of American colleges over the week-end when they lost two games to St. Lawrence U. and Clarkson Tech. by the close scores of 45-35 and 51-37. Varsity will play one more exhibition game at home against Niagara U. this Saturday before opening their intercollegiate season at McGill on the 27th. Both tussles were featured by the smart shooting of Bill Rogin, who scored thirty points. Jack Lavarney, Chick Mahoney and Walt McGreggor also turned in starry performances, as did Shute and Bannigan, two players up from Mac McCutcheon's intermediates.

The game at St. Lawrence on Friday started slowly with both teams using a zone defence. After a short time out, Varsity went into a 6-0 lead on baskets by Rogin, Mahoney and McGreggor. The Toronto team worked to perfection and for ten minutes of play held their American hosts scoreless. St. Lawrence rallied, however, and rammed in six quick baskets to take the lead. Rogin and Mahoney again combined to keep Varsity in the running but the score at half time stood St. Lawrence 21 and Varsity 16.

A brief spur by the visitors brought the score to 21-20 as the second period started. After that, however, the Americans began to assert their superiority and Toronto, in spite of three quick baskets by Jim Shute, never took the lead again.

Rogin and Mahoney played best for Varsity, while Ohmann was outstanding for St. Lawrence, with 14 points.

At Clarkson, Varsity held an early lead of 5-3 at the beginning of the first half, but it was the only time they were ahead of their opponents throughout the whole game. They were very close, however, and it was only the sensational shooting of the Americans led by Costello and Dowling, who scored thirty of their team's points, that gave Clarkson their 51-37 victory.

Lavarney with ten points, Mahoney with six and the omnipresent Rogin with 14, were best for Varsity, while Costello, Dowling and Hagan led the Clarkson scorers.

HOCKEY TEAM WINS

But it was the "mighty atom" combination of Boddington and Maynard that gave the Blue students plenty to cheer about, each with two goals and two assists to their credit. Both of these former U.T.S. stars were dangerous whenever they stepped on the ice. Morison and Craig also showed up well on the Blue forward line. Unfortunately the right winger on either line might not have been there for all the passes he was getting, although Callon and Taylor tried hard on their lone home.

For "le bleu et d'or" Gagne was the most effective performer, and along with Lebeuf, who scored two goals, and Mignault on the defence, kept Montreal in the hunt.

A summary of the play would merely be a long procession of Toronto goals. But the game can be summed up by saying that Toronto constantly carried the play to the visitors with their superior skating and passing with the exception of the second period when for nearly fifteen minutes Montreal had a 3 to 2 advantage on the period.

Montreal: Goal, Ferland; defence, Mignault and Gagne; centre, Lebeuf; forwards, Genier and Lariviere; alternates, Martin, La Cavalier, Derome, Poulliot and Hubert (sub goal).

Varsity: Goal, Caswell; defence, MacLachlan and L'Heureux; centre, Boddington; wings, Ross and Callon; alternates, Morison, Craig, Taylor, Maynard, Copp and Blackhall (sub goal).

Referee: "Hap" Day, Toronto.

Personalities Pictured In Print

January 13th

My dear Chief:

In my last letter I told you that if Johnny Yarembo didn't punch me in the face that I would write you again. Well Johnny didn't punch me, but the red-head with whom he got me a date did. Listen, chief, don't trust in Freud, his psychology doesn't work (not on red-heads anyway).

Well to get down to business the lad I want to talk about today is that mighty man of mite Gord Kirby, III S.P.S. Gord is one of the finest lacrosse players in the university, and also a mighty tricky basketball player. And in his high school days at North Toronto he used to be a fine football player at snap.

Well chief in as much as you want to know about Gord's personality I can describe it in a few words, a human dynamo. He doesn't take a back step from anybody and they tell me he is plenty handy with the dukes.

As usual I got around to the subject of girls, and he also seems to prefer red-heads. I think I will get him a date with my Hamilton red top (he says he likes Hamiltonians), and change his views. She will give him a chance to prove that he is the ladies' man and fighter that his hosts of friends claim him to be.

What I am trying to get over chief is that Gord is one very personable fellow with a real sense of humour. To close, I will give you a suggestion of his, a school at U. of T. where one learns what vocation he is fit for. And he claims that all the Meds students should attend there for a year.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shifman

AT THE HOCKEY GAME

Imagine our surprise when we walked into Workman's Ice House last Saturday and saw the place jammed with 500 spectators . . . of course there was room for six times that, but it was gratifying to know that there are five hundred students in the school who are going to be on the band wagon when the Big Blues win the championship. What was more surprising was that there were so few women at the game. We always thought that the women enjoyed going out to football, hockey and wrestling contests and shrieking their heads off . . . but thinking it over it might be the men in the university's fault . . . They're still not taking advantage of the athletic fee. The hockey games are free so next game get out the old registration card and couple up. (Well, it's just an idea—me and Punchy had swell dates anyway.)

While we're on this idea of spectators, at the hockey game on Saturday one of the boys leaned over and suggested that the hockey team should be selected on the Hart House election system . . . and maybe the faculties of the university would flock out in droves to support their representatives and you wouldn't be able to find seats for all of them. (Phew! what a silly idea!)

At the hockey game on Saturday, we were kept on the edge of our seats throughout the entire game. No, it wasn't the game that held us spell-bound because it was too one-sided. But it was the announcement over the public address system that kept us on the edge of our seats. Punchy and I were betting whether the next name coming out would be an Anglicized French name or a Frenchized English name—boy, was it fun when he called Morison—Mauriceus.

We noted, too, that the most difficult position to play on the Varsity squad was the right wing position. While the left wing and centre co-operated on every play passing up and back . . . up and back . . . the poor right winger acts as a decoy. It might be that it is easier to pass from centre to left but Shades of Frenkes, surely sometimes it is as easy to make a pass to the right. The team looked strong and flashy out there on Saturday, but we're sure that the team would be much stronger if Varsity played a three-man front line instead of the usual two-man.

We saw, too, that Morison, whom we consider the best centre man in inter-collegiate hockey, should do all right as a jutterbug. The way that boy weaves, with the greatest of ease, is beautiful to see. He even does the Lindy Hop on skates, which is something, so on behalf of the Onyx Club we invite him to enter the Friday night jitterbug contest (O.K. Bill!).

One of our secret ambitions was finally reached on Saturday afternoon. For years we have pondered and wondered how they chalk up a ten-goal score on the scoring board at the Arena. Saturday a ten-goal score was reached and without a second's hesitation the lights showed a nine and a one which a commerce and finance man sitting beside me interpreted as ten (damn clever these "C and F" men).

During the periods music was played over the public address system. We have a suggestion to make that we think might improve the reception of this music. After sitting twenty minutes in almost freezing temperature music like "The Blue Danube" is definitely not appropriate. Music played by bags like Goodman, Barrigan (plug for Meds At-Home), Ellington, should be played so that the fans could beat it out and keep warm. We might even have a swing session during periods with Vipond of the "Speaking of Swing" column interpreting the music on Deems Taylor style. . . .

Montreal certainly made the game more interesting in the dying moments when they smuck on an extra play right under "Hap" Day's nose. They played seven men for a while and kept Varsity hopping, but one of the Flying Frenchmen (who if you read the story about the hockey game somewhere in this paper, got their wings clipped according to our reporter) got tired, so he skated off for a rest. We doubt whether Hap has found out about this play yet—but it is understandable, with all those guys jumping around the ice we would sweat anybody can count the players on it. When McGill plays here we would sweat to it that they always play ten men and they always hang around our nets—but we'll watch them this year!

ART MUSIC AND DRAMA

The first selection, the so-called French Suite which Bach composed for his wife while he was teaching her the clavichord, was skillfully handled. Schumann's Endes Symphonies, essentially an expression of mood, was played with great feeling by Miss Caille.

The artist played six of Chopin's Preludes, opus 28. Short as these sketches are, Miss Caille was able to present each as a well rounded artistic unit, marvellously expressive and suggestive. For the last number, two of Chopin's earlier Etudes were played, the E Sharp Minor and the F Major—musical masterpieces of the highest order and of the widest emotional range.

As an encore Miss Caille played Gounen's humorous Marionette Show. Trd Meek go out of business? But, the answer comes. Christian Science is based upon God, Spirit, the fixed Principle of all true being. Psychiatry certainly is not. The reason is that the psychiatrist insists upon keeping the distinction between science and extra-scientific factors like religion, sharp. Christian Science, on the contrary, is interested in blunting that distinction as evidenced by its very name. Actually it pretends to deal with the very problems that employ the physician. It claims that its approach to the same problems are different and superior. Only when pleading before a university court does it even admit that the doctor serves a useful function. Its pretended respect for doctors is hardly reciprocated for in no text-book of medicine or surgery or psychiatry, etc., are its methods approved. At best they are treated with silence. Even the doctors at St. Michael's Hospital would smile at Mr. Fulton's definition of their work as "a Congratulations to Pat Downey, former U.C. badminton star, and member of last year's intercollegiate team, who has just won the Toronto and District "B" tournament. Around St. Hilda's they claim badminton is "the most popular sport at the University". They have a sort of "phantom" club, because although enthusiasm abounds, and no less than two intercollegiate prospects, Mary Becker and "Tibs" Auneley are registered in Trinity, still there really can't be any official club. All because it is too expensive and risky to rent suitable courts, so the players work out at their private clubs, and don't meet their club members until the annual tournament, which will be some time this month.

Much as we hate starting controversies, one U.C. fan, speaking on the subject of sports for co-eds here, decisively claims hockey as "the most popular sport at the University". Far be it from us to take sides, but our opinion is that it is the most fun.

The irony of life or something—when after a snowless week the sky suddenly pulled out for there-is-always-snow-at-Limberlost in the midst of much chagrin and a substantial blizzard. Advance reports infer that a good time was had by all, however.

Besides playing host to visiting hockey teams 'way up in Canada, the University of Southern California has instituted a course in navigation for the benefit of co-ed sailors. Oh well, at least we have a course up here which outlines the "principles" of navigation, with lots of time during summer vacation for applying them.

Don't forget hockey practise tonight.

POLITICS IN EUROPE

"France's program," said Miss van Paassen, "is mighty difficult to predict, since England does not wish to want to interfere with French home affairs."

The word "Munich" brought forth the confession that the noted journalist's daughter was anti-British, as regards the present policy. "Munich," said she, "was a farce, well planned to hoodwink the entire world into believing that there was a serious crisis. The Four Power Pact was in the making a year ago."

It is Miss van Paassen's opinion that Hitler is trying to work up the antagonism of the world against Russia and then endeavour to take it over. He will demand the restoration of former German colonies, but Russia is his ultimate goal.

Returning from foreign fields to the present state of English politics, Miss van Paassen agrees with those who believe that Fascism has existed in England for some time although it is known under another name. She deplored the expenditure of one and three-quarter million pounds on munitions per day by the present government.

let's go places

This week at the Loew's Theatre, we find a double bill which makes us believe that maybe double bills aren't so bad after all. The "Young in Heart" is labelled the main fest LOEW'S ure, but we found "Spring DOUBLE Madness" taking the nod for sheer sparkling entertainment. This latter feature tells the story of young college folk who are about to face the bitter world, even as you and I. The plot is flimsy, but this production takes the cake plus all the icing for pure fun.

The "Young in Heart" deals with the charming but unscrupulous Carleton family. They are social parasites that flutter from one fortune-hunting job to another, and their adventures as portrayed by a competent cast provide excellent entertainment. This picture is not another in the cycle of crazy comedies, but is good sound situation comedy with more than a bit of sentiment thrown in. Paulette Goddard in her first role since "Modern Times", does not impress. But good performances by Doug Fairbanks Jr., Minnie Dupree and Roland Young more than make up for this deficiency. We might go so far as to add that this bill is a good thing.—F.S.

both Walk" despite their spurs.

The big gymnasium was decorated for the occasion with copies of ancient weapons and shields, as well as a number of posters drawn by the Arts and Crafts group of Hart House, depicting the inadequacy of Canada's armaments in a humorous vein. The military aspect of the ball was further emphasized by the presence of trumpeters from a cavalry regiment who announced the beginning of each dance.

Receiving the many guests were Lieutenant-Colonel H. H. Madill, officer commanding, Hon. Col. H. J. Cody, and the patronesses, Mrs. H. J. Cody, Mrs. H. H. Madill, and Mrs. W. B. Wilson.

Shortly before twelve the mess call was sounded and the dancers filed into the Great Hall, where soft lights and tall candles helped to provide an atmosphere of great dignity.

We Write As We Please

By Rewen Frank

This is the story of Mr. Houde.

Recently, the front pages of our newspapers fairly bubbled with the news that a certain Camillien Houde defeated a man with eight or ten or twelve children to become mayor of Montreal for the fourth time. And the man-in-the-street bent his head against the bitter cold and for want of something better to occupy his mind, wondered: "Who is this man Houde?"

No one really knows. Houde is the Greta Garbo of Quebec politics. But we do know something about him. We know, for example, that he was once an obscure bank clerk and that he always had a flair for politics. In 1923 he was a member of Mr. Taschereau's now-discredited provincial Liberal party. In that year he tried to get the Liberal nomination for a seat (it was general election time) and couldn't. So he quit the Liberal party in a huff and joined the very obscure Conservative party.

Press clippings from then on are a little bit dead until 1927 when he was successful in getting the Conservative nomination for a riding in the provincial elections but was defeated at the polls. The same thing happened at a by-election in 1928. In the month of July, 1929, Camillien Houde, erstwhile Liberal and now a Conservative, erstwhile bank clerk and now a real estate agent, was elected leader of the provincial Conservative party.

Meanwhile he had been busy in other fields. In 1928 he was elected mayor of Montreal, and the Montreal Star said something about a protest vote. Always a peppery sort of fellow, he managed to keep himself in the public eye pretty consistently. The respectable burghers of Hochelaga knew the antediluvian Cadillac that drove up and down Sherbrooke St. with paunchy red-nosed Mayor Houde in the back and a paunchy red-nosed chauffeur in the front. Some even speculated as to whether the driver was not Mr. Houde and the man in the back was the chauffeur, so closely did they resemble one another.

And so Mr. Houde was re-elected mayor of Montreal in 1930. And in 1931 he led the Conservative party of Quebec against Mr. Taschereau's Liberal forces (no trifling undertaking for the Liberals had been in power for seventy-six consecutive years and had become somewhat of an institution). Houde himself stood for election in two Montreal ridings. He was defeated in both and his party managed to get twelve seats in the provincial legislature. The lucky twelve elected one of their number, a certain Maurice Duplessis, their house-leader.

So in 1934, Mr. Houde was defeated in his fight for mayor, and in 1936 he didn't even run. But the Montreal electorate was dissatisfied with their council of 1934, and was even somewhat resentful of the fact that the city was drifting nearer and nearer bankruptcy, and was inclined, as all electorates are inclined, to blame their elected representatives. In 1936 they made a clean sweep and elected a new City Council pledged to economy. One of the first acts of this new council was to pass a resolution recommending to the provincial legislature that the aldermanic salaries be increased by $1,000. Nice town, Montreal.

In the meanwhile, some clever Conservative found out that Taschereau had been dealing in dirty business and created a scandal. The result of the scandal was the formation of a new Union Libérale Party by young Paul Gouin and an amalgamation of the new party with the Conservative party. The new premier of Quebec was Conservative Maurice Duplessis, arch-foe of Conservative Camillien Houde.

So Houde swung into action again. He ran for a seat in the House of Commons in 1937 as an "Independent Conservative" and made disparaging remarks about M.P.'s and was threatened with a summons to appear before the bar of the House of Commons. He lost the by-election and nothing ever came of the threat.

And as the hours of 1938 drew to a close, Camillien Houde ran for mayor of Montreal on a completely anti-Duplessis platform. (Young Gouin has by this time become a nonentity, as always happens with young hot-headed idealists who "start something.") The Duplessis political machine was called into action during the Montreal municipal election as no political machine has been called to action in any Canadian municipal election (and we make no exception) and Conservative Camillien was opposed by every newspaper except the Liberalish Le Jour—and still he was elected.

Suddenly Camillien Houde has become a shining light in the eyes of Canadian progressives. He is a figure to watch, this paunchy little man who combines all the characteristics of Wilfred Laurier and Al Capone. It would take the profoundest Hindu mystic to predict what Houde will do, so we will go out on the limb and say whatever he does, it will be big. It will hit you with a bang, and don't say we didn't warn you.

FUND COMMITTEE ORGANIZES DRIVE; AIM IS ONE MILLION

Money Needed to Pay Student Grants, Building Fund and Accumulated Deficits of Victoria University

One million dollars is the objective of the recently organized Centenary Fund Committee of Victoria University in order to supply the urgent need for additional capital funds. That such a fund should be organized has been repeatedly suggested by the Finance Committee since 1936, the actual one hundredth anniversary of the Royal Charter. In that year the Board of Regents decided that business conditions were unfavourable for such an appeal.

One million dollars is needed to pay off the Building Fund debt of $300,000, to wipe out the accumulated deficits on current account of the last ten years of approximately $200,000, and provide additional endowment funds of $500,000, which are necessary to take the place of the reduction in the annual grant from the Board of Christian Education of the United Church of Canada and to offset declining rates of interest, it is reported.

Purloining of Two Ash-Trays May Have Serious Results

The playfulness of some college student in purloining two ash trays from Burwash Hall on the event of the Junior-Senior Prom last fall, may deal a death blow to the plans for a 319-470 spring party.

"The principle of the thing" is what is involved. The Victoria College authorities barred the classes of 370 and 470 from the use of Burwash Hall for future parties. There being no other convenient hall this would mean there will be no 3rd and 4th year party this spring unless the trays are returned. This is part of the content of a letter sent to each member of the classes by the V.C.U.

All students, when interviewed, felt that the "lifting" of the ash trays from their respective smoking stands, was an outside job. "If someone in the class

PERVADEING PATERNALISM

Administration of student help and personnel study as carried on in the University of Toronto is likely in the course of time to prove more effective than similar work done in many American centres according to a report issued by Professor S. N. F. Chant and E. A. Macdonald of the Students Administrative Council, who visited the Universities of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and Yale last month.

In all these universities there are more elaborate schemes for helping students both on graduation and during their university course, but the report points out that there is little or no student control, and an air of paternalism pervades the whole scheme. "This," they declare, "does not develop individual initiative nor does it encourage (Continued on Page 4)

BICYCLE REGARDED WASTE OF EFFORT

Machine is Built More to Test Patience than to Develop Muscular Power

Around this campus there are many ways to get nowhere fast. Perhaps you like to boycott lectures, perhaps you are a conscientious objector to studying. But one of the most effective ways to waste effort and get nothing is to ride the now famous Hart House bicycles.

These machines were designed, it is said, not so much to develop the muscular power of the men of the campus as to test their patience.

The apparatus consists of two bicycles, at least they vaguely resemble bicycles, for the front wheels are removed. From the back wheel on both models runs a cord connected to a mysterious board which records on two dials (one in yards, the other in miles) how far you would have gone, had you not been wasting your time on the machine.

The athletic member of Hart House climbs into the seat for a little exercise. He puts his feet on the pedals, falling off at least once as he attempts to reach down to fix the strap about his shoe. He starts the long grind— (Continued on page 3)

VARSITY SOLVES TUNNEL MYSTERY

Waterproofing does not Anticipate Air Raids; Merely Prevents Short Circuit of Live Wires

Speculation has been in a varying state of rife since the beginning of the current scholastic year as to what the workmen are doing in the tunnel that runs underneath the path from Hoskins to Bloor. Seeking to set many minds at rest, The Varsity scores another conspicuous first in carrying the torch of the fourth estate underground in search of news.

Contrary to the belief that U. of T. was anticipating government action in regard to air raid protection, it was found that the work in hand is of an entirely prosaic nature. It is in fact the waterproofing of the tunnel to prevent short circuiting of the wires that carry current to light the many twinkling bulbs throughout the length of the two and three quarter miles of tunnel.

Three pipes carry steam at various pressures to most of the larger buildings on the campus from the gargantuan boilers of the central heating plant situated almost inconspicuously behind the Anatomy Building.

AEGEAN WORLD SURVEYED IN TALK

The new lecture series requested by Mr. George H. Armstrong were begun today in the Royal Ontario Museum by Prof. A. J. B. Wace, the Cambridge scholar who helped Schliemann in his excavations at Mycenae. His subject was "A survey of the Aegean World down to the fall of Troy".

Before the excavation, explained Prof. Wace, the bowls and potherds that had been found were thought to have been of Cretan origin. When the (Continued on page 3)

STUDENTS' POSITIONS ARE DISCUSSED

During the whole of last year the Students' Administrative Council placed 1486 students in positions, revealed Mr. E. A. Macdonald yesterday, eight hundred of which were summer jobs. "There are good jobs at summer camps already listed this year," said Mr. Macdonald. "As a rule the Canadian National Exhibition takes the largest number of students, while many students find work in summer hotels, in tobacco factories and a few as chauffeurs. Most men prefer working at the Exhibition or at camps to anything else. Since the people that we send have done their work so well, many hotels, such as Limberlost, apply directly to the S.A.C. for employees."

However, with regard to women, the situation is quite different. "There are fewer openings available for girls," said Miss Parker, associate secretary of the S.A.C. (Continued on Page 4)

PRESIDENT CODY TO BE ENTERTAINED AT NEW YORK CLUB

Invitations are Extended to as Many University Presidents as May be Able to Attend

SOCIAL EVENTS ARRANGED

President H. J. Cody of the University of Toronto has accepted the invitation of the Universities' Club of New York to dinner on Friday evening, January 20th. The club is entertaining as many University Presidents as can be assembled on that occasion. Principal L. W. Douglas of McGill University, President G. J. Trueman of Mount Allison University, and President Carleton Stanley of Dalhousie University, Halifax, are also to be present.

The President of the World's Fair has invited these university presidents to luncheon on Saturday, January 21st and the Canadian Society of New York has invited them to dinner on Saturday evening.

FINE IS REDUCED FOR 'WEEK BOOKS'

Following the plea of a third year Arts student the other day, the powers that be have reduced the fine on overdue "week books" at the University Library from twenty cents to ten cents a day.

On Friday the 13th, the unfortunate student found himself in the embarrassing position of having to return a "week book" to the library four days late. A simple arithmetic process fixed the amount due at eighty cents, whereupon the student suggested that the fine be halved. Librarian W. S. Wallace discussed the suggestion with other librarians and Monday morning announced an experimental ten-cents-a-day fine which will be made permanent if no abuses follow. It was felt that, since "week books" are not text-books and are not in great demand, the old fine was too severe.

U.C. JUNIORS DOWN SCHOOL HOOP TEAM

Yesterday in the upper gym Jr. U.C. basketball team tossed out Jr. S.P.S. 21-18. Personal fouls spelled defeat for the Engineers; the Collegians kept their penalty sheet clean, while scoring three points on fouls incurred by S.P.S.

In the opening period U.C. had it all their own way. Mel Kates scoring the first six points on neat baskets. His team-mates added five more, and the School countered with three baskets, making the half-time score 11-6 for U.C.

During the second stanza the play lived up when S.P.S. climbed to within a single point of their opponents. In their final drive the Schoolmen resorted to long shots, but failed to get in for the rebounds. At three minutes to go Barrett of School scored a basket to put the Engineers ahead by one point. Then U.C. forged ahead as Detweiler tallied twice, and the game ended with the Artsmen leading 21-18. Jr. U.C.: Lyne, Axon (2), Scott (4), Dutt-Gerrans, Klein, Balmer, Jones, Detweiler (7), Kates (8).

Jr. S.P.S.: Shorter, Pencer, Finlayson (4), Reynolds, Bell, Barrett (4), Allen (2), Halford (4), Derringer, Kippen (4).

Cost of Munich Pact Is Deplored By Professor

There will be a full rehearsal of the Hart House Glee Club on Tuesday at 5 p.m. in the Music Room.

BRITISH POLICY SUICIDAL

"The Munich agreement accomplished what it set out to do. It prevented a war at the moment," said Dr. R. M. Saunders of the History department in an interview with The Varsity yesterday.

"But the real question is whether the cost paid was not too high," he stated. "It seems to me that the policy which the Chamberlain government has followed consistently has been a gamble on the chance that Germany and Italy, if not curbed too much, would throw their strength eventually against Russia."

This is a suicidal policy, according to Dr. Saunders, because he believes that if Germany is allowed to free a hand such as the Munich agreement gave her, she is just as likely to turn against Britain as against Russia.

"Every time you make a concession," claims Dr. Saunders, "you have strengthened the enemy and you can go on making concessions until you are in a very weak position yourself." (Continued on page 3)

TICKET DEADLINE THURSDAY, JAN. 19

In spite of the fact that many dances are being held on Friday, January 20th, the Trinity Conversat. committee is optimistic with regard to the outcome of this year's function. A check up of the ticket sales made yesterday revealed that the goal set by the committee was already practically attained. Jack Seed commented that as usual most of the men are putting off buying their tickets until the last minute. "There seems," he said, "to be a universal desire to hang on to the almighty dollar as long as possible. Every indication, however, points to an attendance in excess of last year."

The recently graduated seniors, 378, 377 and 376, have made table arrangements with Bob Easton. The Great Hall, illuminated by flickering candles and the mellow glow of a log fire, will later in the evening be the Mecca for the assembled guests, who will sit down to an inviting supper, the main course of which is to be chicken a la king.

Bill Reed, in charge of ticket sales, announces that the lists will be closed on Thursday night, and all who have yet to secure their tickets must do so by that time.

Engineers Vie With Trinity Men With Regard To Dance Dates

For the first time in some years, two faculty formal dances will clash. On Friday, January 20, the Trinity College Conversat. and the School At-Home are taking place.

Hearing of a possible shortage of girls for that evening The Varsity approached members of both factions to see if any difficulty was being encountered. Engineers, with hand bills clutched firmly in their fists, maintained that they would have no trouble in securing dates. "There is nothing," they said, "that the girls like better than going out with one of the 'forty-beer' men."

Questioned as to the Trinity Conversat., one engineer replied, "Trinity men as a body, are very exclusive. They hardly ever separate over there, and consequently we don't expect to sell any tickets to them."

At the Trinity end of the campus, the gownned students pointed out that they had always had strong connections with Whitney Hall and St. Hilda's. "In spite of my persistent efforts to run a date bureau," said Bob, genial Trinity porter, "I have had no applications since Trinity men never seem to have any trouble getting their own women."

The chairman of the Conversat. committee told The Varsity that since ticket sales had already reached two-thirds of last year's total, sale among undergraduates alone, he did not foresee any trouble for Trinity men.

Lecture Manners

Professorial patience is one of the greatest marvels of an educational institution. How a scholar, oftentimes elderly and steeped in learning, is able to lecture day after day to a group of sleepy-looking unresponsive pass arts students with little more thought in their craniums than the number of minutes until the class is over, without giving up in despair, is hard to understand.

But how they can endure the noise and bustle, the slapping shut of books, and scraping of feet, the buttoning of coats, and powdering of noses which takes place during the last two minutes of the fifty scheduled for the lecture, is beyond the comprehension of anyone but a professor. Ten minutes have been reserved in between lectures, as a recess; if a professor takes it upon himself to continue too far into the same ten minutes he may deservedly find that he has lost his class. But at least he should be given a few seconds grace to continue to the end of a sentence after the clock chimes the hour.

Perhaps some day there will be a university of students who hang upon the very words of the professors, not daring to break in upon his utterances until he has completed his sequence of thought. Perhaps some day there will be a class which has the good taste to keep their feet still, their books open and their watches in their pockets, until the time for the lecture is up. Some day university students may realize that they are being unjust not only to their professor but to the rest of the class, when they have the bad manners to drown out the closing words of a lecture before they have become audible past the first row of seats.

A Great Canadian

The Right Honourable Richard Bedford Bennett's decision to retire from the hubbub of the Canadian political scene, and take up residence in England means the loss of one of the ablest men in Dominion public life.

Ever a tremendous worker, Mr. Bennett was possessed of a keen sense of responsibility towards what he considered to be the national good. Sometimes, it is true, he laid himself open to charges of arbitrariness; at other times there were honest differences of opinion as to what constituted the national good. He was described as "the greatest asset and greatest single liability of the Conservative party". But through it all ran the ideal of duty and service to his country.

His devotion with the admiration and respect of friend and foe alike. With his gifted oratory, he enlivened many dull debates by his analysis of national problems.

Aside from post-Confederation and war-time years, Mr. Bennett's period in office was one of the most trying times in Canadian history. Western rehabilitation, stability of wheat prices, assistance to primary producers and protection of eastern industry all had to be tackled, and were difficult to solve with world conditions as they were.

The work of the Farmer's Creditor Arrangement Act, and the Price Spreads Commission are only two examples of remedies he applied to meet the emergency.

Mr. Bennett's disinterested services to the country should prove an inspiration to all patriotic Canadians. Our appreciation follows him, and the hope goes out that he will spend many productive years yet in the service of Canada in the heart of the Commonwealth.

University Symphony

Undergraduates should remember that tomorrow night the University symphony orchestra is presenting its fifth annual concert, and that the members of the orchestra would appreciate very much having a large audience in attendance.

Last week in Guelph some seven hundred people turned out to hear, and incidentally enthusiastically applaud, the orchestra on its first out-of-town appearance. Brock McElheran has been working for the past three months with the other members of the group, in order to make the concert a success, and this will be the only time during the year that the students will have the opportunity to hear them perform.

The orchestra, sponsored by the Students' Administrative Council, was founded five years ago by Jack Weinzwieg, who conducted it in a brilliant fashion for three years, and laid a splendid foundation for Brock McElheran to work upon last season and this.

The program is a varied one which should please everyone. The world premiere of Lou Applebaum's Piece for Orchestra will be given, and Haydn's little known "Bear" Symphony, No. 82, will also be played. It is believed that this is the first time that this work has been performed in Toronto, although this is not certain. There will be several more familiar numbers, including, amongst others, Sibelius' Valse Triste, Londonderry Air, and the Strauss waltz, Thousand and One Nights.

Boys Will Be Boys

From The New York Times

Just one less than half of this year's entering class at Princeton have voted that Adolf Hitler is the "greatest living person". Prime Minister Chamberlain won the election by getting all the other votes. It is not stated whether or not Mr. Chamberlain will send an army of occupation to take over the campus. In the contest for "greatest living American" President Roosevelt won over Chief Justice Hughes. Finally, three-fourths of the class admitted that red-headed girls scared them.

Some of these attitudes will change during the next four years. The Princeton senior of 1942 may have different notions of greatness. He may marry a red-headed girl—or be married by one, if she lives up to her reputation. The pleasant thing about attitudes maintained by young men and women of the age of college freshmen is that they can and do change. They can change because they are floating around like clouds in the summer sky—an intellectual sky in which the actual experience of the hard world is as yet a blemish no bigger than a man's hand.

It is the adults with fixed ideas that we have to worry about. The Princeton freshmen are nice boys and nearly all of them will get over what ails them. But what are we to do with adults who reach middle age firmly convinced that red-headed women are a menace to this Republic? These, and others who hold similarly irrational beliefs, are our real educational problem.

Hart House Camera Club

The 17th Annual Exhibition of the Hart House Camera Club opens today with a large collection of prints. The "Landscapes and Marine" is the largest class and contains some very fine prints. The sweepstake print "Chinese Craft" by J. B. Collier which won the K. B. Jackson Honourable Memorial Trophy for the best junior print, was in this class.

The prints this year were judged by a jury of three instead of a single judge as has been customary. The judges were Stanley Harrod, F.R.P.S., who judged the Landscape and Marine, and the Scientific classes; Allan Sangster, A.R.P.S., who judged the Genre and Portrait classes; and Randolph Macdonald, A.R.P.S., who judged the Design and Architecture.

Overheard at the Applied Mathematics Building:

"Hello, Butch."

"Hiya, Gimpy."

"What do you hear from de mob?"

"Nuttin' stoopendous. Cockeyed Pete was incarcerated for tree months, and De Brain got out of de hoosegow. (Preposterous sort of English, isn't it?)"

"I hold about dat, Butch, but I couldn't go down to welcome him on account of I was worrying about de international sitch. (Ridiculous!)"

"Yeah, I hold you went high-class. I hope it won't detract (Incongruous!) from your underworld activities."

"Naw, Butch (or is it Gimpy?—This is confusing.) What's up?"

"We're mopping up a white spot next week."

"Fine Gimpy, or am I Gimpy? I'll be glad to co-operate with youse. When does dis come off? (Oh, you higher education!)"

"It will be Wednesday."

"When?"

"Wednesday, or do youse prefer Wednesday?"

"Does youse mean Wed. Jan. 19?"

"Yup."

"I like that. I think I'll repeat it."

"Yup."

"Why I can't join de mob on Wed. Jan. 19, because that is the night of the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra concert."

let's go places

Bennie Davis brings to the Shea's a group of young vaudeville performers this week. Noted for "bringing along stars", Bennie at first impression seems to be headlining a glorified SHEA'S amateur show. But illusions are soon dispelled, for he has really got sumpin' this time. A baritone, an imitator, a comedy dance team, dogs, acrobats, and what not—everything though, in an informal manner and at a breezy clip. To top it off a jitterbug contest. If you like 'vodvil' this is it and if you never cared for this type of amusement this might change your mind.

On the screen "Thanks for Every thing". Henry Smith (Jack Haley) wins the "Average American" contest and soon becomes the guinea pig of a corporation which predicts trends of the average American, his likes and dislikes in his life, etc. The corporation, run by Adolph Menjou and Jack Oakie, base their predictions on detailed reports and statistical data, namely, the opinion of Henry Smith. All goes well until love complications arise (Arleen Whelan). The climaxing scene has Jack Haley running to enlist the marines to save democracy with Jack Oakie chasing him, dressed in pajamas. Everybody winds up in a psychopathic hospital.

Correspondence

To the Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

With a great deal of interest I read your fine editorial yesterday entitled "High School Training". The problem therein discussed has been rather a live one with me for many years. I visit secondary schools and try to tell the pupils something about university courses. One device I have tried is to send annually to the principal of every secondary school in the province copies of booklets similar to those I am sending you today. Others are in preparation.

You will notice that one of these booklets is entitled, "Opportunities for Graduates in Science in the Faculty of Arts"; another deals with courses in Engineering; and a third tells something about Public Administration.

Some principals ask for these booklets in quantity.

Faithfully yours,

LAST MINUTE RALLY WINS FOR S.P.S.

Game Nothing More than a Pitching Duel: Players on Neither Team Given Much Chance to Show Strength

After a four inning pitching duel
S.P.S. rallied in the last minute of play to take advantage of Jeffery's pitching and score two runs in their first game yesterday afternoon in the lower gym, Hart House.

The whole game was merely a pitching duel with only six hits in four innings. Only five men walked during the whole game. The rest of the two teams did not have a chance to show their real strength at any time.

Renshaw for School, first man up got a single, quickly followed by a hit for Scott, both men coming home before the end of the inning to make the final score 2-0.

Sr. Vic: Jones, McLennan, Brett,
Cassidy, Jefferys, Aymer, Zurbirgier,
Harris, Thompson.

Sr. S.P.S.: Kennedy, Berry, Brown, Rule, Renshaw, Scott, McCabe, Galway, Wheaton.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Sam Lipin

The opening guns of the water polo season were fired in Hart House pool with two tightly contested games, Jr.
Vic and Jr. U.C. battling to a 1-1 draw and Sr. Meds just managing to remain one goal ahead of a fighting Sr. S.P.S. squad who netted 2 goals in the last few minutes of play.

In the junior game Beatty was the scorer for Vic while Patchett notched up the U.C. counter. Handicapped by playing a man short U.C. nevertheless played a stellar match and held off an attacking Vic team.

The senior game saw play faster and more polished than in the junior frame. Caven, Statten and Murray were the point getters for Meds while Heal and Dunlop counted for School.

Dear PUNCHY and PUNCHY:

Among the Johnny-come-latelies to the intercollegiate sporting scene, none has so versatile a record of accomplishment as Jack (the Gentleman) Aymer, second year Arts student at Victoria College, by way of Mimico Collegiate.
Jack first grabbed headlines as the fellow who made the winning touchdown in the Mulock Cup final against St.
Mike's one melancholy afternoon in December, 1937. He's been going strong ever since.

The Scarlet and Gold might have come closer to achieving another Mulock Cup triumph last year had he had Aymer in the line-up. However,
Gentleman Jack turned up with Don Graham's junior Varsity gridders as substitute quarter.

Last autumn Jack manipulated the guttered stick with telling effect on behalf of Victoria's intercollegiate lacrosse team, which outlasted Dents in a gruelling duel for the Defoe Cup. Jack was the cleanest player on the floor during this gory series and in addition he was well up in the scoring columns.

In the winter season Aymer throws a mean strike for his college baseball team. His favourite winter sport is skiing, which he classifies as his only hobby.

Jack received his secondary education at Mimico, where he starred in his favourite competitive sports. Mimico, no doubt, still points with pride to her distinguished athlete-alumnus.

Your pal,

Pinchy.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Ed Goodman

FOR WOMEN'S EMANCIPATION

The President's report which is issued every year and which embraces all phases of life at the University of Toronto, contains among its other important comments on university life a paragraph dealing with the subject that should be of extreme interest to all lovers of sport and physical education. President Cody lists among the six primary needs of the U. of T. an athletic centre for women students. The following quotation is taken from the report "The gift of such a building would be an incalculable benefit for the health of the women and would provide a more thorough course in physical education". There can be no doubt that the President is echoing the sentiment of every individual who is interested not only in physical education but in creating a unifying force for the women of the University of Toronto.

The boon that such a centre would be to the health of the young women of this province is too evident to require further comment. I would, however, like to take up a little space to deal with the effect that this imaginary building would have in broadening the social life of the women of Varsity.

In my opinion there is no better means by which students at any institution may become embodied in the general life of their college and where he or she can have a house to meet their fellows in the most friendly manner than while competing in intercollegiate or in intercollegiate sport. The girls of the University of Toronto at the present time have a fairly wide sports program including tennis, basketball, swimming, hockey, badminton, golf and basketball, tennis, badminton, swimming and basketball being also intercollegiate sports. Varsity captured the intercollegiate swimming title last year. But unfortunately very poor and inconvenient facilities have hampered the Women's Athletic Directorate to a considerable degree. They have to swim at U.T.S. and Lillian Massey, play badminton at Margaret Eaton and basketball at O.C.E. In other words a Varsity woman athlete receives adequate training for the harrier team.

In addition to hampering their athletic life, the lack of a suitable centre seriously deters the spread of any other type of social life, and keeps the girls of the various faculties from enriching their circle of friends. PUNCHY even suggests that a bowling alley might be in order.

With the need for such a building being so urgent it is surprising that some socially minded progressive individuals who have the interest of our university at heart don't get started on a campaign. I am certain that the general response would be immediate.

U.C. KEEPS ON PROGRESSING

With the announcement that Apps of Toronto Maple Leafs will coach their senior hockey team, U.C.'s athletic directorate take the second step in their campaign to raise the college's athletic prestige. Time alone will tell of its success. Dick Craig of the senior hockey team will instruct the second squad and that means the U.C. hockey is in capable hands.

BLUE TEAM NEED WIN TONIGHT

With a record of no runs and seven defeats to date, Jimmy McCann's Varsity juniors will be just about desperate in their efforts to break into the win column tonight, when they tangle with Baldy Cotton's Native Sons in Maple Leaf Gardens.

Showing vast improvement in their game Saturday afternoon when they almost upset the favoured Young Rangers the Blues should have a great chance of snapping out of their prolonged losing streak. A better team on paper than their record would indicate, one victory would give the boys a little of that confidence which they so badly need.

But they'll face plenty of opposition tonight. Second to Oshawa in their group, Baldy Cotton's sextet will be out after a win to stay within reach of the Memorial Cup finalists, the Oshawa Generals.

"To be or not to be." Intermediate basketball players are ineligible for faculty hockey teams and for some the decision between the glamour of being an intercollegiate basketball player of the good basketball players are stick-is probably the wisest choice—bockey weather-dependent.

We expect to have the definite senior

50 yards, 100 yards, an eighth of a yet more slowly. As he notices someone watching him he speeds up. Perhaps he has the endurance to do a mile, then he wearily removes his feet, climbs off very painfully, wipes the perspiration from his forehead. Unconsciously he looks for the cheering and congratulations. But it is not the six-day bike race and all that awaits him is a shower and some tired muscles.

AEGEAN WORLD SURVEYED IN TALK

new town was unearthed, the question arose as to whether or not the things which had been attributed to Crete were Cretan. The answer to this question clarifies the hypotheses made concerning communications in the ancient world.

It has been believed that the Cretan empire of 1600 B.C. controlled the important island of Melos. Potsherds—1600 of them—have been found, which prove that the Greeks on the Pelopon-nesus controlled Melos rather than the Minoans. The octopus and seaweed patterns and the scroll design on bowls found on the island are also from the mainland.

A prominent Oxford scholar, continued Prof. Vace, claims that Troy was a Cretan city. Troy of 1600 B.C. has pottery which is definitely non-Cretan. It is Mycenaean.

Signs that the Greeks of the mainland used the route followed by the Crusaders—from Greece, over the steeping stones of the Aegean islands to Rhodes and Cyprus and then to Syria —are evident throughout these lands.
The Greek stirrup cup and the distinctively based drinking glass prove this.

Then there is the question as to what extent these lands, other than Greece, traded with each other. Before 1400
B.C. there is little evidence that Crete traded with Syria. In 1300 Troy was trading down the Syrian and Palestinian coast.

PROFESSOR VIEWS MUNICH AGREEMENT

"What is Hitler's next move?" he was asked.

"Hitler is most likely to advance in the Danube area through Hungary into Rumania and the Ukraine.

"But it is not impossible for Germany and Russia to get together on some issue like the partition of Poland," Dr. Saunders hinted. "If such were the case Germany would have a free hand in the west instead of Great Britain."

However, if Germany continues to advance along the Danube, Dr. Saunders feels that western democracy will soon be face to face with a vast dictatorial German Empire in mid-Europe the outcome of which would indeed be serious for democracy.

The pictures were judged chiefly under the headings of composition, technique and subject matter. In the case of portraits modelling, texture and likeness were the chief criteria. Mr. Harrod remarked that among those in the Landscape class there were a number of prints with only one object, a difficult subject and one which often lacks balance although it is very effective if properly done. There were two colour prints and a number of colour transparencies in the show. The print "An-a Day" which won the award in its class, was made by the chromotone process, the other is a wash-off relief print. The transparencies are all Kodachromes. The awards were as follows:

Landscape and Marine—Senior: First, The Land of Romance by W. Edwin Lehman. Second, The Valley Farm, H. M. Saul. Honourable Mention, Sunrise, W. H. Cockcroft. Junior: First, Chinese Craft, H. B. Collier; Second, Beach at Perce, K. Winter; H.M., The Last Schooner on the Great Lakes, G. de B. Robinson.

Scientific (one of the best for several years)—Senior: First, Conglomerate, L. G. Berry; Second, Grey Pine Sawyer, L. Hampson; H.M., Bullfrogs, J. S. Bocch; H.M., Ghost Line, M. McMurray. Junior: First, Life in High Altitudes, H. M. Bryant; Second, Fly Agarie, W. B. Carswell; H.M., Quintuplets, B. Dance.

Portrait—Senior: First, Profile, H. M. Saul; Second, Miss Aileen Drury, Herbert Nott. Junior: First, A picture by Mr. Magar; Second, Great Dane, Gooderman.

Genre—Senior: First, Story-hour, H. M. Saul; H.M., Winter Sports, Cover Illustration, F. Roy Kemp. Junior: First, O.K., H. M. Bryant.

Design—Senior: First, Syringa Pattern, L. Hampson; Second, Smoke Pattern, H. M. Saul; H.M., The Midnight Oil, M. McMurray. Junior: H.M., My Keys, H. M. Bryant.

Architecture—First, Graft Chapter House, H. Nott; H.M., W. Edwin Lehman. Colour—Junior: An-a Day, Errol Cahoon.

Symphony Orchestra

Tonight at Massey Hall the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, directed by Sir Ernest MacMillan, will present the fifth concert of the "Nine O'Clock" series. The program will include the Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla" which was rehearsed at this year's Christmas Box Symphony, the Overture "Romeo and Juliet" by Tchaikovsky; Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun"; and the Schubert Symphony No. 7 in C.

The Symphony in C, last and biggest of Schubert's symphonic works, was completed in March, 1828, only a few months before the composer's death at the early age of thirty-one. It was actually Schubert's tenth symphony. An

DOWN AT OHIO STATE U., the economics classes put their heads together and evolved a series of tailor-made definitions which run as follows: "Socialism" . . . You have two cows. You give one to your neighbour. "Communism" . . . You have two cows and give both to the government, and the government gives you the milk. "Fascism" . . . You keep the cows and give the milk to the government and the government sells it back to you. "Nazism" . . . The government shoots you and takes the cows. "New Dealism" . . . The government shoots one cow, milks the other and pours the milk down the sewer. "Yes, but suppose you haven't got a cow." . . .

ACCORDING TO THE Chicago Tribune, it seems that a new kind of signal-calling was initiated this fall in the Midwest. . . . The quarterback calls letters instead of numbers. . . . For instance, when he wants a shovel pass he calls "WPA"; for a sweeping end run that cuts down everything in sight, he yells "AAA" and the signal for a double reverse is "FDR". . . . We wonder what would happen if the quarterback mixed up his signals, and called out "CIO" instead of "AFofL". . . . Why anything might happen. . . .

THE TABLES WERE TURNED down at Dakota during exam week, when the students decided to quiz the professorial fraternity. . . . They had a dozen faculty members take dictation on a certain sentence and then checked the spelling. . . . Those taking the test included three English professors, the head of the journalism department and a proof-reading instructor. . . . The average faculty score turned out to be four-and-a-quarter misspelled words, only one teacher was completely accurate, and one professor made no less than ten errors. . . . The sentence reads as follows: "Outside a cemetery sat a harassed cobbler and an embarrassed oculist, picnicking on a dedicated apple, and gazing at the symmetry of a lady's ankle with unparalleled ecstasy." . . .

It is reported on good authority that although the students were happy concerning the results of the test, they were disappointed in the fact that they found no errors on the professors. . . .

THE VARSITY SWING CLUB is swinging again, and have lined up some real talent for their next session on Wednesday at five bells at the Odd-fellows' Temple. . . . Lou Louis and his band, Phyllis Marshall, dusky singer, Ron Sorley who claims to play both on the black and white keys of the piano and Dick McDougall will all be on hand. . . . Princeton University has received a special grant to finance a study of the effects of the Orson Welles broadcast of the invasion from Mars. . . . The same university has had more of its students win Rhodes scholarships than any other U.S. institution. . . . Harvard runs second while the boys from old Eli run third. . . . The Varsity symphony orchestra are very proud of themselves. . . . It seems that the announcer introduced them as the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. . . . Sir Ernest probably would have fainted if he had been there. . . . As it was, only four members of the student organization passed out. . . .

immediate performance was decided upon. The parts were copied out and the work put into rehearsal but it was soon discovered that it was too difficult for most of the players. For ten years it was neglected until Schumann secured the manuscript and had the symphony copied and sent to Mendelssohn, who performed it in Leipzig.

After this performance Schumann wrote an article upon the work from which a remark is taken: "Here we have not only mastery over the technique of composition, but life in its varied aspects, colour in delicate gradations, accuracy and aptness of utterance."

POLITICS The European Manner

Special To The Varsity
By H. Nelson Lockhead
A Troubled New Year

London, Eng.: While most people look forward to the New Year with the hope that it will bring peace and prosperity, there is at least one man besides the Archbishop of Canterbury who must shudder at the prospect of facing 1939. That man is Neville Chamberlain.

Faced with a cabinet revolt which threatens to play havoc with his ministry unless the miraculous happens, the Prime Minister must find it difficult to appear genuinely optimistic about the future.

The junior members of the Cabinet withdrew their support at first silently and graciously. Now they have become outspoken, and are demanding a complete reorganization of the Cabinet.

Leading the attack is Mr. Duff Cooper, former First Lord of the Admiralty, who has the support of an influential part of the press.

Reviewing the Past Months

The past twelve months cannot bring much consolation to the Premier. The year 1938 saw the minor powers dictating to Britain. Appeasement brought little else besides loss of prestige. Japan said: "We will not tolerate Britain or British-U.S.-French schemes interfering with the creation of a new order in East Asia."

China bluntly demanded a five year, twenty-five million dollar credit to help buy lorries for the transport of materials, and Britain was told that if she refused China would remember when she ultimately won.

Italy built a strong fleet, weakened English control in the Mediterranean and allowed the British Government to give Haile Selassie a country estate in England and a liberal allowance.

Germany openly flouted Britain's power, pointed to her own air force, threatened, annexed Austria, and the worthwhile portions of Czechoslovakia.

A glorious 1938 for the Fascist triangle.

Russian Comment

Russia recently turned the other cheek and offered its advice and constructive criticism to the Chamberlain government.

The Soviet daily, Pravda, commenting on relations between England and Japan, said: "It required 18 months of war in China before the sensitive British diplomats finally caught the 'threatening note' of the Japanese."

It is true that the British naval base in the Far East, Hong-kong, is in danger and it is now apparent that Japan's objective is to paralyze Britain in the Far East, and their attempts, judging from the enormous decrease in trade between China and England, have been very successful.

This Japanese pressure on Britain coincides with Italy's demands on France.

The three Fascist states are thus exhibiting a close co-operation which will give the solidity of the London-Paris axis a severe test. It is the efficiency of the Fascist triangle which is worrying many British statesmen who fear that more concessions by Chamberlain during the coming Rome visit will only serve to encourage the dictators.

Another War Scare

Conflicting statements have appeared regarding the surrender of French territory to Italy. The declaration "France will not consider making territorial concessions to appease Italy" has been issued by the French government, which had formerly promised to assume a passive attitude during the Chamberlain-Mussolini conversations.

The French government evidently does not appreciate the astuteness of Mr. Chamberlain's diplomacy for it has requested that he kindly refrain from giving away any French property, even as a friendly gesture, while he is at Rome. France prefers to make her own donations, if any, to the charitable institution of Fascism.

Opposition to Rome Visit

Mr. Chamberlain knows that his appeasement policy does not meet with the approval of the people. If he values his political life he will have to adopt different tactics, and if he does he will be admitting that Munich was a mistake.

The question of cancelling the trip to Italy has been vigorously debated in the Cabinet. The rebels in the Conservative ranks are demanding either cancellation of the trip or a positive guarantee that Chamberlain will not grant any concessions to Mussolini. But Mr. Chamberlain, conscious of the support of the pro-Fascist interests in the Cabinet insists that he must go to Rome.

"Prepare for the Worst"

An active supporter of the Munich agreement, the Archbishop of Canterbury has also lost confidence in any promise of "peace for our time."

a student to depend upon his own resources. As distinct from this, one very important element in the situation at the University of Toronto is the extent of student participation. This provides a basis for a whole program which through proper organization should excel in effectiveness that which is done in any of these three centres."

At Yale the two Toronto men found a Department of Personnel Study and a Bureau of Appointments which keeps complete records of all aid given students, and co-operates with leading incoming graduates. In addition to making sure themselves that the student is qualified for any position, the Bureau provides facilities for prospective employers to interview the applicant also.

Scholarships are awarded only to needy students, awards of merit being given in other cases. Student part-time work is facilitated by excluding all business firms from dealing directly on the Yale campus.

WACE DESCRIBES GREEK CIVILIZATION

Racial Basis of Classical Greek Civilization Explained by Famed Archaeologist at Victoria

New theories on the racial basis of the classical Greek civilization were outlined and explained yesterday afternoon by Professor A. J. B. Wace, eminent Cambridge archaeologist, who spoke in Victoria College on "The Coming of the Greeks".

This was the second in the new series of Armstrong Lectures, established by a recent bequest to the college, and has nothing to do with the Royal Ontario Museum as erroneously stated in yesterday's Varsity.

Professor Wace traced the development of culture in Crete and Greece from the Neolithic period to the various stages of the Bronze Age. He proved definitely, contrary to accepted views, that the Achaeans, who dominated Greece in classical times, came into Greece between the Early and Middle Bronze Ages about 2000 B.C., and much before Homeric times. By reference to the type of ornamentation on vases, and other archaeological findings, he showed that there was a continuous line of development between these early invaders and the Greeks of the classical period, with no later alien influxes.

In the Greeks of the classical period, the strains of three definite civilizations can be traced, he said. In addition to the Achaeans, there were the original Neolithic inhabitants, and a Non-Aryan (Continued on Page 4)

Small Fee Admits Students To Conservatory Record Room

Do Varsity readers realize that "Madame Butterfly", "La Traviata" and the thunderous "Gottterdammerung" await their pleasure at the Toronto Conservatory of Music? For a nominal sum the recorded treasures of the masters may be played for one hour periods.

Varsity students, formerly admitted without charge on certain days, will now be obliged to pay a fee of one dollar a year or ten cents an hour. The reason for this is believed to be the increasing expense to the Conservatory caused by broken records.

The recording room is open each day except Saturdays and holidays from nine-thirty a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 2.30 to 5 p.m. For university students who are not members, the recording room is available on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Reservations may be made in advance.

VIC GRADUATE TALKS ON RENAISSANCE

Professor Bush of Harvard Deals with Renaissance as Phenomenon Covering Whole of Civilized Life Over Four Centuries

Victoria College's gift to American scholarship, Professor Bush of Harvard University, delivered the first of the eleventh annual series of Alexander lectures in Hart House Theatre yesterday afternoon. His subject was "Modern Theories of the Renaissance". The series continues for four days; this afternoon's subject will be on Continental Humanism, tomorrow he will talk on English Humanism and the final lecture will deal with Milton.

A capacity house, including many of his former professors, greeted this highly regarded graduate of the class of 1920, who was introduced by Principal Wallace of University College.

He dealt with the renaissance, not merely as an artistic movement but as a phenomenon covering the whole of civilized life over the course of three or four centuries. He showed how modern scholarship has dispelled or qualified many popular misconceptions concerning the renaissance. For instance, he said, the renaissance was not entirely neo-paganism revival, it had more (Continued on Page 4)

Commodities Such as Automobiles become Index to Social Wealth According to Speaker on Urban Problems

BUILDING DISCOURAGED

That increased taxation on real estate has resulted in commodities such as automobiles becoming the index to social position for the person in the town, rather than owning their own homes, was the opinion of Mr. Gathercole in his address to the Urban Problems Group on Municipal Finance last night.

The speaker emphasized the effect of increased taxation upon the building industry, which he pronounced to be considerably discouraged since higher rents are necessitated by any rise in taxes.

Asked his opinion regarding theories of the Single Tax proponents who views the group was already acquainted with, Mr. Gathercole stated that he was opposed to their scheme chiefly on the basis of its effects, which he outlined as follows: concentration of skyscrapers in congested areas in the centre of the city; the distribution of industries toward lower taxation areas, instead of appropriate situations; the inequity—wealthy people moving beyond the periphery of the municipality and shunting the burden on those less capable of paying; while, as the single taxers assert, the land remains fixed, its use does not and it is therefore impossible to assess it fairly

CAROLS BROADCAST FROM GREAT HALL

Pre-Holiday Atmosphere of University Described in First All-Canada Broadcast from Hart House

Many undergraduates who read this issue will probably be unaware that the Hart House Glee Club gave a coast-to-coast broadcast of carols from the Great Hall on Friday, 16th December. This was the first all-Canada broadcast from Hart House. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation announcer described the surroundings in the Great Hall. He explained that the Hall was full of men at lunch and that there was an end-of-term feeling in the air as everyone was going off for Christmas the following day. That the C.B.C. should have thought the Glee Club worthy of going on the air from Halifax to Victoria is a tribute to the work of the club and especially of its conductor, Dr. Charles Peaker.

The President of the university, who heard the broadcast and afterwards addressed the club, also pointed out that a broadcast of this kind was a great asset to the university as a whole inasmuch as it gave the outside world a first-hand view of university activities. It is hoped that this broadcast, which was heard at Ottawa and greatly appreciated by Major Gladstone Murray, General Manager of the C.B.C., will become an annual event.

He will speak on "Nuclear Structure", "The Scattering of Particles" and "Electron Focussing".

ORIENTAL PARTY INCREASES FUNDS FOR CHINESE AID

Co-operative Groups Formed for Eastern Relief in Almost Every College Centre by National Committee

The proceeds from the Oriental Party should provide about seven thousand meals for Chinese students, according to figures released by Mr. E. A. Macdonald, treasurer of the Far Eastern Student Relief Committee.

The committee is not confined to this campus but in almost every college centre across Canada there are co-operative groups. The appeal of these is co-ordinated by a National Committee of which the chairman is Professor Bruce Collier, of West China Union University, who is at present on furlough and working with Professor Wasteneys in the Department of Biochemistry. The national treasurer is Professor G. M. Wrong, and Miss Margaret Kinney is the secretary.

Last year over three hundred dollars was raised in Toronto, and almost eighteen hundred by Canadian students. These funds have been used in China to provide food, clothes, and books, to transport stranded students to inland (Continued on Page 4)

Caretaker Describes Conduct of Students

In the opinion of Alex Brown, general caretaker of the upstairs rooms in Hart House, the members on the whole are a pretty decent lot.

Alex, who has been employed in the House for nearly two years, admits that the boys have to be checked up occasionally; but the effects aren't lasting. He recalled that last winter the card room used to be packed with players from morning until night—so much so, in fact, that it was almost impossible to get it cleaned up. One day he told the boys that it was going to be raided soon. The news spread quickly, and in no time there was a complete evacuation. But this lasted only three days, however. When the boys got wind of the ruse, they came back stronger than ever.

Alex believes that the students are not using the upstairs facilities of Hart House nearly as much as they used to. The Music Room and two upper common rooms are practically empty this year as compared with former years.

BURSARY FOUNDED BY SCHOOL GRADS

The Board of Governors of the University of Toronto has accepted the offer of the graduates of 1923 in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering to establish a Bursary of the annual value of $150.00 a year, this Bursary to be used to assist a student in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering who, in addition to intellectual capacity, has ability in leadership and who is in financial need.

The fund will be administered by the Alumni Federation, and the hope is that it may be continued for five years. The award will be made by a committee which includes members of the class of 1923. The student who receives this Bursary will be one who has completed the second or third year in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering.

Fifth Annual Concert Sponsored by S.A.C. in Convocation Hall for Varsity Students

45 MUSICIANS

Tonight, Conductor Brock McElheran will lead the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra through its fifth annual concert in Convocation Hall.

Sponsored by the Students' Administrative Council for the benefit of the members of the student body and their friends; under the patronage of President and Mrs. Cody, Sir Ernest MacMillan, and Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Stewart, the orchestra is expected to perform before an audience of fifteen hundred.

Its first out-of-town performance was played to a packed house in the War Memorial Hall at the Ontario Agricultural College in Guelph on January 16th.

Conductor McElheran believes that tonight's performance will be "very much better indeed" because of last Monday's. "Usually the orchestra is jittery before a first performance, but last night it betrayed no nervousness whatever," he said.

Saved for tonight is the world premiere of "Pipes for Orchestration". This selection is a composition by Lou Applebaum, a third year student in the Faculty of Music. It was written and orchestrated especially for the University Symphony Orchestra, its theme (Continued on Page 4)

CLUB TO DISCUSS SURVEY OF JOBS

Members Hope to Obtain Information in Survey Concerning Problems of Student Employment

Plans for a survey of the nature and extent of employment of recent graduates of the university were adopted at a meeting of the Social Problems Club last night in the Women's Union. These plans will be discussed at a conference to be held in Kingston the week-end of Feb. 4th at which representatives of similar clubs from McGill, Queen's, O.A.C. and McMaster were to be present.

Members of the club expressed the hope that they might be able to bring original information concerning the problems of student employment more directly before the students not only of this but of other campuses. It is believed that no such systematic project has been adopted in this participation (Continued on Page 4)

RADIUM DONATED BY GILBERT LABINE

President H. J. Cody announces that Gilbert A. Labine of the Eldorado Mine has donated to the University of Toronto 200 milligrams of Radium Element and that this generous gift has been gratefully accepted by the Board of Governors of the university. Mr. Labine wishes this to be a memorial to his son, Leonard, and he has expressed a wish that it be used for the furtherance of scientific knowledge in such a manner and in such a place as may seem advisable to the Department of Medical Research under the direction of Sir Frederick Banting.

Varsity Swing Club Presents Lou Louis, Phyllis Marshall

The attention of all hep cats, jitterbugs and ordinary swingsters is called to the jam session at five in the Odd-fellows Temple, 229 College St., just west of Huron. The Varsity Swing Club is presenting Lou Louis and his band and the dusky songstress Phyllis Marshall.

Dick McDougall of CKCL is going to be the interlocutor (he's the chap who does such a grand job of bringing persons well known in swing circles before the mike for us) and it is expected that Dick will toss out questions dear to the heart of all rabid swing fans.

The band is going to give practical demonstrations of currently popular music, interpreting the different styles such as Bob Crosby and the Dixie Land band. Nor Sorley, the boy who beats it out on the piano in true swing form "a la Teddy Wilson", may be persuaded to play his specialty, "Blue Heaven".

According to George Carty, plans will be discussed regarding an extra special meeting which will take place in the very near future. The information cannot be given out now, he said, but he advised all swing fans to be on hand tonight.

The same slight admission is being charged as at the last meeting.

The Medical Service

Mr. Benson's article in Monday's Varsity, describing the medical service in Columbia University, makes us realize just how very inadequate is our own service. For several years the medical examination for men has been a cause for complaint among the male undergraduates, because they have not felt that the cursory examination had a value in comparison with the fee which is labelled for physical training and medical examination.

Last year 2,296 men were examined in the medical offices in Hart House, and of those only 19 were considered unfit for physical training. Of the women entering University College, 214 were examined and 36 were declared unfit for gymnasium and swimming requirements. Judging from these reports, there must either be a great difference in the type of examination given the women than is given the men, or at least there are greatly different standards set for P.T. for the sexes.

Among the women also, the intercutaneous tuberculin tests were made, and two cases of active tuberculosis were discovered; they are both receiving treatment now in sanatoria.

We are glad to see that President Cody has stated in his report that "The question of the health service is engaging the careful attention of the Governors, and committees are considering necessary improvements and enlargements. The tuberculin tests so successfully and helpfully applied to women students will I hope, in the near future be applied to all students in the University".

It is to be hoped that improvements will be forthcoming immediately, and that among them will be a rule making it compulsory for every student to be tested carefully for tuberculosis. There is little doubt that with a few exceptions the undergraduates would endorse such a plan, even though it might mean an increased fee.

The Traffic Toll

No spectacle of the horror in modern high tension living is more convincing than that of the toll taken yearly by traffic accidents. The traffic accident is rated as the most frequently, single cause of sudden death on the American continent; every newspaper and magazine has decreed it, and the highest heads of officialdom have concentrated on finding a remedy.

For over ten years safety campaigns of one form or another have been launched on the public, but only in the last few years have these been really effective. Former policies attempted to correct the situation by reforming the public mind. Brilliant magazine articles such as "... And Sudden Death" (Reader's Digest 1936) dwelt on the horrors of mangled corpses, maimed women, and screaming children. Tours were made of the schools to impress on the children the awful results of jay-walking and playing on the streets. Safety Clubs were formed. Glaring posters lined the highways exhorting the driver to care and courtesy. And still traffic tolls reached a new high.

Today a different policy is rendering tremendously improved results. For "sudden death" tactics there has been substituted a scientific approach to the problem. Obviously drivers themselves are as interested in preventing accidents as the safety leaguers. Authorities began to see that the problem was not so much with the public mind as with the public streets and highways. A new far-flung campaign of education, legislation, research, highway engineering and traffic training was initiated by the National Safety League. The most sensational advance has been made in engineering. Curves have been straightened out, hills smoothed down, level railway crossings bridged, "clover leaf" turns put in at intersections. Outstanding in this field is Mr. Norman Bell Geddes. He has recently designed a model town in which pedestrians walk exclusively on raised platforms at second story level, while traffic is restricted to street level, and all parking takes place not on the street but on the first floor of buildings. The aim is always to keep pedestrian and motorist as far apart as possible.

Engineering has succeeded where sensational propaganda failed. In the United States in 1937 39, 500 persons were killed in traffic accidents. In 1938 that number was reduced by 8,500. The National Safety Council and some two dozen other groups, substantially backed by the automotive industry, has accomplished this decrease by persistent effort. Canada's problem is similar on a smaller scale. It is the duty, not only of unofficial safety leagues, but of the government itself, to attack this ever-present problem.

A Toronto Graduate

The student body welcomes back one of the most renowned graduates of this university, Dr. Douglas Bush. Dr. Bush was graduated from University of Toronto in 1920 and studied at the University of Minnesota, finally accepting a professorship in English at Harvard University. His example is an inspiration to students who wish to pursue an academic career, and proves that the cultural field is always open to those with outstanding ability. "Dr. Bush," said Principal Wallace, yesterday in his introductory speech, "is the most brilliant man who has ever graduated from the Department of English in this university."

Mr. McCullagh suggests that the ideal candidate for public office is the small town hardware merchant who has proven his ability by making a success of his business. Judging by the recent Toronto crime wave, there must be many potential statesmen in the hardware business in this small town.

ART-MUSIC Drama

Symphony Orchestra

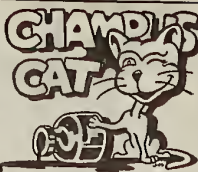

Playing a program made up of popular works, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra last night just managed to miss giving an outstanding performance.

Glinka's overture from his second opera, Ruslan and Ludmilla, was easily played with all the orchestra up to standard. This overture is always a popular success. Although the musical treatment is mainly in the Italian style, still it is very Russian in its colouring and, bringing as it does familiar Russian folk songs, has earned for its composer the reputation of being the pioneer of the modern Russian school.

The orchestra was at its best in the Romeo and Juliet of Tchaikowsky. This overture-fantasia was written during the happiest period of the composer's life. The orchestra seemed to enjoy this music completely and it was MacMillan as well as Tchaikowsky at his best.

The major disappointment of the evening was the orchestra's rendering of Debussy's Afternoon of a Faun. Due perhaps to the cold hall, the flutes and clarinets were flat and out of tune with the violins. This was doubly unfortunate as this number was the first on the broadcast period. The bassoon and the oboe solos were, however, bright spots. The new oboe has certainly improved this section of the wood-winds.

Although there are some who tend to over-criticize our orchestra it is interesting to remember that when Schubert's great symphony in C Major was first put in rehearsal, in 1828, the number was found to be too difficult for some of the players. This symphony, the major work on the program, although excellently played, still did not come up to the Tchaikowsky reading. It was just a trifle loosely tied together and lacked the necessary continuity.

NEW MEDICAL COURSE

Following its new policy of keeping abreast of the times, the University of Toronto is introducing a new medical course next year.

The course will be known as Medicine and English and is intended for those students who wish to enter the new profession of Medico-Literature. "Medico-Literature is the best field for many medical students," stated Doctor Unlauf Herringbein in a recent address to the Hall Porter. "In the past few years men have graduated from medicine and proceeded to amass small fortunes by writing such books as The Citadel, The Horse and Bugy Doctor, etc. What these men needed was a good bit of ground work in English," continued Herringbein, "and the new Medicine and English course will give them that and more."

Instead of a man studying medicine for six years and then stepping into a sinecure at ten dollars a month, the graduate of Medicine and English can write one best seller and retire. The curriculum is well balanced.

CURRICULUM

English Composition
English Literature
Anatomy
Welsh, German, Scots and Irish Dialects
Medical Jokes
Scenario Writing (detailed study of Young Doctor Kildare)

Naturally the course is six years long and the studies become more advanced every year. Instead of a thesis in the final year the examination applicant will write a novel.

An added attraction is the special employment bureau which will provide successful students with letters of introduction to publishers.

MEDS CONQUER VIC IN BASEBALL TILT

Yesterday in the big gym "Tiny" Reingold pitched the Jr. Meds baseball nine to a 7-0 whitewash of Jr. Vic. Rice, the Vic pitcher, settled down after an initial flurry of hits by the Doctors brought in three runs; but the Vic players were unable to provide the scoring punch.

Jr. Meds: Green, Jolly, Brenzel, Ginsberg, Kauffman, Milrod, Anglin, Goldenberg, Reingold.
Jr. Vic: Bridgman, Rutledge, Young, Lee, Kember, Nicholson, McArthur, Rice, Reeds.

The encore, the Scherzo from Mendelssohn's Summer Night Dream, was very delightfully played. It was the perfect encore for this program.

Dear Punchy, Pincly and Paunchy (that gets them all in):

You know when we started this column it was our idea to get people who are active in sport but who are not necessarily stars. The idea being that the shining stars of the university hit the headlines of this paper as often as Louis hit the punching bag when he was training for his bout with Der Schmeling. It would be easy for me to go out and get a guy like the overgrown Deer, known as The Moose and write about his exploits (eh Bill?), but no, perish the thought. We went out and got so insignificant a personality that it requires two of them to fill this space.

Seeing that for the common good (Meds At-Home) we have to be nice to the Doctors, we got hold of Cowboy Cash and Rolly-polly Wise, two of the medical representatives.

Our memory fails us in trying to remember when these two boys (Ed. Note: they started as boys) began their career in the medical faculty's teams, but we would bet anybody that between them they can equip a full basketball team with jerseys and trunks. In the last two years we do know that they both played basketball and volleyball and there was a rumour that Cash was going to play football for Meds, the team that went to the championship, but a corpse that was entered for study to the school (the corpse incidentally was of a U.C. footballer) put a quick finish to that idea.

It was the combination of these two athletes that brought Sr. Meds their wins in the volleyball league. Now that the season has progressed to basketball we find Wise playing for the Sr. Meds team, a sure bet for the championship contention, and Cowboy Cash managing the Meds III, also a cinch for the play-offs (that should jinx them both).

As their likes and dislikes, Cash, we know, is not of the outdoor type at all. His taste runs to a good book, an indoor game of golf or life, ping pong and the finer things in life. Wise isn't much of an outdoor man either. Between his fraternity and his girl friend and the odd bout with his texts he is very busy and has no time to devote to other things.

Tomorrow it is rumoured that the personality to be analyzed is going to be a girl so hang around Punchy and I'll see if you can get a story on one too.

TABLE TALK

Probably the majority of those attending this university have played table tennis at some time of their lives, and probably the majority also play several times a week at one of the various tables about the campus. This gentle but invigorating sport is rapidly becoming one of the better obsessions among those proceeding to a degree at this institution.

The idly curious might be interested to know that the international rules call for a table 9 x 5 feet standing 2 feet 6 inches high with a net 6 and 3/4 inches over the running across the centre of the court and projecting 6 and 3/4 inches over the edge at both sides (so you can't sneak angle shots around the net). The ball weighs between 2.27ths and 2.25ths of an ounce, but there are no limitations to size, shape or material of the battledore. Which means that the guy who refused to admit the legality of the game which you won using a French text, hasn't got a leg to stand on. Most use the conventional bat with pebbled rubber surfaces. All this is according to the 1926 ruling when the International Table Tennis Federation, which speaks officially for the game throughout the world, made its most recent revision of the rules.

The game originated as an indoor version of its prototype, lawn tennis, about the latter part of the 19th century, and reached a peak of success around the turn of the century following which, because of the fact that it was confined to the home, it died out somewhat (probably on account of the trouble it took to clear the Victorian dining tables of sterling, Sheffield and bottled ships every time you wanted to trim the bustle off your Aunt Agatha). However, in 1910 or thereabouts, the central Europeans started to take up the game with a vengeance. Austria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia notably, were the countries involved. On account of we don't take cultural geography till next year, the present writer is unable to explain this as a natural outgrowth of the Versailles Treaty. But there they were, and still are, as a matter of fact, the world's finest when it comes to buffing the onalestest spheroid.

Sensing the importance of this, somebody organized the International Table Tennis Federation which now includes 28 countries, and proceeded to hold world's championships every year since 1926 in a different country, designated each year by the Federation. Last year at the Empress Stadium in London, Eng., 18,000 spectators watched Vana (yeah that's his only name) from Czechoslovakia, smash his way through to the world's singles championship. Outstanding player of all time, however, is Barna (his only name, too), from Hungary, who held the world's singles championship for five years in a row, and was a member of the winning world's doubles team for nine years. Barna has held every open title in the world. From which point we proceed to the little known fact about the greatest known person we have heard of for quite a time, which is . . . that Fred Perry, tennis champ, represented England in 1929 for table-tennis, and took the world's championship. Next year the world's championship will be held at Cairo, Egypt, March 16 . . . why not take it in on your visit to the tomb?

Sol Schiff is the big gun in U.S. table-tennis. Third ranking world's player, he holds the U.S. national title and also incidentally cleaned up at the C.N.E. this year when he took the men's singles and, teamed with Ruth Brewer, copped the mixed doubles. None of the Canadians had a look-in at the Ex. The entries for the Canadian event have grown from 70 to 200 in three years, under the hands of Charlie Burnside, from the Toronto Table Tennis Club, who looks after the affair each year. Fifty per cent of the entries were from the U.S.

Table tennis hit the U.S. in 1928 and Canada joined up with the I.T.T.F. in 1935. Most of the early activity was in Quebec but it is all over the place now with addicts numbering in millions. The local club was started in 1929 by Burnside and has now 100 members. It is estimated that there are about 5,000 regular players in the city. Hader, from Hungary, is the provincial men's singles champ, with Burnside runner-up. The Toronto club is holding its annual tourney Jan. 19, 20 and 21. It's open to the public with entries closing tonight, so if you've got anything on the celluloid, drop in . . . you may be a budding Barna.

Campus enthusiasts have plenty of opportunity to develop their style, since there is a table in almost every college, fraternity and residence. Hart House has two for undergraduates (you have to sign for them) and the daddies of them all is the weather-beaten junior common room table at U.C. which is in use all the time. . . a fact you become increasingly aware of every time you go in with a pal to work off a Hart House meal. Championship tournaments are being held all the time; intramural (which is just starting with 84 players from 11 faculties signed up), inter-fraternity, and residence. U.C. men's residence have some ace, Jarvis being quite spectacular.

When you get to the point where you are placing them on the table from 15 feet behind your serving line, you can leave for the pyramids any time you feel like it. As for the rest of us, the most exercise we get from the game is crawling under chairs and radiators to retrieve the ball.

SKI TRAILS

Celuis Skavaas, famous Norwegian, born skier, has been obtained as chief instructor at the Varsity Ski Club. He is to be available at the North Yonge Street headquarters of the club every Sunday.

Skavaas has held the Ontario Combined ski title, and has skied with Birgerud, world's champion, in Norway. His specialties are jumping and cross-country running.

Tomorrow there will again be ski movies shown in Room 43 Physics Building, at five o'clock. The film will feature Hans Schneider, Austrian skiing expert, who recently had to curtail his skiing activities due to a short sojourn in a Nazi jail.

The Varsity ladies' interfaculty meet will be held on the club's grounds on January 28. A team will be chosen to represent the university at the intercollegiate meet at St. Sauveur, Quebec.

By Morg Conlin

When the SOS takes up the cudgels on our behalf, it's very gratifying and we can look for results any time now, n'est-ce pas? It's nice to know that the men at Varsity realize how fortunate they are in having such facilities as those at Hart House, and appreciate the handicap under which the coeds are trying to carry on some competitive sport. While the "social" angle has its points it is probably a debatable point—from what we have heard the average member of Hart House doesn't make any particular connections or new acquaintances by virtue of his Hart House associations. However, this is just what we hear, and it's all very general. By the way, this is all apropos of the thought-provoking SOS of yesterday's issue.

Someone suggested we talk about skating today, but we vaguely recall having discussed various aspects of this fascinating pastime in yesterday's rave. However the week-enders at Limberlost were very enthusiastic about skating condition on Lake Simcoe, and the hockey fiends had a field day. If that's too ambiguous just let it go. At the stadium the figure skating class was cutting up again yesterday, and having a wonderful time. Some of you beginners are still a bit self-conscious about the gallery problem, but if you arrive early on Tuesday and Thursday you can have a fair amount of privacy while you practise.

Over the week-end our co-ed skiers stole the limelight in various places. Up at Limberlost, Jean McKenzie, former U.C. star, impressed those in the know, while another U.C. girl, Patsy McLaren, didn't come off too badly in the women's downhill race at Summit. Punch Gable, St. Hilda's, placed second in this event. Both these girls should place on our intercollegiate team. Time will tell.

WITH PUCK AND STICK

Showing superior weight and speed, and a well balanced attack, Sr. Meds trounced U.C. II in an interfaculty hockey fixture yesterday afternoon in Varsity Arena.

Held in check for the first half of the game, Sr. Meds were limited to two counters. But with their weight beginning to show, and their opponents tiring, the Meds forwards began to click and rammed home four quick goals past Charlie Fowler in the U.C. nets, and finished on the long end of a 6-0 score.

U.C., in their turn, had plenty of opportunities, but through the great work of O'Brien in the Doctors' nets and their own erratic play close in, failed to score.

Wasylenko was the spearhead of the Meds' attacks, scoring twice and coming close on other occasions. Lindsey, White, McLure and Warren accounted for the remaining goals.

U.C. II: Fowler, Meen, Todds, Nicol, Foulds, Tisdale, Johnston, Wilinsky, Nichol.

Sr. Meds: O'Brien, Stephens, White, Dinne, Lindsey, Wasylenko, Downing, McLure, Warren.

BASKETBALL

Forestry basketballers defeated the Emmanuel cagers 21 to 9 in the upper gymnasium yesterday afternoon. The game was one of those ordinary drab affairs with never an exhibition of real basketball played. Both teams lacked experience and coaching and a sloppily played game was the result. Forestry took an early lead which they held throughout the entire contest. This lead was established by the clever Ballantyne, who amassed twelve points for his team. He was aided ably by Chalk and Day. Rowlands was good for the losers, scoring 8 out of the 9 points.
Emmanuel: Rowlands 8, Rowland 1, Smith, Elmslie, Rivers, Brydon.
Forestry: Ballantyne 12, Hall 2, Chalk 3, Mullin 2, Dag 2, Shand, Kirk, Dorland, Bruce, Grinnell.

WE WRITE AS WE PLEASE

By Saul Zuker
Mostly by Joe College
The "We write as we please" idea seems to have caught on around the campus and we have received several contributions from people who felt they had definite views to express. These are welcome and we'd like more, but unfortunately those who sent their articles in to date have wished to have their names withheld. Since it is one of the rules of the column that articles must have a byline we are unable to print them. If, however, you wish to express your view and still remain anonymous say so in your letter but sign your name. One of the writers, who has an important post on The Varsity, but who signs himself "Joe College" (we know his name but can readily understand why he wants it withheld) came through with an article in which he expressed his fear that co-eds are becoming less popular. Says Joe, "A survey has shown that knitting is becoming more popular among the co-eds than it has ever been before. This in the social scene is indicative of being drastically wrong, and the only conclusion which can be reached is that co-eds aren't having enough dates to keep their minds occupied and their spare time full."

He then proceeds to analyse what he thinks is the cause of the trouble. "It is a well-known fact that some of the girls in this institution have so many dates that they can't keep track of them, or at least that is the only way of accounting for the fact that they are always standing somebody up. Most of these over-popular girls (most of them, not all) are graduates from here as spoiled conceited brats, and it takes years for their mothers to bring them to earth again.
"Then some of the girls just stay in and knit. They don't get asked out, then they get cynical, and talk about careers, and being men-haters, with the result that when they get their big break in the social world they are bitter and just don't fit in with romance. There may be quite a bit of truth in Mr. Joe's analysis, though we suspect that he was once "stood up" at a date and hasn't got over it yet and as a result spends his time lamenting over the imperfections of woman-kind. Furthermore, we believe that the worthy gentleman is in for a verbal spanking at the hands of our female readers (if any).
In his advice to girls on how they can remedy the situation we believe Joe College outdoes anything Dorothy Dix has ever done. Writes Joe—
"So... in the first place girls, have a good time when you go out. Even though the party you are at bores you to tears, keep up a smiling countenance, and be lots of fun. When you get an invitation to go some place, let on that you are delighted, and if you really don't want to go, for goodness sake make your excuse sound plausible. Don't say that you have to study, when everybody knows you never let study interfere with anything you want to do. It flatters a man to let him know that he is giving you a delightful time. And a flattered man is happy, and will think you are swell, and probably tell his friends what a peach you are.
"Then when you are dancing don't keep looking over his shoulder all the time to see who else is present, and what possibilities there are for exchanges. When he talks to you, be fascinated. . . . for again he will be flattered. And when you talk, for goodness sake don't talk about the faults of the other men with whom you have had dates. . . . it frightens him immediately.
"Make him perform the little gallantries. Don't be too independent, but be willing to have him guide you across the street. He will probably be delighted to assist you out of the car, and open all the doors for you. If the picture-show is extremely horrible, shudder a little, or scream a little, not too loudly though, and don't be afraid sort of to lean over him for protection.
"If your boy-friend is shy, never embarrass him, but make him feel like a big brave man. If he's conceited, he will probably admire you if you take him down a little. If he's tight, it won't hurt him to spend a little, but it's always bad policy to use a man for a means to get around to parties and

ACCORDING TO A SURVEY made by the University of Minnesota, college students have no reason to fear the cold cruel world. . . . The survey shows that college graduates may expect to be making between $2,000 and $3,000 annually eight years after commencement, and they do not include counterfeiting. . . . All we can say about this interesting bit of information is OH YEAH?

SOME GOLFERS are really terrific. . . . Now take for instance the case of W. A. Alexander, Georgia Tech's football coach who completed a round of golf on the East-Lake course, and handed in an incredible looking score card. . . . His score for the seventeenth hole was marked zero. . . . Now a hole in zero is no mean feat, especially for a football coach, but he finally came through and explained the phenomenon. . . . It seems that he has a handicap which permits him to deduct a stroke on every hole. . . . and guess what, kiddies. . . . He made a hole in one! WELL. . . . AND STILL LIFE GOES ON!
AT THE RECENT Syracuse-Cornell football game, it seems that the weather was quite tepid, and some statistical-minded gentleman started estimating the refreshments used by the spectators. . . . We can't figure out why these fellows work so hard at this sort of thing, but anyhow he figured out that the sweltering spectators tossed off 2,920 bottles of coke. . . . they munched 1,440 candy bars. . . . and they swallowed no less than an entire boatload of red-hot. . . . Why a sane person should spend his time counting the number of chocolate bars eaten is more than we can figure out. . . . If we can get our hands on this fellow, so help us we'll drown him in the three gallons of mustard that he estimated was used at the game. . . .

NOTES OFF THE ELBOW. . . . Wycliffe students really go in for debating. . . . They hold debates once a week and the topics they choose are unusual to say the least. . . . This week, the topic will no doubt create much comment. . . . The title is "Resolved that a cow is a greater asset to a young minister in a country parish than a wife". . . . The U. of Southern California has established a new course to teach women their legal rights under the laws of the state. . . . Beginning next fall, the U. of Michigan will inaugurate the tutorial system modelled on the Oxford plan. . . . A Columbia University cloakroom attendant who had been employed by the university for 28 years left that institution $500 in her will. . . . One of the college dailies tells the story of the fair co-ed who declared that lips that touched liquor would never touch hers. And after she graduated she taught school for years and years and years and years. . . .

WACE DESCRIBES GREEK CIVILIZATION

race of the Early Bronze Age similar to the Cretans. While he believed there was no Cretan colonization of Greece, the cultural influence of this island's civilization was felt in the Late Bronze Age (about 1600 B.C.) through pirating operations of the Greeks themselves.

Crete held the same lure for Greece in this period as China held for European seafaring powers at the end of the seventeenth century, A.D., he said. The early inhabitants of Greece, many of whom were sailors, used to plunder Crete for slaves and valuable articles such as pottery. For this reason some relics of the Cretan civilization are now found in Greece.

Contrary to popular scholarly opinion, Dr. Wace believes that the works that go under the name of Homer are actually the works of one man, and not of a group of minstrels. Archaeological evidence shows that Homer wrote at a time when the Achaean Greeks had already been in Greece about 1000 years. Even before the time of Homer there must have been many writers whose works have perished, he said.

The speaker traced the development of Greek culture as revealed in its pottery and vase, with the aid of illustrations. "Restraint and Thought" together with "dignity in design" are the chief characteristics found in Grecian pottery and ornamentation, he said. All these things show the same clarity of thought and form for which Greek literature and philosophy of the later classical period are noted.

Frank will discuss what the church can do in facing this issue.

Mr. Frank is a graduate of Trinity College and before going to his present church in downtown Toronto he served with the famous Dick Sheppard at St. Martin-in-the-Field in London. His extensive experience with those disinherited by our present social and economic system well qualifies him to treat the above topic.

being based on the composer's musical setting for McCrae's In Flanders Fields.

The Bach selections to be played are orchestration by the conductor for this occasion of three of that famous composer's lesser known works.

The "Thousand and One Nights" is one of Johann Strauss' prettiest though least played waltzes.

After his own performance in Massey Hall last night, Sir Ernest MacMillan dropped in at the rehearsal at Convocation Hall, and seemed very much pleased with what he saw and heard.

As for the conductor himself, Brock McIlheran says, "The rehearsal went extremely well, and I am looking forward to the performance."

The orchestra itself is composed of forty-five members, fifteen of whom are girls. The rising young conductor is a third-year student at University College. He is, himself, a pianist, and began to take lessons when he was nine years old.

After three years he became "dead set against it, and for another three years "never played a note". At the end of that time he regained interest in music, and took lessons from Reginald Golden.

VIC GRADUATE TALKS ON RENAISSANCE

found effects on Christianity and indeed derived a great deal from religion. He also showed that the renaissance did not originate in Italy in the fourteenth century in all its aspects. He showed that writers have exploded the myth which attributes the Renaissance to the influx of Greeks into Italy in 1453 and to their works. Some of the Renaissance beginnings can be found in France in the twelfth century as in the romances and poetry and cultural traditions built up in places like Chartres.

Professor Bush pointed out the impossibility of drawing a true picture of the early twentieth century in the United States from contemporary literature. It would be even more difficult to get a concise definition of a civilization like the Renaissance which extended over many centuries and lasted for hundreds of years.

He demonstrated that the renaissance was marked by the development of individualism as in men like Montaigne who in his "study of himself" was a "reservoir of classic spirit". Yet on the other hand, he said in conclusion, it is "much too simple and exclusive" to attribute the renaissance to "rebellious individualism".

SCHOOLMEN SAY HOME-MADE RADIO PRACTICAL HOBBY

Campus Radio Amateurs Take

HAMS ALSO FOUND AT U.C.

Among the many hobbies pursued by undergraduates is the extremely popular one concerning amateur radio. The radio amateurs, or "hams" as they are popularly known, are found mostly in School, although there are two in U.C. Electrical Engineering attracts the larger number of Hams, with some in Engineering Physics and Chemical Engineering.

Home-built apparatus is used by most fellows, but pride is taken in having the station look like a professional job. Moderately inexpensive equipment and low power, is the usual preference.

While most students have vaguely heard of these amateurs, very few have any good idea as to the purpose or usefulness of their procedure. According to authorities on the subject amateur radio is primarily a hobby, and one with high ideals, but it serves a

SPEAKER TO DISCUSS JEWS IN GERMANY

Hoffman will Deal with the Problem of Persecution at Convocation Hall Service

Dr. Conrad Hoffmann will deliver an address in Convocation Hall this Sunday on the significance of the persecution of the Jews in Germany. Dr. Hoffmann, who is secretary of the Board of National Missions in charge of Jewish work, as well as director of the International Missionary Council's Committee on the Christian's Approach to the Jews, will appear in Toronto under the auspices of the Student Christian Movement.

Dr. Hoffmann, who is a Lutheran layman, has been connected with the Y.M.C.A., and was in charge of that body's committee looking after the Allied prisoners of war in Germany until 1919. As director of the Missionary Council's Committee he has visited Europe for at least four months out of every year, and has accumulated a great deal of information on European affairs in general, as well as on the particular problem of anti-Semitism.

ST. MIKE'S SPONSOR FIRST ANNUAL AT-HOME

St. Michael's College will hold its first annual At-Home in eighty-eight years in Hart House on Friday, January 27th.

The committee in charge of arrangements have secured Mel Hammill's orchestra for the event. Dancing will take place in the gymnasium, which will be decorated in the college colours, the double blue. Special features are being planned and already the services of guest artists have been engaged for the evening.

As no such event as a college ball has ever been held before by St. Michael's, large numbers of graduates have expressed their intention of being present. This occasion will provide an opportunity for not only the men of St. Michael's College to return to their Alma Mater and meet old college friends, but will bring together also the graduates of the affiliated sister colleges for Catholic women students, Loretto and St. Joseph's; students of the Institute of Medieval Studies; representatives from other Basilian schools, such as St. Michael's College Preparatory School, Toronto; Assumption College, Sandwich, Ont.; St. Thomas More College, Saskatoon; Aquinas Institute, Rochester, N.Y., as well as official guests from various Arts colleges and faculties of the university.

"Resolved that in the Event of War, Canada Should Secede from the British Empire" to be Supported by Visitors

IN FRENCH AND ENGLISH

It was revealed yesterday afternoon by the officials of the U.C. Parliament that a special session of the House would be held this coming Friday afternoon instead of the customary Thursday afternoon meeting. The reason for this unusual departure is the impending visit of two debaters from Laval University in Quebec City to the Parliament to debate on the affirmative of the resolution, "Resolved that in the event of war, Canada should secede from the British Empire."

The affirmative debaters will be Raymond Lasage, speaking in English, and Jacques Flynn, speaking in French. Upholding the negative will be Irving Sussman speaking in English, and Walter Tovell, in French.

Irving Sussman is a fourth year man and since his college life began he has been actively interested in the Parliamentary Club. He is by no means a novice, and has debated quite often—most particularly during the last two years.

Walter Tovell, a fourth year student, is debating for his first time in the college. However, he did speak once in French with a U.C.-Osgoode team against Laval in a debate about a year ago.

YEAR BOOK PASSES ALL PREDECESSORS

Torontonensis Editor-in-Chief Expects No Radical Innovations in Current Edition

Torontonensis, the university year-book, is taking shape and its editors hope to shatter all previous standards of excellence with this season's edition. John Henry, editor-in-chief, declared that the publication would not be radically altered over last year but that certain changes in presentation of material would increase its interest and general attractiveness. He referred particularly to the confusion which formerly existed in the biography section and stated that it had been eliminated.

"The staff," said Henry, "is formed from representatives of every college and faculty on the campus. Co-operation has been good and the biography section is now completed; the organization section is well under way."

"Torontonensis is published by the S.A.C.," he continued, "and all members of the graduating class who have paid their S.A.C. fee get a free copy—a fact which some people don't seem to realize."

COURT ROUTINES FULLY MIMICKED FOR LAW COURSE

All Contemporary Hierarchy Represented by Students who Play the Parts of True Lawyers in All Seriousness

CALL PERJURED WITNESSES

Complete in all details, the Moot Court of the Law course plays a large part in the practical training of budding lawyers at the university. All the hierarchy of contemporary systems is present in the persons of justices, ushers, process servers, counsel, magistrates; together with writs, subpoenas and judgments.

Actual proceedings as in actual courts are followed in minute detail. Wigs, tabs and gowns are ever present, to give the atmosphere; while perjured witnesses are called to present facts which never coincide; this device is also to give a measure of atmosphere, transcending the classroom into a court.

Legal recruits, those of the first year, are allowed to defend wrongdoers under sections of the criminal code; such as the picking of strawberries out of season, or shooting food accidentally. The duty of these freshmen is to think up as plausible an argument as possible, the only difficulty being that each side brings up surprise witnesses introducing facts continually, which had not been contemplated when the case was made up.

UNION TO DISCUSS HOLY COMMUNION

"The Church and the Sacrament of Holy Communion" will be the subject under discussion by the Theological College Union this evening at eight o'clock in Knox College.

Papers will be presented by Percy Ferguson of Knox College and Blake Wood of Wycliff. Rev. R. S. Rayson, lecturer in Trinity College, will be the critic and discussion leader.

The subject to be discussed at the meeting is extremely controversial, since the major divisions of the church centre in the interpretation given the Holy Communion. Frank acknowledges the denominational beliefs is expected.

The Theological College Union of the Student Christian Movement is composed of members of the four theological colleges on the campus—Knox, Trinity, Wycliff and Emmanuel.

Cow or Wife? Wycliffe Debate

Rather than a member of the bovine species, Wycliffe debaters decided yesterday afternoon that a wife was the best asset for a young parish minister. At the same meeting, affirmative approval was given to the preliminary debate, resolved that the skunk should be protected by law.

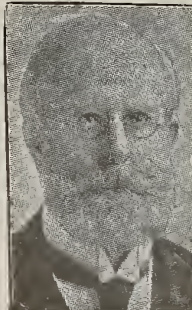

When he spoke in opposition to the resolution "that a cow is a greater asset to a young minister in a country parish than a wife", T. A. Wilkinson, leader of the negative, gave an esthetic contrast between cow and wife. On one hand was an animal endowed with running matty eyes, a doubtful voice for choir activities, and a peculiar smell on hot June days. On the other, was a wife with a host of pleasant possibilities. The question of a bishop's visit was raised. Should the young preacher say, "Come to the barn to see my cow", or "Come to the house for a meal and meet my wife?"

Doug Patterson for the affirmative quoted an obscure author, "God's jolly cafeteria has four legs and a tail." He thought the minister's prime duty was to the community and to give freely of milk products to the needy was the path to be followed. Doug Noel claimed that not from the wife should come his inspiration but from the "Great Book".

BOARD TO ACCEPT MEMORIAL FUND

$500 Annual Loan Fund Proposed by Mrs. Wm. Crocker to be Accepted for Use of Engineers

According to President H. J. Cody a gift made by Mrs. William Crocker has been accepted with gratitude by the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto. Mrs. Crocker wishes to contribute $500.00 per annum to establish the James W. Crocker Memorial Loan Fund in memory of her son, James W. Crocker, a graduate of the university in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering who lost his life in an accident at the Lamake Mines last summer.

Mrs. Crocker prefers that loans from this fund be made to students in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering but has not limited the operation of the fund to that faculty.

The administration of this fund is to be in the hands of the President of the university through the Council of the Faculty of Applied Science and the terms may be varied from time to time as the President may direct.

'HOLIDAY' TICKETS ARE IN DEMAND

Tickets for the University Drama Committee production, "Holiday", are selling fast, according to Willard Thomson, the stage. The production is to be staged February 9-11.

This is the comedy from which the currently popular moving picture of the same name is adapted. Of the picture Mr. Thomson says, "It is definitely a Hollywood version and is extremely well done. Naturally we cannot put the same embellishments on it as they did. However, anyone who has seen and enjoyed the movie will find additional interest in the play, with actors whom they know in these roles."

The play this year has a greater representation from different colleges than any previous production on the campus, and the director believes this a sign of interest in the centralization of drama at the U. of T.

The sets which are being used for the show are quite simple. All the sound effects are being handled by Bill Shearer of S.P.S.

Lieutenant-Governor May Play Host to Royal Party in the Great Hall. Warden has Heard Nothing of Suggestion

DECISION NOT FINAL

It is quite possible that Hart House will be the scene of the luncheon at which the lieutenant-governor will play host to the King and Queen this May.

A special committee to make arrangements for the royal visit met yesterday at Queen's Park. The meeting, presided over by Lieutenant-Governor Matthews, was attended by Mayor Day, Mr. Nixon and Brig. R. O. Alexander. "So far it has not been definitely decided where the luncheon for the royal party will be held," Mr. Nixon stated, "but I may say that Hart House has been prominently mentioned. One thing is certain; a place will have to be chosen that can provide adequate accommodation."

Mr. J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, had heard nothing of any such suggestion. Any plans for the King to have luncheon in Hart House were quite news to him.

Mr. Bickersteth recalled the last visit of royalty to the House. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of Kent spent a day there in 1927. The Prince of Wales had been there on two occasions previously—the year following the war and in 1924.

FRANK DISCUSSES LONE UNEMPLOYED

Plight of Transients Shown by Down-Town Minister at S.C.M. Series

Speaking on "The Church and Single Unemployed Men", the Rev. John Frank deplored the plight of the transients who have become such a problem to welfare societies. Just who should care for the men was the problem presented by the speaker, in the S.C.M. series yesterday.

Mr. Frank, rector of Holy Trinity Church, pointed out that the city by-law can provide only two meals and one night's shelter before they are put on the road again. There are thirty men now imprisoned by the Ontario Vagrancy Act. Any attempts for the transients to band together proved unsuccessful, until Holy Trinity Church was offered for shelter. Among the 100

NEWMAN CLUB PLANS REPRESENTATIVE MEETING

One of the most representative meetings of the year is being arranged for Newman Club members this Sunday when the first Faculty Gathering of 1939 will take place.

On this occasion all the Catholic students at the university are invited to attend Mass at the club chapel at ten o'clock, followed by addresses which will be given by qualified graduates of all faculties.

Law students will be addressed by Mr. L. A. Landriau, K.C.; S.P.S. will hear Mr. John Keenan of the Canadian General Electric Co.; Pharmacy, Mr. Keith McLaughlin of the Upjohn Pharmaceutical Co.; Medicine, the Rev. W. T. Davis, D.D., vice-president of St. Augustine's Seminary; Dentistry, Dr. T. A. Morgan of the Academy of Dentistry; and the Arts students and those at O.C.E. will be addressed by Dr. Kertz, who is expected to choose the "Anschluss" as her subject.

Look At Toronto

Not long ago the citizens of the provincial capital elected a council—one mayor, four controllers and eighteen aldermen—to administer the affairs of their city.

Whether the 1939 Council can be relied upon to serve the best interests of the municipality is the question that will be debated at Hart House next Wednesday evening. Only two undergraduate members have been put on the paper for this debate so that more short speeches may be heard from the floor.

It is assumed that the debate will focus on questions of legislative enterprise and administrative efficiency rather than on desirable changes in the established governmental machinery as prescribed by the Municipal Government Act.

In order to participate effectively in this debate, members will be required to acquaint themselves with facts which at present are not common knowledge on the campus. For example, the professional and political records of the members of the newly elected council deserve critical scrutiny. The fiscal policies of past administrations of this and other cities, in Canada and elsewhere, may be compared with illuminating results.

Further, the executive efficiency of past Boards of Control, on which some of the 1939 controllers have sat, may be investigated by reference to the Minutes of the Council. These can be inspected at the office of the City Clerk in the City Hall.

The more important pre-election speeches of the candidates, with criticisms thereof, may be examined in the files of Toronto's daily newspapers (there are five printed in passable English). Other critical comment has appeared in other periodicals, in pamphlets and on election posters.

Let the foregoing might suggest a hypercritical approach to the subject, the fair-minded investigator should be warned not to be shocked unduly if he discovers evidence that appears to be favourable to the administration; nor should he disregard any genuine signs of a brighter future. Possibly, there is something to be said on both sides.

The Varsity hereby commends the Debates Committee on its choice of a concrete and truly debatable subject, which should arouse interest both on the campus and on Bay Street. For one evening, undergraduates may well turn their attention from international issues, that are largely beyond their control, to municipal problems in the solution of which their ideas might play some part.

The Symphony Orchestra

Even those with very little knowledge of music were thrilled at the work of the University Symphony Orchestra in Convocation Hall last night, when they realized that the members were all students in the University of Toronto, the director was a student and the son of the principal of Wycliff College, and that the world premiere of "Piece for Orchestra" was written by an outstanding student in the faculty of music.

It was encouraging to find that the orchestra was given a splendid ovation by the fair-sized audience (a considerable increase over last year), and that Brook McElheran was given what might be termed a "big hand". The symphony orchestra is another one of those activities which embraces the whole University, and for that reason should be encouraged by every student who has the interest of the U. of T. at heart.

The Varsity, of course, was especially interested, because both McElheran and Applebaum are members of the staff, and Herbert Cowan, violinist, is A.M. and D. editor.

High Pressure Advertising

The writer noticed a sign in a Queen St. store window last April which said "Giving Up Business, Goodbye Queen St." In June it was still there, and we wondered at the advertising technique, which allowed the owners to be so consistent. In August the sign was still the same, and in October, no change had been made.

Now, however, although under the same management, and still running tremendous record-smashing sales of clothing, and other drygoods merchandise, the window-signs have been changed, so perhaps Queen St. isn't thought so bad after all.

Being interested in the little farce, the writer dropped into the store and asked about the matter. The clerk jokingly replied that a new lease for ninety-nine years had just been issued, but that wouldn't affect the bona fide sales, six days a week.

If one prices the goods, they will be found to be as expensive, if not more so, than almost any other store in the city. Business methods are such that clerks offer to cut prices as soon as they feel that the patient is not going to buy. And yet apparently they do a big business. The reason: men are still gullible, and although they know the difference between a dollar and two dollars, they don't know the difference between a dollar pair of gloves and a two dollar pair.

The Chancellor's Birthday

There is probably no citizen in Canada today of whom we are more proud than Sir William Mulock, who today celebrates his ninety-fifth birthday. Sir William, long active in Canadian public life, has recently seen his grandson "Bill" Mulock, appointed postmaster-general to fill the position which he held back when the history of Canada was very young. We are sure that we speak for the undergraduates of the University when we wish the Chancellor the best of health for many years to come.

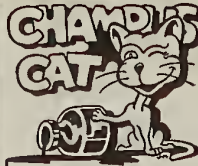

University Symphony

The cynics who believe that any amateur orchestra is ipso facto a weak one were very competently answered by the sparkling concert given by the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra at Convocation Hall last night. It is a tribute to the orchestra and to the conductor that they were able to achieve so much in spite of the very obvious handicaps under which they must have worked.

The orchestra, and the conductor, Brook McElheran, were at their best in the main selection of the program, the rarely-heard "Bear" Symphony (No. 82 in C Major) by Haydn. It had all the vivacity and the charm which so strongly characterizes Haydn. Except for one weak spot in the finale, the reading of this symphony was almost flawless.

But the orchestra was not up to scratch in Lou Applebaum's Piece for Orchestra. Perhaps it was the fact that this certainly modern piece was a little bit alien in a strictly classical atmosphere, or it may be that the composer's youthful exuberance made him ignore the limitations of any musician's technical ability—but whatever it was, the Piece for Orchestra was not as well presented as the rest of the program.

The piece itself is highly interesting. Simple and charming so far as the material and development are concerned, it is completely modern in its approach. The conductor sees the influence of Sibelius, this newspaper's Art, Music and Drama editor detects Tchaikowsky and this writer finds a hint of Ravel and Coleridge-Taylor, so the piece is obviously

HALL PORTER UNCROWNED KING OF IRELAND

Agents of Little Republic Exhort One-Time Monarch to Reoccupy Throne and Oust the Billy-Boys of Ballymorra

AWAY WID YER BLARNEY!

Dublin, Eire, May 24 (Havast)—Crowds surged around the city square here today protesting with placards and noise-makers, the iron rule of Sean O'Wiregarters and demanding the return of Olaf O'Toole, erstwhile ruler, and present Hall Porter of Hart House.

Armed with shellalloys the crowd cornered O'Wiregarters and his two lieutenants Foley and O'Rourke and beat them to a pulp singing "It's little Mary Cassidy's the cause of all me misery". The Cassidy woman, according to local police, has been picked up by the police several times before on similar charges.

The new Provisional Irish Government have had a regent appointed until the Hall Porter arrives in Dublin for the coronation.

Toronto, Can., May 24 (Reuter) 2:00 p.m.—"Yes," admitted the Hall Porter to a surprised reporter, "O' is the uncrowned king of Ireland, bedad an' oi!"

According to the Hall Porter, there is a grave doubt as to whether he will accept the crown of the old kingdom. In the meantime all attention has been suddenly focussed on the University Symphony Orchestra which, assembled in Convocation Hall last night, stopped in the middle of a Bach fugue and broke into "Did Your Mother Come from Oireland". Like magic shamrocks suddenly appeared at the window and a cheer broke out from the St. Michael's section. The flute section rose as one man and skipped down the aisles playing merrily while a man named McGillicuddy was ejected for doing a jig.

In the meantime all Europe tensely awaits the outcome of the dramatic discovery of the missing king. Will "Good King" Olaf return to the Emerald Isle to rule his people? Will he leave Hart House? Will the billy-boys be driven from Ballymorra? Will L'I Abner duck in time? Not even the Shadow knows!

original in all respects.

For the rest of the program, it was competently handled. Special mention should go to Mr. McElheran for his orchestration of the three Bach selections and to the concert master for his well-executed obbligati.

KNOXMEN SCORE DECISIVE VICTORY OVER PHARMACY

Presbyterians Even Up Race
by 16-1 Victory in Brilliant Tussle with Pharmacy

The Knox baseballers made it two for two yesterday afternoon in the big gym by virtue of a 16-1 victory over Pharmacy. This marked the second straight time the Presbyterian pounders have slugged out a total of 16 runs in four innings.

But there was another equally potent factor in the Knox win. That was pitcher Bert Dutcher. Something nearing a record was established when Bert himself was responsible for the first eleven outs. Not only that but said Mr. Dutcher slammed out three heavy hits.

The game was fairly close until inning number three when the purple and white men broke loose and scored some nine runs with Bob Currie getting two of his four hits in this frame. Catcher English for the druggists and Knoxman Steer also played heads-up ball.

Knox: Cochran, Thomson, Calder, Barry, Stewart, Weir, Currie, Dutcher, Steer and Ross.

Pharmacy: Callaghan, English, Powell, Wood, Daggett, Hogan, Wight, Zangster, Rubbottom.

Whitney Hall co-eds are typified in feminine sporting circles by blonde and popular Janey Church, one of the best-known and best-liked of the girls in residence there. Although as a sophomore, Janie led her Falconer House compatriots in the fiercest initiation campaign since Sadie Hawkins left college, constant association in the mellowing influence of the P.T. course has softened her zeal.

At the Ottawa Ladies' College, where our heroine got her excellent training in the fundamentals of fair play, etc., every sport on the curriculum was attempted except skating. Janie does not skate. So the U.C. hockey team struggles on without her, but it is about the only team in the college which does not enjoy her enthusiastic and lively support. As an inter-collegiate basketball player and member of this year's senior intercollegiate team, as a badminton player of note, with intercollegiate style, as a member of the college swimming team, as a tennis star and equestrienne, the popular Ottawa girl has few equals. Golf still has her baffled, and she has yet to solve the intricacies of knit-en-purl-two. A strained ligament last year ruined Janie's chances of placing on the intercollegiate badminton team, but this year she is eligible for both badminton and basketball, intercollegiate style.

While her fraternity sisters at Kappa Kappa Gamma deplore her addiction to bridge, they realize that her energies need some outlet and are re-signing to fate. As to her views on the college man, Janie is uncommittal. However, her "dates" are preferably "lots of fun, good dancers, and fascinating, provided that they are good sports".

BASKETBALL

In a hard fought, close checking battle in the upper gym yesterday, the S.P.S. thirds defeated Vic thirds 8 to 6. The game was slightly erratic but there was a great deal of spirit.

The scoring did not begin till the game was well under way. There was a superfluity of fouling, foulballs, bad passing and general sloppiness, which made the job of the referee difficult. (Continued on Page 4)

ATHLETIC NIGHTS ARE HERE AGAIN

Warren Stevens' four-point platform for the improvement of the breed of athletics in Hart House blossoms forth again this Saturday evening as the first in a series of Athletic Nights, inaugurated last year, gets underway.

The four points in Mr. Stevens' platform follow:

Basketball—Hoop-hungry fans of the university will get their first chance since the pre-Christmas exhibitions to see the Blue Slingers in action. During their pilgrimage to the American cities the Bluebirds encountered stiffer opposition than their regular schedule calls for. However, they managed to salvage one victory out of seven contests and on the whole acquitted themselves nobly. Niagara University, which licked the locals 39-20 way back in December, brought the opposition Saturday evening and plenty of competition should be assured. The Niagaras boast a fleet, flashy quintet with such names as Schmitt, Vignola and Bello heading the list of luminaries.

On the other hand, Varsity has been freshened up after a short lay-off and should be fit and ready to go against the Bordertown Basketeers.

A game between North Toronto and Etobicoke has also been tentatively arranged to fill out the double bill.

Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing—An evening of furious activity is anticipated on the Sock Exchange. Saturday evening Ontario Agricultural College is sending a group of boxers, wrestlers and fencers to compete with Varsity in a three-way tournament. Although the beard beaters are reported to be weakened by injuries, the members of the Cauliflower Cult and the foilers are all ready to go against the Aegies. Twelve bouts will be held in the upper gym for the edification of those interested in fistie fare, while the fencers and wrestlers will stage their bouts in their respective rooms.

Dancing—When the last basket drops through the cord and the court is cleared, dancers will be permitted to ply their trade on the gymnasium floor. The dances proved extremely popular last year and this one should be a gala affair. Couples will dance to the strains of the . . .

Public Address System . . . which, having fulfilled its function of clarifying various details throughout the basketball game, will pour forth recorded music. Incidentally, Warren Stevens, who is apparently more familiar with field goals than with Gershwin, is open to suggestions from students concerning the records to be played. Spectators are also invited to bring along their own records.

It should be quite an evening.

QUITE A TEE PARTY

If there are any incipient Sneads or Guldahls in the audience who have not realized their cherished ambition of playing the eighteen under eighty, there is still a place for you.

Like a Hollywood director visiting the Himalayas on Set 16-A, we witnessed golfers driving the little white pill in a room 12 feet by 6 feet yesterday afternoon. That room was the golfing room in Hart House.

Using strips of automobile rubber stitched with wire to represent a grass tee, and driving from stances specially constructed on a level with the mats, a couple of students in shirt sleeves were whanging the daylight out of a couple of inoffensive golf balls when we came in. Canvas nets to break the flight of the balls were stretched out along the walls. Sawdust was sprinkled on the floor to prevent rebounds.

The fellow who introduced us to all this was Dave Hutchison, pro at the Woodbine and golf instructor at this university. Dave is anxious for all those interested in golfing to register for the free courses as soon as possible. Instruction commenced two weeks ago and will continue until April and examination time. Mr. Hutchison can be found at the Golfing Room, Hart House, from 12 to 6 every afternoon.

New nets have been rigged up and clubs and balls are available for players. The fine showing made by Mr. Hutchison's pupils, who carried off both the senior and intercollegiate golfing crowns, is sufficient recommendation for the value of the lessons.

WYCLIFFE 6, ST. MIKE'S 4

Showing great fight and plenty of scoring ability, St. Mike's, led by Kieffer and Gagliano, ran up a three goal lead on a less experienced but determined Wycliffe squad in the first half of yesterday's opening water polo game. St. Mike's 4-0 victory, by the way, was the first one to be announced over the newly installed loud speaker system in the athletic wing, a feature which will do much to make games more interesting to Hart House spectators.

DENTS 1, SR. U.C. 0

In Group 2 Dents showed plenty of form against Sr. U.C. last night. Learing and Kilgour with McGowan in goal will aid materially in making Dents one of the toughest teams in the whole league and future games should see Dents showing lots of class.

Wycliffe: Murphy, Willis, D. Smith, N. Smith, Macdonald, Patterson, Williamson, Harper.

St. Mike's: Flynn, Bennett, Waters, Gagliano, Kieffer, Slatwinski, Dunn, Renner, Cronin.

Sr. U.C.: Moses, Sable, Soren, and Savlov.

U.C. BADMINTON

Lists will be posted in the women's locker room and U.C. rotunda for the tournaments which will be played on Thurs. Jan. 26 and Mon. Jan. 30.

This does not mean the end of the badminton season at the Metropolitan, which continues till May. But it will give a chance for those who will be playing on the university team, to play together.

Trinity will be using the courts this afternoon for their tournaments.

DURNAN TROPHY

Last Tuesday the competition for the Durnan Trophy got under way with every college represented. New entrants may yet sign up if they get in touch with Mr. Winterburn immediately. Today the second event, the 200 yard breast stroke, will be run off and each Tuesday and Thursday succeeding events will be run off.

To date, with only the 50 yard event behind, the scoring is led by Nels Earl with 920, followed by G. Clawson with 890, M. Murphy with 890, G. Love with 740, and George Meen, also with 740. Entrants must get at least 2400 points to qualify for points for the T. A. Reed Trophy.

COURT PROCEDURE TRIED BY LAW COURSE MEN

The student at this stage gets a first-hand glimpse of court work. Each year a grand criminal trial takes place. For this, the legal brains combine in providing a colourful spectacle, filled with dramatic, comic and tragic scenes. With due solemnity twelve men good and true are chosen to judge the criminal at the bar. After the well-rehearsed counsel have completed a heart-rending case, the juryman file out to consider the facts. Even here there are the rugged individualists, who, just to be different, hold out against the majority.

While everyone has a good time, everything is done seriously, so if any outsider should come into the law building and hear such chatter as "My Lord, my learned friend is leading the witness", let him not laugh, as a session of the Moot Court of the University of Toronto will be in progress.

HOME-MADE RADIO PRACTICAL HOBBY

much higher purpose on frequent occasions.

Experience and ability are gained by using the apparatus constantly, so that in times of emergency, clear-thinking predominates, with no confusion. There are numerous instances of the service of amateur radio to the general public. In times of flood or hurricane, amateurs with emergency apparatus provide the only link with the outside world. The recent hurricane in Maine serves as an example. Amateur radio is looked to for means of communication when other means fail.

The necessities of a ham station are a transmitter and a receiver, as well as measuring equipment required by law. Some amateurs prefer voice transmission, or phone, while others stick to continuous wave, the familiar dith. Then again, some hams take joy in working distant stations, or dx, while others prefer a rag-chew, lasting an hour or more.

The majority of hams on the campus are from Ontario, although there is one from Newfoundland. Studies take the time of most hams, so that there is no active club on the campus, although there is an amateur transmitter located in the Electrical Building.

SWING CLUB HEARS LOU LEWIS BAND

The Swing Club met last night at the Oddfellows Temple. Foot-stamping and repeated calls of "more, more", greeted the orchestra from the Onyx Club, led by Lou Lewis, Phyllis Marshall and Ron Sorley, who "swings it" in Hart House music room.

Dick McDougall of CKCL, "who knows more about swing than any man alive", interpreted some of the terms and the various styles connected with this type of music. He said that most people have the mistaken idea that swing consists of as much brass and drums as possible and that it contains little feeling. To show to what extent this idea is wrong, the orchestra played "I Can Dream, Can't I?" as it was written and then "swung it".

Mr. McDougall then showed the difference between the old "corn" music and modern swing. Corn music stuck to the original chord of music. Modern swing is improvising. He illustrated two styles of swing with the aid of the orchestra—Dixieland, which is still popular and hasn't changed much through the years, and the Blues which consist of twelve bars with the same melody.

To conclude the meeting, Phyllis Marshall sang "My Old Rocking-Chair" and Ron Sorley played his specialty, "Blue Heaven".

According to George Carty, vice-president of the club, plans are completed for a special meeting to be held next Thursday. This meeting is to take the form of a dance with the music of the "Modernaires".

LORETTO COLLEGE TO HOLD AT-HOME

This evening the students of Loretto College will hold their annual At-Home in the Roof Garden of the Royal York Hotel. There will be dancing from 9 to 2 with a sit-down supper at midnight. The decorations are to be done in blue and white, the college as well as the university colours. Another feature of the evening will be the holding of several novelty numbers.

Preceding the event there will be a coffee party presided over by the staff at the residence on St. George St.

'VARSITY' PROGRAM HEARD LAST NIGHT

CKCL Carried Second in the Series of Broadcasts on University Affairs

Last night station CKCL carried the second in the series of University of Toronto broadcasts. The program was made up of items from issues of The Varsity for the past week, and was conducted by the station's newscaster, Jack Thompson.

Mr. Thompson reported the enthusiastic reception which was given the University Symphony on its visit to Guelph, and the concert it gave in Convocation Hall last night. The Swing Club meeting which featured Lou Lewis' Onyx Club band was given as an example of the lighter side of campus musical activity.

The program's feature topic was the University Alumni Federation. Mr. B. F. Wood, secretary of the Federation, prepared an outline of its activities, which was presented by Mr. Thompson. He said that a student's connection with college did not cease with graduation, and that interest should increase with time. The Alumni constituted a link between the university and the rest of the world. The Federation includes 34,000 graduates in thirteen college and faculty organizations and many local clubs. With the help of the Registrar records are kept of all graduates throughout their lives.

The Federation, according to Mr. Wood, has made loans totalling $250,000 to students, and has given bursaries and scholarships valued at $65,000. It maintains an employment service for graduates, and keeps up connections with alumni by means of social events culminating in Alumni Night, to be held this year at Hart House on March 24.

Mr. Thompson outlined the recent editorial on student employment, signifying his intention of interviewing Mr. E. A. Macdonald on this and other S.A.C. activities on a future program. The C.U.P. despatch regarding the explosion at the University of Manitoba last Thursday was reported.

WITH PUCK AND STICK

Draws were the order of the day in intercollegiate hockey yesterday as Knox and Pharmacy battled two periods without a score and Dents tied Jr. S.P.S. 1-1. Ragged play around the nets and clever goaltending combined to keep the scores down in both encounters.

In the four o'clock tussle Sproule and Weir were the point getters for Dents and S.P.S. respectively. In a game that was featured by fast skating and tight defensive work, Sproule, Goodison and Rollaston earned top honours for Dents, while Fitzpatrick and Morley went well for the Schoolmen.

The supper hour affair between Knox and Pharmacy lacked the polish and finesse of the afternoon tilt, but both teams played hard all the way. Redford and Henderson appeared best of the Knox aggregation, while George Pitcher and Murray Snodgrass and Seth Wilfred were impressive for the Druggists.

Dents: Goodison, Passalis, Sproule, Reid, Beattie, Rollaston, Godfrey, Ray, Sibbald, Fitzgerald.

Jr. S.P.S.: Morley, Munro, Marshall, Glynn, Crichton, Robinson, Fraser, Weir, Fitzpatrick, Moore.

Knox: Near, Stiles, Vance, Mallion, Henderson, Caltier, Morley, Redford, MacDonald, Cooke, Alder.

Pharmacy: Rose, Noble, O'Hearn, Snodgrass, Pitcher, Cornell, Soucy, Reith, Wilfred, Barkley.

men admitted, many were in poor health of which ten were tubercular.

John Frank protested that the transients were not afraid of work; he declared that he had seen the men rush to jobs on the farm. Feeling that the unemployed single men were deserving of help, he enlisted the financial support of Mr. McCullagh of the Globe and Mail; the Red Cross provided John Frank House and the Men's Hostel Association gave volunteer supervisors.

"The John Frank House has only scratched the surface of this huge problem. Nevertheless it is awakening public sentiment and it is embarrassing Queen's Park into action," Mr. Frank said.

YEAR BOOK PASSES ALL PREDECESSORS

The current issue will be the forty-first, for Torontonnensis has appeared annually, with one exception, since 1898 when it listed only 150 graduates, 98 men and fifty-two women. Last year there were 1,260 and a ten per cent increase is expected in 1939.

The first edition contained several short stories, one by B. K. Sandwell, now editor of the Saturday Night; both Sir Edward Beatty and Rev. Dr. Inkster were members of the staff.

The present editor feels that the book should be of interest to all years as it records the activities of the whole university.

"As in the past," he says, "Torontonnensis will continue to give you the world in pictures."

SKI CLUB OUTING SET FOR SUNDAY

Bus to Take Skiers to Lodge at Aurora

Acting on the theory that there is no time like the present (especially for skiing), members of the university ski club are planning another outing this week-end. A bus will leave the Hart House tower at ten o'clock Sunday morning and proceed to the lodge at Newton's Farm.

In case any member wants to take time out from skiing for lunch, he or she may procure same at Edward's Youth Hostel or Newton's, or even cook it in the Lodge. The bus will leave for home at 4.00.

Skiers are urged to buy their tickets in advance so the executive can arrange for suitable bus accommodation. If perchance some catastrophe as a spell of mild weather makes the trip impossible, all tickets will be redeemable in cash at the Athletic Office.

Sirdevan Wins Trophy by Almost Unanimous Vote

MAINSTAY OF LINE

Old Reliable Frankie Sirdevan, mainstay of the Varsity front wall troops for the past three years, received signal recognition of his prowess Wednesday evening when he was awarded the Johnny Copp Trophy by the almost unanimous vote of his teammates.

The trophy, presented annually since 1933 to the player who best combines football talent and good sportsmanship, is in honour of Johnny Copp, popular Varsity griddler who was shot down by a burglar several years ago. The numeral "5" which Copp wore while playing for Varsity, is also reserved in his memory.

Sirdevan received his bachelor's degree in the Arts course last year and enrolled this fall in the first year of the engineering course at S.P.S.

The chunky middle wing played a major role in bringing Varsity its last intercollegiate rugby championship in 1936. A fine team player, Sirdevan was a tower of strength on the Blue wing-line during their unsuccessful battle for the college crown last autumn.

Sirdevan's name will be written into the records alongside such notable recipients of the Copp Trophy as Cam Gray, Bobby Coulter, Gus Greco, and Al Williams.

Varsity Ski Bus leaves Hart House Tower, at 10 a.m. on Sunday, January 22, return at 4 p.m. For information and tickets, apply to Athletic Office, Hart House. Tickets 75c return.

Series of Songsters To Be Continued

Popular Songsters to Remain Under Capable Direction of J. Campbell-McInnes

There will be a series of three Songsters this term. The first will be held at 8.45 p.m. next Sunday in the music room under the direction of Mr. J. Campbell-McInnes, the well known singer and conductor. The other two songsters will take place on 5th and 19th February.

There are undoubtedly many members of Hart House who still do not realize what the songsters are. Begun some ten or twelve years ago by a group of men who wished to come together informally and sing folk songs the songsters still maintain their original idea. There is no organization, no need for members to be able to sing, no qualification necessary except the desire to learn something about the folk music of this and other countries. Mr. Campbell-McInnes is one of the greatest authorities alive on the literature and history of traditional song and usually sings one or two examples of folk songs during the course of the evening. Many undergraduates discover the value and charm of these songsters too late and frankly express their regret that they had not been regular attendants throughout their university career.

BERIGAN TO PLAY AT DOCTORS' DANCE

Popular Musician's New Band is Rated Tops in Swing World

UNIQUE SUCCESS

Like many top-notch musicians, Bunny Berigan, who plays next Thursday at the Meds At-Home, began his musical career while in university. The University of Wisconsin is his Alma Mater, which he left about 1928.

Young, blonde and handsome, Berigan was just another hot trumpet player two years ago. True, he was rated as one of the greatest of swing trumpeters, but that was still a long way from leading his own orchestra—the goal of every popular musician.

He had musical ideas that he was sure would meet with approval. But the way his newly organized band was received by the swing world is unprecedented. Over night his became a name band. His prescription was not unique but his success was.

He gathered about him young men—"fighting men", he called them—who play for the love of music. Some were men he had played with at Wisconsin in his undergraduate days; others he had met while with Goodman and the Dorsey's; still others he met at "jam sessions", but in every case they met

LOVE THEORY DEBUNKED!

The result of interviewing over a score of co-eds on the campus yesterday, debunked the theory of Dr. Ray S. Musgrave, Professor of Psychology, at Birmingham-Southern College that "student romances top the list of reasons for failures in pass courses".

In reply to the question, "Would failing in love during the university year cause you to fail in your final examinations?", the co-eds, who unanimously wished to remain anonymous, gave the following replies:

"It should be an inspiration to get through."

"Absolutely not."

"It would be an incentive to settle down to study and accomplish something. When you have found the 'one person', you wouldn't need to be looking around for anyone else."

"I think it would make you work harder."

COMMITTEE PLANS ROYAL LUNCHEON FOR HART HOUSE

Students to Have Opportunity of Seeing King and Queen

ON MAY 22

By Campbell McLean

Speculation on the part to be played by the University in welcoming the King and Queen to Toronto, reached a new peak on the campus last night with the disclosure by authorities of tentative plans to hold a royal luncheon in Hart House next May 22.

Acting Premier Harry C. Nixon, speaking on behalf of the government of Ontario, verified reports that the Great Hall of Hart House is being considered for the setting of the brilliant event. While final arrangements will not be announced for some time, he told The Varsity he has "no doubt that the plans will go through".

"Tentative plans can be accepted for the time being, but must yet be formally approved by Ottawa and Their Majesties. It is inconceivable that any objections will be found, however," he said.

Mayor Ralph C. Day, member of a special committee in charge of arrangements for the royal visit, said that the proposed Hart House luncheon might be either a civic or a joint civic-provincial affair.

The mayor did not know what part university students would have in the Women's Masthead Meeting

Blue and White Team Prepared for Invasion of Purples

AITCHESON OUT

Warren Stevens' senior cagers undergo their final pre-season test tomorrow night when they take on the fast stepping Niagara University cagers at Hart House. The game, which starts at 8.30 p.m., will be preceded by an exhibition tilt between two high school squads from North Toronto and Etobicoke.

The starting five for the blue and white will probably find Bill Rogin at centre, Chick Mahoney and Jack Lawmaway at forward, and Percy Frankie Minahan, who has been out of action with a cold, will probably be on the bench along with Cahill, Bannigan, Shute and Humenick. "Scrubby" Aitchison will not dress for the game but has notified Stevens that he will be ready for the opening league game with McGill next week at Montreal.

Niagara will no doubt have the same team that trounced Varsity 39-20 earlier in the season at Niagara Falls, N.Y. Steve Slebak, Hank Foidin, Don De Santis, Chick Kearney, and Mike Vignola, have started for the visitors in all their games to date and will probably start for the Americans.

The Purples play a fast passing game and fans who will be on hand for the tussle are assured of the best exhibition of basketball seen in Toronto so far this season. Niagara managed to beat Queen's University by a score of 56-32 but dropped a close game to Western.

The game will be the feature event on a gala athletic night that will include a boxing meet, a wrestling meet and a fencing tourney between O.A.C. and Varsity. Dancing to the tune of recorded music will follow the game.

IMPERIAL RELATIONS TOPIC OF DEBATE

Laval Debaters Support Canadian Independence in Case of War

SPECIAL SESSION

For the first time in its eight-year history the U.C. Parliament will hold a special session when it convenes at 4 p.m. this afternoon to debate the resolution: "Resolved that in the event of a European war involving Great Britain, Canada should secede from the British Empire". Two debaters from Laval University will support the motion, Raymond Lasse, who will speak in English, and Jacques Flynn, who will speak in French.

The Hon. I. Sussman will lead the opposition, supported by Walter Towell of U.C., who will speak in French. When interviewed, Mr. Sussman declared, "In view of the long and glorious history of Canadian participation

Jiu Jitsu Exponents Stage Tournaments

Forty Members Take Part in Round-Robin Event

ART MENZIES INSTRUCTOR

Tournaments are the order of the day among the jiu-jitsu exponents of the university. Last week the first official testing of instructor Art Menzies' proteges was held in the wrestling room and over 40 members took part. The class this year is thus larger than the boxing or wrestling groups and is, in fact, the largest in the history of the local club.

A round-robin arrangement enabled each member to participate in two bouts in which special attention was paid the work of the beginners, according to the jiu-jitsu rules of ranking, skill and skill alone is the basis of promotion Bryant Kassirer made the only gain among the senior members by winning both his bouts quite handily, which makes him a 3rd rank green belter. Campbell and Gardiner also came through with sterling showings and should be much heard from in the big tournament scheduled for February.

VIC FORMAL DANCE TO FEATURE HOOEY BAND

A floor show, featuring the Bob quartette with Dick Joffe, and probably a two-piano team, will be the big attraction for the annual Vic At-Home being held this year in Simpson's Arcadian Court on February tenth.

George Hooey's band has been secured. Programs are being given out when the tickets are purchased; Mac Carter is the man responsible for the very novel form of this year's scarlet and gold souvenir.

VARSITY SENDS AID TO STUDENT RELIEF

Local Commission of Student Service Assists German Refugees

RAISED $125

A draft for one hundred and twenty-five dollars was sent to Switzerland this week as the first contribution from the University of Toronto Committee of the International Student Service towards refugee student relief.

The money was raised through private contributions from several persons who were approached by letter. The letter, which outlined the work of the International Student Service, was signed by J. B. Bickert, Warden of Hart House, Professor Norman Mackenzie, Dr. Lockhart, Mr. R. G. Riddell of Victoria College, and Mr. E. A. Macdonald, secretary-treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council.

The International Student Service was started during the Great War under the name of European Student Relief, to aid students who were left destitute by blockade, famine and other war-time conditions. Since then, it has done relief work for students throughout stricken areas in the world, as well as survey work about students carried on wherever I.S.S. is found.

The money which was sent this week, most of which will go to relieve German refugee students, is only the first

Our Public Relations

Perhaps most of us in the University don't realize the need there is for an extensive public relations program on behalf of the University. With the intensified propaganda of modern times it is no longer possible to let your merit shine forth on an unbiased and enlightened world. It is necessary not only to blow your own horn loudly and constantly, but to fight ceaselessly that no criticism shall be allowed to pass unanswared.

We have in the University an excellent department of Extension and Publicity, which does much to keep the good name of the institution before some parts of the public. The President himself works tirelessly for its good—but beyond this there is a large and influential part of the population that is subjected constantly to propaganda which serves, whether purposely or not, to discredit this University or perhaps universities in general.

We hear stories from time to time of graduates hunting for jobs who are told "Oh, a university graduate, eh? Well isn't that fine! But in this business we don't want people who have spent four years working three hours a day if they feel like it—we want men who get out early in the morning and aren't too good to do a job." All of which may sound fantastic to any normal student—but it has happened. Student life, to some business men, is a round of riotous public initiations, gang fights, and social fights.

Unfortunately, the University of Toronto gets probably less favourable publicity in its home-town press than any other college of any repute on the continent. The papers in Winnipeg, Vancouver, Kingston, and New York give college activities a broader and fairer coverage than do any of the downtown papers in Toronto.

One Toronto paper in particular would seem to have a phobia against the provincial university. Its bitter and illogical attacks on professors who have anything whatever to say are almost understandable even to people who know its editorial policy on other matters. To suggest that a professor is hardly qualified to say "It's a fine day", whereas an editor may pronounce judgment at any time and on any subject might be flattering to some members of any paper, but it is hardly in the interests of education to allow that viewpoint to gain currency. Another Toronto paper, usually fair, is frank about its intention to attack every utterance of one of the better-known members of the faculty. The third Toronto paper is a firm believer in free speech, but has a sensation-minded staff trained to lift remarkable speeches from their context and send reporters around to the "right" people to gather interesting comments. There is nothing malicious about this last—it's just a method of obtaining good readable copy.

Photographers like to obtain "different" pictures—especially of good-looking co-eds. Nothing wrong in that, perhaps, but when these go out to all parts of the country without adequate balance of stories which concern the valuable aspects of the University, it leaves a very unfortunate impression in many quarters.

The support given in the Legislature to every attempt to reduce the grant to the University, and the corresponding opposition given every attempt to increase the grant shows a lack of appreciation of the University in high quarters. The strange suggestion that the city should tax the University met with an astonishing amount of support—and very little was done to educate Torontonians as to the real value and low cost of the University to the city. It should be thoroughly understood that the University is similar to a small town surrounded by a city—it supplies its own services, such as lights and police.

These are only a few instances to show that our public-relations policies need a thorough overhauling, with a larger and very energetic staff directing its every effort to make people realize its real high value.

For a number of years the members of free countries were content to let such things slide—satisfied in their certainty of the inherent good sense of mankind. But recent events have shown that freedom of any sort is insecure indeed, and must be fought for by every fair means, but especially by waging a war of truth against insidious propaganda.

Welcome To Laval Students

University College today plays host to two representatives of Laval University, to whom the entire campus extends its welcome. In Canada where the two languages officially receive equal recognition, it is encouraging to see the undergraduates of two great universities exchange greetings; it is only unfortunate that Laval and U. of T. could not find it possible to have even closer relations through visiting delegates and debaters. Such expressions of good feeling, as it is possible for official representatives of a university to exchange, should go a long way to help solve the internal difficulties of this Dominion.

ARCADE MUSIC

"H.M.S. Pinafore"

His Majesty's Ship Pinafore set sail from Victoria College into Hart House Theatre—and very clear sailing, too. With all the laughter and the hardly intellectual music that features any Gilbert and Sullivan work, the maiden voyage augured a probably auspicious three days. But the orchestra was pretty corny.

Everybody was slightly overcome by opening night jitters during the first act, and it was left to Messrs. Gilbert et al to carry on, but in the second act, the cast swung in behind them and turned out a bang-up show. And special mention goes to the rousing young voices of the choruses, which, while they were not all virtuosos, did make a lot of pleasant sound.

Of the principals, there were more pleasant surprises than disappointments. Vera Argument as Buttercup was outstanding. She sang well and acted well. She saved many a slow moment and displayed a great deal of charm, personality, poise and all those other things that too few amateurs possess.

Among the males, John Bain turned in the best piece of work as Captain Corcoran. Strictly speaking, he was the only one who entered completely into the Gilbertian spirit of delightful farce. He, too, acted well. His voice was pretty good and he was funny. (Gilbert and Sullivan are supposed to be funny.)

Almost all of the bit players were surprisingly good, especially Arthur Menzies as Dick Deadeye. Also in this category are Mac Carter and Donald Joyce.

But the principals were nothing to write home to mother about. Robert DeMille as Joseph Porter warmed up to his part during the second act, and almost came close to a professional performance in the Trio in that act, but he muffed the famous "song" about the handle on the big front door.

The above-mentioned trio takes first prize for the best — shall we call it — selection of the evening. Joyce and Carter did an outstanding job on "A British Tar is a Soaring Soul" and Vera Argument and John Bain were perfect in "Things Are Seldom What They Seem".

Considered as a whole and ignoring the bad lighting, it was a good show.

HALL PORTER REFUSES CROWN OF EMERALD ISLE

Joy Reigns Supreme in Ireland when News is Received that King Olaf Rejects Throne

AH, AN' HE'S A DARLINT

Toronto, Can., Jan. 20th (Reuter): One of the most critical situations in the history of the British Empire came to a dramatic close last night when the Hall Porter of Hart House (really the missing King Olaf of Ireland) renounced his claim to the kingship of Ould Erin.

Surrounded by thousands of molecules Good King Olaf cried, "Sorry as Oi am, Oi must refuse becauz Oi love Canada!" Ex-King Olaf went on to say that his decision was in no way influenced by the following telegram received yesterday.

Vronsky and Victor Babin of being profound musicians in the conventional sense. They are frankly, if deferentially, stylists, and everything that they play acquires a liberal coating of Vronsky and Babin, a sort of musical witness expressed in terms of flashing accents and swift dynamic changes, or silky legatos and expressive silences—in short all the display tricks of the piano invested with the fused personality of these two people and used perhaps deliberately, perhaps unconsciously to the end of achieving a distinction that is entirely free from the disquieting suspicion of sensationalism.

Whether or not this sort of thing is artistically justifiable is, of course, open to question. Our view is that it must be accepted if the quality known vaguely as interpretation is to be accepted at all, and interpretation on the way out must surely be met by Sir James Jeans and his umbrella on the way in. (A topical reference—sorry if it seems obscure.) But in practice we cannot imagine any of the composers represented on the program last night at the Eaton Auditorium being other than delighted with the treatment given their creations.

Various kinds of modernity predominated, Schumann's Andante and Variations, Op. 46, providing the only touch of pre-twentieth-century romanticism. Six very entertaining studies by Babin

STUDENTS IN ENGLAND INVITED TO LEAGUE

Canadian students planning to visit Great Britain either for study or for pleasure, are invited to communicate with "The Young Contingent" of "The Victoria League" in London, immediately on their arrival.

The Victoria League, which is an Empire society, with no political activities, is under the patronage of Their Majesties the King and Queen, and Queen Mary. It extends a warm welcome to travelling students and affords them opportunities of meeting young men and women from all parts of the Empire.

SENIOR SWIM TEAM LEAVES FOR MEET WITH ROCHESTER

Blue Natators Are in Good Condition for Splash-Fest with Americans

This afternoon the University of Toronto senior swimming team are leaving for Rochester and their first dual meet of the year. The meet, which will take place Saturday afternoon against Rochester University, will see both colleges trying to take the lead. Last year each team won their home meet.

For several weeks now the senior swimmers have been training hard and Coach W. McCarty has spared no effort to fit his men out for the keen competition invariably offered by American universities. Reports have it that Rochester are pooling an exceptionally strong team, their divers having national rating and their back stroke-turning out near record times.

The Blue and White team, however, also boasts some famous swimmers.

Ged Clawson and John Girvan, Nels
Earl and Reed Menzies are well known Canadian swimmers, Clawson having represented Canada in the British Empire Games and John Girvan holding the senior intercollegiate breast stroke record. In the diving Clarkson and Dolson can be depended on. Unfortunately Murphy, veteran Varsity splasher, will be unable to make the trip, but several new men have showed very good practice form. The four man relay team which in former years has been Varsity's sure point getter, will be well up there this year with Nels
Earl, Gage Love, George Meen and
Ged Clawson making new records.

With the senior intercollegiate meet to be held in Montreal this year, only a month away, the American meets offer Varsity an excellent opportunity to get into shape and judging by appearance, it might not be too much to expect to have the boys return with a victory. Rochester have only bowed to Varsity once before in their own pool, an tomorrow will tell us if the well-coached Blues can do it again.

SCHOOLMEN TAKE WIN OVER U.C. HOOP SQUAD

Piling up points at will behind the sharpshooting of Fisher, Murray and Blaught, Sr. S.P.S. cagers triumphed easily by a 25-14 count over Senior U.C. yesterday afternoon in the upper gym.

The School hoopers were much stronger in all departments than the Artemen, with Ballagh and Fisher particularly outstanding. Mike Greenstein pinned the losers' attack with five field goals.

Sr. U.C.: Shiffman (4), Shuster, Greenstein (10), Savlov, Goodman,
Hershman, Soren.

Sr. S.P.S.: Ronson (3), Fisher (8), Murray (6), Kirby, Dawson (2), Bal-lagh (6).

VICTORIA PUCKSTERS TAKE SENIOR DOCTORS

The Victoria Jr. hockey team defeated a powerful Sr. Meds sextet 2-1 yesterday afternoon in Varsity Arena.
Playing rather ragged hockey for a good part of the first period, both teams opened up somewhat after Hec Gillepie put the Doctors ahead with an individual effort.

O'Brien in the Meds net kept the scarlet and gold squad off the score sheet until Cam McKenzie evened the score, about ten minutes through the last period. About three minutes later, Don Bothwell scored the winning goal, with a hard shot on which O'Brien did not have a chance.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shiffman

A REPORTER'S LOT IS NOT A HAPPY ONE

With Victoria College putting on Gilbert and Sullivan we feel philosophical again and start thinking what a dismal job it is to write sports for The Varsity.
For example when we get all the dope, including the hockey, basketball, swimming, wrestling, jiu-jitsu, and table-tennis every day nobody says anything. But just because we haven't the news about the Johnny Copp Trophy in the paper everyone gives us the razz. We didn't even know that anyone was interested that Frankie Sirdevan was awarded it last Wednesday at the rugby meeting, but as soon as we miss it everyone gets flustered (well, everybody on the sports staff does anyway). Then again suppose we write a story and we happen to misspell an athlete's name like leaving out the AITCH (Ed. Note: Please reread and note the pin. Thank you.) of Aitchison. The office is flooded with letters of correction, people come in to personally protest the spelling that is appeared in the paper, protests are sent to the Caput, and mass meetings are planned all over the campus. But what happens when we spell it correctly.
We'll even go further and ask what happens when we spell two hundred names in one issue, all correctly? Do we get one note of congratulation? Does some one come in and say, "Well done"? No, but someone probably will come in shrieking "Why did you leave out my sport notice?" or "Where's the report of our basketball game?" or any complaint at all as long as they can complain.

When we really tried to fill this column full of sport nobody read what we took hours of time and endless effort to compose. When we tried giving lessons in skiing for which we had to undergo hours of instructions and physically exhausting experiences somebody wrote in a kind letter telling us not to poke fun at a noble sport and claimed that only a person who had never gone skiing could prostitute the King of Winter Sports the way we did. As a result we decided to quit trying to give helpful advice. The only compliment we ever got was a rather dubious one and we got it from a girl who said quote "You know ever since you stopped writing about sport and making your column more like the Hither and Yon column we have really enjoyed your column around Whitney Hall. (We're going to slay that guy Shuster.)"

When we are in the unfortunate position which necessitates us selecting the winner of one of the numerous athletic contests which are always going on around the campus then we're really on the well known limb without the proverbial ladder. When the results come in and we have been proven to have selected the team that has come second in the competition instead of winning do you know what is hurled at our head? That we picked the team purely out of favoritism . . . that we don't know who we are talking about (which isn't far off) . . . that anybody but a blind jackass had selected the winner. And the letters from the defeated team's managers—are they proud that we selected their charges? Wrong again, they accuse us of sabotage . . . that we deliberately tried to jinx their team and they simply hate us . . . Oowaa, Oowaa . . .

Sometimes we get in on information that is startling . . . it's news and the type of news that is interesting to read . . . But should we print it? Can we print it? Sure can if we are sure that we can run faster than some of our temperamental athletes who believe that it's none of our business, that it shouldn't be in print and they have physical arguments with which to back their statements and who are we not to be amenable to such logical arguments?
Then sometimes we get news that nobody, not even the athletes themselves are aware of, like it is rumoured that Bill L'Honneur is on the Red Wings' negotiation list and that the Leafs have overlooked a potential star defenceman. Will anybody believe us? In fact I don't believe it myself.

Then there's the build-ups . . . that's what really gets us down. Through all seasons, including the in-between seasons, we write of tremendous football games . . . of gala nights at the Hart House gym with forty super basketball stars from Niagara University, thirty boxers and wrestlers and fencers and censored from O.A.C. and dancing to the tune of your favourite bands on the new complicated public address system that will be functioning on Saturday night . . . of thrilling hockey games up at the Arena, which packed them in for a duce a crack (translation: Two dollars each) on the road and which is free to undergraduates . . . of skiing pictures, also free . . . of swimming

LOANS ARE AWARDED BY STUDENTS' COUNCIL

The Students' Administrative Council issued $4,500 in loans this past week to students who have applied, according to information released yesterday.
Sixty-five students were awarded loans from the S.A.C. loan fund which is now in the fifth year of its existence.
Interviews are still being held, and the Council is still lending money to those students who need it.

Since its inception, the S.A.C. loan fund has lent $24,000 to the students of the university. In awarding the loans, the Council gives preference to students in the last two years of their course, but no other restriction is made.

Margaret McEwan on "The Law of the Octave".

Miss McEwan will demonstrate her theories of the co-ordination of light music with the appropriate coloured light combination. This combination is claimed to be of value, not only in teaching piano, but also for analysis, and interpretation.

The Deans of Women will be guests of honour at the tea hour, and Mr.
Ernest Sullivan, tenor soloist at Carleton Street United Church, will sing.

"There are lots of good fish in the sea", celebrations, but believed they would have an opportunity to see the King when he walks, as is now expected, from the lieutenant-governor's headquarters in Queen's Park to Hart House.

Officials have not yet made contact with Warden J. B. Bickersteth of Hart House, who knew nothing apart from press rumours. "I haven't given it a thought," he said, when asked if the House would be specially decorated. No information can as yet be obtained from Honourable Albert Matthews or President Cody, both of whom are out of the city.

W. J. Dunlop, Director of University Extension, said it was still "pretty much speculation" what official recognition the university would bestow on His Majesty. Whenever the President heard of the visit last September, the Senate unanimously offered an honorary degree, he said. But this was turned down on the grounds that it would have necessitated acceptance of similar awards by each of Canada's nineteen universities.

Mr. Dunlop stated that by the day of the royal visit, most students would be through with their exams. The possibility of recognition by the students would depend on the S.A.C., he said.

St. Thomas Church

After evensong on Sunday night, a short recital of organ and choral music will be given, which will include a little known "Largo" from Handel's Concerto Grosso, arranged by Sir Henry Wood, Mendelssohn's "I waited for the Lord", Dr. Willan's "Epilogue". The choirboys will sing a very beautiful setting of the Lord's Prayer by Carl Preyer and the recital will conclude with Mendelssohn's "Lord, I flee to Thee", during which Mrs. Stuart will sing the contralto solo.

himself show no consistency of idiom and may be intended as impressions of a number of eminent modern writers. The Prince, openly stated to be "after Rimsky-Korsakov", turned out to be none other than Flight of the Bumblebee "dressed up", to borrow the jargon of swing.

Milhand, the peculiar Frenchman whose Le Pauvre Matelot was done here last year by the Salzburg Opera Guild, was represented by a pleasant little suite called Scaramouche, very well received. Debussy's En blanc et noir was exquisite—too much so, in fact, for many of the audience who seemed to feel that no one would mind if they coughed during the slow movement. Incidentally, although coughs-altogether are not new, one type surely deserves special tribute—the genius who contrives to sound forth at the precise moment that a performer announces an encore.

To return to Vronsky and Babin, the most all-inclusive comment we can think of is that they made us very happy.

CHRISTIAN TRAINING STRESSED IN TALK

Professor Bush of Harvard Speaks in Alexander Series

The essentially Christian quality of English Humanism was stressed by Professor Bush of Harvard University when he spoke to a large audience in Hart House Theatre yesterday afternoon. His address was the third in the eleventh annual series of Alexander lectures.

"Training in virtue and good letters for an active Christian public life" was the object of humanist educators, who sought to make the wisdom of the ancients supplement the teachings of Christ. Many of the English students who travelled to Italy during the Renaissance were churchmen who read the Greek New Testament as well as the classics, and were not lacking in sober piety.

The gradual decline of humanism was the result of several factors. Of these, science was the most dangerous and most insidious. Astronomy, for example, showed the small comfortable

The sum available is eight hundred dollars ($800.00) for the year 1939-40 and the Trustees may renew the award for a second year if they are satisfied with the first year's record.

world to be but a tiny part of a huge mechanical system in which God might be a law of motion. Humanists, who championed orthodoxy, with its theory of divine providence, came to be regarded as reactionaries, and supporters of an obsolete philosophy.

CO-EDS CRAVE CONTESTS!

American universities go in for contests in a big way. Nearly every American college elects its Queen of Beauty for the year. Texas University recently held a contest for "The Ugliest Man" and strange to say there was no scarcity of entrants. One co-ed was crowned "Queen of the Breakfast Table" because she outshone the other co-eds in the morning.

The idea of starting a popularity contest on our own campus caused a lively discussion by students yesterday. One ed suggested we have a contest for "the beauty of feminine feet".

Ruth Don Carlos, III Vic, stated, "I have never yet had a full-fledged bunton, when approached about a foot beauty contest. 'I once had my name in a high school paper for winning a nose-blowing contest,' she disclosed, 'and I won with two beeps and a honk.'"

Grace Weymark, I Household Science, favours the idea of a gum-chewing contest. "I would enter that," she laughed.

Ted Gray, II Vic, stated, "Beauty does not necessarily mean a pretty face. It should mean beauty of character above all other things." He favours a popularity contest under these conditions. "A beauty contest would lower the dignity of the campus," commented Sally Macdonald, II U.C. Josephine Higgins, III Political Science, thinks a popularity contest "would single out certain girls" and do harm to campus life.

"A beauty contest just isn't feasible because Martha doesn't go to university," smiled John Morris, II Arts. Helen Fielder, III U.C., thinks a popularity contest would be great fun and would create interest on Toronto's campus.

"If a popularity contest is run at Varsity, where are you going to get all the beautiful girls?" frowned ed. His companion, Tom Paton, II Arts, answered, "There are always the first year girls."

in previous struggles in which the Mother Country was engaged, it would be folly to suggest that our country should secede from the Empire rather than come to the aid of the flag in the next war.

The Rt. Hon. Wm. Wood, who will lead the government forces, supported by the visitors from Laval, stated, "That as a Canadian and a North American he could see no reason why Canadian blood should be spilled in Europe in any future war involving any nation whatsoever. The fact that Canada seems safe enough as an ammunition dump ought to be sufficient evidence that it will not be attacked in the next war by any European or Asiatic power."

Outstanding Athletes to Take Part in Tomorrow's Athletic Night

By An' How
The "slaughterhouse" wing of Hart House will make its contribution to Athletic Night with the year's greatest fist, flop and foil extravaganza. The "fightin'" agriculturists of O.A.C. are sending a squad of no less than thirty athletes. There will be twelve boxing bouts, eleven wrestlers, eight fencers and a few assorted dog fights to round out a glorious evening of legalized mayhem and massacre.

The twelve man fight team is led by Captain "Jock" Piggott, intercollegiate middleweight champion, now fighting at 175 lbs. Jock is the most outstanding boxer on the squad, having trimmed some of America's best at Cornell, Syracuse, Buffalo and U.S. Coastguard. Currie of S.P.S., who took the heavyweight title at the junior assault, will also fill a light-heavy berth since the Baitlin' Aggies have no heavies.

Ted Jarvis of Vic, equally dangerous as a scrapper or grid artist, is slated for the 165 lb. berth, though a sprained hand may keep him on the sideline. Fred De Wolfe, intercollegiate welter champion from Halifax, is preparing a warm reception for any visitor who boxes at 155 lbs.

There are no less than three welterweights, Bill Raymore, Tony Kingmill and George Mees, all from S.P.S. At 135 lbs. Toronto will have "Stew" Parker of Trinity, intercollegiate champion. Assisting at lightweight will be Bobby McAdam, who eliminated "Tiger" How, great verbal pugilist, in the trials last night.

At the bantamweight limit "Cudgie" Dillon, little English wizard with the dynamite dukes will be assisted by "Tiny" Hurst of Vic. Hood of S.P.S. will fill the feather berth.

Oscar Brunet at 118 lbs. is the only intercollegiate wrestler to compete. This starry little center provides action all the way. Clare Thompson of Vic is slated for the middleweight berth. Grappling at 175 pounds is Art Scott, runner-up in the championships last spring. "Fightin' Fat" McIntyre is the only heavyweight on the squad. This pounding pachyderm with the charley horse between his ears will be showing for the first time to outside competition.

STUDENTS BELIEVE DEBATE QUESTION IS APPROPRIATE

Views Vary on Merits of the Present City Administration Here

On Wednesday next Hart House debaters are to argue about whether the House has confidence in the present administration of the City of Toronto.

Several out-of-town students, when asked if they thought this is a good idea, claimed they didn't know anything about the local civic administration, and didn't care if its merits were debated or not.

Don Allen, second year engineer, said he has "implicit" confidence in Toronto's city fathers, but added that it was a good subject for the debate. Kirk Pittie, also from S.P.S., said "The municipal system is just about perfect", although he doesn't trust most of the people who run it.

"The year has just started. The administration hasn't had time to do anything to debate about," according to E. Schneider, I. Dents, John Flett, another freshman, thinks people must have confidence in the Toronto city council because so many were re-elected.

A few students who were approached for opinions refused to say anything, but denied that they were afraid that the Gestapo would "put the finger" on them if they said the wrong thing. One did not identify himself but said he had confidence in a few of Toronto's public men. "Others," he said, "are just pickers after an easy way to make money." He believed that the question was an appropriate one to debate at the present time.

Hendaye: The insurgent army was reported as drawing closer to Barcelona last night. Three key positions of the government were captured by rebel troops.

Detroit: Fighting continued between members of the United Automobile Workers Union yesterday, when supporters and opposers of Homer Martin clashed. Martin's position as president of the union is being challenged.

STUDENTS CUT CROSSPATHS!

The theory that a straight line is the shortest distance between two given points was given a further setback yesterday when it was discovered that the paths beaten out on the snow of the main campus by the feet of hurrying eds and co-eds during the past few days are anything but straight.

Three of the paths are regular main highways, beaten down hard and quite wide. These are from the little red schoolhouse to Hart House (with a slight curve in the direction of the Women's Union), from the McLennan Laboratory to Hart House, and from Croft Chapter House to S.P.S.

The paths from Croft House to the Medical Building and to the main Library are much narrower, and like that

"Men Without Country" Say Inmates of Hostel

Conditions of Single Unemployed at Hostels Are Described

By Glen How

The transient shelter on Duke St. was visited Saturday by Dr. Wilfred Lockhart, S.C.M. secretary, and a Varsity reporter. The terrible conditions under which these men are forced to live seem capable of arousing active sympathy among even the most thoughtless of our sheltered undergraduates.

Over one hundred and fifty continue to exist in this rambling old house. There are few blankets, most of the men sleeping on newspapers. There is a kitchen and cook, but seldom anything to eat. Seventy-five of these residents were put in jail last Tuesday and Wednesday for soliciting aid.

The city refuses to help these men since they are not residents, and no help is forthcoming from federal or provincial authorities.

When asked why he did not return home, the cook answered: "I left my home two years ago, if I go back, they say I am no longer a resident. Highway work in the summer is always for local party stalwarts. Everywhere we (Continued on Page 4)

HOFFMAN COMPARES ASPECTS OF REICH

Germany Described as "Shouting, Silent, Suffering" by Lecturer

"Shouting, Silent, Suffering Germany" was the subject of an address by Dr. Conrad Hoffman in Convocation Hall yesterday afternoon.

"Suffering Germany" includes not only Jews, but pacifists, internationalists and Roman Catholics or Protestants who support the church against the state, is the opinion of Dr. Hoffman. "It is impossible to exile all other countries people," he said, "since other countries will not take them in. Therefore they are being slowly exterminated. All professions and trades are closed to them, until starvation stares them in the face. To leave Germany, they must obtain passports by paying heavy taxes and also have permission to enter another country. For a great many escape is impossible. Some of them suicide. Others somehow continue to exist, herded into a little corner of the city, afraid to be seen publicly and in an ever-increasing state of degradation."

The Germany of flags, bands and military parades whose people are working into a frenzy by Hitler's speeches Dr. Hoffman calls "Shouting Germany". However, there is still a large part of the population making up (Continued on page 3)

Members of Hart House who intend to run for the Debates Committee are reminded that they must have spoken twice during this academic year, or a total of three times in this and last year.

ECONOMICS BUILDING INSTALS AMPLIFIERS

Loudspeaker to Overcome the Acoustic Difficulties in Big Hall

A loudspeaking system, which carries the voice of the lecturer to the furthest rows of the Big Hall, was a new innovation introduced at the Economics Building Friday.

The lecture room is so large that students in the back rows claim to be unable to hear, and the new amplifier was provided to remedy this situation.

Experimentation by Professor Plumpere caused no little amusement to a second year economics lecture Friday. He talked into the microphone as he adjusted it, and his voice came out intermittently in unexpected intensities of sound, frequently accompanied by squeals and howls from the loudspeaker.

A marked improvement in audibility was noted by the students, and it is expected that the equipment will become a permanent fixture in the Big Hall.

RADIO TRANSMITTER OPERATES ON CAMPUS

Located on the top floor of the Electrical Building is what would appear to be a full fledged radio station. Comprised of a transmitter and receiver, it was built five years ago by two students as a thesis for their masters' degrees. Actually, the apparatus is the type to be found in an amateur station, not in a broadcast station.

The set operates on short wave, and is available for scientific purposes such as investigation of the ionosphere.

Varsity Swimmers Drop Meet By One Point At Rochester

Five Records Broken at Intercollegiate Swim Meet
Saturday

Rochester, Jan. 21: With a total of five records smashed, the University of Toronto came within an ace of beating one of the best teams in eastern United States. Leading 37-31 with only the 400 yard relay to go, Varsity dropped the event to the University of Rochester squad. The 7 points awarded for the relay made the final count Rochester 38, Toronto 37. Varsity's showing was the best made here for several years and the team paced by Earl Clawson and Green forced Rochester to the limit and aided in breaking 5 records, a record in itself.

Varsity captured three first places, seven seconds and one third. Nels Earl won the 100 free style in one of the fastest and most exciting races of the afternoon. His team-mate, George Meen, who had set the pace, came in a split second behind. Clawson and Girvan came first and second in the 200 yard breast stroke. Ged coming in more than a length ahead of the nearest Rochester man. Girvan's record, made here last year, was broken. Clawson (Continued on Page 4)

LAVAL STUDENTS GUEST SPEAKERS AT U.C. DEBATE

University College Parliament Decides Canada should not Succeed

Two debaters from Laval University, Quebec City, were the guests of the U.C. Parliament, Friday in the junior common room, debating in favour of the resolution: "Resolved that in the event of a European war involving Great Britain, Canada should secede from the British Empire." The house voted against the motion, 40-38.

Mr. Walter Tovell, of U.C., speaking in French for the opposition, said that secession from the Empire means the resignation of Canada to a status as a small nation with a very small population. He pointed out the tremendous advantages derived from the British heritage—personal liberty, the British heritage of the nation, and the commerce of the world. He stated, "It is the duty of each of us to aid Britain by participating in the struggle to save the principle of democracy."

Mr. Raymond Lasage, of Laval University, speaking in English for the government, stated, "It has been said that the twentieth century would be that (Continued on Page 4)

PROFESSOR BUSH REVIEWS MILTON

Discussion of Blind Poet is Concluding Alexander
Lecture

A review of Milton's works and how they reflect the poet's own mind was the basis of the lecture given in Hart House Theatre last Friday. This was the last of the Alexander Series given by Professor Bush of Harvard University.

Called the best English poet modelled after the Greeks, Milton wrote on various themes throughout his life. His early essays and Latin poems followed ancient myth so closely that they show sensuous paganism. "They show the charms of retirement and also poems L'Allegro and Il Penseroso an active life," said Professor Bush, "though they sound a half unconscious goodbye to youth."

When civil war broke out, his prose tracts reflected his political ideas of (Continued on Page 4)

Niagara's Purple Eagles Win Over Blue Seniors in Cage Fixture

By Mike Greenstein

Superior passing and shooting gave Niagara University's Purple Eagles a 51-31 victory over Warren Stevens' Varsity cagers at Hart House Saturday night. The Americans took advantage of every opportunity to chalk up eighteen field goals and fifteen out of seventeen free throws. Toronto, on the other hand, had an off night and only made good on eleven of the twenty-three foul throws awarded them.

The officials had a busy evening of it, handing out forty-seven personal fouls and three technicals. Lavarnway and McGregor of Varsity and Campbell of Niagara each left the game with four personals. It was the second meeting between these two teams, Niagara having also won the previous clash 39-20. A large crowd turned out to watch Varsity in their first home appearance since the pre-Christmas exhibition games.

It would be difficult to select individual stars on the winning line-up. Every one on the American squad played a stout game. However, Schmid at centre, as well as Vignola, Kearney, Bell, Wood and DeSantis were the pick of the lot, with the latter scoring thirteen points. For Varsity, Bill Rogin with five field goals and nine out of twelve foul shots, was outstanding. Jack Lavarnway also turned in an excellent effort, scoring eight points and until his banishment in the last half was a constant threat on the forward line. Chick Mahoney and Walt McGregor played their usually effective games.

The first ten minutes of play were slow, with Varsity's zone defence working well. A quick basket by Lavarnway after Kearney had scored a foul shot put the blue and white in the lead. Vignola hacked at Mahoney in the act of shooting, but Chick missed (Continued on page 3)

That co-eds object to the latest game of indoor snow-balling is now an established fact at Whitney Hall. Passing humorists saw open windows in the Hall Saturday night and having an abundance of sticky snow could not resist trying their skill at throwing said snow through said windows.

Much to the dismay and disgust of the occupants, too many were successful. It is not a good thing, according to one girl, to have to sleep with half a dozen wet snowballs.

Mitt and Mat Artists Overcome
Guelph Aggies by 12
Bouts to 8

By Aln' How

On Saturday night the mitt and mat artists trimmed the battling Aggies by a score of twelve bouts to eight to save the season's first athletic night from being a complete defeat. The blue and white warriors took six of nine wrestling bouts and six of eleven boxing tests.

"Chester" Martin's charges showed science and condition to burn, as they mowed down the grappling Guelphmen. Toronto got away on top when Nicl Mustard used his headlock and body scissors to unwind Norris of O.A.C. for the first bout of the evening.

Art Scott, wrestling at 175 lbs., pinned Belcher of O.A.C. twice in five minutes. The lightning speed and dazzling display of holds left the visitor gasping on the rosin. "Stew" Phoenix, light-heavy champion, wrestled heavily in the absence of McIntyre, the Fergus Thistle. Phoenix rode the heavier Miles of O.A.C. to take the decision.

Mel Giionna's leather pushers only had a margin of one bout but their wins were sensational. Four of the Varsity boys won by knockouts, Piggett and Dillon in the first and Jarvis and Currie in the second round.

TOIKE OIKE ECHOES AT SCHOOL AT HOME

Himber Bandstand is Surrounded by Enthusiasts
at Royal York

Gaily tripping the light fantastic, an army of Engineers and their ladies shook the foundations of the Royal York Hotel with their incessant Toike Oikes. In between School yells, Richard Himber led his orchestra in some musical selections. Next door, Trump Davidson and his lads demonstrated Dixieland stuff to picrochetting couples and jittering lugs.

The Himber bandstand was surrounded all night by a throng of enthusiastic fans listening to his novel pyramiding trumpets while the boogie-woogie fans haunted the Davidson bandstand.

Stewart Allen, the vocalist whose voice is heard on all the Himber recordings, gave the arrangements a distinctive interpretation. The evening was featured by Maestro Richard's presentation of his famed Parade of the Bands act in which his boys gave their impression of the styles of other name bands including Benny Goodman, Hal Kemp, Rudy Vallee, Guy (Continued on Page 4)

The McCullagh Broadcast

Apparently the Sunday afternoon broadcasts of Mr. George McCullagh are being followed with considerable interest by the public. Helped by all the questionable statements made by many people regarding the suppressing of free speech by the C.B.C. and the dictatorship of the federal government, the broadcasts have been given a good publicity angle on the start, and it can be prophesied that they are going to hold an audience.

Despite the differences of opinion that the readers of the Globe and Mail may have concerning the ideas of the publisher, there are few who would doubt the sincerity of the youthful Mr. McCullagh. Yesterday he struck upon two notes, with which most of his hearers, with the exception perhaps of some of Canada's ambitious but embryo statesmen would agree Canada with her ten millions is grossly overgoverned and people are getting a little fed up with small-time squabbles over provincial, city, and municipal rights.

If some people were to make the challenges that were made yesterday, they would be called revolutionaries. Indeed Canada was called upon to revolutionize her form of government, and the massive debt which she is piling up, makes it quite evident that something is very necessary. It will be a little too much to expect that ambitious young politicians will be willing to sacrifice their own careers for the sake of the future security of the Dominion, but in war-time it is not too much to ask young men with just as high ambitions to sacrifice their lives for their country.

It is going to be interesting to see the results of this broadcasting campaign, and ascertain just what is the plan of the speaker. A great many people are of the opinion that George McCullagh is slated to go a long way. If he continues to rise as rapidly as he has risen, provincial politicians of the "glorified county councils" may begin to realize that somebody is waking up apathetic Canadians, to the fact that instead of growing up, this country has degenerated to a "financial paralysis".

We wonder whether the people of Canada really want the present form of over-government. If they don't let's try democracy for a change.

The Telegram Speaks

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir,

For the past few months you have harped with persistent monotony on the type of publicity the University of Toronto receives in the downtown press. Your editorial on Friday resounds like the complaint of an ill-mannered child clamouring for attention.

You state that other cities give their universities "broader and fairer coverage" than Toronto accords its university. If you undertook to consult Mr. Dunlop you would learn from the Director of University Extension and Publicity that, so far as The Evening Telegram is particularly concerned, the allegation is without foundation. You would learn that reports on research, debates, lectures, appointments, gifts and awards are given considerable space, and that there is no question as to the fairness of these reports.

That there could be more articles on the various research activities in the university is not denied. But the infrequency of such reports is due to three reasons—the reasonable unwillingness of research workers to make public announcements before the conclusion of their work; the desire of most research workers to announce their results in scientific publications; and the aversion of some to co-operate with the press at all. For myself I should like to say that the third reason rarely exists.

For the "unfavourable" publicity the university occasionally receives you must turn to yourselves. You create that "unfavourable" publicity. What you say and do is reported in The Telegram in the manner in which you say and do it. If you indulge in fatuous initiation performances on public streets, childish pranks and ridiculous debates you must expect these events to be reflected in the press in a corresponding light.

In the very same issue containing your editorial complaint is an example of frivolity which, if it were reported in the down-town press, you would justifiably denounce as "unfavourable publicity". I refer to that story with the double-column head, "Co-Eds Crave Contests", with such choice inelegancies as "I have never yet had a full-fledged bunion", and "I once had my name in a high-school paper for winning a nose-blowing contest".

Yours faithfully,

A. Noblston.

Editorial Reply

Mr. Noblston has covered the university news for The Telegram very capably for a number of years. With some parts of his letter we disagree. Possibly the gentleman is too sensitive and found personal criticism where none was intended.

While Mr. Noblston's own news coverage of university events is essentially fair, we refer him to papers of other university cities for proof that they give broader coverage to university events than do Toronto papers. For example the Winnipeg Free Press, and the Montreal Gazette.

That more publicity should be given to the accomplishments of the university is admitted by all. But it is the problem of the university to make its work public, and that is the main point of Friday's editorial. We must take steps to help Mr. Noblston and other reporters to get this news, and it may be necessary to sell his superiors and convert the public to its news value.

We commend Mr. Noblston's statements on unfavourable publicity to all those campus societies who indulge in "fatuous initiation performances on public streets". He is underlining a point we wished to make. It should be remembered that the eyes of the community are on university students, and they cannot afford to be made appear ridiculous to the public.

However, a little flippancy in the course of a debate can hardly be regarded as a bad thing. But it is indefensible to do, as one paper has done, to print only the frivolous matter of a serious Hart House debate in such a manner as to misrepresent it entirely, and then run heads which give an absolutely erroneous impression of the conclusion reached. Even Mr. Noblston realizes as does anyone else who has followed our campaign for better publicity for the university, that the Evening Telegram is not the evening paper to which we referred, in dealing with that subject.

On the whole we cannot help but sympathize in some ways with the newspapermen, who are out to print that which they know their readers want to read, and write it in such a way as to attract their readers' attention. It is quite probable that the public would rather read about noisy beer-guzzling in fraternities, than the great fellowship which the boys have. But it is felt that a more sympathetic treatment of the university in general by editorial writers and columnists as well as news writers, would aid in a campaign for a better understanding of university life, and the contribution which universities are making to society.

Norman Wilks

Norman Wilks appeared before the audience of Eaton Auditorium in a pleasing nonchalant manner which must have been typical of the nineteenth

Reports from Ottawa say the federal government thinks this university should get a $500,000 grant—from the provincial government. Queen's Park favours a million dollar grant, if the money comes from the City Treasury. A large endowment has been promised by the Elastic Garter Makers Guild if The Varsity will stop advertising wire garters. With all this money coming in the university will be placed on a commercial basis. To take care of all the grants, the Bursar will move from Simcoe Hall to Grant's Tomb. The women's residence will be renamed Richard Whitney Hall, while Hart House will probably become the House of Morgan. Instead of a visitors' register it will have a cash register.

For attending classes, sociology students will receive Social Credits, and all exam results will be quoted in blocked marks. Every student, under the new regulations, must take at least 5 per cent interest per annum in his lectures. Athletics will be similarly affected; for instance, physical training is to be called fiscal training. The rugby teams will have greenbacks instead of halfbacks, and the swimming teams are to be taught to float bond issues. Classes in self-defence are expected to learn to evade income tax.

If the money holds out, we may expect to see agitation in favour of paying students for going to school, with the slogan "Sixty dollars every Saturday". Varsityers having no Saturday lectures must be content with Fifty dollars every Friday with a floy floy. Grads are promised two cars in every garage and a chicken in every rumble seat. They will all be equipped to make a living, for with their diplomas they'll get a gold plated tin cup and a big bunch of blue and white pencils.

century composer-pianists represented on his program, which was sponsored by the Alumni Association of the Toronto Conservatory of Music in aid of the Marion Ferguson Foundation.

The choice of pieces carried us back to the beginnings of Romanticism in music, and illustrated an interesting phase in the development of that period. Starting with an early Beethoven Sonata in A flat Mr. Wilks struck many a familiar note for both old and young. The element of familiarity heightened the enjoyment of a composition the charming simplicity of which is frequently reminiscent of Haydn.

Then in contrast was the Waldstein Sonata composed during the second part of Beethoven's life, much more brilliant and elaborate in style. This was performed with the same depth of musical expression as the opening number.

Blue Volleyball Squad Takes City Series Lead

Intermediates Win Complete Schedule of Four Games in One Afternoon

Varsity's intermediate volleyball sextet took a commanding lead in the city series on Saturday afternoon at Central "Y" when they won their complete schedule of four games against West End "Y", Y.M.H.A., Central "Y" and Toronto Bible College. Sparked by the powerful spiking of Captain Ben Shulen, and Bruce Mackenzie, the whole team played sensational volleyball in the crucial moments to emerge victorious.

In the first encounter of the afternoon the Toronto squad had an easy time with West End "Y", winning 21-13. After a short rest, the Varsity boys came right back against Y.M.H.A. in a nip-and-tuck struggle which saw the Blue team trailing from the start and not until the score was 17-all did they draw even. The final count was 21-18 for Toronto. The Toronto Bible College proved an easy touch in the third Toronto game of the afternoon, succumbing by 21-8.

The last game of the afternoon saw the Toronto team pitted against Central "Y", the highly-touted favourites in the series and previous winners also of their three games of the afternoon.

However, the Blue squad were never more than one point behind after the first few exchanges and paced by the spiking of Gold and Mackenzie by virtue of the superb set-ups of Peart and Cash, the team took a commanding lead at 18-10, a lead which they succeeded in maintaining until the final whistle with the score 21-15.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shifman

SEEN AT THE CIRCUS

Over 700 spectators pushed into Hart House on Saturday night to officially open the "Big Night" series—which features more variety than the Chase and Siaborn Radio Hour and more stars than the Milky Way. . . . Among that audience, we found interesting people and in our best "Over the Teacup" manner we will tell you who we saw. At the boxing matches we saw sweet Varsity Sue herself, whose eyes shone when Teddy Jarvis scored a knockout in the twinkling of an eye. . . . We saw one proud parent, Mrs. Singer, who could hardly keep her seat when her Percy ("Zol got im benchin'") and I don't mean a coach's benchin') was running up and down the floor. . . . We caught a glimpse of one of our old bosses, Jim Tiller, former Varsity sports editor, who sadly and sincerely was telling the world that there were better teams in his day. . . . We caught a glimpse of "Lone Star" Bowen, without a girl, but with a bunch of fraternity brethren, at the fights; cheering on fighting Piggot. . . . We saw the elder Humenik, who returned to see the kid brother "Red", who's breaking in this year with the senior basketball squad. . . . It was quite a sight to see Horton Shipman sitting all by himself at the basketball game and then just vanish. . . . It was good to see the old bunch of Doctor Brown, Doctor Gossin and Doctor Black, fully enjoying the 3 final smashing victories of the Blue Bombers. . . . Seen dancing was Lil' Lou Somers, who was celebrating his 21st birthday (Gosh we didn't even notice what he wore).

VITAL STATISTICS

If the distance covered by the players on the basketball floor were all added up and one person was to run it in a straight line, he'd probably find himself mixed up in the Spanish Revolution. . . . If all the jumps were added together and it was possible to defy the Law of Gravity, we could have reached Mars and maybe scared hell out of them. . . . During practice Varsity scored 642 points, but only 31 during the game. . . . Incidentally Western has defeated Niagara in Niagara and we meet Western in 2 league games. . . . 700 and 1 spectators were disappointed with the basketball exhibition put up by the Varsity boys (so was the coach and the eleven Varsity players). . . . There were 1523 punches thrown in the boxing bouts in the upper gymnasium, but only 426 landed. . . . There was two forty-ouncers of blood shed in the eleven bouts on Saturday night. . . . one fighter's eye blackened. . . . and one fighter's confidence gave out. . . . In the first time in the history of boxing in Hart House, a person was knocked out by "Vacuumitis", one of the rarest of all ring injuries. The only other case we have on record was the last Tony Galento fight. Strangely enough, it occurred in the final bout of the evening, with the score Agrioduritis 5 wins, Varsity 5 wins. The place was crowded, the basketball game had finished and all eyes were on Captain Jack Piggot, on whose shoulders victory depended. The fight started and we experts could see from the look on the O.A.C. fighter's face, that Piggot had a situation where the "Vacuumite-Special" could be used. Slowly he brought back his arm and swish! just missing the O.A.C. fighter's nose, he created a vacuum under his proboscis (medically speaking, of course). The unfortunate fighter fell to a knee, and tried to break through the vacuum in order to breathe. He finally did, but by this time the referee had reached the 10 count and the University of Toronto won a 6 to 5 decision over O.A.C. on a "Vacuumite-Special". (Lucky eh!). . . . That adding up the weights of the wrestlers and boxers there were two tons of fightin' flesh in the Hart House rings on Saturday night. . . . That if all the enthusiastic cheers of the spectators were added up and emitted in a professor's seminar, they probably wouldn't even disturb him. There was, of course, the ordinary polite round of applause after each round, but to a spectator who enjoys a vocal workout with his athletic exhibitions, it must have been a rather flat affair. We've heard more noise in the chess room. . . . That Roy Dilworth, of North Toronto Collegiate, did an excellent job on the Public Address System that was employed on Saturday night, but the person who selected the recordings for dancing should be sentenced to six weeks dancing to the tune of the same records that he selected. The dancing might not have been so bad, even to the tune of the records selected, but the machine could only go fast enough to play in waltz time. Which made it rather difficult. All in all it was one of the most enjoyable evenings we have had since last year's similar affairs. We are sure that everyone who attended, and it was sure gratifying to note how many did, enjoyed themselves. We are sure that similar evenings will receive similar support from the university.

both shots. Rogin put in a free throw but missed a second shot when fouled by Campbell. Bud Fadden made good on two free throws when he was charged as he got set for a shot, and the score was tied. Lavarway scored two more field goals after a basket and another foul shot had put the visitors ahead. The score at the end of the first quarter had Varsity leading 7-6.

Play became ragged as the second period opened but Lavarway dribbled in from the side to score. A moment later Mike Vignola and "Franny" Bello tossed in two long shots to put the winners ahead. Toronto never caught up again. Niagara scored four more points before Mahoney scored a point on a foul throw. Rogin added three more to his total and the first half ended with Niagara leading 20-15. Out of thirteen attempts Varsity had only scored three foul shots.

Early in the third period Lavarway went out for four personals and was replaced by Tom Bannigan. Campbell for Niagara was also banished as play became rough and the winners started breaking through the Varsity defence. With the score 23-16 in favour of Niagara, Bill Rogin threw in two free throws and Chick Mahoney tossed one in from the side to put Varsity in the picture again. The Americans, however, came back fast to ram in ten more points to give them a total of thirty-three.

Toronto tried desperately to come from behind in the last frame but Niagara was too good and their shots were falling into the hoop from all angles. The final score was Niagara 51, Varsity 31.

University of Toronto (31): Rogin (19), Lavarway (8), Mahoney (3), McGregor, Singer, Humenik, Cahill, Shute (1), Bannigan.

Niagara University (51): Blake (1), Campbell (2), Schmid (7), Vignola (10), Kearney (6), Bello (7), Wood (3), DeSantis (13), Fadden (2).

Continuing our policy of bringing the latest weather developments to our readers, winter seems to have arrived with a vengeance. Or had you noticed? It was good news for local skiing enthusiasts of whom many availed themselves of the chance to go up to the Varsity Ski Club yesterday. This week will probably be one of the best for skiing, even though some noble people may forego the pleasure in favour of book-learning. Far be it from us to influence you but don't forget the vagaries of our climate; it's now or never.

Well, St. Hilda's are showing the way this year as far as badminton is concerned. They held their annual college meet last Thursday and while challengers may yet make the team, the line-up has narrowed down to Mary Becker and "Tibs" Annesley, with Babe Saunders, Betty Wright, Chris Pentland, Elizabeth McKay and Jean Howson, playing off for the remaining four positions. By Wednesday we shall know the final line-up.

To University College Badminton Club and especially to "Proxy" Bryans, the efficient mediator, St. Hilda's extend their thanks for arranging the tournament on the U.C. courts. The players in Thursday's meet were unanimous in voicing their appreciation of U.C.'s generosity.

Always keep the best to the last. The best we have to tell you today about coming events is tonight's hockey game. When the novice Medcettes take the ice against St. Mike's it will be the first time that Medcettes have entered the co-ed hockey league. The Irish have been improving (even though the casual onlooker might deny it) and hope to start the season in a big way by chalking up a win. We can guarantee that next to "The Lady Vanishes" this will be the most exciting event in Toronto tonight. Varsity Stadium, 7 o'clock.

freedom. Milton also wrote about the freedom of the press and divorce.

Primarily a Puritan, though also a humanist, Milton's later works were of a religious nature. The speaker referred to Paradise Lost, Paradise Regained and Samson Agonistes. "That reason should control irrational and sensuous passions is the kernel of the former poem," said Professor Bush.

Vincent Russell, twenty-one, of Moncton, N.B., is typical of the roving axemen from the Maritime. "The lumber camps are all closed down this winter. One company at Fort Francis that hired thirty-five hundred men last winter hasn't taken on a man. The boys have no place to go."

"The citizens of Toronto have given us a lot but we don't want relief, what we want is work and wages. It wasn't so bad when Bennett had his road camps. At least a man could get enough to eat, but now..."

These men are over eight per cent Anglo-Saxon, with ages ranging from seventeen to thirty. Their clothes are worn and ragged. Many are miserable with colds, weakness and bad teeth. Bad as these conditions are these boys are not utterly embittered. They remember the scores of their "buddies" whose only shelter from the chill north wind is the thin wood of box-cars down on the tracks.

Dr. Lockhart has arranged for two representatives, both former college men, to speak at Hart House on Tuesday.

Probably one of the most pernicious influences which has ever reached the campus of the University of Toronto is the notorious swing club. The president and vice-president of this institution might well be spending their time doing some of those things for which they were sent to university rather than becoming public nuisances, and malicious influences on the campus through the medium of the exhibitionism of their so-called swing club.

The taxpayers of this province pay their money, not to educate overgrown high school faddists into the higher learning of sophisticated perverted jazz music, but to train thinking young men and women to become good and useful citizens. The dance itself may be deplored as a menace to good society, but their ultra-modern version called swing is rapidly eating away the very moral fibres of our youth. We label the swing club the greatest enemy of advancement in Varsity today, and call upon the undergraduates to unite together to wipe it off the face of the campus. The fact that it is spreading its ugly tentacles throughout the foundations of this institution, seeking to undermine the moral basis of college society, should make every student doubly keen to purge our university of this vice before it grows too late.

of Canada, if we really want our country to become a leader in the field of progress, of cultural achievement, if we want a strong nation having an influence in international affairs, for the welfare of mankind, then we must absolutely keep Canada out of war. And since a European war involving England represents for this country an imminent danger for the present and ruin for the future, we are convinced that the resolution now studied should be adopted."

The Hon. I. Sussman, leader of the opposition, speaking in English, said, "Either we can be independent or we can join the United States if we secede." He went on to show the uselessness of independence, due to the lack of ammunition, men, etc.

Mr. Jacques Flynn, of Laval U., speaking in French for the government, said, "Canada is an American country tied culturally to the U.S., and to Washington, a more progressive capital than London. Canada's destiny lies not in Europe but in building up a better Canada."

lectures to be delivered in West Hall, University College, by Professor A. E. Grauer of the Social Science Department. The next lecture will be held on February 2.

According to information from the Extension Department, the course is intended primarily for active social workers and for board members of charitable institutions. Based on such topics as unemployment relief, housing, public health, social insurance, trade unions, and labour legislation, the lectures will enable workers to deal more efficiently with the problems they are called upon to face from day to day. The general background and the gradual development of these problems will be treated thoroughly in order to achieve a better understanding of them as they stand today.

At the present time slightly over one hundred persons have enrolled for the lecture series, the fee for which is two dollars, and it is expected that at least thirty more will do so.

ber, by a pianist whose constant vigour seemed to be effective with a minimum expenditure of effort.

As an exponent of Chopin, Mr. Wilks did not quite do justice to himself. This group of salon pieces was enthusiastically received, and in fact drew an encore. Mr. Wilks gave us that delicacy and beauty of romantic poetry transcribed on the piano. There were several instances, however, where we failed to distinguish sufficiently the flowing melody from the elaborate harmonic background.

Schumann's Carroll was a fitting climax to the program. Each little tone-picture was singularly delightful. The constant changes in rhythm and mood brought to the fore a pianist of real ability. Mr. Wilks combines earnest thought with depth of feeling in registering the gamut of emotions. His fine gradations of power and delicate nuances of expression lent the utmost interest to his performance.

Hollywood Theatre

The new series of French movies at the Hollywood theatre was off to a grand start with the comedy Bichon.

This story of a timid male in the hands of a beautiful, but determined woman, was full of laughs. It is a picture in which we could well imagine Edward Everett Horton. However, while Hollywood "types" Mr. Horton we have seen this French actor in completely different roles.

Far from being a copy of American comedies the picture relied on the slightly risqué but at all times humorous French style.

Every small part was handled with the same excellence as the starring roles. This is a notable feature of so many European films. Especially is it true of the French and Russian. T.M.

SPEAKING OF SWING

By Les Vipond

BUNNY BERIGAN

One of the most controversial problems about swing music and one for which we haven't a final answer concerns the relative importance of arrangements in good swing. Many critics believe that swing can never be written down in notes and that the very term "swing" signifies improvisation, either individual or collective. Other men, often musicians themselves, admire the work of orchestras like Casa Loma and Larry Clinton's that achieve swing by means of complicated and strict arrangements. Hughes Panassié, however, sees in the rise of orchestras like the above an indication that swing is on the way out as the true spirit becomes lost and a mechanical artificiality substituted. M. Panassié hedges a bit, however, when he appreciates the greatness of an orchestra like Ellington's that uses arrangements all the time with improvised solos superimposed on the arrangements about 50 to 60 per cent of the time.

But whether you like strictly arranged music or improvised choruses, you'll get a thrill out of Berigan's outfit if you're at the Meds At-Home next Thursday. His arrangements are mostly done by Joe Lipman who also plays piano according to Sam Levine down at the Onyx Club. These arrangements are as clear and as modern as any being done today. Plenty of nickels have been put into slots to hear examples of his work such as Wacky Duet. If you admire a musician who can break away from the melodic line and improvise inspired harmonies and melodic patterns, then you're really going to be sent by Berigan's aggregation. Bunny himself on trumpet is, of course, the best white man in the business of trumpeting. Sometimes his flights of imagination produce some of the most thrilling swing of all time. Ray Konick on trombone has a vigorous powerful style that is very effective, especially when working along with Berigan, with whom he has been associated for quite some time.

And here is the latest information, from the current "Down Beat", out Saturday, regarding Bunny's personnel. Bunny and Irving Goodman, trumpets; Hank Wayland, bass; Murray Williams and Gus Bivona, saxes; Coniff, trombone. "Downbeat" also reports on page 8 that Buddy Rich is on drums, and on page two announces that already Rich has left Berigan, and gone with the new outfit of Harry James, leaving us still in the dark re drums. Bunny will probably bring about ten pieces here, aiming at a more chamber-music style of swing rather than the blaring killer-diller type.

Incidentally the final results of "Downbeat's" popularity poll conducted among thousands of American musicians, places Berigan as second most popular trumpet in the business.

More Medical Service Desired By Students

Tuberculin Test Considered a Health Necessity by Students

Proposals for broadening the medical service at the university to include tuberculin tests and even health insurance received varied response from a number of students approached over the week-end. Most of the students thought the tuberculin test was a "good idea", but at least one thought it was not the place of a university health service to supply it.

"Anyone at all familiar with tuberculosis is aware that only very careful examination can detect its presence," said H. McGregor, IV, Vic.

John Bennett, I Vic, expressed the opinion that most students can afford private medical service and should have (Continued on Page 4)

Press Club Luncheon

Luncheon meet of the University of Toronto Press Club in the north common room of Hart House today at one o'clock.

This meeting is open to all who are interested in journalism.

WRITER DISCUSSES 'TURBULENT YEARS'

"Mussolini is the only dictator with a sense of humour," stated Mr. Isaac F. Marcossin, in his address on "Turbulent Years" last night at the Holy Blossom Forum. Mr. Marcossin is a noted journalist, author, traveller and confidante of world leaders.

"You are all, no doubt, interested in the Munich pact," he continued. "It is a great mistake to underestimate Hitler. He is the greatest psychologist of his age, and due to this he was able to outdo Mr. Neville Chamberlain, who was put on the hottest spot any man has been on for the last 25 years. Mussolini's pact is an armistice between dictatorship and democracy."

Mr. Marcossin went on to say that "the great war made the world safe for dictatorship, not for democracy. People don't stop to consider the tragedy of a dictator; he must be constantly on the move. The last resort from the beginning of time to the present between tyrant and dictator is war."

University Press Club

A man who has come the hard way to a high place in the field of journalism, Ken MacGillivray will address the University of Toronto Press Club at an open luncheon meeting today in Hart House.

MacGillivray, who directs publicity in the MacLaren Advertising Agency, started early in his 'teens as office boy in the old Hamilton Herald. From filling paste pots in that now defunct journal he rose to be city editor of the Toronto Globe and later city editor of the Globe and Mail.

A year ago, he left his position there to join the staff of the MacLaren Advertising Agency, in the publicity department.

Elections of treasurer and vice-president will be conducted.

Men's Residence Found Cosmopolitan in Nature

University College Building Formerly Used as a Private Home

It was in the days when St. George St. was the Westmost of Toronto, a composite of Rosedale and Forest Hill, that the house which is now used as the University College residence was built. Mr. William Brouse, a prominent stock broker, built what the residents now affectionately call "73". Up until 1926 the building was used as a private home where entertainment was possible on a large scale.

To meet an ever-increasing need for student residences, it was decided in 1927 to purchase the house for this purpose. The task of making a residence for University College students was a comparatively easy matter. All the rooms in the house are exceptionally large, as was the custom in the era of its construction. The large room on the south side which, without doubt, has seen lavish entertainment in its day, was well suited for a common room. (Continued on Page 4)

STUDENTS TO HEAR TRANSIENTS' TALES

Today at 1.30 p.m. Dr. Wilfred Lockhart has arranged for two men from the unemployment shelter on Duke St. to tell their own stories in the music room at Hart House.

Mr. John Bell, who comes originally from Belfast, Ireland, will be the first speaker. He is a machinist by trade and he has travelled through Canada from coast to coast. Mike Martin of Nova Scotia will also have ten minutes.

It would seem that these men have a real cause for complaint. It has been stated by authoritative sources that six hundred beds could be made available within half an hour by the mere slashing of a little red tape.

The federal government has offered to spend dollar for dollar with Queen's Park to aid them but the provincial authorities cannot come to an agreement with them. In the absence of the Ontario premier his cabinet refuses to make any move.

Swing Club Charges Libel Attack Campus Columnist

Shiffman and Goodman are Retained by "The Varsity"—Plaintiffs Engage Dublin, Kaylor, and Yaremko—Hope to Serve Writ of Summons on Staff Members

Offended by remarks made about them by a feature writer of The Varsity, the president and vice-president of the Swing Club, Bruce Harris and George Carty, both of second year Arts in Victoria College, intend to serve a Writ of Summons on Joe College, the editor-in-chief, the managing editor, the night editor and his assistant of The Varsity, charging defamatory libel. They are suing for damages amounting to one double pass to the Victoria College At-Home.

Carty and Harris have retained as counsel the law firm of Dublin, Kaylor and Yaremko. The Varsity has engaged the firm of Shiffman and Goodman.

According to the executive of the Swing Club, formed late last year, Joe College, writing in the "We Write as We Please" column of The Varsity, committed himself to libellous remarks concerning them. The remarks to which they took exception are said to refer to them as "public nuisances and malicious influences". The executive further objected to statements concerning the organization which they control, the Swing Club in the University of Toronto, which was described by Joe College as pernicious, notorious, and "the greatest enemy of advancement in Varsity today".

Complete statements from the plaintiffs follow:

Statement of Vice-President

"We have arranged through our solicitors to serve 'Joe College' (allegedly a feature writer of The Varsity staff) with a writ and sue him for libel against the Swing Club.

Personally I was utterly astonished at such a brutal attack on an activity which although still in the embryonic stage is showing such a vitality as the Swing Club. This is not a good thing! If possible, 'Joe College' will swing for this. Everybody knows that the club is one of note, though 'Joe College' doesn't seem to know what the score is. The members will be keyed up until they see 'Joe College' suspended from a chord.

"Such a sharp comment from The Varsity is only natural, but it has certainly fallen flat. To label our jam sessions a pernicious influence shows that 'Joe College', a real icicle, is not hep to the jive.

CO-EDS THINK COOKING SHOULD BE WOMAN'S JOB

Household Economics students when questioned yesterday regarding chefs and men's merits in the field of cooking, seemed evenly divided in their opinions.

Barbara Evans maintained that equal training should give equal results. In her opinion men should be able to cook as well as women.

According to Mary White, U.C., men at present lead in many fields and "should not have a finger in this pie".

Statement of President

"In the column, 'We Write as We Please', appearing in yesterday's Varsity, a certain cowardly individual, who hides behind a trite and obviously false pseudonym, 'Joe College', has, like a disgruntled little boy, taken it upon himself to condemn the Swing Club in the University of Toronto.

"In inviolable anonymity he passes a general malediction on the president and vice-president as public nuisances and malicious influences, and on the swing dance itself as a menace to society and a moral destroyer.

"The greatest enemy of advancement in Varsity today", he brands our club, and irrationally exhorts the undergraduates to wipe the menace from the campus.

"It would be useless to attempt to reply to Mr. College in the manner of his attack. It would require a withered mind, an acid tongue and an uncommon association with vicious invective and base-thumping tirade, none of which can be claimed by the executive of the Swing Club, who do not trespass into fields occupied by overgrown high-school crusaders and dogmatic juvenile preachers.

"Swing music and the complementary swing dance, although they can be justified historically, can show no better evidence of justification than the reception they have received from the students. The formation of the swing club was spontaneous, articulating the (Continued on Page 4)

Varsity Co-eds Support Skating To Widen Circle of Friends

Outside of football, Varsity co-eds are sturdy supporters of skating as the greatest benefit of the athletic fee.

Betty Gallagher, junior at St. Joseph's, was really enthusiastic. "I come from South Porcupine, away out in the sticks, and a little snow and ice makes me feel right at home. Up there it's too cold to skate outdoors, but here—it's wonderful."

Helen Hudson, sophomore from the School of Nursing, was a bit more practical. "Naturally there are no boys taking nursing, so the girls take this opportunity to widen their circle of friends." When pressed she admitted that she had run across a most charming adonis. At least he drove a nice car.

"Oh man, it's terrific!" vowed Bob Galway, latherback on the Varsity intermediates. "It's the one chance for us ignorant but well-meaning engineers to meet the pulchritude that prances so gracefully around Queen's Park. As soon as I tell them about the three rugby teams I played for. . . They must have been juvenile outcasts."

Wallace Brown, blonde Vic track star, wasn't so sure about the co-eds. "You never can tell. If you take some of those gold diggers out, they might eat ten or fifteen cents worth."

Physical Training Should Be Source of Enjoyment to Co-eds

"Physical exercises will make the woman student a more efficient citizen of the university community," stated Dr. Edith Gordon, women's physician for the University of Toronto, yesterday.

Dr. Gordon is very much in favour of a women's athletic building because she believes it would improve the health of the Varsity co-eds. She does not believe in compulsory physical training but thinks it should be a source of enjoyment as well as a means of strengthening students physically.

"The reason why many women students do not take part in sports at the university is because many of them have never had an opportunity to participate in athletics when younger," Dr. Gordon intimated.

"I believe that recreation is closely bound up with health," said Dr. Gordon. "If we have a grand swimming pool, everyone will want to swim," she smiled.

Any woman undergraduate or graduate student of the University of Toronto has the privilege of going to Dr. Gordon for a physical examination at any time. Dr. Gordon said, "No charge is made for this service."

However, this examination is compulsory for every woman student entering University College, Medicine, Dentistry, Household Science, School of Nursing, and S.P.S., Dr. Gordon disclosed. "All girls entering sports on the campus are required to take the examination," she said.

Medical Insurance

Most of the male undergraduates take for granted that they have complete attention for the numerous ailments with which they plague the Medical Staff. This is a result of the fact that they are paying a fee in their first and second years for a medical examination and a physical training course. Day after day the University Doctors are asked to give medical aid of purely the "Family Doctor" type, although that is not their task. This aid has been given so profusely and with so much courtesy that it is now a false assumption by the students of the University that they have what is referred to as Medical Insurance, as on the campuses of the more progressive Universities on this continent. Another difficulty with the present system is that the advice given without the Doctor's usual two dollar fee, is often ignored, and if the condition becomes aggravated, a criticism of the skill of the University's medical staff is the result. This is not purely hypothetical, but there are records to show that this is the case.

With the present system it is financially impossible for the provision of a twenty-four hour medical service, and this is a necessity which if not provided for might lead to rather unfortunate results. We are confident that the male students at the University would support a small additional fee which would provide for complete medical coverage.

The two other colleges whose calendars we have examined, have provided for its students a very efficient system of medical aid. This has somehow been overlooked on this campus. This point is made clearer if we turn to the two calendars and examine them. Looking at the Queen's calendar we find under Physical Welfare of Students, "Every student is required upon registration to contribute $4 towards a health insurance fund. In return the student has the free services of the University medical officer and a special hospital rate of fifty cents a day". Turning to the Western calendar we find "The scheme of health insurance was designed and is operated for the benefit of the students. The first purpose of it is to protect any student whose academic year or college course may be jeopardized by a serious accident or a prolonged illness. The second is to maintain the health and efficiency of the students. As the student body cannot make a legal contract, the University has made the contract and has also assumed the overhead costs, but the University does not assume any responsibility for claims". The rest of this section deals with the maximum amounts that can be secured by students, which is not the important thing. What is of importance is the fact that at these other two Universities there has been an attempt to secure a reasonable and full medical attention, while on this campus the matter has been practically ignored. If we consider the student from out of town and the one on a limited budget requiring hospitalization, we have to realize the need for a true medical insurance.

The City Administration

The Hart House Debates Committee this year has been choosing some very controversial topics for debate, and Wednesday night's subject which gives the debaters a chance to say just what they think of Toronto, is certainly no exception.

It is not too late yet, for would-be speakers to interview some of the professors of the economics department to get a few good ideas, and perhaps some statistics to back up their statements. Professors of economics, we have found on the whole quite willing to discuss such subjects with interested students. Maybe Professor Plumptre and Professor MacPherson will not be very delighted when we refer to them specifically, and by so doing we do not want to cause them any inconvenience, but there is no doubt that a student who has had a chance to discuss the problem of city administration with either of them, will be much better equipped to debate in Hart House on this topic.

From some general opinions expressed in interviews yesterday, it seems that many students are of the opinion that since the elected members of the city's administrative body have for a large part been restored to office, Toronto has shown its confidence in the present set-up.

But the board of control, and the other elected persons are on the whole a very small part of the administrative system. The publicity given to the transient problem recently may raise the question of the city's responsibility to unemployed men. Chief Draper, who has been having his own troubles with so-called gangsters, may have not given sufficient evidence of the efficiency of the Toronto police force.

Those who noticed that Alderman Smith's first motion after his election was to effect the appointment of a committee to look into the sanding of city streets, may have a fear that the communists are out to sand the city. During the last few months, the question of a grant to the University has awakened definite ideas among University students, and then there is the ever-permanent problem of whether property owners alone should have the right to vote.

Controller Conboy, who apparently is taking considerable interest in the debate, is to be present; in all it should form one of the most lively discussions of the season.

Transient Speakers

Today in Hart House, University men will have an opportunity to hear two unemployed homeless men speak about some of the problems which they are facing. The problem of unemployed single men is one of the most crucial that Canada is now having to face. We do not see that Toronto can be expected to take the full share of the responsibility, for it can be understood that they would flock here from every part of the Dominion were this done. On the other hand the provinces are not willing to assume the burden of this relief unless the cost is fairly distributed.

The result has been that churches and charities are still playing a major part in this work, and Toronto charities we know have a sufficient burden to look after those families not adequately cared for by relief, without draining their funds in feeding the single unemployed.

But there has been far too much dickering about it all, and the problem is growing worse. Hundreds of young boys are steadily losing their morale as they drift about with this tremendous host of homeless men. Various schemes have been tried, but the great difficulty is that these men are rapidly becoming less employable . . . something which may be understood when the life they are forced to live is considered.

Perhaps by hearing this story from these men, we may be a little more considerate of the panhandler, who after all in many cases has either to panhandle or starve . . . or as a last resort break the law and receive a jail sentence.

LONDON BOMBED CHAMBERLAIN PEEVED

"Perfectly Good Evening Ruined" Says Prime Minister Petulantly

NASTY, WHAT?

London, Eng.: Prime Minister Chamberlain of England expressed himself as being quite hurt by the attitude of Italy following an attack by ten unidentified Italian bombers on London. The damage, estimated at two billion dollars, included the London Bridge and three members of the House of Lords narrowly escaped being startled out of their sleep.

Besieged by reporters as he picked his way through the streets littered with dead, the Prime Minister could scarce forbear to smile and say, "Benito seems to be getting a little out of hand."

Rome, Italy: In a brief communique to the foreign press Il Duce denied that the planes were flown by Italian airmen, but asserted that they were piloted by volunteers.

London, Eng.: Confronted by Mussolini's reply, the Prime Minister was forced to concede that Il Duce was entirely right. It is rumored among usually well-informed circles that an apology will be tendered to Rome because of the false accusation.

Rome, Italy: The Italian Foreign Office announced today that it would demand an apology from Great Britain on a second count. One of the pilots of the bombers reported that as he released some of his cargo on London, some person on the ground, presumably British, was seen to shake his fist at the Italian airplane.

VICTORIA DEFEATED IN SENIOR BASEBALL

University College senior baseball team yesterday won their first game in two years as they outclassed Senior Vic 5-3. Bill Jeffries, Vic hurler, was nicked for seven hits, while Mel Fleming of U.C. only allowed five scattered bingles. Fleming struck out six men and Jeffries fanned three.

Singer, Karry and Rogers crossed the plate in the first inning to give U.C. an early lead. In the second stanza Box scored on Singer's hit to add another run. In the Vic half of the inning Jeffries singled to score Casserly.

U.C. was held scoreless in the third inning, while the Scarlet and Gold got three hits for two runs as Casserly's triple scored McClellan and Brett.

The Vic threat was turned back in the fourth inning when U.C. increased their lead to 5-3. Ted Rogers doubled to score Karry. "Sliding Joe" Dales failed to beat the ball to first in Vic's last inning, and the next two batters fanned, to clinch this famous victory for U.C.

Sr. U.C.: Singer, Karry, Hershoren, Rogers, Fleming, McLaughlin, Box, Willinsky.

Sr. Vic: Jones, McClellan, Brett, Casserly, Jeffries, Dales, Harris, Zurbidge, Thomson.

WOMEN'S HOCKEY CLOSELY CONTESTED

In a game packed with thrills Meds eked out a 3-2 win over St. Mike's last night in the opening hockey game of the season.

Dody Frowse, starry centre for Meds, lunged in two quick goals in the first period on beautiful solo plays. In the second period Jean Grant for the Irish shot from the boards to tie where Marg Conlin completed the play to give St. Mike's their first goal.

On another solo effort, Marj Mosbaugh for Meds, hit the net to make it 3-1. In the third period, Gert Mulcahy grabbed the loose puck at centre ice to beat the Meds goalie on the longest shot of the night.

Joan O'Donnell in the Irish net, and Doris Prowse, Meds centre, were the stars of the game.

Meds: Dody Frowse (2), Jean Meiners, Helen Holden, Evelyn Johnston, Laurie Patton, Marj Mosbaugh (1), Lil Sugarman, Shirley Fleming, Flo Allen.

St. Mike's: Kitty Devlin, Joan O'Donnell, Jean Grant, Marg Conlin (1), Deed McGovern, Norah Costello, Gen Conlin, Madeline Nash, Marnie Corkery, Gert Mulcahy (1), Teresa Knowlton, Marj Driscoll, Jean McLeon.

MORISON LEADING SENIOR SCORERS

Leading the Blue sharpshooters is centre Bill Morison, with five goals and five assists, for a total of 10 points. Next in line are Bill L'Heureux, starry defenseman, who has been a stand-out for the seniors this year, and Art Bolding, centre on the second line, with 9 points apiece. Dick Craig followed with 2 goals and six assists. Cam MacLachlan, veteran defenseman, has netted the puck five times, sharing the actual goal getting honours with Morison.

ENGINEERS DEFEAT THEOLOG PUCKSTERS

The S.P.S. III's had little difficulty in polishing off Emmanuel yesterday afternoon in Varsity Arena, when they emerged on the long end of a 5-0 score.

Slow to warm up, the Engineers started to score regularly, and had little difficulty in pushing the puck into the Emmanuel net. On the other hand, Thompson in the School net, had little time to do, and the few shots which came his way he handled with ease.

Forestell and Spence were outstanding for the Schoolmen, scoring twice each and coming close on many occasions. Ballagh, who scored once, and Ford also showed well for the Engineers. Leading the thwarted attempts of the Theologians were Joblin and McIntyre.

S.P.S. III: Thompson, Cavanaugh, Ballagh, Hutton, Ford, Forstell, Robinson, Kelly, Munro, Spence, Wheaton. Emmanuel: Jones, Joblin, Thrower, Davidge, Henderson, McIntyre, Jackson, Clugston.

JR. SCHOOL LEADS VICTORIA HOOPSTERS

A slow starting basketball game came to rather a sudden conclusion with Junior School taking Victoria in an uninteresting contest 31-12 yesterday afternoon in the upper gymnasium.

The Engineers were slow in starting but when the game warmed up a bit it was impossible to stop them. The class play shown by Dancer and Barrat, in the shooting by Findlayson and Allen, the defensive play of Bell and Shocher was too good for the weaker and less experienced Victoria team.

The first half was slow and uninteresting and School held a Seven point lead as it ended. The second half was all the Engineers, with sensational shots thrown in from all angles. They were able to score a similar number of points in this half while they kept the Vic team to four points.

Findlayson was by far the class of the winners, ably supported by Halford, Bailey and Stamp were the class of the losers.

Junior School: Pancer 2, Kilpatrick 2, Dorringer 2, Findlayson 10, Shocher 5, Halford 2, Reynolds, Barrat 2, Bell 2, Allen 4.

Junior Victoria: Shultis, Johnstone 2, Multon, Young, Stampe, Todd 2, Landell 4, Bailey 2, Cummings, Westcott.

BLUE JUNIORS TO PLAY IN HOCKEY DOUBLE BILL

Varsity's improved Blue juniors face the crucial test of the present season when they tackle Joe Primeau's Marlboros in the afterpiece of a hockey double bill at Maple Leaf Gardens tonight.

Jimmy McPherson's ever-trying teenage forces have been showing steady improvement in recent games. They held Young Rangers to a 3-2 decision, and forced Guelph to two draws in the past week.

The presence of Otto DesRoches, who entered the line-up a week ago, has fired the Blues with the incentive they need to win. Stephenson, Higgin, McMillan and Quigley are all going in top form right now, and the Ducks will have a real battle on their hands.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Ed Goodman

WITH MALICE TOWARDS NONE

Friend Funchy dropped into the sports office the other day and dropped a none too subtle hint that our Tuesday morning column, was saying very little except "what we need around here is . . ." This angle had never occurred to us before and we are very grateful to think that to the world in general we might appear as a knocker. For this has by no means been our idea. When suggesting various improvements along athletic lines, we fully realize the inestimable services that are being rendered by Mr. Reed, Mr. Stevens, Mr. McCutcheon and the other people in charge of the athletic wing of Hart House. And it is apparent to the whole student body as well as the world at large that since Warren Stevens has become Athletic Director of the University of Toronto, the progress and improvements due to his efforts in collaboration with Mr. Reed have been amazing. This fact is generally recognized not only in Canada but in United States, where Toronto teams of late have been establishing an enviable reputation for athletic prowess and sportsmanship. In more local pastures the advantages that accrue from the athletic fee stand out as testimonials to the foresight of those in charge of athletics.

Fully realizing this and appreciating it, we still feel that columns dealing with current needs at Varsity are in order. For we are merely crystallizing and giving publicity to student opinion around the campus, and suggesting what ventures require attention and are more pressing than others.

Affecting changes and acquiring improvements is not something that happens overnight. Such work is usually expensive and requires the overcoming of many difficult obstacles, but still sooner or later, we are confident that one by one they will be added to the sports curriculum of this university. This morning we submit another such need.

FOR TENNIS ENTHUSIASTS

When the senior hockey team returned from its trip last year one of its members was relating at length the many beauties and wonders of Harvard University. Among other things such as architectural beauty he mentioned the fact that there seem to be dozens of blocks of about fifty tennis courts! Discounting the amount somewhat we still see that there was adequate accommodation for the tennis lovers at the Crimson college.

This is only one example of what is generally prevalent at American colleges, and what we need here, tennis courts for the Varsity students. Trinity and St. Hilda's students have some fine courts and we think Vic has a few of lesser quality, but that is about all.

For those students who spend their summers in Toronto it would be a great boon and the student body in general (no pun meant) would have an opportunity for more complete enjoyment and practice of one of the finest outdoor sports.

SPORT SPLASHES

JR. U.C. 4, WYCLIFFE 0

Starting 2 intercollegiate swimming stars, Jr. U.C. had no difficulty in defeating a staunchly fighting Wycliffe squad 4-0 last night in a scheduled polo game. Despite her inexperience, however, Wycliffe inspired by Murphy, presented a stiff front and U.C. were forced to work hard to take the game. In the first half in fact U.C. only managed to tally once. Clawson and Bart-Gorams starred for U.C. while Murphy and Magee did well for the Theologs.

JR. MEDS 5, SR. U.C. 0

Jr. Meds had no difficulty in turning back the Senior Artsmen to the tune of 5-0 in the second game of the evening. Jumping into an early lead on a shot by Young, the Doctors steadily increased their lead with more counters by Young, Turner and Wadds. Sable was one of the U.C. key men, but was unfortunately unable to get his long tries properly aligned.

Hockey conditions were ideal up at Varsity last night and a good time was had by all. Despite the fact that their regular goalie, Sue Adams, was unable to play, Meds successfully repelled the determined attack of the fighting Irish.

Dody Frowse, of Meds and basketball fame, was the outstanding player on the ice. In their initial hockey effort the Medicos showed fine stickhandling ability, but lacked the team work featured by St. Mike's. Jean Grant, playing right wing on the Irish line, turned in a brilliant effort.

For fear we might seem prejudiced we shall limit our remarks about the merits of any particular team last night. Meds, attired in skull-and-cross-bones borrowed from their doctor friends, couldn't frighten the Irish defence, which was inspired (no doubt) by an enthusiastic gallery.

And while we pray for continued winter weather, the co-eds at the University of Texas are in the midst of their annual ping-pong tournament—they don't know what they're missing.

Will all members of the U.C. women's junior and senior basketball teams please be at S.P.S. on Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock to have their pictures taken for the Toronto Times.

Will members of the tennis and freshie basketball teams please be there at 5 o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

THREE TEAMS TIED IN COLLEGE HOCKEY

A glance at the standing of the teams in the college hockey league shows that three teams are tied for first place, two teams tied for second place, and the same number in third position. Montreal U. hold down the cellar spot with no wins in five starts.

Varsity, McGill and Queen's are the leaders leading the group. However, the latter have played two more contests than their Canadian rivals and lost to McGill over the week-end. Harvard and Princeton from four points are in the second notch with Dartmouth and Yale behind with one win each.

Highest scoring team is Toronto with 26 points forward and six goals scored against them. Thirty games have been played to date and none have resulted in ties.

MEN'S RESIDENCE FOUND COSMOPOLITAN IN NATURE

Regularly several times a year the arts men hold parties and dances in this room.

However, it may be incorrect to say the "Arts men" as there is one school man who has crept in—no one knows just how. But there are also other outside influences in the house of a perhaps more cosmopolitan nature. In fact it is something of an international clearing house, for there is one student from Iceland, by name Jim Sigurdsson. To clinch the international angle the twenty-eight residents of "73" boast of having the German Exchange student.

At one time the U.C. Polities were rehearsed there but this arrangement was found to be a little too hard on the furniture, so the Polities had to move next door to the Women's Union.

Honour students are in some cases granted discounts and perhaps for this reason the scholastic standing has always been high. However, Dr. DeLury, the present don, does not think that scholarship is a necessary requirement, indicating that its primary purpose had been to prevent overcrowding the residence.

ART MUSIC AND DRAMA

noticeable thing as in most of the modern salons is the paucity of pictures which the maker has built up from an idea. All except one or two are lucky shots made by someone who happened to be on the spot and who made the best of his opportunities. "Stargazer" by H. M. Saul and "Afterglow" by Doug Carman are excellent shots of this type.

Although rather small, the portrait section is very good. "Profile" by Saul has a good fine-lighting about the angle of illumination is not quite right. The lone baby photograph "Mercedith" by J. R. E. Morgan, is very good, but could do with a little better definition. The genre section is rather weak except for the senior prize-winner, but the Scientific and Landscape are well represented. The colour photographs contain little of artistic interest; there are some very good colours, especially in the autumn scenes, but photographs are still struggling with difficulties of technique. Keith Jackson.

SCHOLARSHIP PLAN TO BE DISCUSSED

A delegation of Canadian university students to confer with the Federal Cabinet on March 6th was announced by Dr. Grant Lathe, National Secretary of the Canadian Student Assembly, following the meeting of Assembly executives of Ontario and Quebec held at Queen's University this past week-end.

The conference, which will occupy an hour, is planned to give an opportunity for full discussion with the Federal ministers about the scheme for National Scholarships. On this occasion specific recommendations will be submitted for a Federal project for one thousand university scholarships of five hundred dollars each. These are to be given to students who have good university qualifications, but who have not the financial resources for a college education.

The most recent university to join in the campaign, is the University of Laval, where the Students' Council has accepted the invitation extended by the Canadian Student Assembly through Dr. Grant Lathe and M. Jean Langlois of the University of Montreal, both of the National Executive Committee. During their visit to Quebec an audience was given by Camille Roy, Rector of the University of Laval, who endorsed the campaign. Later conferences with Ministers Gagnon, Beauchamp, and Bilodeau of the provincial cabinet were held. Their support was offered and attention was drawn to the already existing Quebec Provincial Scholarships for study abroad and in Canada.

Following the steps being taken in other provinces plans are being laid to interview the premier of Quebec and premiers of the other provinces in order to assure provincial co-operation. During the interviews in Quebec the existing scheme for youth training, known as the Rogers-Bilodeau plan, was brought to the attention of the Assembly representatives. This was held to be exemplary of the type of Dominion Provincial co-operation which might be anticipated.

CORRESPONDENCE

tive in calling the conference last March at which the C.A.M.S.I. was established.

The aims of the C.A.M.S.I. are threefold (to quote from the Medical Journal notes):

"1. To further the welfare and interests of Canadian medical students and internes.

"2. To facilitate co-operation between students and faculties and between internes and hospital staffs, and

"3. To promote a medium for interchange of ideas between the medical schools of Canada."

More specific problems with regard to student health, tuberculosis among medical students, medical education, national scholarships, interchange of ideas, welfare of internes, and formation of an advisory board among faculty members, were dealt with.

So far, very good work has been accomplished in that an extensive survey of the tuberculosis problem was carried out during the summer and a system of the taking of routine chest x-rays for all positive reactors, was instituted. In writing this letter I feel that I am only one of the many medical students who are keenly interested in this organization, and who feel that it is of prime importance that its work go on. For this reason I am puzzled to know why no meeting of representatives has been called since October. At that time it was decided to call another meeting shortly, in order to prepare for the next conference of the C.A.M.S.I., scheduled for Jan. 28. No such meeting has been called, and only a few days remain before the conference is to take place. Further, aside from Harold Copp's "C.A.M.S.I. Notes" in the Medical Journal where the date for this conference is announced, no concerted effort has been made to advertise the conference to the body of medical students, or to call for delegates.

I have discussed this matter with some of my fellow students and find that they too are puzzled. And we feel that an open letter to The Varsity would be helpful in clarifying this matter.

Yours sincerely,
Pearl Gould, VI Meds.

IF WE BELIEVE THE MOVIES, and who does, college students always wear white shoes in the winter, wave pennants in the air, and have a slang-usage all their own. . . . Now we have always denied this to our friends outside the university, but unfortunately we happened to run across an item that down at Florida, students do use a language that is not in common usage, and certainly cannot be found in the latest Webster Dictionary. . . .

Although Varsity boasts a few words of its own, such as "drip" which means a person who has no "Umph" or "Yippee" Florida has its own words for the very same unfortunate individual. . . . They refer to him as a "Drizz" or a "Droopy-snoop". . . . Their Union Building, which is similar to our Hart House, is termed the "Jook" and "Jookin'" is dancing in a careless, care-free jitterbug fashion. . . . However, the best word in their new tongue is the expressive word "Fool". . . . And it is a step in the right direction that the word "Fool" can be used interchangeably with any word in or out of the dictionary. . . . AH FOO, WHERE IS THY STING? * * *

NO DATES ALLOWED for ten full days was the ruling made at the U. of Oklahoma. . . . Final examinations were taking place and a moratorium on student dating was declared by the Women's Self Government Association. . . . This is probably a very good thing but we wonder whether all of the students appreciate it. . . . However, we guess it gives them something to look forward to . . . or does it?

* * *

THE DAILY ILLINI carries a sort of Dorothy Dix column, and some of the letters that are sent by worried students are quite interesting. . . . We repeat one of the problems and its answer here, because this question has worried many of our own Varsity students. . . . The question runs as follows: Dear Middlesex Mae:

Here's a little problem in Purdue etiquette I'd like to have cleared up. While attending a burlesque show in Chicago, the chorus sang and danced to "Hall, Purdue". Should I, as a faculty member, stand up? . . . The answer reads:

The only time that one stands up in a burlesque show is when he spots an empty seat in the first few rows. Then it is every man for himself. . . . AIN'T IT THE TRUTH?

STUDENTS PROTEST ARTICLE ON SWING

A wave of indignation has swept over the campus as a result of Joe College's article in yesterday's Varsity on "swing", according to a survey conducted by The Varsity. The article, which has been termed a "flagrant betrayal of campus opinion", denounced swing as "eating away the moral fibres of our youth".

G. N. Garland of Trinity, said, "Joe College must be a moral reformer. Of course everyone is entitled to their own opinion, but this certainly is the height of bigotry."

Bob Burns, III U.C., had this to say of the matter, "While there is nothing permanent about this so-called swing and it can be scarcely classed as music, nevertheless its consequences are in no way as pernicious as this Mr. College would have us believe."

One girl, who wished to remain anonymous, emphatically declared that she "would never think of going out with Joe College."

According to S. M. Gelber, U.C., this mysterious Joe College displayed "utter ignorance of history, for the dance is one of the fundamental expressions of mankind, and has a religious origin. As far as swing itself is concerned, it has been recognized as a significant trend in American musical development. Benny Goodman, the arch apostle of swing, is recognized as a foremost authority on music."

Donald Deacon, Vic II, claimed that "Joe College was a very narrow-minded specimen, because there is as much art in swing as in some of the more classical music."

themselves examined every year. "A university tuberculin test is not necessary," he said. George Love, III Trinity, expressed the same opinion, adding that University doctors are merely auxiliaries to attend to injuries suffered at the University.

However, most of those approached, while praising the medical service, agreed that some sort of T.B. test was necessary.

The opinion that a fuller medical examination was advisable, especially for out-of-town students, was expressed by H. Pollack, III Meds, and by R. P. Cameron, I Meds. Pollack claimed that the T.B. test should have been inaugurated years ago. Half of the Meds students tested showed positive reactions, he said.

Several students scored the present system as unorganized. M. J. Egan, School of Graduate Studies, said that the check-up on vaccination was poor. Leonard Andrews, I Trinity, affirmed this, referring to his own case. His vaccination certificate was not in the medical office yet, he said. He had been vaccinated twice since he "took" but the medical office knew nothing about it, he said.

"Bedy" MacMillan, Varsity rugby player who is in his second year at Trinity College, said he could express no opinion on the present system. "I didn't have a T.B. test," he said, "only the regular physical exam."

feelings of a great many students on the campus. Its continued success, and its large patronage endorse its formation.

"What a mind Mr. College has! To believe that 8,000 students could be deceived by swing music. To whitewash the music of the type of Ravel's Bolero! To insinuate that every university student has a putty mind like his own, unable to allow an inherent appreciation of rhythm to be cultivated unadulterated!"

"Mr. College has a chance to change, but it doesn't appear possible that the transformation will come until his pallbearers sing polyphonic motets as they bear him to his last resting place and beat out a prelude on his ill-tempered clavier."

"After consultation with my colleague George Carthy, it has been decided to sue The Varsity. I feel then, that I must warn Mr. College that our collectors are now in charge of the case, and that he should not be surprised when a lawyer presents him with a writ for libel, singing a gregorian chant."

table discussions between Jew and Gentile would help to solve the problem which at the present moment is very acute in the light of the Nazi programs in Germany.

The problem of the rehabilitation of German refugees is a challenge to Christianity. Rather than displacing Christian workers, the highly trained Jews from Germany and Austria have actually brought over new industries to this continent which have taken thousands of people off relief. England has agreed to absorb 50 Jewish doctors a year and we may expect an influx of 27,000 German refugees a year into the U.S.A. The problem is pressing for one half of the 16,000,000 Jews in the world are persecuted by their governments.

At the end of the meeting a committee of volunteers representing many of the colleges and faculties, was formed to study the methods of improving Jewish-Gentile relations on the campus and to devise a way to enable German refugee students to continue their studies in the University of Toronto.

REDMAN REPLACED BY BARNEY RAPP

After much deliberation and a few changes of plans Pharmacy has decided to hold its annual Pharmacy Ball in Eaton's Auditorium on Friday, February 24. According to Grant Cornell in charge of the arrangements, the drugists have completed negotiations to have Barney Rapp and his New Englanders as the feature of this year's event. Circumstances have necessitated a change in the date which was previously advertised.

Barney Rapp and his orchestra, internationally known in Canada and the United States for their fine dance rhythm, have recently completed a long engagement at the Chase Hotel, St. Louis, the Beverly Country Club, Kentucky, and the new Penn Club, Pittsburgh. They visit Toronto through arrangements completed with Consolidated Radio Artists, Inc. During the past few months the New Englanders have gained wide acclaim through their nightly broadcasts over WLW and the NBC network.

Earlier this year it was thought possible that Don Redman and his band might grace the orchestra pit at the Pharmacy dance, but since then this has proved impossible. Barney Rapp's name, it is stated, was selected from a long list of name dance bands and his widespread popularity promises great entertainment at the forthcoming ball.

TRANSIENTS ASK GOVERNMENT AID IN WORK PROJECT

Unemployed Men Address Hart House Audience; Discuss Desire for a Living Wage

ARE UNIVERSITY GRADUATES

Stressing the need for a national works project, to be financed by the Dominion and Provincial governments, two single unemployed men from the Duke St. hostel spoke at Hart House yesterday.

The conditions that the transient finds in Canada today were outlined by John Bell and Mike Martin. Mr. Martin pointed out that the problems of finding employment for the transient young men of Canada, whom he said number almost half a million, is a national one of the greatest importance.

The events leading up to a young man's finding himself moving from town to town in search of work and relying for part of the year on charity or relief were pictured.

Mr. Martin stated that while the number of single unemployed in Toronto is much greater than 700, the official number, Toronto has not the problem of Vancouver, which has thousands of unemployed transients, as well as thousands on relief, reforestation and highway projects.

It was stated that the men in hostels such as John Franks' House and 53 Duke St., do not want to live there indefinitely. While they are grateful for charity, they realize that this is only a temporary relief, and are banded together to obtain the support of the public in their effort to get what was termed working wages.

Mr. Bell spoke of the temporary relief. (Continued on Page 4)

OVERSEAS LETTERS DIFFICULT TO SEND STUDENTS REVEAL

Students in the university who correspond with friends in foreign countries are finding difficulties in pursuing their hobby. Any letters with political comment, they find, often fail to reach their destination.

Correspondence with Spain is now practically impossible; those interested in Spanish have to be content with letters to Mexico and South American countries. Most students who write abroad have friends in France.

There is no organized correspondence club on the campus, since the friendship who write is small. Such friendships with those in other countries started, for the most part, in high school days.

Earl Baldwin To Visit As Falconer Lecturer

Eminent British Politician and Chancellor of Cambridge will Accept President's Invitation

Earl Baldwin has signified through the Honorable Vincent Massey, his acceptance of President Cody's invitation to deliver a series of lectures on the Falconer Foundation in the University of Toronto.

This lectureship has recently been established in the university to commemorate the services of Sir Robert Falconer as President, and to promote, as he would wish, a better knowledge of international affairs. President Cody announced that some time ago an invitation was transmitted through the Right Honorable Vincent Massey to the Right Honorable Earl Baldwin of Bewdley, asking him to deliver the lectures.

Mr. Baldwin is not only a great figure in the political life of Great Britain, but is also Chancellor of the University of Cambridge and of the University of St. Andrew's, Scotland.

There is a possibility that there may be one or two vacancies in 1939 in one or other of the following classes of appointment:

Mining: The qualifications for these appointments are laid down on page 22 of the memorandum Colonial Service Recruitment No. 7. A degree in Metalliferous Mining together with 2 or 3 years' practical experience is nearly as well as a candidate is to stand a reasonable chance of selection.

Geological Survey: The type of candidate required is one who, in addition to holding the qualifications laid down on page 19 of the above memorandum has carried out independent field investigations.

Meteorology: Qualifications as given on page 25 of the same memorandum.

DR. BLATZ TO DISCUSS MEANING OF GROWING UP

A Women's Noon-hour Lecture Series on "Personality and Social Relationships" open to all women of the university and sponsored by the Student Christian Movement, begins today at 1.30 in the Women's Union, when Dr. W. E. Blatz of St. George's School will lecture on "What It Means to Grow Up."

The second lecture of the series will be given by Mrs. John Davidson on Wed., Feb. 1st, on the topic "Women"; the third by Mrs. J. D. H. Hutchinson on Feb. 8th on "Women and Men"; and the last on Feb. 15th, on the subject "Men, Women and God", will be a student forum with Miss Katherine Bryce, U.C., Miss Agnes Klineck, Vic, and Miss Muriel Struthers, B. & M.

The series will deal with the all-important problem of the development of personality in its individual and group relationships, with the status and responsibilities of women in a changing society, with their relationship to men in a university community, and finally with human relationships in their wider setting, that is, women confronted by their supreme loyalty to "something outside themselves, greater than themselves, to which they give themselves".

EXPLORER MAY LEAD STUDENT EXPEDITION

Ignatieff Hopes to Lead Group to Peace River to Make Film; Would Include Co-eds

HAS LED MANY TRIPS

By Bob Phillips

To form an exploring society for the undergraduates of this university in the near future is the hope of Mr. Nicholas Ignatieff, Director and Chief Leader of the Schools Exploration Society. He would like to see some co-eds, too, on his trips to the unmapped north-west of Canada.

Since the summer of 1936, Mr. Ignatieff has been making annual trips to the Peace River district and northern British Columbia. The members of the expeditions, numbering from 12 to 32, were boys from secondary schools, especially from Upper Canada College. Now the noted explorer is trying to interest the men-and-women-of the university in his exploring parties for he feels that the work done is well fitted to university people. He has already spoken to the Students' Council and the Executive Council of the Engineering Society and has found great interest in his ventures.

Nothing about future trips is yet definite but it is hoped that a party will start out this summer. These would be largely made up of S.P.S. men who would probably want to do more technical work than the Schools Exploration Society has done. Even this organization did some mapping last summer. Mr. Ignatieff would like to take a small group to shoot 16 mm. colour movies of a road being built by settlers themselves in the Rockies.

Another of his hopes is to follow in Alexander Mackenzie's footsteps from the Peace River to the Pacific. He would make a historical film of the journey.

The greatest difficulty, he says, is the cost. Careful planning precedes every trip. An expedition lasting two

COLLEGE MEN MUST SAVE DEMOCRACY DECLARES BENNETT

Sees Need for Unified Program Controlled by Younger Men; Secession Talk is 'Rhetoric'

ADDRESSES MCGILL ALUMNI

Montreal, Que., Jan. 24 (CUP)—University trained men face the responsibility of guiding Canada and formulating a foreign policy that ensures peace for the world, R. B. Bennett told members of the Graduates' Society at McGill today, in his farewell address. The former prime minister placed before "young men with hope and vision" the task of preventing disintegration at the hands of dictators. With regard to the prevalent talk of secession he condemned it as "merely the rhetoric of youth" and specified, "I mean by youth the age of individuals who express such thoughts."

Mr. Bennett pointed out that one of the greatest problems facing Canada today is the determination of a common foreign policy with other members of the empire. This is the first step toward preventing another crisis like that of last September. The formulation of Canada's policy is the responsibility of university men, he stated in conclusion. They have the burden of guidance because of vision, ability and education. We realize that if democracy is to survive, it must be educated.

DURHAM CENTENARY TO BE CELEBRATED

Four Thursday Lectures to be Given by Eminent Speakers on Canadian Background

OPEN TO PUBLIC

President H. J. Cody announces that the University of Toronto will celebrate in February the centenary of Lord Durham's Report.

The British Government sent Lord Durham to Canada shortly after the rebellion of 1837 was put down. He issued a report in which he recommended responsible government for Canada which was then, of course, a much smaller country in area as well as in population than it is today.

The celebration will take the form of four lectures by eminent authorities on the four Thursday afternoons of February, each lecture to be given in Room 8, University College, at five o'clock. Admission will be free and all interested are cordially invited to attend.

The first lecture, on February 2nd, will be delivered by Professor Chester New of McMaster University, Hamilton, whose topic will be "Lord Durham and the British Background". The second lecture will be delivered on February 9th by Professor George W. (Continued on page 3)

PRESS CLUB HEARS JOURNALIST SPEAK

Attractions and Drawbacks of Journalism Described by Kenneth MacGillivray

Journalism with all its attractions and drawbacks was described yesterday to the University of Toronto Press Club by Kenneth MacGillivray, one-time city editor of the Globe and Mail and now publicity director in the MacLaren Advertising Agency. He warned the members of the club not to enter the newspaper profession unless they were fully aware of what they were risking in the way of long hours, unhealthy work and limited social life.

Newspaper work, not considered a first class profession by the majority of people, was considered by MacGillivray as something only to be entered for a few years. "It broadens a person, and gives him an immense, although perhaps not deep, knowledge of the arts, human nature and life in general," he said.

ARTS BALL TO FEATURE MEL HAMMIL'S BANO

A much-anticipated event of the current season will be the U.C. Arts Ball, which will be held in Hart House on Feb. 10. According to the executive, the tickets for this event are going very quickly.

Mel Hammil and his Gensel Gentlemen will supply the music. This band, which has been featured at Crystal Beach for the past two years, is ranked as one of the best in Canada, and has played for many university dances, particularly at Queen's. Dancing is from 9.30 to 2 and is cabaret style.

Intercollegiate Managers

Important meeting of all intercollegiate managers and their assistants at 5 p.m. Wednesday in the Athletic Office.

Conboy to be Guest Speaker; Hoffman and MacGillivray Promise Frank Discussion GOVERNMENT BACKS CITY

By Campbell McLean

A prediction that tonight's Hart House debate will see the exposure of many examples of "inefficiency and waste" in Toronto's civic government, was made last night by Ross Hofmann, fourth year Trinity College student, one of the principal speakers.

The debate, marking a departure from usual Hart House topics, will be based on the resolution "That this House has confidence in the present administration of the City of Toronto". Paul MacGillivray, III U.C., will support the resolution, which Mr. Hoffman will take the negative stand. Dr. Fred J. Conboy, member of Toronto's Board of Control, will be present as guest speaker.

Fear was voiced by Mr. MacGillivray in an interview that the aims of the opposition, to have "greater efficiency" in civic government, might prove a blow to democracy. "Democracy gives the voters the government they deserve," he said, expressing doubt that any valuable reforms could be instituted without preparatory education of the electorate.

"I realize that improvements can be made in our municipal government," he said. "But they can only be achieved when the majority of the electorate has come to recognize their desirability. A vote of want of confidence in what now has their approval is not a constructive contribution to civic betterment."

Claiming that there are "a lot of things" in the government of Toronto that have been "hushed up" and "need investigation", Mr. Hoffman charges that "there is inefficiency in both the (Continued on Page 4)

Blues Tie Marlboro In Overtime Period

Game Marks Third Successive Tie for Varsity Juniors; Still in Cellar Position

JONES AND QUIGLEY STAR

Apparently not acquainted with the fact that in order to win, one must score more goals than his opponent, the Varsity junior hockey squad played their third consecutive tie by drawing 3-3 with the Marlboro team at Maple Leaf Gardens last night. The game makes no change in the team's standing in the Jr. O.H.A. Varsity still clinging to the very much undesirable last spot.

Varsity broke out in front in the first period when Quigley broke fast with his wing-nate, Jones, to slap home a perfect pass at the fifteen minute mark. After stopping a barrage of shots on the Blues' net, goalie Pentland let a drizzler slither past him which came off the stick of Morris, the period ending with the score knotted Varsity 1, Marlboros 1.

Early in the second period, the Blue team again went out in front when Jones converted Quigley's pass. Throughout this second episode the University game bombarded the Marlboro citadel only to have the latter team's goalie, Gilbert, rob them time and again. About the thirteen minute mark of the third period, Mana took a pass from Murphy to score Marlboros' second goal and again tie the score, Varsity 2, Marlboros 2.

After breaking the tie with a goal by Derocher of Varsity early in the (Continued on Page 4)

Nazi Metaphysics

An erroneous theory which has gained credence with many people is that which considers Nazism to be the product of a single man's ambition, and sees the whole German policy and program as the infamous inspiration of the neurotic Austrian corporal. This is far from true. Hitler and his satellites are the agents of an inevitable reaction, and the doctrines they are promulgating are as old as mankind.

In ancient Greece democracy proper was born, and by its side flourished the opposing theory, that the strong few have the right to override and rule the mediocre many. Plato devoted several pages in "The Republic" to an argument between Thrasymachus and Socrates. The former presented the case for the strong man, claiming that nature's noblemen should not have their vitality cramped by the decrees of the spineless masses. Justice, he claimed, was the rule of the strong. This theory crops up again and again in the course of political thought. The thinkers from whom Hitler borrows most heavily are the German romantic philosophers, notably Nietzsche. Roughly speaking, the latter's view is that the vitality or life force which keeps man alive and makes him progressive is not equally distributed, but appears highly concentrated in certain individuals known as supermen. It is the appearance of supermen that has caused the milestones in history; their ruthless activity is a manifestation of the force which impels all activity. They must not, therefore, be checked by the tyranny of mediocrity. Christianity, says Nietzsche, is a slave philosophy, maintained by the weak as a protection against the strong. Democracy and socialism are attempts of the mediocre many to bring the strong down to their own level.

The National Socialist party, on whose shoulders Hitler climbed to power, seized upon such doctrines when Germany was in her lowest ebb of post-war despondency. They culled ideas from German philosophy and literature and included the romantic Wagnerian doctrine of "folk" or race. The Nordic branches of the white race, they claimed, represented the purest development of the human race. Mixing of stock results in degeneration. This was the cause of Germany's defeat in the war. Degrading foreign strains had been mixed with the pure German stock, and softening doctrines such as industrialism, communism, and pacifism had taken power from the potential supermen and placed it in the hands of shopkeepers. The new era of regeneration must therefore be inaugurated by a purging of all foreign elements. To accomplish the purge individual will must be subjected to a supreme power, and all institutions must be co-ordinated into the state. All must be subject to a ruler with unlimited powers.

Nazism is a violent manifestation of an old doctrine. Throughout the course of history, when a nation has found itself without hope and without resources, recourse has been made to some irrational doctrine. The literature of despair turns to extravagance. The anti-democratic extremist cult of the National Socialists gave new life and purpose to the deflated German nation. Ready to listen to any note of hope, the masses were quickly won over by astute propaganda and fabulous promises. It was given a theoretical backing by reference to such writers as Gopincau, Feder and Rosenberg.

The conditions of post-war Germany gave Hitler a chance to exploit an old creed. Conditions in a broken nation without adequate leadership, gave Hitler a chance, when backed by short-sighted capitalists, to exploit an old doctrine.

Pending Libel Suit

Certain criticism has been received from a graduate student, against the space given to the controversy with the swing club, and the sensational way in which it was handled. This would be justified if such were the regular type of news run in The Varsity. But whereas this student objected to the article, apparently most others found yesterday's paper different, and amusing . . . without there being any humour of a questionable type. At least it was an example of what a newspaper can do by being sensational.

It must be remembered, that although there is an attempt to keep all the lighter type of college news and activity out of the editorial columns, there is a place in a college paper for articles on Sadie Hawkins and swing clubs, etc, whether these are very serious subjects or not.

The pending libel suit with the swing club should be of interest to the students, although such a suit will necessarily be slow. It is about six years since there was a similar court case in the University, except those cases which are being held among the law students at regular intervals.

The article printed last week under an apparently fictitious byline, has of course been treated by its readers as was a former facetious article under the same name. However, there are many people who have expressed similar views on the same subject, and to all intents and purposes it was a perfectly authentic article, the expression of one person's opinion; the principle that a writer should have the freedom to express such opinion in the press, in the interest of the public good, is the principle for which The Varsity is willing to defend itself.

It is claimed that the remarks were libelous, and that there is an opportunity for a good case . . . especially since the laws of libel in this country are rather badly in need of revising.

If it is possible to get the law students to take the time necessary to conduct this case properly, and if the swing club serves the writ which they have given notice of yesterday, the members of The Varsity sued will prepare a defence. However, this case will be conducted with all the dignity of a law court, and there is no attempt to gain publicity for the swing club or any persons involved.

Some people have even suggested that this has been a scheme concocted by the swing club to gain publicity for itself. This definitely is not true. For the sake of those naive few who believe that such a case might involve personalities, bad friends and serious damages, let us say that there is no such danger.

Besides having the desire to justify the staff writer in the eyes of the public, The Varsity wishes to discover and reveal to its readers how much there is in the term "The freedom of the press" and at what point fair criticism for the sake of the public good becomes libellous.

AR MUSIC

Toronto Symphony

On his previous appearance here with his own orchestra, the National Symphony of Washington, D.C., Dr. Hans Kindler seemed to us to be a conductor of sound but sometimes almost too restrained taste. We remember particularly a rather wooden performance of the Waltzes from Der Rosenkavalier.

His concert with the Toronto Symphony last night would indicate that any lack of vitality on the former occasion must be blamed on an unresponsive orchestra, for he conducted with startling vigour

Headlining a fairly good vaudeville bill at the Shea's this week are the Stroud twins, Clarence and Claude, of stage and radio fame. Clarence's enes has more to do than Claude since he acts as master of ceremonies for the rest of the show and handles his duties quite capably. But the audience could not get quite enough of either of them and called them back repeatedly for more and more.

SWIMMERS VIE FOR FITZGERALD TROPHY

This coming Saturday the annual senior interfaculty swimming meet will be staged in Hart House pool. Each faculty will be represented, with S.P.S. making a strong bid to retain the Fitzgerald Trophy which they captured last year. U.C., however, will have a strong team.

Competition for the trophy will be restricted according to the regulations by which intercollegiate meets must abide. Each faculty team is limited to 15 men and no man may enter more than three events including the relays. Points awarded are 5, 3, and 1 for 1st, 2nd and 3rd place respectively, and 8, 5, 3, and 1 points for relays in the event of five or more entries. The diving shall consist of 5 optional and 5 compulsory dives, to be selected and judged according to the rules for intercollegiate competition.

Any student proceeding to a degree in his respective college or faculty is eligible for competition for his faculty. Managers are reminded, however, that all entries must be by 1 o'clock to-day in order that preliminaries may be arranged for Thursday.

Any information desired may be got from Mr. Winterburn, who will receive all entries.

AROUND THE TRACK

Gerald Prodrick from Victoria College won the first event of the indoor track season when he took the fifty-yard dash last night in the good time of 58". Harold Brown, Vic, was second and Delaney, Trinity, and Harris, Meds, were tied for third. This year the times were exceptionally good, eight men did 6.1" or better, seven men 6.2" and two men 6.3". Out of twenty-three men entered only four ran the distance in more than 6.4". This time in previous years was considered standard.

In the half mile Delaney maintained his superiority, but only won by a yard over Martin, Meds, in the fast time of 2' 5.1". Thompson, S.P.S., nearly beat Martin, but had to be content with third place, after a fast closing sprint.

Speaking OF SPORT

Sports Editor's Note—It is with great pleasure that we welcome tonight's guest to the sport column, in the person of Phil Le Feuvre (this isn't a pseudonym). He appreciates the effort and time spent by Phil in composing his story and we are rather sorry to say that you'll probably enjoy reading this column more than any one that we wrote, which only goes to show that you never know when YOU'RE well off. . . .

By Phil Le Feuvre

QUIET, PLEASE

Dozing peacefully in the quiet solitude of the billiard room the other afternoon, I was rudely awakened by the voice of that so-called sports writer Bernie "If I were King" Shiffman.

"Wake up! Phil, you've got to write next Wednesday's S.O.S. column."

"No thanks," I replied, "write your own junk!" But after he threatened to get the Law Students to boycott the room, I gracefully consented to write this column. That I consented has nothing to do with the fact that, if it were not for the said Law Students, the billiard room would probably be run at a loss and I would be out of a job.

THE POOR REFEREE

Coming to this country from Jersey, Channel Islands, where the habit of hating the referee is absolutely unknown, it burns me up plenty to hear the abuse tossed at the arbiters on this continent. I cannot for the life of me understand why ordinary sane people would like to tear the officials apart when a decision is given against the home team. To me, it appears that the officials in this country are just as highly efficient and conscientious as those in the Old Country, but they certainly do not get the same consideration from the fans.

Some of those who squawk loudest and longest at the arbiters, who is, after all, calling the play as he sees it, are the ones who probably have not seen the play at all, or are seated too far away to judge accurately the fairness of the decision. However, the fact that the same officials are retained year after year to referee the games should convince the sporting public that the rugby unions who appoint the officials are fully satisfied with their competency. So, next time you go to a game, don't forget that the ref. is doing his best, and no one can do more.

ENCOURAGEMENT

While the rugby and hockey teams of this University are rightfully given plenty of headlines, there are, it seems to me, other U. of T. teams who should be given a little space, not to say encouragement, in this column. Take the Charlie Zwygart Gymnastic Team for example. Here is a team that has swept all before it for the past few years, and yet, hardly a line ever appears about them. There are other teams too who do not get the encouragement they deserve—the Junior Hockey and the Intermediate Basketball Teams for instance. After all, these teams are just as essentially a part of the athletic organization of this University as the teams who make the headlines.

So, come on, Bernie, give the boys a break once in a while.

APPRECIATION

Having been around this place quite a number of years, I should like to take this opportunity of thanking the many hundreds of students who have, at all times, treated me so royally and (except in a few cases) have always co-operated with me in trying to make the billiard room a place where they can come and enjoy a game of billiards under the best possible conditions.

Jack, "Godet Freres" Dorney of the Tuck Shop and Jack "2 to 1" Warwick, hall porter, also wish to thank all the boys for their co-operation in running their party departments.

So, thanks a lot, boys.

International Hockey News

McGill's ascent into a first-place tie with Toronto in the International Division and Princeton's 12-1 victory over Yale were twin highlights of the International Intercollegiate Ice Hockey League last week.

McGill defeated Queen's 7 to 3, while Princeton turned in the highest score in the league, a 12-1 season. It was McGill's third straight triumph and Queen's second setback in five starts.

Russ McConnell, McGill captain, used his team's victory as a springboard to leap into first place in the race for individual high-scoring honours. He tallied 2 goals and 2 assists to bring his point total to 11. Princeton's Weyer rose to second place with 5.

ten points, while Morison of Toronto is tied for third place with Mel Williamson of Queen's, each with 9. McConnell was the league's high scorer in 1938.

Only one game is listed for this week, Toronto engaging Queen's at Kingston with a chance to take undisputed possession of first place in the standing.

Best team performance to date belongs to Toronto with 26 goals and 25 assists. Most goals in one game—Russ McConnell of McGill and Mel Williamson of Queen's, with three goals each against Princeton and Montreal respectively. The Sportsman

By Mary Conlin

How to win friends and influence people. If you do have friends who ski and you don't, and you all want to enjoy some winter sport together, why don't you go up to Glen Mawr? There you can compromise by riding horseback while your friends sidore behind. Of course if you don't even ride this is no solution. We would then suggest you adopt one of these pastimes, or forget the Great Outdoors altogether.

St. Hilda's interfaculty badminton team is still an elusive probability. All because the challenge matches are daily accounting for changes in the line-up. Chris Penland has lost her place to challenger Dorothy Jefferson, who in turn will be challenged by the winner of the Elizabeth McKay-Jean Howson match which will be played today.

Tonight a more-experienced team from St. Hilda's will meet the Vic I team in the first co-ed hockey game of the season at Vic rink. While the Saints are relying on their "Old Guard" to lead them to victory they feel keenly the loss of Elaine Knight, former tower of defence and shot-maker extraordinary. It is unfortunate that intercollegiate basketball players are indigible for interfaculty hockey; all the colleges, however, are equally handicapped by the absence of their most athletic members. It is usually found that the best basketball players are also the finest potential pucksters, although there are exceptions to every rule. So they say. But as a result of the eligibility ruling, U.C. are without Bobby McDonald, and St. Mike's will have to struggle along without Jean de Cola and Mary Bennett. To mention a few.

system and the way it is handled". Responsibility is so diffused between the controllers, councillors, and numerous boards, commissions and administrative departments that the people cannot evaluate correctly the work of any one part. "This naturally leads to inefficiency and waste, because the public can't criticize on an enlightened basis," he alleges.

Promising frank discussion that will jar the citizens "from their smug complacency," he said that since the university is noted as a "clearing house of free speech," it is "logical that these exposures should take place at a university debate".

Controller Conboy, who could not be reached till early this morning due to the pressure of his civic interests, was quick to defend the administration. Taking the view that "administration" meant active personnel, not the form of government, he proceeded to show how this personnel has provided Toronto with effective social, educational and protective services at reasonable cost.

"Toronto is now in the position of premier city of Canada," he said, "and reached that position largely because of good government".

months last year in northern British Columbia cost each member about $350. It is hoped that should small university groups set out, it would cost as little as $200 each. There are still many trappers in the north country making $15 a day panning gold, he revealed, and enterprising students might be able to defray their expenses by a similar scheme. Travelling by car instead of on the "colonists' coach" in a train would lessen the cost. Salaries for experienced guides and rent for horses help raise expenses.

Ignatieff does not think co-eds would put a damper on any exploring trip. He has had some experience with them on the Mackenzie river and finds that they are quite capable of roughing it and liking it.

The Chief Leader of the Society likes Northern British Columbia for his expeditions because it is easily accessible and yet unexplored. There are few flies and mosquitoes there to bother a party as there would be in Eastern Canada.

The name "transients" was described by both speakers, as was a western minister's description of them as "Canada's untouchables. Actually men without a domicile, it was shown how it is so difficult for an unemployed man to find a domicile according to law. Thus if a Toronto boy seeks work out west for the summer, on returning to Toronto he cannot get relief. He has to prove that he has worked steadily for a year, or has been unemployed for three years, before he can get relief.

Both college graduates, Mr. Bell and Mr. Martin spoke of the many graduates and professional men they meet who are unemployed. Mr. Bell had another graduate to address the meeting, but he, with fifty others, is at present in jail, awaiting trial under the Welfare Act.

AND THE PIG GOT UP and slowly walked away. . . . It seems that one fraternity member at the U. of Illinois had the amusing experience of sleeping with a pig (did I say amusing?). . . . One evening, this unfortunate individual awoke from his restful slumber to find a pig sleeping peacefully beside him in place of his roommate.

The pig left the bed when the student awoke, but went squealing about the dormitory. . . . Confusion reigned supreme until someone recovered long enough to call the police, who in turn called the veterinary, who solved the problem by removing the animal. . . . But, after all, we can't really blame the beast, for PIGS WILL BE PIGS!

FRIDAY THE THIRTEENTH is a very bad thing. . . . On this day, two University of Texas students were injured a few minutes before midnight. . . . One of the students was badly bruised as his automobile collided with a moving van. . . . The other received severe lacerations about the face in a car wreck. . . . The boys were roommates, and received medical attention at the same time. . . . Both were out with dates at the time of the accident. . . . And the oddest thing about the whole affair is that the two were injured in different accidents. . . . The finishing touch to the story is that they plan to convalesce together. . . . AW, CUT IT OUT, YOU GUYS!

A LITTLE SQUIB that appeared in this column last week has caused a bit of a furor. . . . It seems that the Wycliffe men had a debate as to whether a cow or a wife is a better asset to the young parish minister. . . . Since that debate, the story has spread throughout the province with no less than four stations broadcasting the news and every newspaper in Ontario carrying news about the debate. . . . The debaters have received letters from all parts of the Dominion denouncing the subject. . . . However, the debaters who have received these rebukes are bearing their burdens nobly. . . . They claim that most of the letters are from ministers' wives who dislike the comparison. . . .

Also featured prominently is Sylvia Froos, dimpled dispenser of songs, who entertained the audience with some clever arrangements of popular numbers. Billy Webb and the Four Fays did some tricky acrobatic dances, but Billy Easton's act was not up to the standard set by the others.

On the stage is "There's That Woman Again" with Melvyn Douglas and Virginia Bruce. This is another one of those crazy mystery comedies, but for a change this one is funny. Tom Dugan almost steals the show from the principals with his dead pan and wadder brain.—H.J.R.

an attitude of hatred, ridicule or contempt because of the said publication. Therefore The Swing Club has retained us to institute a libel suit on their behalf against you, the addresses of this letter of notice, unless you publicly retract the statements and we hereby give notice of our intention to bring the said action in the Meort Court of the University of Toronto if the request for retraction is ignored.

The statements to which we have taken exception were published as follows:

"The dance itself may be deplored as a menace to good society, but their ultra-modern version called swing is rapidly eating away the very moral fibre of our youth. We label the Swing Club the greatest enemy of advancement in Varsity today, and call upon the undergraduates to unite together to wipe it off the face of the campus. The fact that it is spreading its ugly tentacles throughout the foundations of this institution seeking to undermine the moral basis of college society should make every student doubly keen to purge our university of this vice before it is too late."

We the plaintiffs wish to point out that The Swing Club is purely a voluntary organization minding its own business and the majority of the students on the campus know little of the organizations and functions of the club and are consequently unaffected by it. This gross exaggeration concerning the pernicious influence of the club is obviously so devoid of foundation that the Editors of The Varsity have ridiculed themselves as much as The Swing Club Incorporated. Therefore we sincerely hope they will publish a retraction apologizing for their ill considered remarks.

Bonitas Lumber Co., outlined a typical "Forest Policy of a Private Company" and stressed the need for a more concerted effort on the part of the people of this Dominion as a whole, and on the part of foresters in particular, towards greater co-operation in research and the proper utilization of results therein obtained.

Mr. Lyons gave due warning that if action in research does not move ahead in Canada very soon, our neighbours to the south "who are indeed jealous of our fine spruce stands," will by their research supplant them in world importance with their heavily timbered lands.

ART MUSIC AND DRAMA

and enthusiasm which, although effective, were at times a little excessive. The orchestra did not consistently give him all that he asked for, which was a good thing because we cannot believe that he wanted all he asked for.

The results of this strange situation were for the most part happy and sometimes thrilling, if unconventional. The occasional slight mishaps were probably caused by Dr. Kindler's attempts to draw from the orchestra a streamlined type of playing that is foreign to it rather than beyond its abilities.

Strauss' Don Juan is, of course, at its best under such treatment and last night's performance had in it more of the Philadelphia type of brilliance than we have ever before heard from the T.S.O. Mozart's Symphony No. 29 didn't come through quite so well. Admittedly respect for the fragility of Mozart is often carried too far but there is always room for some, particularly in a work such as this, written in his more purely classical style. The peculiar lack of harmony between the methods of conductor and orchestra produced a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 which, while reasonably flawless technically, will not, we feel sure, live in the memory.

recital in Convocation Hall last evening.

The numbers were well chosen and executed with a fine restraint. Dr. Peaker's adequate technique was made to serve the purpose of the production of music, and not paraded for the dazzling of his hearers. The possibilities of the instrument were not overtaxed but the organist attained a distinctness of tonal quality that made the tunes easy to follow, yet without achieved a complete and coherent picture in each number.

Fortunately he did not exploit the fortissimo potentialities of the organ, perhaps partly because he realized that empty seats do not absorb much vibration and the reverberations might have been disconcerting. The audience, though small, was deeply interested, almost enthusiastic, and perhaps made up in quality what it lacked in quantity. The size of the audience is to be regretted for there is a large number of true music lovers on the campus. There is no charge for these recitals, but this does not mean that they are in any sense second rate. The hour from five to six is relatively free time and it is possible to enter or leave if necessary during the intermissions. Mr. John Weatherhead of Montreal will play the next recital the first Tuesday in February.

A Modern "Macbeth"

On Friday, Jan. 27th, at 8.15, in Forest Hill Village School, the newly-formed and active Village Players are presenting a modern production of Shakespeare's Macbeth, under the direction of Dora Mavor Moore. It is under the distinguished patronage of Dr. and Mrs. Cody and Dr. and Mrs. George F. Rogers, and is being subsequently performed at many other high schools throughout the city.

The cast includes many university graduates and undergraduates, headed by Bob Burns of U.C., who is playing Macbeth.

An interesting feature of the performance is that Donald Ryerson, one of the up-and-coming young composers, has written a complete original score, for a Northern Hammond Organ. This is the first time a Hammond has been used for background in a local theatrical production.

ALUMNI PREPARE CAMPAIGN PLANS FOR U.C. HOSTEL

Three Hundred Thousand Set as Objective in Drive for New Residence on St. George St.

A drive for funds to finance the construction of a new residence for the male students of University College was launched at a special dinner of the University College Alumni in Hart House last night. The objective is said to be between two and three hundred thousand dollars.

The meeting, which was presided over by the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson and attended by Dr. H. J. Cody, president of the university, Chancellor Sir William Mulock, Principal Malcolm Wallace of University College, Dr. Beatty, the Dean of the Faculty of Arts and other famous alumni was impressed by various speakers with the necessity of a new residence for men. It was pointed out by President Cody that there would be a sum of nearly $100,000 already available to start off the campaign. This sum, he said, had been donated to the university at various times with the construction of residences the main object.

Defense Budget

Ottawa, Jan. 25: $50,000,000 will be spent by the Canadian government for defense measures, according to the budget presented to the House of Commons tonight. Eighty-three new planes and a new destroyer will be purchased in the greatest peacetime rearmament program ever undertaken by Canada.

Chilean Quake Toll

Santiago, Jan. 25: 2,000 people were killed in the earthquake area following widespread night earthquakes, and Chilean, a city of 40,000 inhabitants, was in ruins as military aviators attempted to learn the extent of the havoc. Trains, boats and airplanes rushed aid to the stricken areas.

Heavyweight Championship

New York, Jan. 25: Joe Louis retained his heavyweight crown by scoring a technical knockout over John Henry Lewis, dusky challenger, in the first round of the contest last night.

LOVE? LOVED? LOVE!

The general opinion around the campus concerning the new "love detector," invented by Dr. William Marston of New York, is that the instrument would be a marvellous innovation if it worked. However, most of the students were inclined to doubt its mysterious power and to laugh at it. Dr. Marston claims that his love detector, or pneumograph, as it is technically called, will show whether or not a man is in love with his wife and whether he married her for love or money. The pneumograph combined with the sphygmomanometer is not a new form of apparatus and is commonly used for measuring physiological changes of the person, according to one of the staff of the department of psychology at the University of Toronto.

SAUNDERS RELATES JEW-ARAB CRISIS

History Professor Discusses Britain's Predicament at U.C. Residence Meeting

That Britain will shortly come to a definite decision in favour of the Arabs in the present Palestine conflicts and agree to the establishment of an Arab national state, was the prediction advanced last night by Dr. R. M. Saunders of the History Department in a discussion meeting held in the U.C. men's residence. "Britain will, however, make the transition as slow as possible," he stated, "for she will not wish to make the choice too plain."

Whitney Hall Co-eds Pursue and Capture Alleged Thief after Thrilling Chase

Cody House, Whitney Hall, was the scene of a robbery yesterday. About 5.30 in the afternoon, an unidentified woman entered several rooms on the first and second floors and was seen by some of the girls as she carried two purses and some clothing, which included a dress and a skirt.

As the intruder was walking along the hall on the second floor she was seen by some co-eds who called down to the girls on the first floor to stop her. The woman ran through the archway and out the front door into the street.

Pursued by a dozen of the Whitney Hall girls, one of whom was in dressing-gown and slippers, the woman ran along Harbord St. past Trinity House in an attempt to make her escape. She was captured without much struggle and is reported to have said, "O.K., let me go, and I'll give it all back to you."

The alleged thief, described as a young woman about twenty years of age, showed fear and nervousness at being captured. She was taken to Miss Ferguson, Dean of Women of University College, who turned her over to the police.

Police report that the girl, who is not a resident of Toronto, will be charged with theft.

BLATZ DISCUSSES CHILD PERSONALITY

Acceptance of Responsibility as Educational Problem Traced by S.C.M. Speaker

The growth of acceptance of responsibility and the attitude towards authority in the personality of a child is coming to the fore as one of the problems that must be faced by parents and educational advisors, said Dr. Blatz of the Psychology Department in the first women's S.C.M. noon hour address yesterday.

Dr. Blatz then went on to outline the various phases in the growing child's dependence on authority, tracing it through school and graduate association to the adult acceptance of the responsibility of the state.

In his opinion the tendency to form gangs at the age of nine and clubs at the age of twelve are manifestations of the same characteristic.

"The problem today is not so much to recast the adult. Rather it is to train the child in his responsibilities," said Dr. Blatz.

Aid to Jobless

Following the meeting on Tuesday when two unemployed transients from Duke Street spoke in Hart House, the Student Christian Movement decided to inaugurate an effort in the university to secure overcoats, suits and shoes, books and magazines for the group of unemployed men at present located in the city.

Any articles of clothing or literature, etc., will be received at the S.C.M. office in Hart House. Anything which may be used to relieve the distress of the men will be forwarded from the office to these needy unemployed. "The time to act is now. Bring what you have to Hart House at once," said Rev. Wilfrid Lockhart, Secretary of the S.C.M.

GUEST SPEAKER TO ADDRESS CLUB

Minister of Municipal Affairs will be Guest at Liberal Luncheon in Hart House

The Liberal Club has procured the Hon. Eric Cross as guest speaker for a luncheon to be held in Hart House today.

Mr. Cross, who was a gold medalist in economics at Queen's University, was called to the bar in 1923, where he had a very brilliant career. In 1935 he was made chairman of the Ontario Municipal Board, which position he filled until he was forced to resign to qualify as a candidate in the provincial election in 1937.

Since then he has been Minister of Public Welfare and Municipal Affairs in the second Hepburn administration.

Mr. Cross is one of the few men who has been equally successful in both the administrative and legislative spheres. He is unusually well qualified both from the viewpoint of experience and theory to talk upon "Problems in Municipal Affairs and Public Welfare."

SISTER COLLEGES TO BE FEATURED

St. Michael's At-Home will be Held in Hart House with Mel Hamill's Music

Tomorrow night the first St. Michael's At-Home in 88 years will be held at Hart House with Mel Hamill's orchestra supplying the music. For this unique event special decorations have been planned to make the House a scene of beauty. The college colours, the double blue, will predominate, while in the big gymnasium where the dancing is to take place, novel lighting effects have been arranged. Here again the double blue will predominate with the colours of St. Joseph's and Loretto Colleges being featured.

There will be a midnight supper served in the Great Hall. Two head tables are planned to accommodate representatives from other colleges. Due to the large numbers of alumni coming from Rochester, Niagara, Hamilton and Ottawa for the At-Home there will be unofficial hosts to look after the out-of-town guests and to expedite sight-seeing. Present also will be representatives from the Basilian schools in Saskatoon, Windsor and Rochester.

COLD? COOL? COLD!

Nipped ears, frigid lecture rooms and a bit of curiosity instigated a polar expedition to search for thermal information about the university at 4 p.m. yesterday.

Where the beaten paths, like spokes in the large wheel of the front campus, found their central hub, the mercury grounded at 5 degrees above zero.

However, in the cheery bookishness of the University Library it rested at 68 degrees. Yet at the exit, in the atmosphere of cold expectation, where coat collars were being turned up and hats jammed tight, the thin stream dove to 34 degrees above.

Conboy's Long Speech Fails to Swing Small House. Vote Almost a Tie

Despite a detailed defense of civic policy by Controller F. J. Conboy, last night's Hart House debate resulted in a vote of censure on the present administration of the city of Toronto. Nineteen votes were polled against the motion "resolved that this house has confidence in the present administration of the City of Toronto", while eighteen were recorded in favour.

Dr. Conboy, replying to charges of crushing taxation, admitted that property owners were forced to bear too great a share of civic costs, but promised that the rate of taxation would be reduced unless the people themselves (Continued on Page 4)

FRIDAY RECITAL TO PRESENT PIPES

Upper Canada College Group to Give a Novel Program. Recorders Seldom Heard.

A particularly interesting program will be heard at the regular Friday Afternoon Recital in Hart House tomorrow when a group of Upper Canada College students will give a program on the recorders. The group is under the direction of Dr. Walter.

Recorders, the predecessors of the flute, were the most prominent wind instruments of the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries. Though they are more easy to play than the flute, the more complicated and faster music which was presented to the musical world by Mozart and Haydn, favoured the use of the German flute and the use of the recorder subsequently declined.

The modern instruments as made in Germany are highly superior, both in tone quality and intonation, to the recorders of two or three centuries ago, and with the modern revival of interest in the instruments, more modern music is being written for them.

O.C.E. DRAMATIC GUILD TO PRESENT DISRAELI

The Dramatic Guild of the Ontario College of Education will present Louis N. Parker's historical play "Disraeli", tonight and Friday at the O.C.E. hall. Bruce Honeyford plays the title role, with Iris Matthews as Lady Clarissa, and William Fowler as Viscount Deesford. The curtain rises at 8.15 and tickets may be secured at the O.C.E. office, or at the door. The play is directed by Kenneth Millar, and is produced by courtesy of Samuel French Inc.

68 degrees of the pleasant pale blue of the swimmer's depth.

A radiator in Wymliwood with a temperature of 185 degrees Fahrenheit, made the reception room one of the hottest places observed.

In sharp contrast, under the watery eye of a fading afternoon sun tinting the upper tiers of Varsity stadium and coaxed by a bitter wind the liquid from the tiny bulb stopped at zero.

Vague rumours from Victoria College in the early morning set the not too torrid atmosphere at the tingling temperature of 5 degrees below zero.

Although showing a 2 degrees above reading, the bus stop outside of Hart House was reputed from many quarters to represent the "canopus coldest".

A Good Broadcast

The weekly broadcast from station CKCL, on campus and alumni news of the University of Toronto, has been maintaining a high standard, and at the present time is one of the best means of good publicity possessed by the University. Jack Thompson, writer of the script, and announcer, is to be sincerely thanked for the splendid way in which he has been handling this feature, and we believe that in so thanking him we are expressing the opinion of the University graduates and undergraduates alike.

He has used the best discrimination in sifting the news and features at his disposal, and many listeners are of the opinion that the quality of the program has improved each week. Although this was first established as a broadcast of interest especially to undergraduates, the introduction of alumni news and notes has on the whole added to its interest.

The reception that this program has received to date, and the pleasing way it has been conducted is very encouraging to all those who worked for its establishment, and it is believed that it will continue to be a very potent force for the good of the University throughout the rest of the college term.

That 'Soft' Pass Course

The Pass Arts Course has been the brunt of much good-natured humour on the part of students for a long time, and it is expected that it will continue to be considered a course for those people who are just not good enough to get a degree in an honour department. So-called social butterflies, society girls who come to college to acquire "polish", athletes who are more interested in football than scholastics, and "only" sons who are not willing to settle down into father's business until they have had the experience of college life, enter the pass course, spend three happy-go-lucky years therein, and get a degree with very little to show for it. Such is the belief of many hard-working honour course people who tend to be somewhat condescending to their fellow-students, who have neither the initiative nor the intelligence to meet the requirements necessary for an honour degree.

Some labour under the belief that a pass B.A. doesn't signify anything other than wasted time. Others have the impression, considering the amount of work some pass students do, that the standards are extremely low. And most University students are of the opinion that one is able to pass the examinations with a little organized cramming.

But in the light of facts these conclusions should be questioned.

In the first place the examination mortality rate among pass course people is roughly as high as that in most honour courses, and in some cases much higher. To this, of course, is offered the information that the requirements for entrance to the pass course are not as high as some honour courses, and the suggestion that the pass students are inferior in ability and ambition, so that many are culled out each year. But it is generally maintained that a student who attains an "A" or "B" standing in the pass course is as good a student as the one who obtains a first or second class honours in an honour course. Such things cannot be generalized upon, as there are many exceptions to belie every conclusion.

However, Mr. A. B. Fennell, the registrar of the University, is of the opinion that it is possible for some students to obtain their degrees without grading via the pass course, who would probably have been unable to meet the requirements of the four-year courses. He believes that the pass course fills a very important place in the curriculum, and is here to stay, although there is the possibility that it may be extended to a four-year course at some future date. But under the present three-year system, he is quite sure that the pass B.A. from the University of Toronto has as high a standard as the pass B.A. in any other of our universities, especially in consideration of our higher entrance requirements.

In the honour courses of U. of T. it is difficult to surpass the standards of specialization which have been set. But it may be admitted that Toronto sometimes sacrifices breadth of reading and study for intensive and specialized work, and herein the pass course has its value in the scope it allows those who are not interested in the highly specialized work of the honour courses. Besides this it has the very real value of being a year shorter, and of making fewer demands upon the student's time, thus allowing him to indulge in more extra-curricular activities . . . something which has no mean value.

The pass course also has the distinction of being the "descendant" of the first course of study in the University, at a time when the work in mathematics and the sciences was somewhat superficial in the light of present-day standards, while the work in the classics was such as would tax the minds of the present undergraduates. Since then many courses of study have become more specialized each year, but the pass course has remained for those who want a good general cultural background.

The pass course is therefore no soft course. A degree from it means something, and a standing in the A or B class rates as highly as the corresponding standings in the four-year courses. Every year it graduates well-rounded, and well-balanced students, who although they may not be specialists in any one department, are well-equipped with machinery either to specialize for one of the professions, or to fit into society as well-educated citizens.

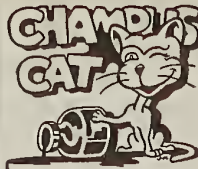

ART MUSIC

Marion Anderson

The concert of Marion Anderson, famous negro contralto, at Eaton Auditorium last night, proved to be the most thrilling vocal recital ever heard by this reviewer. Never have we encountered a singer who displayed such consummate mastery of vocal technique, such remarkable musicianship, such control of subtle mood,—in short, such a truly great singer. The huge audience had just cause for its display of enthusiasm and appreciation at the program's completion.

We find it quite impossible to discover any point of weakness—most singers are usually weak in some technical detail. Miss Anderson possesses an enormous range reaching high into the soprano register. In Schubert's Erkennung she actually sang in three distinct voices. Yet one never felt that this was done for the purpose of mere display—rather, a very logical interpretation. Astounding breath-control enabled Miss Anderson to achieve a grace and lucidity in enunciation such as few singers can show. In subtlety of expression Marion Anderson has no equal. The character of her voice was made at all times to fit the character of the song she was singing.

SPORTSWRITING IS QUAIN
According to that famed sportswriter Flash Wiregarters there are thousands of ways of writing any sentence in a sports story.

For instance:
Smith ran down the floor and threw the ball into the basket for two points.

can be written:
Smith scurried down the hardwood and plunked the sphere into the hoop for a double counter.

or
Smithy sped down the old gym and whipped the inflated hide into the container for a twin marker.

or
Young Smith sprinted over the waxed plank and tossed the old ballcon into the cage, for a dual tally.

or
Smith Minor precipitated himself along the length of the indoor playing field, finally succeeding in depositing the jolly old pill into the receptacle provided for that purpose, thereby raising the score by two points in his favour.

or
Smythe sizzled along the plancher and whammed the tisketasket into the old basket for a deuce.

VICTORIA ALUMNI HEAR K. W. TAYLOR

Economics Professor Speaks at Annual Dinner. Dominion Requires Federal System

Men of the graduating class of Victoria College were entertained as guests of the College Alumni Association at the annual Alumni Dinner in Burwash Hall last night. Chief speaker for the occasion was Professor K. W. Taylor of the Economics Department in McMaster University, who addressed the gathering on "Dominion-Provincial Relations".

Dr. Taylor, who was economic advisor to the government of Ontario in preparation of its Rowell Commission brief, emphasized the necessity of a federal system of government in Canada. He based this conclusion upon the extent of the country, religious differences, need of a training ground for national leaders, and need of smaller units for testing otherwise dangerous economic programs.

DR. HAROLD YOUNG LAUDS ECONOMISTS

S.C.M. Speaker Shows Need of Co-operation between Business and Church in Series

"Economic reform should not depend economically upon the churchman but upon the economist," said Dr. Harold Young, as he concluded the S.C.M. noon hour address in "The Church and Economic Reform" series.

Well-meaning citizens often wonder why the church does not team up with political parties in order to provoke economic reform. To this suggestion Dr. Young said: "Such a political-church alliance would arouse antagonism within the church and would severely confuse the religious aims of church goers."

If the church will not ally itself with political economists, why does it not arouse economic reforms itself? To this problem Dr. Young replied: "Parsons, unfortunately, are poor financiers; they find enough challenge in making their own churches pay economically."

Next week, Sir Robert Falconer, past president of this university, will address the S.C.M. noon hour group on the subject "I believe in Christ".

Speaking OF SPORT

By Mike Greenstein

OVER THE TOP

They start firing on another intercollegiate front this week-end when Warren Stevens' senior Varsity basketball team open their 1939 season playing at McGill on Friday and at Queen's the following night. The starting line-up will find Bill Rogin at centre, Jack LaVarney and Chick Mahoney at forward, along with "Scrubby" Aitchison and Walt McGregor at guard. Others who will probably make the trip include Percy Singer, Ed Cahill, Tom Bannigan, Jim Shute and "Red" Humerick. Mahoney, Singer and McGregor are the only players left from last year's team but Stevens is confident that this year's squad is powerful enough to put up a good fight in the bid to regain the title Toronto lost to Western last season. Prime cause for these bright hopes is the presence of Rogin and Aitchison. In pre-season exhibition games against outstanding American colleges big Bill has averaged fifteen points a game. Rogin and Aitchison played basketball together at Windsor Assumption College and the latter was a member of the Canadian Olympic cage squad that went to Germany in 1936. LaVarney is a freshman at college but his high-scoring prowess has won him a place on the starting five. McGregor graduates this year after playing three years for Stevens' seniors.

OUT ON THE LIMB AGAIN

It is the folly of sports writers that they believe themselves to be possessed of some power of clairvoyance which enables them to select championship teams before the season has officially gotten under way. Who are we to act differently? And so, without much more ado, we adjust our urban and start gazing into the crystal ball. The way we look at it in Western and Varsity are the teams to beat for the intercollegiate cage title. McGill and Queen's have fair teams but are not in the class of the London and Toronto boys. Up at the London seat of learning Lew Davies has assembled a sturdy lot of hoopers and three of his starting five were with the champions last year. In addition Messrs. Hurley, Casey and Farmer will be reinforced by the presence of Clem Faust and Joe Krol. Both these lads would be welcome on any team. Another returning member of last year's squad is Lloyd Elliott. Western play here on February fourth and this game will probably decide in a great measure the resting place of the Wilson Trophy for 1939.

THE REED TROPHY RACE

The standing of the colleges in the race for intramural athletic honours is at hand. A glance down the list shows S.P.S. leading the pack with 2639 points, closely followed by Wycliffe with 2253.5 and Knox with 2108.5. Medicine and University College, two of the largest faculties on the campus, are listed eighth and ninth. For shame!

McGill seem determined to hold on to their football championship. Coach Doug Kerr has issued a call for candidates for next year's teams to attend a meeting where moving pictures of fundamentals will be shown. . . . ANTI-SWINGSTERS PROFFER OPINIONS

Some Say Swing Stinks. Joe's Jibes at Jive Crew Justified. Defend Damaging Diatribe

While the views of Joe College on "swing" found little favour around the campus, according to a survey in yesterday's Varsity, a few staunch admirers have come to his defence.

Chaire Barnes, also of Vic, felt Joe's article was "the plain unvarnished truth".

Allan Bruce Robertson was quick to espouse Joe's cause and came forth with this vindication of swing: "Joe College's article is stimulating," said John Greening, of C. & F. "I am glad we have at least someone with some sense."

DENTS A DEFEAT O.C.E. IN HART HOUSE BASEBALL

In the Hart House gym yesterday noon Dents A defeated O.C.E. in a good game of indoor baseball with the score of 5-4.

In the first inning Willie Hamby and McColl came home for the Molar-men with O.C.E. making no score.

The Teachers made three counts in the third inning with Gilmore, Acheson and Grills taking the honours.

The final inning was a battle between pitchers, with no score.

Joe Kulyk for Dents pitched a good game, with 8 strikeouts, 4 bases on balls and 8 hits, while big Moose Rogin was throwing them for O.C.E., getting 4 strikeouts, 3 bases on balls and 13 hits, final score 5-4.

Dents A: Weiller, Hamby, McLeod, McColl, Sproule, Smokium, Kulyk, Dave.

O.C.E.: Gilmore, Acheson, Grills, Rogin, Salmons, Temple, Barbour, Minimo, Minshel.

KNOX PUCKSTERS TROUNCE BUSHMEN WITH FAST PLAY

Near, Henderson, Stiles Star for Presbyterians to Put Them in Strong Position

In a fast, thrill-packed game at the Bloor St. Igloo, Knox College pounded their way to a 3-0 victory over Forestry last night. Goalie Brinck Near aided by Henderson and Stiles, who collected 2 and 1 goals respectively, outclassed their sporty bush-whacking opponents. However, goalie Ace Balantyne, with such excellent players as Grinnell, put up a game fight. Three wins and a draw give Knox a chance at their group leadership.

Forestry: Grinnell, Reynolds, Eccles, Murchison, Hope, Kirk, Taylor, Arnold, Ballantyne.
Knox: Vance, Redford, Henderson, Stiles, Calder, Mallion, MacDonald, Morley, Near.

TRINITY QUINTET NOSE OUT RIVALS

Wycliffe Basketball Squad Swamped by Red and Black

Trinity B basketball quintet nosed out Wycliffe's B team 39-4 in yesterday's thrilling encounter in the upper gym. After the Red and Black scored the first sixteen points Wycliffe rallied briefly as Bill Simpson snared a basket. The first period ended with Trinity maintaining their lead by a 25-2 margin.

The second period saw more organized play by Wycliffe, but Arch White-lane, Webster and Kilgour kept on potting baskets with the greatest ease. During this spasm the Wycliffe crew changed their strategy and concentrated on making their foul shots count. By this method they were able to duplicate their first period score, but their efforts were not enough to overcome the Trinity lead, and the game ended with the score Trinity 39, Wycliffe 4.

Trinity: Cranfield (2), Whitelaw (22), Goodman (1), Webster (7), Tiller (1), Beverly, Kilgour (6) and Thorpe.

Wycliffe: Wilkinson, Simpson (2), MacDonald, Paterson (1), Parke-Taylor, Coleman (1).

Now is the time for all good women to come to the aid of the party. You don't even have to be very good (as they say) to get out and support the first co-ed interfaculty ski meet being held this Saturday at the Varsity Ski Club. If your ability is in the fair-to-middling class then don't hesitate to enter some or one of the events. These are limited to a downhill race and combined downhill-salon.

Somehow, somewhere the rumour has leaked out that the leading co-ed sliders around here are in the super class, and all the rest have been frightened off. However, "Punch" Galtie, U.C. who is working very hard with Jane Urquhart, also U.C., to make the meet a success, emphatically denied these reports and wants you to know that your chances are as good as those of anyone else.

If there is sufficient demand, transportation will be arranged so that the co-ed events may take place around one o'clock. The committee intends to select the best ten entries Saturday, from which a team of four will be selected to represent Varsity at the McGill meet in February. And believe it or not, it is not as cold up there beyond Aurora as it is here. Track please.

SPORT SPLASHES

In preparation for Saturday's senior interfaculty swimming meet, preliminaries will have to be run off in several events at 4 o'clock this afternoon. There will be three heats in the 50 yard free style and 2 heats in each of the 100 yard back stroke and in the 100 yard free style events.

TRINITY 2, MEDS 1
In a fast hard-checking water polo game last night Trinity managed to get a lead and hold it over the hard pressing Doctors. Statter, Hampson and Brown were the chief Meds threats while Gardiner and Love were the mainstays of the Trinity squad.

O.C.E. I, DENTS 4
The second game of the evening saw Dents moving into the lead in their group with their second successive victory. Case notched two of the winner's four counters and formed, together with Kilgour, Leaning and the rest of the hard-fighting Molarmen, a formidable aggregation. Beatty of O.C.E., however, was the outstanding player in the water.

ATHLETIC NIGHT PLANNED AGAIN

parade forth at least five strong three-man teams headed by such redoubtable performers as Bill Lester, Powell, Willie Mark, Ames and Paterson, all of whom have had intercollegiate experience. Meds with three, Trinity two, and Vic and U.C. with one team each should provide the keenest competition. Competent outside judges will be on hand to pick the winners and much weight rests on the results since the most promising gymnasts will catch places on the intercollegiate team. It is to be noted that when the intercollegiate gymnastic championships are held here on February 25, the Toronto tumblers will be striving for their seventh straight victory.

In the Winterburn water tank the senior swimming stars will be striving for fame and faculty to capture the Fitzgerald Trophy. Once again S.P.S. are the defenders and once again they are blossoming forth with such regal representatives as the intercollegiate star, John Givrin. For U.C. the former Olympic nator God Clawson will head a notable contingent and for Vic the reliable Nels Earl leads 15 prize pool-plungers. The events will be run off on the same plan as in an intercollegiate meet: medley relay, diving, 50 free, 440 free, 100 back, 100 free, 200 breast and 200 relay—and should be just as interesting.

Last but not least are the international boxing bouts as Toronto plays host to the swinging sailors from the U.S. Coastguard Academy who are tops in the American college fistic realm. Mel Gilson's local mittmen are classic intercollegiate champions and judging from their strong showing against O.A.C. last Saturday should give the well-conditioned, well-trained Americans a run for their money.

'LAISSEZ-FAIRE'
TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Wood was of the opinion that "Laissez-faire, as a doctrine for the guidance of present-day governments, passed out with the horse-and-buggy days. Unfortunately, however, it is still possible for Canadian governments to carry on with the electoral support of the populace while boasting of a five-year record of unqualified diffidence towards the solution of Canadian problems. The policy of appointing Royal Commissions, by means of which a delay of at least three years is secured before any constructive legislation may be introduced, must be brought to an end and some really constructive legislation passed in the interests of the Canadian people."

popular in America. "I learned to box in England and to fight in Canada," says this peaceable looking little time bomb. He is very hard to hit, seeming to be all elbows, mits and shoulders, meanwhile storming leather at every opening. His right hand is a sure cure for insomnia.

This lethal weapon has produced knockouts at both Cornell and Syracuse U., across the line. Dillon took the Canadian intercollegiate title at Kingston in 1938, stopping both Bazerman of McGill and Stone of O.A.C. by the K.O. route. These British boys don't all bit like Tommy Farr.

At 135 lbs. Toronto will carry "Stew" Parker, another intercollegiate champ. This scrappy lightweight won both his bouts for the Canadian title by knockouts. His wickedest weapon is a starboard cross loaded with dynamite.

At 155 lbs. the colourful Fred De Wolfe, former Nova Scotia fisherman, will sport the Blue and White. A graduate of Dalhousie University, Halifax, Nova Scotia, De Wolfe was twice welterweight champion of the Maritimes.

At light-heavyweight we have Ted Jarvis, six-feet three inches of football hero turned brawler. This boy is more noted for a gridiron warrior than ringman. A beautiful natural athlete, Jarvis has improved quickly and will be a real threat after a few more tune-up bouts.

The Varsity squad will not carry a heavyweight. The feather and welter representatives are as yet unpicked.

It is with the greatest pleasure that the University of Toronto extends once more the hand of friendship and good sportsmanship to the U.S. Naval Academy. The sons of "Uncle Sam" and "Johnny Canuck" are one bunch of boys who can indulge in a friendly altercation without causing international complications.

Correspondence

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Mr. Littner's letter to Varsity repeating the declaration that Christian Science is a pretense at the practice of medicine calls for a reply.

Christian Science heals disease, but it uses a system that is definitely distinct and different from any method employed by practicing physicians. It is to be found in the spiritual system of healing taught and demonstrated by Christ Jesus. In its practice, which is the utilization of the divine truth regarding God and man, religion and healing are one, whereas outside of Christian Science healing is almost entirely dissociated from religion.

It should be remembered that the disciple Luke had been a practicing physician before becoming a disciple of the Master, but once having learned the power of spiritual law there is no record of his having returned to the use of the methods and remedies in which he had been trained and educated.

The experience of Luke is being repeated today. A number of highly respected physicians have through observation and study become so convinced of the efficacy of Christian Science as to give up their former profession for the practice of the latter. One such was Dr. W. F. Wilding of Manchester, England, F.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., etc., who, in Busy Man's Magazine, wrote, "After I was converted to the truth of Christian Science I gave up the practice of medicine. I had spent nineteen years in its study, and thirteen years in its practice. Such a step taken by one who loved his work and profession could only be justified by very powerful motives. My reason for accepting Christian Science is best explained by some of my experiences during the last six years." He then recounted many healings by Christian Science of so-called incurable cases with which he had been familiar.

In fact the lecture on Christian Science (advertised in Varsity) which is to be delivered in Massey Hall on Saturday evening, January 28th, is by Dr. John M. Tuttle of Kansas City, Missouri, a former practicing physician.

In many other instances physicians send so-called incurable cases to Christian Science as a last resort and are appreciative of the results. I repeat the statement of Dr. Wm. Mayo of Rochester, Minn. "I have seen people to whom I have given up and they have got relief." Mr. Littner's effort to belittle this statement by asking for "the circumstances of the case" and suggesting that the "relief" was that "given by the last rites" is somewhat puzzling. The statement does not refer to a case but to a number, and the Christian Science church does not perform "last rites." The only reasonable interpretation is that which was intended and is obvious to the unprejudiced reader.

But while the fact that some doctors have left the practice of medicine for that of Christian Science, and that many others send patients to Christian Science, is interesting, nevertheless, the endorsing justification for Christian Science is the wholeness, logic and utility of the religion to be found in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, and the unnumbered thousands of healed and regenerated lives.

Respectfully yours,
Jas. W. Fulton,
Christian Science Committee on Publication for Ontario

SAUNDERS RELATES JEW-ARAB CRISIS

and to the world, Dr. Saunders emphasized that Britain has now reached a point where she must make a choice between the two groups, Arab and Zionist Jew. He pointed out that at the conclusion of the war Britain was faced with the choice and the question was, "Which choice will favour British interests the most?" Britain adopted a middle-of-the-road policy to the detriment of both Arabs and Jews, and she now faces the decision afresh.

Britain must preserve her route to India, both by sea and overland, and she can best do this by siding with the Arabs, who control the western opening to the Mediterranean, Dr. Saunders stated. Furthermore, the Arabs, already proceeding towards nationalist states in Iraq and Syria, are standing together everywhere, and Britain cannot run the risk of alienating the 400,000,000 Moslems in her empire.

The Jewish nationalists do not want a co-operative Palestine, however, said the speaker. They wish to get rid of the Arab, and regard the British government as "an alien bureaucracy."

willled that the city make more capital expenditures. "The rate is high," said Dr. Conboy, "because of the services given the people which they want. I can assure you that the tax rate this year will be reduced and next year it will be still lower."

Reviewing the work done by the city, Dr. Conboy pointed to its medical services, cultural services, and recreational services. He referred to the mothers' allowance plan and the old age pensions system which were taken over by the provincial government.

The Toronto police force, which drew criticisms from opposition speakers, was ardently supported by the controller. "I doubt if there is a better police force on the North American continent," he said. "We are constantly improving the personnel. Every candidate is required to have spent at least two years in high school and must measure up to our own standards physically and morally."

A glowing picture of the financial position of the city was given by the Honorable Visitor, Toronto, he claimed, had always been solvent. And it was the practice of the city, he continued, to pay off debts before maturity.

"We have never refunded our debts," Dr. Conboy declared.

"We are not perfect," he concluded, "but all in all, the city of Toronto can boast of a good municipal government."

Paul McGillivuddy, 1st U.C., the first to speak in support of the motion, challenged the opposition to produce any valid charge of civic corruption. "Toronto is the most heavenly city on earth," he stated. "The democratic form of the municipal government should be maintained to have no confidence in the administration is to have no confidence in anything but force."

"All the various types of interest that are found in the city of Toronto are not represented in the municipal government," claimed Ross Hofmann. "The machine is supported, or has been supported until recently, by financial interests," he continued. What financial interests backed the civic politics Hofmann refused to name, although he was questioned from the floor.

Dr. Horace L. Brittain, Director of the Bureau of Municipal Research, suggested several reforms that might be made. The ward system of election, he suggested, was poor and should be realigned. Wards, he contended, were not composed of people with the same interests. He favoured a three-year term for the city council and the abolition of the Board of Education, which, he believed, should be replaced by a committee of council.

"All related departments," he said, "should be centralized under one man who would be responsible to council." Increased co-operation and less expense would result.

Because the present council had only been in power for a little over three weeks he felt that neither confidence nor lack of it could be displayed, but that construction of civic government needed renovation and reformation.

ing, and the selection of program gave the audience ample opportunity to appreciate how extremely plastic her voice can be. Her singing of Saint-Saens' My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice from Sansou and Delilah was as satisfying in all respects as was her incomparable interpretation of Negro Spirituals. Of these latter we must mention the spiritual Crucifixion, which was sung in a low register with gripping dramatic pathos. We shall remember this concert as a truly exciting experience.

U.C. Players' Guild

The University College Players' Guild took the tiny boards of the Women's Union yesterday afternoon with a melodrama entitled "The Valiant". The production was the Guild's first of the season, and probably the best work they've done this year.

The play is a one-act that has a prison setting. The situation concerns itself with an unknown prisoner who is doomed to hang the same day but will not reveal his true identity. The story is a sentimental one but contains sufficient meat to make it gripping. The cast of six played well, considering lack of time for rehearsal, but they struck a snag in a very important element of the play. They failed to heighten the atmosphere sufficiently, due to faulty characterization, and as a result of this lack of intensity, the play failed to reach its true power.

However, on the whole, the acting was capable. Norcen Mitchell and John Watson were both very effective in major roles, while the rest of the cast performed adequately. Frank Shuster

University of Pennsylvania Co-operates in Exploration of Northern Iraq

Professor T. J. Meek of the Oriental Languages department of the university, will head an expedition to Tepe Gawa in northern Iraq. The expedition is being sent out under the joint sponsorship of the University of Pennsylvania Museum and the Baghdad School.

Although excavation at Tepe Gawa has only been going on for ten years, the locality has had a rapid rise to prominence because it furnishes "the largest continuous record of superimposed occupation known to science," in the words of Professor Meek.

To date, excavation has progressed one hundred feet below the top surface of the mound and this section deals with the Neolithic period before 5,000 B.C. This period is at present practically unknown, and it is to gather data about it that the expedition is being sent.

Three Varsity Writers Receive Writ of Libel

Representing Swing Club, the Student Law Firm of Kayler, Yaremko and Dubin Served Writ Yesterday

A writ of libel was served to three members of The Varsity staff yesterday by solicitors for the Swing Club. The case will probably be tried next week in the Moot Court.

Those served with the writ were the editor-in-chief, the managing editor, and the night editor for the issue of Monday, January 23, the issue containing the allegedly libelous article.

The student law firm of Hilton, Kayler, Yaremko, and Dubin served the writ on the three staff members in The Varsity office yesterday afternoon. The defendants in the case have engaged Shiffman, Goodman, Lennox and Vanni of the Law course.

Notice of intention to sue if the statement was not retracted was sent to the editor-in-chief, the managing editor, and the night editor on Tuesday. The accused editors of The Varsity, refused to retract the statement made, or to apologize. Serving of the writ followed this action.

Exact date and place of the trial is not yet known, but it will be heard before the Moot Court next week. The court consented to hear the case, it has been announced.

National Scholarship Is Conference Topic

Culmination of Campaigning is Regional Conference at Kingston with Representatives from Four Universities

Kingston, Ont., Jan. 26th (C.U.P.)—The culmination of several months of active campaigning to secure public endorsement and financial assistance for the Canadian Student Assembly's National Scholarship Campaign, was marked by a regional conference of assembly executives at Queen's University, Jan. 21 and 22. Those represented were the Universities of McGill, Montreal, Toronto, and Queen's.

On the basis of the support already secured, the C.S.A. felt justified in proceeding with its plans for a student delegation to Ottawa on March 6th to keep a pre-arranged engagement with the Hon. Norman McLeod Rogers. The Assembly expects to have a crowd of 200 university students who will make up the delegation. At the same time a regional conference of university students in this area will form the conference.

DR. LAUREYS SURVEYS MARKETING

President of Montreal Chamber of Commerce Presents Third in a Series of Marketing Lectures

A general survey of the problems of marketing Canadian goods abroad, and of the organization necessary for the solution of those problems was presented last night by Dr. H. Laureys, president of the Montreal Chamber of Commerce, in the third of a series of lectures on marketing given in the Economics Building.

Dr. Laureys, until recently director of the Higher School of Commercial Studies at the University of Montreal, stated that we in Canada have reached a saturation point with regard to our domestic market. "There are two solutions," he said. "We may increase the population and make our domestic market larger, or we may further develop our foreign markets. Canada must develop her export trade more than any other, and thereby gain economic stability."

The choice of the right man for a position as export manager is of prime importance, said Dr. Laureys. "He must have special knowledge of languages, commercial law, export technique, banking, exchange, geography, ocean transportation and kindred subjects," he said. "Practical experience as well as university training is needed."

R.C.M.P. Probe Letters

Ottawa, Jan. 26—Threatening letters that are written to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain will be investigated by Scotland Yard and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Abuse and threatening letters that are written to the Governor-General of Canada or to the ministers of the government, also, will be probed by the R.C.M.P., it was announced early this morning.

Rebels Continue Offensive

U.C. PARLIAMENT CONDEMNS POLICY OF 'LAISSEZ-FAIRE'

Prime Minister Launches Attack on Mackenzie King and Leads Vote to Condemn Policy to Tune of 14-8

The laissez-faire policy pursued by the King government was condemned last night at the U.C. Parliament by a vote of 14-8. Although the attendance was small, the session was enlivened by the facetious heckling of the members.

Claiming that he was not opposing the liberal party, but rather the policy of a single individual, the prime minister, Wm. Wood, launched a violent attack upon Mackenzie King. According to Mr. Wood, the platform of the next election will be based on loyalty to the empire, since "people will be steamed up in a terrific atmosphere of royal love" after the royal visit. On such important questions as the abdication and the Munich agreement "Mr. King compromised." Side-stepping of legislation, as in the case of the Rowell Commission, prove that Mr. King fears small sections of Canada.

I. Sussman, leading the opposition, declared it "an impossibility for a prime minister to do as much as he promised." He asserted that if a government effects one quarter of its promises it was not pursuing a laissez-faire policy.

University Ski Meet To Offer Varied Events

Combined Downhill and Slalom as well as Jumping and Cross-Country Events will be Featured Saturday

With perfect skiing conditions prevailing at the time of writing, the University Ski Meet is scheduled to begin on Saturday at the ski grounds up at Aurora. Two combined downhill and slalom events for women and men respectively will be run off in the afternoon as the first section of the meet.

Competition is open to all skiers in the university, according to Aubrey Boyd, president of the club, and experience is not necessary to enter the competitions. Lists are up in the athletic office in Hart House for those wishing to enter the meet and also secure transportation to the grounds. A bus will leave at twelve o'clock on Saturday from the front of Hart House for Aurora.

Declares Britain Inevitable

London, Jan. 26—In a speech yesterday, Sir Samuel Hoare, member of Neville Chamberlain's "inner cabinet", stated that British economic, naval and military strength would make it impossible for anyone to defeat that country. He added that no air attack, no matter how frightful, would be able to destroy the British people's "will to resist".

Blue Cagers To Invade Kingston and Montreal

Powerful Gael Team are Determined to Start off the Season with a Win at Varsity's Expense

By Mac Hileman
Sports Editor, Queen's Journal
Kingston, Jan. 27—The Golden Gaels of Queen's have had a somewhat checkered career this season to date but they are determined to start off the intercollegiate season with a win at Varsity's expense. Playing in their own gym should give the Gaels a slight advantage and add to that the fact that Varsity's cagers will have done quite a bit of train travelling prior to Saturday night.

Led by Captain Joe Hoba, third year veteran, the Golden Gaels will present a far stronger aggregation than the 1938 team. At guard with Joe Hoba will be either Bill Drysdale, a second year veteran whose home is in Kingston, or Jim Courtwright, Canada's ace javelin thrower, who missed basketball last year because he was in Australia.

Red and White Basketeers have Better-than-usual Average in Their Pre-Season Exhibition Games

By Monty Berger
McGill, Montreal, Jan. 23.—Shades of former basketball glory haunt the McGill campus these days as the Red and White cagers round into shape for the intercollegiate season which starts here this Saturday night. After three jaunts to leading American quarters and the best competition that Montreal has to offer, the Redmen feel sufficiently grounded to give all comers a stiff struggle.

CANADIAN NOVELIST VIEWS WRITER'S LIFE

Philip Grove Discusses 'Aspects of a Writer's Life'. Achieved Fame as Author of "Search for America".

Pondering over the fatality of the thought that every decision made during the course of a life, limits our future possibilities, Philip Grove last night discussed "Aspects of a Writer's Life". Mr. Grove is a Canadian novelist and the author of "Search for America" and more recently "Two Generations".

The novelist said he had always had the desire to write a book, a Canadian book, which he might place on "that bookshelf a thousand miles long, from Vancouver to Halifax. On it there is but one book"—Louis Hemon's Marie Chapdelaine, was implied. "Very likely I shall fail. It does not matter."

If this country is a separate individuality, it is that which will form a literature that is still to be born. The passing generation has failed. Therefore, it is yet to be proved whether Canadians have a distinctive response to life, which is worthy of a literature and which can make her a nation. It was the novelist's opinion that it was a dormant spirituality, crying for utterance.

Explaining his desire and need to write, Mr. Grove said that in him it was not a wish for fame, or hopes of weighing down the already heavy scale of literature. It was a kind of fate, a something that had to be expressed, a necessity of writing his reactions to nature, scenic and human.

NEOPHYTE DOCTORS SWING TO BERIGAN

Annual At-Home Features Young Maestro Leading Terrific Jam Session as Medical Men Truck on Down

The traditional Meads At-Home went over in a big way as it does annually, at the Royal York last night, when Bunny Berigan came up to all expectations and gave the dancers what they wanted . . . music mixed to suit the tastes of both the sweet, and the hot swing fans.

Berigan climaxed his popularity when he announced at 2.45 that he would play until 4 a.m.; from then on he let the boys pound it out, tearing into a terrific jam session which ended with an abandoned trash solo, and a cheering tired crew of very enthusiastic merry-makers gathered around the bandstand.

Engineers let their rivals know they were out in force by giving the occasional "Toile Oike", while another group got together and startled the doctors with their version of an Oxford yell. The medicine-men themselves acted the perfect hosts, and refused to flaunt their superiority by giving their "Varsity Meds", and contented themselves with drowning out the cheers of an occasional group of engineers.

The sit-it-outers, laced back in their side-line chairs, and contemplated the mysterious swaying of the right arm of a skeleton suspended beneath the skull-and-cross-bones directly over the head of the big bass violinist.

Another very important feature of the party was the sumptuous meal served in the convention hall at midnight.

A New Residence

Two nights ago a group of notable men met in Hart House to discuss a very worthy enterprise, the possibility of establishing a new building on the campus in the form of a University College Men's Residence. Presiding over the meeting was the Honourable G. Howard Ferguson, in the presence of Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University, Chancellor Sir William Mulock, Principal Malcolm Wallace of University College, Dr. Beatty, Dean of the Faculty of Arts, and other celebrated alumni.

This plan is not a new idea. The necessity for a new and larger residence has been apparent for a long time. Even before "73 St. George" was converted from a private home to a student residence back in 1926 to meet the increasing needs for housing, it was an obvious fact. It is now even more necessary.

We quote a few interesting facts. Five years ago the number of men registered in University College was 750. According to reports this figure has decreased to 561. Students find it more convenient to register in other colleges and universities where proper housing can be obtained. Of the number of male students in University College approximately 350 live in the city, and about 250 are out-of-town students. Of these 250 men, only 35 belong to fraternities, 30 are quartered at "73", 30 at the University of Toronto residence, and 15 live at Knox College Residence. This leaves more than 100 men living in rooming houses about the city, and potential tenants of a new residence.

Consider some of these rooming houses. They are not all they might be to take the part in the student's life that they do. Improperly heated, improperly ventilated, improperly equipped for study purposes, yes, and in some instances improperly located, they are anything but conducive to study. We might even go so far as to say that the furnishings are not all they might be. And without any thought in our minds that we are too good to put up with our present accommodation.

It has been proven that expenses in a university residence keep close on an average to the expenses of living in outside rooming houses. In a great many cases residence expenses are less. It has been proven also that there is a market for this residence accommodation. At the present residence at 73 St. George St., the number of applicants for residence accommodation was twice as many as the house could accommodate.

Dr. Cody has announced that the sum already available for this proposed project amounts to $100,000, donated to the university at various times with the construction of residences the main object. The new building as planned, completely furnished, will cost in the neighbourhood of $350,000.

The project is highly commendable. We hope that sufficient financial aid will be given to complete this long-awaited improvement.

Liberty

One of the essentially significant terms in the English language is the word "liberty". Perhaps personal liberty in human society is a more or less relative affair. Individual behaviour in a large social group necessarily suffers certain restrictions, but in a reasonably just social organization such restraints as are imposed upon the individual imply corresponding advantages accruing to the individual members of the group, to offset the elements of liberty relinquished.

Liberty connotes freedom to act. In a broad sense, it signifies unrestrained muscular movements and is ever assertive in human nature. The infant instinctively rebels against any attempt to impede the natural movements of its arms and legs. Every normal child naturally revels in the freedom of mental action. This sense of freedom or liberty of body and mind is deeply imbedded in human character.

True democratic forms of government are definitely pledged to the promotion of the principles and right of individual liberty, so far as this liberty is consonant with the best interests of society as a whole. Democratic institutions are traditionally committed to the assured enhancement and preservation of individual liberty functioning within the organism we call the state.

A genuine democracy frankly has its genesis and growth in the spirit of human liberty. Any arbitrary restrictions of individual freedom within the corporate state is undeniably a form of tyranny. Concrete instances of governmental infringement upon historically recognized human liberties, are of course present where a dictatorship uses the power to inflict inflexible and arbitrary limitations on physical, intellectual, and spiritual behaviour. In exactly the degree that this imposes a hardship on the people, in precisely the same measure it is unjust and intolerable and the exercise of despotic force is invariably required. Therefore, if the accepted concept of freedom is to be more than a legend, the natural impulses of liberty must assert themselves.

APPEAL MUSIC

Conservatory Symphony

In its concert at Convocation Hall last night, the Conservatory Symphony Orchestra reached a new peak in perfection which other local amateur orchestras might never surmount. Among other things it proved that an amateur orchestra must not confine itself to the performance of the lighter and easier classics. Its brilliant conductor, Ettore Mazzoleni, has in a few years developed the orchestra to the level where it can perform the very difficult Shostakovich First Symphony with much more than just passable skill.

This Symphony, which might be familiar to some readers because of frequent radio performance, was played locally for the first time last night. The work, which was written when the Russian composer was only eighteen years old, exposed the orchestra to astoundingly complicated orchestral manoeuvres which were executed with the skill and confidence of an experienced group. Unfortunately, we have not the space to discuss in detail this great symphony—its scintillating themes, brilliant orchestration, the delicious pathos of the third movement. Mr. Mazzoleni deserves much praise for his work and for his intelligent interpretation.

Several soloists were featured on the program. Stanley Solomon, a vigorous young violinist, a Handel viola concerto in B-minor with great vitality and understanding. His rich tone was especially satisfying in the lyric slow movement. Lillian Smith, soprano, sang three graceful 18th-century songs accompanied at the piano by Mr. Mazzoleni. Miss Smith has a lovely, silky voice, somewhat delicate but not brittle, easily capable of doing the collatura work of the songs of Handel and Mozart.

The first oboist and flautist of the orchestra were soloists in a Fugal Concerto by Gustav Holst, which, incidentally, was also played for the first time in Toronto. The work is a charming example of modern mastery of an old form. We especially liked the composer's humorous touch of introducing a simple nursery tune into the syncopated maze. Wagner's majestic Meistersinger overture was the other number on the program.

KNOLLS INTERVIEWS ALBERT EINSTEIN

Knolls Overcome by Knolls' Sense of Humour and Brilliant Repartee

By R. E. Knolls

I arose this morning feeling quite well and happy about everything. Glancing around my spacious room, which is kept in beautiful condition by my extraordinarily efficient Japanese house-boy, I said, "Humm. I wonder what I have to do today... ah, yes, I have an appointment to interview Albert Einstein."

Quickly I drank a cup of hot coffee and putting on my splendid overcoat I hastened to my appointment.

Entering the hotel room I found Mr. Einstein awaiting me. I gazed at him for a moment and then uttered "...wie geht's" in his native tongue to make him feel at home. "You come originally from Germany?" I asked, helping myself to a pipeful of my own specially blended tobacco. "Yes," replied the professor.

"Ah, Germany?" I cried, "what a blessed land. Well do I remember the happy days I spent there as a student at Heidelberg. What a life. Wienerschulzeit and apfelstrudel and oh, what beer," I continued. I recalled with a tear the time I took a boat across the Baltic just to be able to see Stockholm and taste that delicious smorgasbord.

"You are now in Princeton?" I queried. "Yes," answered Mr. Einstein. "Ah, Princeton... dear old Princeton." I screamed, "how I remember the days I spent as a Princeton undergraduate. ... Fishing... studying... Ah, they used to call me Catfish Knolls... those were the days! I too was a brilliant mathematics student," I continued.

"Once I was offered a professorship in mathematics but refused it, knowing that my first love was journalism."

Mr. Einstein yawned. ... How continental, I thought. I rose and bid him good night, thanking him for a splendid story. I walked out into the street feeling happy. I would have sausages for lunch.

O.C.E. Dramatic Guild

The Dramatic Guild of the Ontario College of Education made its first night presentation of the historical play Dixieland, to an appreciative audience. This evening will be the last performance of a two-night stand.

Mrs. Travers is played by Leith Ferguson, Lady Beaconsfield by Amelia Hall, and the Duchess of Glastonbury by Nora McEwing. Porter, the gardener, is played by Rothwell Bishop. With Bruce Honeyford in the title role, and Iris Matthews as Lady Clarissa, the play was accorded much appreciation at last night's performance.

Particularly noteworthy was the very enthusiastic applause accorded Rothwell Bishop. This performer almost stopped the show with his clever characterization.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shifman

NOTES ON THE CUFF OF A SPORTS REPORTER

The schedule of sports events on my right hand sleeve indicates a heavy week-end with plenty of thrills. . . . U.S.A. Coast Guards, "who always get their ship", are going to fight the Varsity mittmen. These boys are good, but not too good. They won the last encounter 5 to 3 and are out to repeat. . . . It seems that there's to be an interfaculty gym meet and swimming tattoo all over Hart House. . . . You just have to have eyes in the back of your head these days. . . . The basketball team have left for Montreal to play McGill on Friday and Queen's on Saturday. In the meanwhile the hockey team plays Queen's on Saturday and the game will give Toronto the undisputed league's leadership if successful. It's a nice trip if you can get it and you can get it if you're Sports Editor (oh happy day). But I think I'll stay home for there's dancing in the upper gymnasium, besides I have a short essay (20 million words). . . . Seems we forgot to shout out from the roof tops that there's a ski meet tomorrow up at the ski club so get out the old wax 'cause there's interfaculty points in them thrar hills. . . . Saw Steve hurrying home to play with his eight month old daughter; wonder why he doesn't bring her around. I'd like to meet her. . . . Mac McCutcheon turned thirty-five yesterday. Must congratulate him. . . . Heard that Callon of the hockey club goes up and back from Oakville every nine and makes 9 o'clock too. . . . must find out how he does it. Can't even get out of bed myself. . . . Saw the president of the Swing Club playing ball the other A.M. If he is half the Swinger at swing, that he is at baseball he's got something. . . . Clipped an article by Dr. Lovelock, former sensational sprinter, debunking the whole business of special meals for athletes. . . . claims the average person's meals are sufficient. . . . wonder if he's got something. . . . must speak to a medico. . . . Mr. Stevens, university coach, got a letter addressed to McGill University. Was his face red? . . . New ring rule to be enforced on Saturday night compelling fighter who gets knocked off his feet to take a count before getting up. Wonder what Piggett thinks about this. . . . McGill Daily still thinks there's a freshman football rule on the books. . . . It's merely local rulings. This was swept aside last year by a new ruling. . . . consult book and tell Monty. . . . The Montrealers have adopted a freshman rule in basketball, in hockey to come into effect next year, to discourage practise of imports. . . . Bravo. . . . Got a letter from the vice-president of the swimming club claiming that we have neglected them in our columns. . . . called me a non-swimmer, hence my lack of interest. . . . just for that I'm going out for the water polo team and make him eat this type. . . . but it is an intercollegiate sport. . . . I'll have to speak to Lipin about this (P.S. He's the Vice-Pres.). . . . Head of Law Dept. claims rugby as played in Canada dresses up a band of gladiators to massacre each other. Tells of demerits of organized play and would like to see more initiative in sport. There is something to that but I don't know what. . . . Seems like the only thing that still lack in sports around the school is bob-sledding. No more dangerous than skiing; will see what we can do about this. . . . Key office claims one of the boys in Meds took a shower with the window open in Hart House yesterday and froze stiff. . . . they are using the guy for scientific study but this is supposed to be on the Q.T. . . . Next time I visit the athletic wing must drop into Mr. Reed's office and see the picture on the wall where half the crowd is at attention and the other half sitting down, some cheerleaders also at shun while another filed a yell; it seems it's a panoramic picture phenomenon. . . . Now that I filled a column on notes on the cuff how am I ever gonna give my Maw the shirt to wash. Which only goes to show that I give the shirt off my back for The Varsity and still nobody reads the column without complaining. Eh, East House? . . . I wish they'd drop a line.

Varsity Blue Blades Meet Queensmen Tonight

Ace Bailey's Boys Hopefully Head for Queen's in Determined Effort to Break Last Year's Jinx

By Ed Goodman

Tonight at Kingston Varsity's unbeaten senior hockey squad meet their first real test of the current campaign. Ace Bailey's pucksters face Queen's in a key match in the International Inter-collegiate Hockey League.

A loss by the Toronto team will mean that they will practically have to beat McGill twice in order to grab the title, unless the Tricolour defeat McGill, which is very unlikely. The Tricolour's little square arena was the graveyard of Varsity's titular hopes last year, when they lost 4 to 3. In fact, Queen's on their home arena have been practically unbeatable, for even McGill lost their only league game in two years at Kingston.

Coach Walsh's Boys Ready to Repeat Last Year's Victory Despite Absence of Star Left-Winger Carver

Playing hosts to Ace Bailey's Blue team on Friday night the Tricolour puckmen will be trying hard to repeat with a win as they did last year in Kingston.

Bad news came this week when Jack Carver, star left winger for the past few seasons, had his appendix removed on Monday night. Jack had been playing great hockey in the five league games to date and his loss may mean a lot on Friday.

In goal Queen's has Jim Burrows, a third year mining student who was out of hockey last year. On defence are Jim Neilson, a hold over from last year, Macce Truman, a final year miner,

Naval Academy Boys Bring Powerful Squad to Meet Strong Blue Gladiators in Wrestling and Boxing

Tomorrow night the Varsity boxing team is slated for a gruelling evening as they clash with the powerful U.S. Coast Guard squad. Boxing is a major sport at this popular naval academy and their well trained, beautifully conditioned scrappers promise some snappy, blistering engagements.

Sharpened by their meet with O.A.C. last week the Blue and White leather pushers are ready to slug with America's best. "Cudge" Dillon polished off Beach of Guelph in 125 of the first round, and will meet stiffer competition in "Wee Willie Morrison of the Coast Guard. Morrison has only lost two bouts in three years of college warfare.

Stewart Parker, last year's intercollegiate lightweight champion, who lost to the hard slugging "Gangster" Spence last Saturday, will have to go wide out to top "Skeeter" Goehring, visiting 135 pounder. The "Skeeter's" punch is attested to by his record of five straight K.O.'s in the 1937-38 season.

The invaders will have two 165 pounders. Captain Jack Piggett will tangle with Ralph West, first string man, and Ted Jarvis will fight a vicious five-fisted animal who goes under the cognomen of "Toe-nails" O'Neill.

football players and veteran cagers in

Ralph "Fuzz" Jack and Bob Davis.

Vic Knowles is the other regular forwith the intermediates last year. As sub forwards the Tricolour will prob-

Queen's has a new basketball coach

this year in the person of Johnny Ed-basketball while at Queen's and who was a member of the 1937 Argo football team. Under Johnny's direction the basketball squad has been getting a real break and should stack up well against the other intercollegiate squads.

McGill won two and lost three, which is a better-than-usual average. The Redmen beat Union College handsomely, to whom they lost in similar fashion

last year, and they edged out the Albany Teachers' team by one point. Mc-

Gill's defeats were at the hands of Long Island University, one of the best quintets in the United States, and

C.N.C.Y., another lightly-touted team.

Another loss was to Rensselaer when three McGill regulars could not make the trip.

Most of the local games have resulted in victories for the collegians, with many against the top-rating teams of the city. The team is rated as a better one than last year, chiefly by virtue of more practice and hard work, although some new men have added a little more strength. The Red and White will battle hard and long before they can be counted out of this year's battles.

Whitney Hall Prowler Escapes From Captors

Alleged Thief Gives Two Names to Police and Manages an Escape from Salvation Army
Detention Home

The alleged thief whom Whitney Hall residents captured on Wednesday, escaped yesterday from the Salvation Army detention home, after being charged in court with the theft of a purse, clothing and jewelry. A search for the girl, who left without a hat or coat, was begun immediately.

When questioned by police on Wednesday evening, the girl gave her name first as Marion Daly, then as Loretta Ecclestone, and mentioned two out-of-town addresses.

It is possible that "Loretta Ecclestone" had entered Whitney Hall before Wednesday. Last Friday a camera, a purse and a knitting book were missed from the first floor of Falconer House. Students were warned then by Miss Ferguson against a thief.

The girl, who was wearing a green coat with fur collar, and a handkerchief over her head, entered Cody House on Wednesday without attracting attention. She was noticed in a second floor bedroom. By the time the owner of the bedroom came to investigate, "Loretta Ecclestone" had gone, taking a purse with her. She was chased and captured by a group of Whitney Hall girls. Passers-by on the street offered no assistance.

and Ding McGill of the 1938 senior football team. On one forward line Coach "Flat" Walsh has Captain How Williamson, Johnny Poupore, and Bob Nelson, of last year's Stratford Midgets. How Williamson played with Hamilton Tigers in the Senior O.H.A. previous to coming to Queen's, where he is a third year medical student. Johnny Poupore is a Toronto boy who is playing his fourth season with the Tricolour.

In reserve Coach Walsh has Rick Hepburn and Bob Cowley, both veterans, and Mel Williamson, a flashy newcomer from Winnipeg, who will likely take Jack Carver's place. One other player will likely be drafted from the O.H.A. squad to round out the team, but it is impossible to say just yet who he will be.

In the games already played Queen's defeated Dartmouth, and the University of Montreal twice, and lost to McGill and Harvard. The Tricolour is never at its best away from home and on local ice the Waldmen will provide strong opposition for the highly touted Toronto squad.

course of his talk. The department was created, he said, to supervise defaulting municipalities, and to place these municipalities on a monthly budget system. The Municipal Board, a separate organization, controls the capital expenditures of the municipalities and authorizes loans.

"Money is lying idle because of fear of higher taxation," Mr. Cross contended, "and this impedes recovery." He blamed increased taxation on increased borrowing on the part of governments, and recommended a "pay-as-you-go" policy.

sent home soon after the beginning of the college year, but the close surveillance of the staff prevents serious illness.

St. Hilda's requires a physical examination certificate from the physician of the student for her admittance. This has been completely satisfactory protection along with the attention of the resident doctor, Mrs. Kirkwood stated.

At Victoria residences, Annesley Hall and Wymilwood, the residence doctor examines the girls on entrance and an infirmary fee guarantees clinic attention whenever needed. In addition the doctor keeps hours once a week and the results have shown a gratifyingly clean bill of health for the co-eds.

There is also the problem of out-of-residence students who have no organized check-up system for prevention or checking of physical ills during their year. Dr. Gordon is the medical advisor for women of all the colleges but many co-eds do not take the trouble for consultation, other than for certificates for sport qualification. There is no accommodation at residences for attention to outsiders of their own college unless they pay a clinic charge. This is necessary protection for the infirmary nurse who is kept busy spraying the throats, etc., of her residence girls.

and competition at the office of Miss A. E. M. Parkes.

The women's combined downhill and slalom event will be run off beginning at one o'clock and the men's event will follow at two-thirty. Courses have been picked on two separate hills with a more difficult one provided for the male competitors.

The second section of the meet will take place on Saturday, Feb. 4, and will include cross-country races for men and women competitors respectively. On Feb. 11 the meet will be concluded with jumping competitions.

According to Boyd, refreshments and equipment may be obtained at the youth hostel as well as sleeping accommodations for those who wish to remain at the grounds overnight.

Lists in the athletic office indicate that S.P.S. students are out to lead the field. According to Mac McCutcheon, interfaculty sports standards will be affected by the meet. All faculties are urged to turn out to make as many points as possible.

Before anyone is allowed to compete, health cards must be presented to the Hart House athletic office or to Miss Parkes.

CAMPAIGN CONFERENCE AT KINGSTON

tent of a busy week-end in Ottawa. Tentative subjects of discussion at the conference will be education, national unity, foreign policy, youth hostels and co-operatives, relation of students and staff and curriculum. Having elected from their number a capable group of representatives, these will act for the whole student body in the discussions with the government. It is hoped that as a result of the discussions, a government commission will be set up very shortly to study the problem of "state" scholarships, the need for these and the means of their distribution.

The week-end at Ottawa will be preceded by a concentrated National Scholarships' week. Features of this week will be Transcontinental radio hook-ups, Canadian and student press releases, articles in popular magazines, colorful posters, student dances, amateur nights, financial campaigns, tag days, letters by all students to their members of parliament, and in general every kind of activity which the ingenuity of Canadian students can muster to give impetus to their campaign.

The students have not been inactive in their provincial fields. Some of the western provincial governments are already firmly behind the campaign. In trips to Ottawa and Quebec during the past week Dr. Grant Lathé, the national secretary of the C.S.A., and Jean Langlois, chairman of the University of Montreal Assembly, were able to interview many members of the provincial and federal houses. Amongst these were included the ministers Gagnon, Beauchamp, Boudreau of the Quebec legislature, who regard the scholarship campaign with favour. Monsiegnur Camille Roy, Rector of Laval University, also endorsed the work very heartily. The directors of the Youth Training Conference which is being held at Ottawa were also interviewed with favourable results.

As a whole, university and high school principals, students, staff members, men's and women's service clubs, labour organizations, have all given the

Quadrangle Is Proposed For Scene of Greeting

Plan for Appearance of Royal Couple in Hart House Quadrangle on Their Way to Luncheon is Endorsed

Students of the university may have the opportunity to have an intimate glimpse of the King and Queen on their visit to Toronto in May, it became apparent late last week when a communication from Acting Premier Nixon was received by Alex Rankin, president of the Students' Administrative Council.

The letter from the Acting-Premier endorsed a plan by which students might crowd into the quadrangle of Hart House to be given a view of Their Majesties just before they enter Great Hall for the official luncheon. "While it is going to be very difficult to work in such a request," stated Mr. Nixon, "I can assure you that I will do my utmost to assist you in completing such an arrangement."

Before going into Great Hall, the King and Queen must pass through the lower gallery of the House, which opens onto the quadrangle. It was suggested by Alex Rankin of the S.A.C. that before entering the Hall, they step out on the east terrace of the quadrangle, where they would be greeted by students previously allowed into the quad on presentation of their registration cards.

"It would require only two or three minutes of their time," said Rankin, but we feel certain that it would be a

MOOT COURT SAID LAW LABORATORY

Work of Campus Law Court is Reviewed by Professor Finkleman and G. D. Kennedy of Law Department

The massive machinery of the law in the university's Moot Court is gathering impetus for action in the impending libel suit. In regard to the activities of this organization Professor Finkleman of the department of Administration and Law, and Chief Justice G. D. Kennedy of the Court contributed some interesting information in interviews Friday afternoon.

"The integral function of laboratory work in engineering courses is paralleled in the activity of our court," declared Professor Finkleman. "Future lawyers are confronted with practical problems in a setting corresponding as nearly as possible to actual circumstances found in Ontario courts."

The Moot Court has tried as many as fifty cases in a year since its founding in 1931. Each year the dramatic highlights is usually turned on a criminal case.

Chief Justice Kennedy recalled the sensational criminal proceedings against M. Minsky a few years ago. The only prisoner was convicted in one of their murder trials. He was sentenced to hang to death. However he was melo-

SWISS THEOLOGIAN GUEST LECTURER

Dr. Emil Brunner of Zurich Discusses Totalitarianism in Talk at Emmanuel College; Calls it Religious Movement

Dr. Emil Brunner, noted author and one of the world's greatest theologians of the present day, was guest lecturer at Emmanuel College last Friday. Brunner, who is professor of theology at the University of Zurich, Switzerland, is now exchange lecturer at Princeton Theological Seminary this year, and it was through this proximity that he was able to come to Emmanuel. He has lectured in many of the American theological colleges previously, but this was the first time he has visited Canada.

Dr. Brunner pointed out that totalitarianism, whether in Germany, Italy or Russia, is really a religious movement, for it seeks to make a new man and a new society, and demands undivided allegiance. Since Christianity is

Opinion On Columnist Varies As Libel Trial Draws Nearer

It takes no particularly observant person to see that swing has as many devotees as it has opponents. Since Joe College's article printed a week ago, letters and notes of every shade of opinion have been received in the offices of The Varsity. Actually, opinion is evenly divided, and it is indicated that the coming suit against this paper will be a difficult one to judge. Several student opinions are offered here.

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir,

Swing music arouses two feelings in the breast of Joe College—that it is immoral, and that it should not be allowed in the university—and some light is thrown upon these feelings by history and by philosophy respectively. As for the morality of swing, let us remember that the anger of Joe College against it is no isolated historical phenomenon. He is but the Puritan, and swing the folk-dancing of our age and country, and both represent traditions as old as our race. Just as old is the Professor Coventry took as his example, King Township, whose natural resources were surveyed recently and illustrated his remarks with lantern slides showing conditions in that district.

The water in the King Township rivers and lakes is steadily decreasing, Professor Coventry explained, due to

Stevens' Cage Quintet Take Leadership in Intercollegiate Race by Victories over the Week-End

By Mike Greenstein

Montreal, Jan. 27.—A crowd of over seven hundred people packed the Montreal High School gymnasium tonight as Coach Van Wagner's McGill Redmen bowed to Warren Stevens' University of Toronto cage quintet 45-30 in the opening of the 1939 Canadian intercollegiate basketball season.

Toronto got off to an early lead as Rogin and Singer potted two field goals to make the score 4-0 in favour of Varsity. The McGill defence tightened up, however, and Sandberg and Kingston threw in two long shots to tie the score. Kingston was playing a strong game defensively for the home team and after three minutes of play he intercepted a Varsity pass to dribble all the way down the floor for a field goal which put McGill in the lead. After this early outburst of scoring, play slowed down a bit and Aitchison sank a long shot to even the count at six-all.

LaVarney and Aitchison added three more points to the Toronto total but Purdie sank two beautiful long shots and McGill led 10-9. Their rally was short-lived as Rogin got under the hoop and tossed in the first of his six field goals. LaVarney made the score 13-10 in favour of the winners by tossing in another long shot.

With five minutes of play left in the first half Kingston dribbled down the side of the court and slipped one in from the fifteen foot line to tie the score at 16-16. Purdie fouled Rogin as he got set for a shot and Bill sank

Tricolour Squad Wins by 2-1 Count over Bailey's Boys after Being Conceded Little Chance for Victory

By Charles Dubin

Kingston, Jan. 26: A battling close-kicking Queen's hockey team repeated their last year's upset in Jock Hart's Arena tonight when they defeated the highly-touted Varsity Blues by the score of 2-1.

Defeated by Harvard, a team which the Blues trounced 11-1, the Tricolour were conceded little chance of a victory over the pre-season favourites for the intercollegiate title. However, taking advantage of a first minute goal, Queen's led Varsity come to them, and with persistent checking kept the Toronto team completely disorganized.

Tying the score with only a minute left in the first period, Varsity kept forcing the play, and with 8 minutes of the third period gone were caught with only one man back. Mac Williamson, speedy centre from Winnipeg, who had engineered the early first period goal, broke fast with the Queen's captain, Norv Williamson, alongside. Mac took the lone defenseman out of the took the lone defenseman out of the play, passed to his right wing, and now made no mistake in slipping the puck past Bing Caswell, into the Varsity net. From here on Varsity launched a furious drive on the Queen's net, and only the sensational work of goalie Jim Burrows and the desperate check-

Male Students of University College Are Eligible to Serve on Moot Court Jury; 12 will be Chosen from Group

Within the next few days, fifty students of University College will receive ominous-looking jury notices commanding them to appear at the Moot Court of the University of Toronto immediately before the case of Swing Club vs. editor-in-chief, managing editor, and night editor of The Varsity.

The students will all be men, chosen from the registrar's list of students. Just why no women will be allowed to serve is not known, but it is believed that women have an inherent compulsion for swing and thus would be prejudiced.

Of the fifty men, twelve of the prettiest will be chosen for the good and true squad. The others will be eliminated during an ordeal known as the "challenging" when solicitors for the plaintiffs and defendants examine the empanelled men and take objection to some of them. Sometimes it is because those served with notices wear striped ties with striped shirts, because they haven't shaved for a period of days, or because they are actually known by the solicitors to stay out late at nights or compete in jitterbug contests. At any rate, thirty-eight will be discarded and the problem of whether or not The Varsity has committed de-

Alumni Contributions

One of the best things which has been done for the University for some time is the recent action of the alumni of University College in making a campaign for the new residences for U.C. men. The campaign is not complete yet, but if the rest of the alumni follow the start given by some of the more enthusiastic contributors, undergraduate men in University College should have in the near future that which they have needed for a long time. . . . A new and a larger residence.

Not only is this advantageous for the future men of U.C., but the work of the alumni has, as a prominent alumnus remarked, done more to impress the Canadian governments as to the value of university work than any other factor. When graduates of a college feel so strongly about the value of a complete college life, that they are willing to sacrifice time, energy, and money, in order that other students might have even greater privileges than they have had in undergraduate days, well then, government officials cannot help being convinced that they are spending money wisely when they make university grants. If only enough college graduates could be convinced of the debt that they owe their university, it would be possible to raise the standard of education to a peak unsurpassed anywhere else in the world.

The cost of education in primary and secondary schools is so high, and there is need of so much more expansion still, that it is difficult to convince administrators of the need for more expenditure on the higher seats of learning. It is up to the graduates who, on the whole throughout Canada maintain a great loyalty to the various alma maters, to assume a greater part of the burden.—A.C.F.

An S.C.M. Survey

Perhaps the most common cause of adverse criticism of university students in general, by the public at large, is created by the misunderstanding which exists between the two groups; the oft-repeated charges made by a few individuals that students tend to be atheistic, communistic or agnostic, are unfounded on fact.

No one is really in a position to state what is the general attitude of undergraduates to religion at this university, because there has been no survey taken in recent years. It is believed that the only practical way to determine how university students are thinking regarding religious topics, is to take an objective survey, in order to do this, the best system seems to be to present a questionnaire to the students, and thereby bring out the pertinent points in matters of religious belief.

The S.C.M. on this campus is a very active and worthwhile organization, and although the same movement has been charged with interfering in campus politics, and student government, among the undergraduates of some of the Canadian universities, this charge has never been made here. It has filled a very important place, and chiefly on account of the work of Dr. Wilfred Lockhart it receives the support of a very large section of the campus, and as far as we know merits or receives no criticism from any section or group of students.

The S.C.M. has made plans to conduct a survey among the students of the university this week, and feeling that such an effort is in every way commendable, The Varsity will do all that it can to encourage and help in the undertaking.

The peculiar nature of the campus makes it expedient that there be a wide distribution of the questionnaire, if the results are to be considered as representative of the university as a whole. In fact one of the most interesting features of the questionnaire will be to determine the relative conservativeness of the science and art faculties.

This questionnaire will be printed in The Varsity Tuesday and Wednesday mornings, and there will be representatives with ballot boxes in the various colleges. We strongly urge each student to fill out one of the questionnaires, and assist in this worthwhile effort to obtain statistics indicative of University thinking.—A.C.F.

ART MUSIC Drama

Village Players

A modern-dress production of Macbeth by the Village Players under the direction of Dora Mavor Moore was given its first performance in Forest Hill School last Friday night.

The stated purpose of this experiment, no doubt the same for most similar ventures, is "to demonstrate the timelessness of Shakespeare's characterizations and situations." But surely the point that the experimenters really want to stress about such a play as Macbeth is that it possesses fundamental literary and psychological value not dependent on any specific temporal association; and in trying to sum up all this in the word "timelessness" they make a serious error. Any credible set of characters and situations, whether imagined by Euripides, Shakespeare or Edgar Wallace, will remain credible when referred to the Stone Age or to fifty thousand years in the future if certain non-essentials are suitably modified. But if this is not done the result is very likely to be an absurdity, also irrespective of the author.

Unfortunately such modification cannot be made thoroughly in Shakespeare without mutilating his magnificent language—a step to which a serious experimenter could hardly consent.

It would appear that there are only two possible solutions; either the play must be left in its original frame or a new, abstract setting, totally devoid of any link with present or past realities must be created for it. Somehow this second course seems an awful lot of trouble.

Disregarding its necessary and unnecessary incongruities—outstanding among the latter the interesting spectacle of Seyton strolling about battlefields in correct morning attire—the Village Players' production was run through with admirable dispatch and considerable efficiency on the part of leading players. There were several notable members of this University in the cast, including Bob Burns, who gave a restrained and in some ways highly original performance as Macbeth.

The treatment of the supernatural was brilliant, particularly in the case of Banquo's ghost, represented by an unobtrusive, tremulous discord, swelling into prominence at suitable moments, on the electric organ which provided music throughout.

As tragedy we enjoyed the show immensely, and at the same time derived a lot of harmless amusement from an attempt to construct a modern world into which this slightly fantastic cross-section could be fitted.

Repertory Theatre

Some ambitious groups have injured their artistic growth by ostentation and belligerence. Not so the Toronto Repertory Theatre. Mr. Melville Keay prefers his group of actors to satisfy themselves with tasteful, simply staged productions. For such wisdom we extend to him congratulations. Since it is only fools and children that prophecy, and we are both, we should like to say that with the extension of so sage a program over a period of years the Toronto Repertory Theatre will be a leader in Canadian drama circles.

On Friday and Saturday evenings last the Repertory Theatre produced Maxwell Anderson's Elizabeth the Queen. Intrigue and tampering with communications had led to a misunderstanding while Essex was on a campaign in Ireland. Elizabeth, fondly in love with Essex, ultimately orders his

B'wana Wiregarters SEES GREAT HALL

Hitherto Unknown Region is Examined by the Aged B'wana Accompanied by two Basutos and Mack the Scottie

HORNED EMSBOK CAPTURED

Toronto, Jan. 30: Yesterday the Great Hall kitchen officially became part of the British Empire when B'wana Wiregarters stuck a Union Jack into a rather large pot of mashed potatoes, saying at the same time, "Soft, what!"

This brief ceremony was the culmination of a three weeks' journey through the Hart House kitchen.

Among the many interesting bits of information picked up by the explorer was the fact that Chief Camille Borgia is a direct descendant of Lucrezia Borgia.

"In a little clearing," recounted the explorer, "I encountered a very old and wise native, who explained the system of the three castes to me."

"The kitchen," said the sage, "contains three castes. The Tweedledums, the Tweedlees and the Untouchables. The Tweedledums make the thirty-cent lunches, the Tweedlees make the twenty-five cent meals and the Untouchables work on the twenty-cent ones."

Wiregarters explained how he captured a seal but had to give it back because it had been presented to Great Hall by Good Housekeeping Magazine. The B'wana questioned the sage further, "Why are the hot Minsk piece cold?" The native retorted, "They're hot when they start out from Minsk!" Further questioning revealed that the old water-jugs had been removed from the Great Hall tables because they were RED.

The Loew's Theatre seems to have fallen into the double bill habit and this week, Toronto audiences will have the privilege of learning how LOEW'S easy it is to become a great actress, and as a special added treat, how to grow up to be a general. Dramatic School with Luise Rainer is nothing more than Stage Door rehased, and not very well rehased at that. The Duke of West Point is the typical saga of snappy drills, flags flying, and bands blaring.

This latter picture deals with a young American with an English education, who enters West Point, and although he runs foul of the rules of the institute still manages to square himself in front of all his friends, and win the beautiful girl.

Dramatic School is all Luise Rainer and she does the best she can with a trite plot that barely holds together. Miss Rainer deserves a better fate than this and so does the audience.

W.P.A.

Another one of these double bills, "Zaza", starring Claudette Colbert and Herbert Marshall is good—from the acting standpoint. It is IMPERIAL even a little amusing.

DOUBLE "Off the Record" with

Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell and Bobby Jordan is a let-down—especially after some of the better O'Brien pictures we've seen lately. Joan Blondell apparently has lost all the glamour and stuff she once had. "Off the Record" detracts from any of the good points which "Zaza" may have. Completed with a news reel and comedy the entertainment this week can be rated as only "fair".

dramatically saved from a miserable end by a royal pardon which commuted his sentence to one year's hard labour.

Due to the lack of regularity in murders about the campus, each year the Law staff and court justices concoct a synthetic calamity. Arguments are arranged on each side and balanced to present difficulties for both prosecution and defense. Witnesses are coached and appear in character complete with black spectacles, ragged moustaches and cracking voices. The jury composed of students are addressed, challenged and in the end the weight of decision rests on their shoulders.

The date for the important libel suit has not been decided as yet because of lengthy preliminary proceedings. It is known however that W. G. Perry, J.A. of the Ontario Supreme Court, will preside.

Professor Finkleman also intimated that another particularly important case was in the offing. Although details are sparse he said that it concerned an appeal for assault and trespass involving the right of free speech and freedom of assembly arising from a recent turbulent meeting.

music, he has all the weight of philosophical authority behind his words. The university is intended for the study of the liberal arts, as is testified by the degree Baccalaureus Artium, and such a study demands the serene attention of the intellect, undisturbed by any sensual clamour; music which is intellectually pleasing is therefore admissible among us, but music whose appeal is to the senses only is certainly not. Aristotle, the master of the liberal arts, recognized these two sorts of music when he spoke of the concepts of his day: "Since the spectators are of two kinds—the one free and educated, and the other a vulgar crowd composed of mechanics, labourers, and the like—there ought to be . . . exhibitions instituted for the relaxation of the second class also. And the melodies will correspond to their minds; for as their minds are perverted from the natural state, so there are exaggerated and corrupted harmonies which are in like manner a perversion. A man receives pleasure from what is natural to him, and therefore professional musicians may be allowed to practise this lower sort of music before an audience of a lower type." That is to say, he would agree with our conclusion that some provision must be made for the enjoyment of peasant music and dances by the peasantry. But it is clearly implied that he would not make that provision in the groves of his Lyceum. And nor must we in our university? Let us rally to the support of Aristotle and Joe College.

Yours,

Hamilton Southam,

It is a reaction to the movement of secularism, which is not foreign to most countries. We need a Christian revolution, rather than a Fascist, a new outbreak of Christian forces to stop the dissolution of society and reconstruct it as a unit."

Questioned afterward, Dr. Brunner would not commit himself in regard to the refugee situation, but he concurred in the opinion that totalitarianism is a vicious circle. execution after his seizure and release of London. She wishes to withdraw the order. But Essex, understanding the strength of his ambition, out of his love for his Queen and England, prefers to die. Although the play is pretentious somewhat, as a piece of writing it holds elevating moments that indicate masterful workmanship on the part of Mr. Anderson.

There is little doubt that the success of the production was primarily due to the excellent acting of Robert Chidwick as Essex and Arden Keay as Elizabeth. Mr. Chidwick, utilizing his deep musical voice, showed that he had a complete understanding of the role and acted ably. Mrs. Keay, though competent and moving, was not consistently convincing. Her movements did not always harmonize with the other aspects of her characterization, thus breaking the illusion of age. But on the whole she acted extremely well.

Lack of space prevents a detailed analysis of the production.

Suffice it to say that the leads, Sir Robert Seill (Dudley Doughty), Francis Bacon (Mack Inglis), Lord Burghley (Percy Schutte) and Pendope Gray (Rita Weyman) all acted with understanding and displayed ability. It is always uncomfortable to have the convincing illusion created by such good actors shattered by the minor characters. Burbage was reputed to be the greatest Shakespearean of his time. The role was too poorly portrayed for the standard set down by the other actors. Sir Walter Raleigh, renowned as a chivalrous courtier, moved about the stage with awkward manner. It seemed as though the best-actors' acting was influenced by their diets, having changed their menu that day from beef to ham.

Sunday Evening Concert

Mme. Emmy Heim is Toronto's outstanding serious singer. Of course, there has never been any doubt about it, but she proved it again at last night's Sunday Evening Concert. In fact, this writer often wonders how Toronto ever held such an outstanding singer.

Emmy Heim possesses, in the first place, an enthralling mezzo-soprano voice over which she exercises full control. Her singing is clear and flawless, and it has an appealing quality about it that makes it unique. Besides that, she has a charming personality and an acting ability (in her voice) that ranges from sombre despondence to coquetry. And, to round out her abilities, Mme. Heim shows an incomparable ability to choose a perfect program. Last night she sang one Beethoven group, one Mendelssohn group, and one group of folk songs. Each of these groups was well-balanced, and well executed. Of the three, the folk song group was outstanding.

From the slow, moving In questa tomba by Beethoven to the sprightly O Jugend, schone Roseneck, her classical groups were well done. But in the folk songs, she surpassed herself. The two charming French bergerettes formed a fitting contrast to her superb rendition of a Greek shepherd song. It is our opinion that in this last she reached the ideal of emotional singing. This was followed by a Slovakian and then an Austrian folk song, in which her above-mentioned personality was used to great advantage.

Throughout the concert, there was no question of any one selection not being as good as the next. Mme. Heim followed each number with one that was just that much better. Sir Ernest MacMillan's accompaniment, as usual, did full justice to the featured artist.

At midnight there was supper in the Great Hall. After the meal Ed Hartford, president of the Students' Council, introduced Father McCorkell, Superior of St. Michael's College. Father McCorkell regaled the diners with accounts of conversations he had held during the evening with graduates. In beginning his address the speaker noted that eighty years ago when Sir William Mulock, Chancellor of the University, was a strapping fifteen, the movement for a St. Michael's At-Home was initiated and now the idea was an accomplished fact. He also appealed to the alumni to form a strong constituency to aid the college and university.

Mining Student Dies Despite Transfusions

Robert Dyer, IV Year Student,
Ill Since Dec. 1, a Victim of Blood Poisoning

HIGH ACADEMIC STANDING

Twenty-four blood donations from class mates and two brothers, failed to save the life of Robert K. Dyer, IV Mining Engineering, who died early Monday morning in Toronto Western Hospital.

Dyer, commonly known as Bob to his many friends, had been ill since December 1. Since that time, except for a three-week interim, fourth year mining students furnished blood for the long series of transfusions. A tooth broken off in hockey started blood poisoning which combined with hardening of the arteries to bring about his death.

Bob, who had a wide circle of friends in the university, took a keen interest in a variety of sports and also maintained a high academic standing. The son of Prof. F. C. Dyer of the Mining School, he worked in gold mines near Rouyn, Quebec, for the last two summers. He was a Sunday school teacher at St. Columba's Church for five years and was an executive of the Young

LOCKHART PLEADS FOR UNEMPLOYED

Over Eighty Per Cent Are Anglo-Saxon, Many Apprentices or Trained Mechanics

Rev. Dr. W. C. Lockhart and the Student Christian Movement are now asking for clothing for the single unemployed in the city. The plea is in response to the desperate needs of 150 derelicts, unemployed and with no prospects for the future. Without the clothing that is asked, it is to be expected that the widespread illness among them will become even more serious.

The most striking feature of the unfortunate group is the fact that over 80 per cent of the men are Anglo-Saxon; they are not men who have come from foreign countries to get what they can from Canada and, in failing, have become a public burden; they are mostly young Canadians who have utterly failed to get work, no matter how they have tried. Many are apprentices or trained mechanics, and practically all have reached their present low state through no fault of their own.

TWO STUDENT FIRMS HAUNT LAW ROOM

The complicated machinery of the Moot Court of Ontario is going full blast on the Swing Club Inc. vs. The Varsity's editor, managing editor and night editor, libel case and it is expected that the trial will take place early next week.

The plaintiff's solicitors have already issued their statement of claim and the statement for defence is expected to-day by the registrar of the court. The examination for discovery, the process by which there is an examination of the stories of the defendants and the officers of the club, will take place later this week.

Meanwhile, Miss Shell, the law reading room librarian, claims that it is impossible for anyone to secure cases or acts dealing with the law of libel as the two student firms have established their offices in the reading room and only leave it for meals and to sleep.

The topic of the annual faculty debate at Victoria College "Resolved that the Scientific Spirit has run Amok," was defeated 34-30 last night.

R. K. Arnold, for the parliament, said that science was a neutral agent which had the power to destroy the world or help it progress. In one mood it attacks, in another it defends, and in between it destroys thousands. Man as he exists today is not civilized enough to use science.

C. B. Macpherson on the opposition said that he thought the government was not objecting to scientific spirit but rather to the "business spirit." A

"If it is answered honestly and intelligently, it will show what undergraduates are thinking," says Dr. Wilfred Lockhart, secretary of the Student Christian Movement, in regard to the questionnaire.

"It has become a very common practice in recent years," he said, "for citizens at large to attack the university on numerous charges, and perhaps the most common and oft repeated charge is that undergraduates are either atheists, agnostics or communists. The largely publicized charges of a Port Haron insurance broker last October are a case in point.

"No one is really in a position to state what the attitudes of the undergraduates are. No survey, at least in recent years, has been made. The only possible way of determining what students are thinking about religion is to make as objective a survey as possible by means of a questionnaire designed

POET-PLAYWRIGHT DIES IN FRANCE

William Butler Yeats, noted Irish poet and playwright, died in France on Saturday at the age of 73.

In his youth he studied painting but at the age of 24 published his first book of poems, "The Wanderings of Ossian" and from that time on gave his whole attention to literature. For a time he compiled anthologies of Irish fairy stories, edited selections from Irish novelists, and contributed to several journals.

He was a leader in the foundation of the Irish Literary Society as well as the National Literary Society of Dublin.

William Butler Yeats was the author of Countess Kathleen, The Trembling of the Veil, Ideas of Good and Evil, Cathleen McHoolihan, A Book of Irish Verse, and many others.

From 1922 to 1928 he served as senator in the Irish Free State and in 1923 was awarded the Nobel prize for literature.

Scholarship Notice

The British Council has decided to offer, in respect of the year 1939-40, four post-graduate scholarships (tenable for one year commencing in October 1939) to selected graduates of universities in the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa who desire to carry on in the United Kingdom courses of study or research in subjects which are of social or political value, and which may be regarded as of Dominion, intra-Imperial, or international importance.

The value of each scholarship will be £300. The method of payment will be dependent upon the nature of the course of study or research followed by each scholar. An advance will, if necessary, be made towards the cost of the return passage to the United Kingdom.

Detailed information regarding these scholarships, and application forms, may be obtained at the registrar's office, Simcoe Hall.

Miniature Piano Disturbs Slumber of Sleeping Eds

Snoozing students in Hart House Music Room had their slumbers disturbed recently when a new miniature piano was trundled in. The pint-sized music-box had a special thin tone which helped imitate a harpsichord during a Friday afternoon recital.

However, genuine harpsichords have appeared twice in Hart House musicals, in the Great Hall and the Music Room. The Music Room has a grand piano obtained in 1925, which is played only by serious musicians, with permission of the Music Committee. The upright in the same room has been there for eight years.

The cast common room contains the only other piano permanently located in Hart House. This upright has to take plenty of punishment from the local Padewskis and consequently needs frequent tuning. It was last tuned about ten days ago. Recently a bass string was found in pieces on the bottom of the cabinet, the first accident the piano has suffered since it was bought in 1936.

1000 SCHOLARSHIPS ASKED

Emphasizing the desire of the provincial government to give greater assistance to the student who is barred from the universities and from the full benefit of higher education, the minister of education, Hon. L. J. Simpson, gave his approval to a scheme for federal financial assistance.

Following the policy of securing provincial approval before approaching the Federal Cabinet, the Toronto section of the Canadian Student Assembly is bringing to the final conclusive stages the campaign for a federal grant to provide for one thousand scholarships covering tuition and maintenance in the universities. This step, taken by the Toronto Student Assembly, follows that of the Quebec assemblies in securing

RELIEF COMMITTEE APPEALS FOR BOOKS

Dr. Grant Lathe, chairman of the Canadian Student Relief Committee, told the Far Eastern Student Relief Committee at noon yesterday that the Smithsonian Institute of Washington, D.C., is sponsoring an appeal to supply new and used books to Chinese universities to overcome the shortage of text and reference books caused by the destruction of almost all college libraries there during the fighting.

It was reported that the Friends of China on the University of Manitoba campus are holding a tag day to raise funds to alleviate distress. Next Sunday afternoon Dr. Lathe is to speak on China at Dr. Gordon's Bible Class.

Miss Pearl Liu, who was the delegate from the Chinese National Christian Federation to the World's Youth Congress at Vassar will be in Toronto on Monday, February 13th and will speak in the Women's Union at noon. Col. Thomas Tchou is speaking in Massey Hall on February 20th under the auspices of the Friends of China, which is represented on the campus by the Far Eastern Student Relief Committee. Any contributions may be left at the Hart House S.A.C. office.

Miniature Piano Disturbs Slumber of Sleeping Eds

The Athletic Association had a piano in the gym some years ago, but it is now believed to be at the arena.

Any other piano used at dances or concerts in Hart House are brought in specially for the occasion. Usually uprights are selected, but a baby grand sometimes finds its way in. Concert grands are frequently hired for use in the theatre or in the Great Hall.

Musicians performing in Hart House often request special pianos. "We attempt as far as possible to procure the instruments the artist would like to have," explained Mr. J. R. Gilley, controller of Hart House. He said that the pianos stood up very well, and that a sum of money is paid aside every year so they can be replaced when necessary.

There is a little steel truck with rubber tires to move the upright pianos about, but when they are to be taken upstairs a gang of men have to go into action with a wooden "sled" and some ropes.

A Criticism of the National Scholarship Proposal of the Canadian Student Assembly

During the past few months the local organization of the Canadian Student Assembly has been waging a vigorous campaign to awaken student interest in the movement for national scholarships, and to create stronger student support for the motion which Paul Martin, M.P., proposes to make before the federal government.

It has been brought to our attention on numerous occasions that almost without exception The Varsity is the only Canadian undergraduate newspaper which hasn't supported through its editorial columns the proposed scheme. We have realized that there are many meritorious features about the proposal, and for that reason have refrained from criticizing it, but on the other hand we have not been willing to lend our support to a proposal which has what to us seems several very obvious weaknesses.

In substance the plan of the student assembly is to support the motion of Paul Martin which asks for a scholarship fund of half a million dollars annually from the federal government, to be divided into one thousand scholarships of five hundred dollars each. These scholarships are to be given on the basis of "scholastic ability and need", with the hope that each year one thousand worthy students will be helped to secure a university education, who would otherwise have had to leave school, or at least borrow money to continue their education.

On the surface this seems a very worthy scheme, but we have several criticisms to make, and until we can be convinced that these criticisms are unfounded or not valid, we do not purpose to support the national scholarship campaign.

Our Criticisms

In the first place, we have not enough faith in the governments of this country to believe that one thousand scholarships would be administered free of political patronage. The evidence secured by some of our university men as to the vicious system of political graft in allotting scholarships in some of the American universities, is sufficient to indicate the grave danger that they might become no more nor less than political football here.

Also we do not feel that the deserving boy or girl who will get the most out of a college education should be given annual scholarships of as high a value as five hundred dollars. It is granted that it costs the average student that much or more to come to university for seven or eight months of the year, but if the fees of a student are paid, usually amounting to much less than that, he should be able with part-time work, and summer employment (which we admit is hard to get) to look after his board and clothing.

There is no guarantee made yet, although this is the ideal, that these scholarships are going to be given to those whose need is such that they would be unable to reach university otherwise. There is little doubt that there are many thousand high school graduates every year who are unable to attend university, because of lack of sufficient funds. But it is safe to conjecture that these thousand scholarships will be given more on basis of scholarship than need. All we have to do is to look at the wealthy students today who are accepting scholarships, while others stay at home, to realize the difficulties of administration.

And although no blame can be attached to university students attempting to get more federal funds for university education, even the greatest exponents of this scheme will admit that it hardly seems fair to have school teachers in some of the outlying districts of Canada teaching school for three hundred dollars a year, and fourteen year old farm boys and girls unable to go to high school because their fathers haven't enough money to buy them decent clothes, while twenty year old university students collect five hundred dollars a year to go to university. The C.S.A.'s argument is that they will have to help the university students first, in order to revolutionize the whole educational system.

The whole educational system in this country needs revolutionizing, it is agreed, and we will not attempt to quibble with the statement that another five hundred thousand dollars doesn't mean much to the federal government. Probably the government and the people will feel that it does.

The members of the Student Assembly are apparently of the opinion that should the government spend a half million on scholarships they will make more grants for secondary education that much more quickly. We doubt this.

A Loan Fund

In the University of Toronto, we have scholarships, bursaries and loans. We believe that the loan fund is by far the best system used, and we are of the opinion that any student who comes to this university or any other university and gets all the privileges which he thereby gets without cost, should be willing if necessary to go into debt for the sake of his education, and if he is successful should be willing to pay back that which he has borrowed.

There are enough available statistics to prove that the average income of university graduates is considerably higher than that of the non-graduate. Because the graduate has had the chance to equip himself better for life, he should be willing to pay back a part of that which it has cost the government to educate him.

A federal loan fund would in a large part do away with the dangers of political patronage. It would enable everyone who needed funds, who had the ability, to get a university education rather than letting one graduate from every twenty high schools have a scholarship, which would enable him to live in comparative security.

Honestly, how many students who could make the required standards, and intended to go to university, would refuse to try and get one of these huge scholarships, and would many clever students of average means be unable to prove their need?

With a loan fund, no one is going to run around trying to borrow money which they don't absolutely need when they are going to have to pay it back. They are going to borrow only what they need. As far as being pressed to pay up after graduation, let it be said that the various governments in their re-establishment schemes, where it has been necessary to loan money, have not been unfair in asking repayment, and the creditors need not be unduly pressed.

A university education is worth going into debt for, and five hundred thousand dollars a year spent on a loan fund, would make a university education possible for a great many more than the thousand chosen few who would benefit by the proposed scholarships. And a loan fund would eradicate most of the difficulties which the Student Assembly must admit are bound to rise, if their system were to be inaugurated.

It might be added that it was partly on the basis of such criticism that the Students' Administrative Council has felt duty-bound to refuse its endorsement on the last three occasions that it has been sought by the C.S.A.—A.C.F.

GORDON SINKLOWER NEAR DEATH FROM WOUNDING

Eminent Correspondent Receives His Daily Quota of Fatal Wounds with an Unflinching Smile

DOUBLE BILL TOMORROW

By Gordon Sinklower

Shanghai, Jan. 31: China is a funny place. You meet all kinds of strange people there. Yesterday I actually met a Chinaman. Life for me in the last few days has really been hectic.

The day I landed I was attacked by a Japanese squad armed to the teeth. With only my fountain pen for a weapon, I managed to hold them off for two and a half hours until, catching me off my guard, they ran me through the body eighteen times with their bayonets.

I had barely recovered from these near-fatal wounds when I was set upon by a Japanese troop of horse. I managed to escape with two broken legs and a severed jugular vein. Just plain luck, I say.

The third day was a restful one and the only casualty I sustained was a broken collar-bone and a bullet in the lungs in an encounter with four Nipponese battalions.

My real test came today. By this time, the Jap generals had become quite angry at the unsuccessful attempts of their underlings to murder me. They unmasked. That day, the massed Japanese Imperial Army marched against me. With only a rolled-up Daily Star I beat them off time and again.

I have reached an astounding conclusion. The Japs don't want China. All they want to do is to kill me. The invasion of China is merely a front. All conflict has ceased and all the invading armies are concentrating on wiping me out.

Tomorrow I shall engage the Japanese navy at close quarters. So save up your three cents.

Correspondence

To the Editor, The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

In reply to the letter to the editor in The Varsity of Tuesday last concerning the Canadian Association of Medical Students and Interns, we agree with regret that the complaint of infrequent open meetings is justified.

At the same time we think it is fair to point out that the activities of this recent organization have affected both medical students and interns in several ways. As a result of interviews with the authorities concerned, interns in Toronto hospitals who previously did not get routine examinations for tuberculosis now have periodical x-ray examinations, and all medical students are tuberculin tested, positive reactors are x-rayed and suspicious cases are further investigated.

Before Christmas the C.A.M.S.I. conducted a health survey of all medical students.

Dear Staff,

Punchy was supposed to write this column tonight but he called and said he has a bad ankle and couldn't come down tonight to play a rhapsody on the typewriter. This might have been a legitimate excuse if we hadn't seen him coming out of the show with none other than that gorgeous red head that he managed to get introduced to through this column.

So I picked out one of the mass participants in sports of U.C. again and I'm going to haul him over the coals myself. His name is Jack Hershoran and he is now in third year of the commerce and finance course. He graduated from Oakwood, where he dabbled at basketball and football. He came to U.C. and immediately started to play. He played baseball, tried football, volleyed at volleyball and starred with the basketball team. He was the jack of all trades and unfortunately an expert at none. In his second year he repeated his strenuous sports curriculum and was awarded his U.C. letter. His only other claim to fame that year was that he believed in Lou Sonners as a potential football great and enlarged his supporters to three.

Socially the only university affair he attends, he confided, is the U.C. Follies, so that he can correct the old stock rags that he so often employs. Example rags that I'm going to take a walk. He: Don't forget to put it back. He attends all university athletic events regardless. It is even rumoured that he joins in the Hart House sing songs, but he claims he can't carry a tune. His summers are spent out at camp where he claims he builds up a resistance against the wintry blasts that he abhors. He doesn't skate or ski but take it from me he shoots a good stick at snooker.

PUCKSTERS READY TO MEET YALE MEN

By Owen Prichard

A few weeks ago this university's eds and co-eds returned from their holidays feeling very optimistic about the future of the senior hockey team, their optimism being based on reports which had arrived from time to time telling of the marvellous feats of Ace Bailey's touring pucksters. The Blue and White team seemed to have everything that goes to make a great hockey outfit, and after watching them clear the ice with the University of Montreal team even the most conservative fan conceded that they were a cinch to go places in the intercollegiate race.

However, this past week-end the wires bore tidings of such a nature that the viewers-with-alarm were anticipating the time when Ace Bailey would be measuring his boys for sack-cloth sweaters. From Kingston came news of a 2-1 defeat by the Tricolour lads. Another week-end encounter across the border from Prescott saw Clarkson hold the collegians to a 2-all tie.

Yesterday afternoon The Varsity hied to the Arena to discover the whys and wherefores of the situation. One thing was quite evident, and that was the fact that the senior team is not out of condition, neither are the stickmen tired from their heavy schedule. Yesterday's practice consisted of a stiff rehearsal of two and three-man passing attacks. The team looked fresh and had their plays well organized. Captain "Cam" MacLachlan said that he wants the players to do lots of skating this week, and the team will play a tune-up game against Varsity juniors on Thursday.

The players themselves were not downhearted after the week-end results, and are looking forward to a decisive victory over the Yale squad when they meet in the Arena on Saturday. "Bing" Caswell, veteran netminder of the Blue and White stated that Queen's deserve all credit for their win, and Varsity are offering no alibi. The fact that Harvard had previously defeated Queen's and that Varsity had swamped the Red team 11-1 looks bad in the records, but the Limestone City boys have improved greatly. A team which is able to nurse a one-goal lead through eighteen minutes of a Varsity game is a team that is good. Caswell further stated that Queen's play two exceptionally fine players in the Williams, Norv and Mal.

The exhibition game against Clarkson should not be looked upon as a serious setback. This tie game was not played against a strictly American team, but against a squad composed for the most part of experienced puck-chasers from Ottawa and its environs. Although the Harvard line-up for Varsity, he actually played only one minute of the first period. An example of how highly Varsity's hockey squad is esteemed off the campus is seen in the fact that this Uptown town sets its prices for each game, and the burghers of Clarkson are glad to hand over twice the usual number of shelds when the Blue and White are playing.

Student opinion on the campus centres around the general feeling that Toronto's representatives are admittedly not a wonder team, but are definitely grade A plus in intercollegiate ranks. The students are right behind Coach Bailey and his team and will be expecting them to take the men of Eli Yale on Saturday, and especially the starry squad from McGill when they face off together.

C.O.T.C.'s Part In Royal Visit Uncertain

Whether the University of Toronto contingent of the C.O.T.C. will take part in any special activities in connection with the visit of the King and Queen to Toronto in May, remained shrouded in doubt today, according to officials of the corps.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Ed Goodman

ON ORGANIZED SPORT

In no other place in the world are athletic events as highly organized as on the North American continent. When a football team takes the field for a crucial contest their attack and defence has been planned for every occasion that may arise. The players on both teams have been trained thoroughly and efficiently for whatever may happen. As a result the accusation is often advanced that due to such a high state of organization the wrong stress is placed on the game. Players often lose their initiative; the will to win means more than the will to play and thus much of the potential value of the sport is wasted.

These criticisms of organized sport are not entirely unfounded. There has been a tendency (more noticeable perhaps in the United States where sport is even more highly organized than in Canada) to subjugate the individual to the machine and thus he merely becomes a cog rather than a separate entity. And furthermore so much stress is often placed on championships and winning that both spectator and player often lose the proper perspective. This, by the way, is not a criticism of professional sport, for we feel that in so far as these objections are raised they apply equally to amateur and professional athletes. Indeed the winning has become in some cases so much more important than the playing in amateur sport that amateur athletes are often paid on the side.

However, although very few people would deny that certain faults do lie in the modern trend of sport, we do not see how this necessarily means that modern sport is not of great value. For although a certain amount of individualism is being sacrificed at the altar of team work, we must remember that a feeling of co-operation often results which is also of prime value in the building of character. All that is necessary is to co-relate individualism and co-operation, and anyone who has seen a football game realizes that countless times during every minute each player is making decisions on his own initiative.

While it is comparatively easy to show that individualism still exists, and that organized sport also gives rise to a co-operative instinct the next criticism is harder to meet, for unfortunately winning does mean too much to all connected with athletics. But this is not so much the fault of those connected with the sports as with human nature. Then again a great deal of good is done with the money that is gained by the crowds that are attracted to see teams fight for titles, especially in intercollegiate sport, where the money earned often allows lesser athletic lights to partake in the sports they love.

So although organized sport may have its drawbacks, our aim should not be a return to the past, which is impossible, but a correction of the faults of the present.

It was believed that the local contingent might stage a special drill or act as an honour guard, but Lieut-Col. Madill, commanding officer, last night termed this as yet doubtful. "At present we have no idea as to the plans, if any, for our part in the visit," he said. "We have to wait for instructions from headquarters for military district Number 2, in which we are located, before anything can be arranged."

Ordinarily we would be disabused by that time, stated Lieut-Col. Madill. "If orders for special activities are received, some arrangement will have to be made to enlist those members of the corps remaining in Toronto." Many out-of-town members will be remaining for the royal visit anyway, it was felt, so that there would be little difficulty in having sufficient numbers for a guard.

CRUCIAL TILT WILL DECIDE TITLE

Warren Stevens' blue basketballers are happily situated at the top of the intercollegiate heap for the time being on the strength of two welcome victories last week-end at Montreal and Kingston. But the big test comes Saturday when the formidable foes from London visit Hart House for the first and probably the foremost local league game.

All indications are that Varsity and Western are the teams to beat this year in the hoop realm. Lew Davies has assembled a starry lot of cagers at the Western Ontario seat of learning. Three of his starting five were on the championship team last year: Hurley, Casey and Farmer. Add to these a generous portion of Faust, Krol and Elliott and it makes for some pretty potent opposition. The Toronto attack is as usual paced by Aitchison and Rogin, who have accounted for exactly 56 of the team's 99 points to date, although Coach Stevens is none the less pleased with the composite showing of the rest of his proteges. A little better batting average in free throws during games and his satisfaction with his hard-working quintet would be complete.

AERIAL NAVIGATION SHUT OUT BY U.C.

University College Thirds scored a 1-0 shut-out over Aerial Navigation yesterday afternoon in a hotly contested interfaculty hockey game.

yellow and black ribbons. The basket was accompanied by a letter conveying best wishes from the women students of the university.

Speaking at the close of the luncheon, Mr. Bennett said, "The beauty of the flowers will always be obscured by the memory of those who presented them." Continuing with his address, Mr. Bennett urged that democracy be not allowed to turn liberty into license, when it is challenged. The voters must be moved by reason rather than emotional prejudice, he said. Democracy, he concluded, must find within its own genius means whereby it can equal the dictatorships in efficiency, without paying the price paid by the dictatorships.

At the resting place of the Wilson Cup for 1939 is the question of the crucial tilt scheduled for this week-end. The local lads have bright hopes that they will recapture the trophy this year. On the other hand, Western naturally will be fighting to retain the coveted silverware and so the Saturday struggle is "a natural".

JR. VIC 1, WYCLIFFE 0
Playing a man short, Jr. Vic opened up last night's water polo game with a terrific offensive, keeping Wycliffe bottled up in their own end of the pool and scoring a goal on a tricky throw by Macdonald.

In the second half Wycliffe began to capitalize on their man advantage but shot after shot went wild. Landolt, How and Quentin did yeoman service in turning back the theonals and the game ended Vic 1, Wycliffe 0.

JR. MEDS 3, JR. S.P.S. 1

Staging the fiercest polo game this season Jr. Meds downed Jr. S.P.S. by a 3-1 count and showed themselves to be the greatest threat to Sr. Vic's Erhardt Trophy aspirations.

The first half saw the doctors up by one goal notched by Baldwin. In the second half Hair and Wadds each scored one with De Marco chalking up the lone School effort. Despite the last minute rally of the Schoolmen the final score remained 3-1 for Meds.

INTRAMURAL SPORT

BASEBALL
Yesterday while the blizzard was in progress out of doors, U.C. junior baseball squad defeated Vic Jrs. by a score of 9-5 in their quiet little way.

Ned Cutler, pitcher for the winners, was too good for his opponents and given some fine batting support, took the lead and never surrendered it. U.C. took a three to two first inning lead and managed to sustain it to the end. The felling of the collegians was colossal to say the least. Jack Kimber was the star for the vanquished Victorians.

By mutual agreement, U.C. and St. Mike's decided to call off their hockey game yesterday afternoon, which leaves us again and as per usual with nothing to talk about except the weather.

Rumour hath it that part of the Glee Club must have been tucked away in the ski bus last Saturday. When the bus broke down on the return trip and the driver had to go in search of another one, the passengers weren't the least disheartened. A sing-song was organized in which everyone including the bus driver (when he returned) took part.

U.C.'s badminton tournament should be completed this week, much as we wanted to we couldn't get down to see any of the play yesterday. Somebody else was using the dog team.

the approval of four members of their provincial cabinet.

David Woodworth, vice-president of the T.S.A., who led the delegation, was accompanied by Miss Beatrice Chalet of Political Science and Economics, Mr. Harry Green of S.P.A., and Dr. Grant Lathe, National Secretary of the Canadian Student Assembly. After outlining the plans of the assembly, and the coming delegation to the federal cabinet, Mr. Woodworth emphasized the urgent need to provide for the many students who have high scholastic standing but lack adequate financial resources. In reply, Dr. McArthur, deputy-minister of education, stated that as well provided in this respect as any there were indications that Ontario was of the provinces, and stressed the need for federal continuation of such a scheme once it had been started.

to bring out the pertinent points in matters of religious belief.

"To be valuable the questionnaire must be answered by a representative group from all colleges and faculties. It must express the various religious and anti-religious convictions held by undergraduates. We hope that if there are any students who are definitely opposed to Christianity or the Church, that they will take this opportunity to record their disapproval."

The questions to be answered include such matters as the relation of religion in one's life, whether one makes any religious profession or not, and belongs to any religious organization, or considers himself an atheist or an agnostic, what one believes about God, about Jesus, about prayer and the relevancy of religious faith to social and economic problems, and one's attitude to war, race, politics and leisure activities.

Journal features a column captioned "C.A.M.S.I. Notes" by D. H. Copp. The Varsity has reported on our activities from time to time and the Journal of the Canadian Medical Association has also given publicity to the organization (June, 1938).

The Medical Society receives almost weekly reports on the progress and plans of the C.A.M.S.I.

Thus the existence and activities of the C.A.M.S.I. can hardly have escaped the notice of any medical student.

Plans for the future undertakings are being prepared and at the open meeting on Feb. 23 interested students will have an opportunity to formulate those plans. The annual conference of the C.A.M.S.I. National Committee may be attended by those interested on Feb. 25.

Trusting that this will clear up any existing misunderstanding and thanking your correspondent for her keen interest, I remain, yours very truly,

MANY STORIES have been written about students who write home for money, and the Princetonian has recently reprinted the typical student letter to the home folks. . . . It runs as follows:

Dear Mumfy, Daddy, and Sister Susie: I Simply love School; it's lot$ of fun. Next week I must buy three new book$; Gu€$ what I need mo$ of all. That's right. Send it along and oblige. . . . YES, IT'S THE $AME $AD STORY!

GET-RICH-QUICK-Willingford had nothing on this student of Duke University. . . . There have been many trick schemes used by collegians to earn money, including the long list of anti-funk agencies, and date bureaus, but this one takes the cake plus the icing. . . . This student reputedly triples his regular monthly incomes by raffling off his allowance check at the first of each month. . . . The chances are at fifty cents a throw, and so far, no complaints. . . .

DOWN OKLAHOMA WAY, the co-eds go in for luck charms during exam time. . . . One popular superstition to ward off the dreaded failure is the old rabbit's foot. . . . Some co-eds wear tiny gold rings upon which small coloured models of animals are attached by strings. . . . Others wear a bracelet of foreign coins which are supposed to bring the wearers good fortune. . . . The most popular superstition among the co-eds is the wearing of blue. . . . Whether this is to make the co-ed look as she feels it is hard to tell, but this seems to be the most popular colour. . . . Personally, during examination time, my favourite colour is black.

NOTES OFF THE ELBOW. . . .

Yesterday evening in the main library another feature of the athletic fee was introduced. . . . There was evidence in one of the corridors of the library, a new wading pool, no doubt for athletic-minded students. . . . The cause of the new pool was a leak in the roof, due to the heavy snowfall of the day. . . . There are twenty-two sets of brothers on the Washington and Lee campus. . . . Another point in favour of our unknown friend, Joe Colledge, is that in a recent census, over one-third of the University of Chicago students preferred symphonic music to swing. . . . Paul A. Mitchell, Ohio State U. student, has volunteered to paint the campus tower clock free of charge. . . . so that he'll be able to read the face from his room. . . . At Texas Tech, a co-ed has enrolled in animal husbandry. . . . a course for men only. . . . The professor allowed her into the course only on condition that she wore no make-up. . . . It seems he wanted the students to look at the cows and horses and not at her. . . .

Groups of unemployed men gathered at the station, to wave banners, "Appease the unemployed, not Mussolini." The famous black coffin, on which the words, "He did not get winter relief" were printed, was hoisted by several jobless men, so that the Premier could see plainly the attitude of part of the voting public.

This does seem logical, but the government refuses to believe that such simple things as looking after its own unemployed are of first importance. Hence Chamberlain's refusal to see representative deputations that were definitely opposed to the Rome visit.

DIPLOMATIC GAME MORE INTRIGUING

It would appear that Chamberlain thinks that the diplomatic game is more intriguing than playing noughts and crosses with the world at home. It suddenly occurs to him that after enjoying the hospitality of his European friends it would only be right to play host to them.

BUT THEY CANNOT ACCEPT

Chamberlain, many political authorities claim, will then issue invitations to Hitler, Mussolini and Daladier (or whoever is Prime Minister in France at the time). Hitler and Mussolini will find themselves in a dreadful position. Much as they would like to accept they will be forced to refuse this courtesy. They will be made to realize, so the story goes, that they are not safe outside their own countries, and also that if they are not careful, if they do not play cricket, they will not be secure in their own countries.

Chamberlain can then take time out to chuckle.

But whether or not the realization that they (Hitler and Mussolini) can not enjoy afternoon tea at Whitehall, will have the desired Chamberlain effect, is debatable. Hitler is noted for his nasty temper. He may become so annoyed with the impossible situation that nothing short of taking the country that embarrassed him, will serve as suitable appeasement.

This would aggravate Mr. Chamberlain no end.

LOCKHART PLEADS FOR UNEMPLOYED

Asked what they did about the sick said: "They told us to put them in a separate room, so they stay in there." There, too, the air was dark and unfit to breathe. The sick were lying on the grimy, drafty floorboards. In the corridor outside a middle-aged man was slumped on a dilapidated chair, one of the few in the building, "Sick too?" "Guess so," he muttered.

Most of those who stay in the building have colds—another sign of the desperate need for clothing. In the past week, about a dozen have been sent to the hospital with flu or gripe. "How did you like the hospital?" one man who had just returned was asked.

"Great," he grinned, "but I guess I wasn't sick enough to stay."

The men themselves would like to see some national work project on which to find employment. In the spring they will be off again in search of a job. Then it will be warm enough to live outdoors. Until then their need for warmth is great; the immediate answer to the need is clothing supplied through the generosity of university students.

ART MUSIC AND DRAMA

Not only did they demonstrate the recorder in serious numbers but the score they played a "Tidical melody of Snow White tunes, in which the instrument seemed particularly apt.

A sonata by Handel for recorder and harpsichord, in which Dr. Walter played the piano for lack of a harpsichord, was the most interesting work on the program. We were in effect transported back to the eighteenth century to hear this work as Handel had heard it. The solo work was notable for its technical perfection.

There are all too few groups that are willing to undertake an untied field so it is refreshing to find an amateur group that is not afraid to experiment with the unknown.

at the Hollywood theatre on Saturday morning. A comparison of the two pictures is inevitable. We don't know which picture was made first, although it would appear that the French one was the original. At any rate it makes a more plausible photoplay—perhaps because the atmosphere and setting is so definitely French. The similarity of the two is really amazing. The same scenes, the same type of character, the same mannerisms, in fact, everything is similar except the language.

Jean Gabin, who in appearance and acting reminds one so much of Spencer Tracy, plays the part of Pepe. His characterization seemed more realistic and vital than the rather glum Boyer in the American version.

One disappointment, which perhaps was natural, was the native inspector. The fine performance in the American picture made us overlook many of that picture's shortcomings. The French actor in the part doesn't quite come up to the same standard.

Hedy Lamarr's French counterpart looked like Miss Lamarr should look according to her publicity. This is not a commendation because just where does this self-avowed gamin of the Paris streets get her poise and savor faire? (Oh well, it's just a picture.)

The closing scene is the most memorable and in it is the only important difference between the two pictures. In the American one Pepe is conveniently killed off but in the French one he is left handcuffed with the inspector as freedom and love disappear. Death seemed the easier solution.

U.C. TO INSTITUTE MUSICALE SERIES

Two-Piano Team to be Presented
First in Series of Four Musicales Designed to Fill Gap in U.C. Music Life

A series of Sunday musicales will be inaugurated at 9 o'clock on Feb. 5 by Gordon Hallet and Clifford Poole, a two-piano team who will play in the Women's Union under the joint auspices of the Women's Undergraduate Society and the University College Literary and Athletic Society.

It is hoped that this series which was first projected last spring, will fill a long felt need in the college. Until now the students of University College, both male and female, have not had the opportunity to listen to classical music within the precincts of their own college. At last through the co-operation of some Toronto musicians, and with the consent of the Musician's Union, the plan will be realized.

The joint patrons of this venture hope that the attendance at this series will justify their expectations, and this (Continued on Page 4)

'WOMEN' SUBJECT OF S.C.M. LECTURE

The second lecture in the S.C.M. series on "Personality and Social Relationships" will be held in the theatre of the Women's Union today from 1.30 to 2, when Mrs. John Davidson will speak on the subject "Women".

Born in Latvia, and connected with the Student Christian Movement there, Mrs. Davidson has travelled widely in Europe and the Orient before coming to live in Toronto. She is an outstanding lecturer, well-known to Canadian audiences for her brilliance of mind and her personal charm, and has made a special study, not only of the field of current events—for which perhaps she is best known—but of the status and responsibilities of women in a changing society.

Oxford Graduate Stresses Importance of College Degree to Women in Commercial or Domestic Life

CULTURAL BENEFIT

"A university is the gateway to many professions but university also trains your mind to discriminate, which is useful to any woman, married or otherwise. In fact, when it comes to choosing a husband discrimination is a valuable faculty." This is what Alderman Adelaide M. Plumtre told The Varsity when interviewed yesterday on what university may do for a woman.

"Is a university education just so much wasted energy for a girl who plans to marry?" I asked. "Certainly not," retorted Mrs. Plumtre. "If a woman has gone to university she can be of great value to her children as they go through high school and college."

"A university trains you in using your mind which can be applied to cooking as much as to being chairman of a committee," she stated.

Entering Oxford University on three scholarships, Mrs. Plumtre took the Modern History course, which included Political Science and Economics. She was captain of the women's hockey team at Oxford and head of the debating society.

Mrs. Plumtre graduated from Oxford in 1900 without a degree because at that time Oxford did not grant degrees to women graduates.

BLUES MEET O.A.C. IN DELAYED GAME

Intermediate Basketeers Will Attempt to Retain Title Despite Guelph Men

Varsity intermediate basketball team begins its delayed schedule when it meets O.A.C. tonight in Hart House. The Blues are gunning for the intermediate title which has been theirs for six years and will field a very strong quintet this season. However, reports from Guelph indicate that the Varsity Seconds are in for a battle royal. Coach McCutcheon's squad has lost only two games in its last thirty, one of those last year to the Argies. The team is determined to prevent a repetition of this and have built up a formidable offensive. "Mac" McCutcheon is counting on the only three players left from last year's aggregation to act as a nucleus for the present team. This trio consists of Clegg, Flynn, and McLaughlin. Two of the newcomers are Dunn and Beers, formerly of St. Mike's. (Continued on Page 4)

S.P.S. SWORDSMAN FOILS OTHER FENCERS

Last Saturday, the 28th of January, was indeed an eventful night for R. T. Wilson of the Faculty of Applied Science. Wilson is one of the outstanding fencers of the Varsity team and proved his skill with the foil when on Saturday night he took top honours in the Ontario Junior Fencing Championships. Tournament, against a field of 21 entrants. The tournament was held at Danforth Technical School where the province fought it out to decide who was the best man. Title to the S.P.S. custom Wilson came out on top. The runner-up, Gerow, is a skillful fencer from the Toronto Sword Club.

Sir Robert Falconer, past president of the University, will speak in the S.C.M. noon-hour series in Hart House today. Sir Robert is one of Canada's most outstanding scholars and has long been outstanding in the public life of the country.

Sir Robert will speak on the subject "I Believe in Christ" and will discuss the question of what undergraduates may believe concerning Jesus. He will speak from the background of long service in public life and from prolonged research in New Testament study and has just recently published a volume on the Epistles.

This address is to inaugurate a series for this month which will include addresses by Professor Dow and President Cuddy.

LIBEL SUIT HANGS FIRE

"No further developments," was the comment made yesterday by solicitors for both sides in the pending libel suit against the editor-in-chief, managing editor and night editor of The Varsity when interviewed yesterday. "We are preparing the case night and day, however," they added.

The suit resulted from the publication of an article in The Varsity of Monday, January 23, which was considered libelous by members of the Swing Club. The article referred to the president and vice-president of the club as "public nuisances" and "malicious influences".

Upon the advice of their solicitors, the student law firm of Hilton, Kayler, Yaremko, and Dublin, the Swing Club served notice that if the statement were not retracted and an apology made, suit would be brought against the three staff members implicated.

Five Committees from Student Assembly Appointed to Obtain Support of Student Organizations for Scholarship Campaign

TWO BROADCASTS

Two national broadcasts, public meetings and a dance will form part of the extensive program of Scholarship Week, extending from February 5 to 11, planned by the Student Assembly. The scholarship was adopted at the assembly's inauguration at Winnipeg last Christmas.

The first broadcast will be heard on the Canadian Forum early in February, with Paul Martin, M.P., as speaker. Mayor Jamieson Bone of Belleville will also take part. The second broadcast will feature an interview with a student from the University of Manitoba, conducted by a woman interviewer.

Maps of Canada showing the federal constituencies and a list of members, will be placed in the Economics Building, Hart House, and University College, to enable the students to write to the members of their constituencies to get their endorsement.

TICKET SALE RISES FOR U.C. ARTS BALL

The annual Arts Ball to be held in the Great Hall, Hart House, on February 10th, is expected to be a greater success than ever this year.

Until two years ago, the Arts Ball had always been held at a downtown hotel. But last winter the University College Literary and Athletic Society decided to have a cabaret dance at Hart House instead. It was so successful that the society is again giving a cabaret dance.

Invitations have been sent out to a great many guests and it is believed they will be well represented.

The sale of tickets to date has far exceeded that of last year. Students wishing to make table reservations can do so either at the Literary office, University College, or by seeing Phil Benson, Social Director of the society.

Mel Hammill and his orchestra, one of Canada's best dance orchestras, will supply the music.

Religious Questionnaire "Useful" To Professors

E. A. Macdonald

... secretary-treasurer of the Students Administrative Council, who will make an address over CKCL on the "The Varsity Speaks" program tonight at 8.15.

PROGRAM FEATURES UNIVERSITY SURVEY

E. A. Macdonald to Describe Findings of His Recent Trip to American Universities on Radio Broadcast

As a feature of tonight's broadcast, The Varsity Speaks, Mr. E. A. Macdonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council, will outline the findings of his recent trip to several American universities with Professor S. N. F. Chant.

The trip was made to study student government activities in the American universities as compared with those here. The universities visited were Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and Yale.

In all these universities, Mr. Macdonald found, there are more elaborate schemes for helping students, but there is little or no student control, which results in an air of paternalism, he said.

These findings will be outlined by Mr. Macdonald during the course of the broadcast, and it is probable that he will also tell of the work of the Council here.

The broadcast is the fourth in its series, presented by station CKCL, and Mr. Jack Thomson, well-known announcer and news commentator. A. C. Forrest, editor of The Varsity, made a guest appearance on the first broadcast. It will be aired over CKCL at 8.15 tonight.

CHINESE STUDENTS CONTINUE TRAINING

Students in the universities of China, which were destroyed by the fighting, have tried to play their part in the immediate salvation of their homeland, while at the same time seeking to complete their studies under adverse conditions, so as to be able to do their full share in her future reconstruction. Since the foundation of the National Academy of Dramatic Art, two years ago, it has served as a most effective link with the people in China's war of resistance against aggression. Professors of University Comment on Unreliability and Complexity of Questionnaire as well as its Usefulness

That the questionnaire to ascertain student views on religion which appears in today's Varsity has possibilities of becoming a highly useful source of information, was the view held by two prominent Toronto professors, one in philosophy and the other in psychology, when interviewed last night.

Dean G. S. Brett, Head of the Department of Philosophy, said that such a questionnaire would at least provide "quantitative information" on the stand taken by students on these matters. Its value would depend on how the results are used and the sincerity of students answering it. He recalled that a similar piece of research on student attitudes was undertaken forty years ago by the psychologist Starbuck.

S. N. F. Chant, Professor of Psychology, believed the questionnaire might stimulate some students to deeper thought in an important field. Religion is "an important topic," he said, "and anything that would be helpful to a better understanding of student opinions on that matter is justified."

Information obtained by the questionnaire method is limited, and may not be particularly reliable because there is little chance for making reservations, he said. But the method is useful in the interests of getting statistical results.

Regarding the questions themselves to which students are asked to make replies, Mr. Chant described them as being "very complex". It would be difficult for many students to give their answers, he said.

"Religion and a philosophy of life are very important matters for the individual; and I think it is quite desirable to try to find out what people are thinking on such subjects," he stated.

"Such information is important, and we should make efforts to obtain it."

M. L. ROSS SPEAKS TO JOINT MEETING

Noted Journalist Declares Bidding Writers Are Given Better Chance in the States than in Canada

"Make the States your market," was the advice of Mary Lowry Ross to a joint meeting of the Women's Press Club and The Varsity staff yesterday afternoon. Writers in the States, Mrs. Ross explained, are still being given pre-depression prices, from five to ten times as much as in Canada.

When asked what opportunities there are for women in journalism, Mrs. Ross replied that while as a rule newspapers only employ women on the women's page, in magazine work there is a wider field for women than for men. Mrs. Ross's advice to those who wished to have magazine articles and fiction accepted was to study the editors' preferences by reading their magazines and writing accordingly.

She also stated that news writing, while it entails hard work with not much distinction, may lead to the "very privileged position of columnist" with little editorial supervision; it may also help to develop a clear, simple style for fiction writing. "Success in a literary career," said Mrs. Ross, depends largely on individual talent, not in ability to emulate other writers' techniques. Canadians particularly need to get away from imitation and derivation.

Points of View

Apparently many difficulties have already arisen, among those students who have been attempting to answer the S.C.M. questionnaire. Many will not be able to answer all the questions honestly themselves, and there is little doubt that they will feel the need of a clarification of their own ideas.

Religion is to be considered as something different from theology, and as personal as an appreciation of poetry. It is a thing which the individual must discover and decide upon for himself, and a person's religious position need have no dangerous economic or social implications unless it prompts him to break the law or certain established social conventions. There is no need for people either in or outside the university to throw up their hands in horror at the rumour that students have agnostic, deistic, or atheistic opinions; these are positions temporarily adopted in the search for a satisfactory religious standpoint. No one should hold a belief unless he has investigated it and found it really adequate for himself. Intellectual honesty is the only true approach to truth, and if a student, searching among a myriad of creeds and philosophies for something which applies for himself goes through various stages of doubt and unrest, there is no need to cry havoc. He has more chance of becoming a good citizen than the unquestioning mirror of orthodoxy.

There is here no attempt to question the traditional Christian point of view. No person is more fortunate than he who has searched deeply and can truly accept the Christian position, without forcing himself into an attitude not his own. But his existence does not disqualify the agnostic. Most intellectually honest people go through an agnostic period sometime during their lives. It is not a state of pagan decay, but one of understandable bewilderment.

The agnostic is he who professes ignorance of the existence of God and an unseen world; he does not deny it. Says Thomas Huxley: "I invented the title of agnostic. It came into my head as suggesting an antithesis to the 'gnostic' of church history, who professed to know so very much." It is not a position to be retained throughout life, but one of transition.

On the other hand, atheism is not a tenable position. Denial of, or disbelief in, the existence of some Supreme Being, is foreign to human nature. The atheist is not even logical, for he must imply positive in order to uphold his negative. If everything is due to chance, then chance is the Supreme Principle. Nobody remains an atheist for very long; certainly the puzzled student who temporarily claims to be one is hardly a social menace.

Enough criticism has been hurled at the unorthodox religious views of university students. They represent, on the whole, a healthy spirit of inquiry, and are at any rate merely transitory beliefs. There is no cause for alarm.—B.K.

A University Broadcast

The recently inaugurated radio broadcast over CKCL featuring news from The Varsity brings to mind the fact that even after many years of anticipation and some preparation on the part of enthusiastic students, there is still no regular broadcast featuring the talent of university undergraduates.

To outsiders this fact may not seem deplorable; it is when we hear of the excellently conducted broadcasts presented weekly by such American colleges as Yale, Princeton, Texas University and others.

For example, Yale students are given the opportunity to write their own scripts, direct their own orchestra and present their own music and drama on their program with which they are assisted by only one capable studio director. In this way the many students looking forward to a future on the air waves may have a chance to test their ability, and learn radio technique by experience on an amateur program. No course is offered in radio study at college. What better opportunity could be given to interested undergraduates to train for a chosen career in such a field?

Surely this university could provide as fine entertainment as any other college. Our writers, technicians, singers, musicians and directors could compare favourably with those on the American side. Toronto should be awakened to a finer college spirit which might be brought to everyone over the air.

The main obstacle in the path of such a project seems to be the expense which would be involved. A studio will not alone bear the cost of the program and it would be necessary to find a sponsor. Consequently the program would need to be sufficiently interesting to the general public for a sponsor to be forthcoming. The fact that the name of the university should be associated with a commercial product should have no more significance than its connection with the advertising of products over the amplifying system at stadium rugby games.

Last year a campaign was started to inaugurate an all-university broadcast which would promote school spirit and give prospective radio stars a chance on their own program before seeking other fields. A great deal of work was done by the S.A.C. to organize this broadcast, but unfortunately it could not be carried through because of certain technicalities, which could only have been overcome at a great deal of expense. It is hoped that in the not-too-distant future it will be possible to have the advantage of such a broadcast, which is enjoyed by these other universities.—B.J.G.

RE CORRESPONDENCE—

At a quarter to one this morning there was delivered to the editor a group of letters protesting against yesterday's editorial on National Scholarships. Of these letters, that written by David E. Woodsworth, of the Toronto Student Assembly, was by far the fairest, and most clear-cut, although extremely long. That letter will be printed tomorrow, if space permits, and we will attempt to answer the arguments which Mr. Woodsworth has presented. We trust that the other correspondents will excuse us from printing their letters, as they would only be duplications of that of Mr. Woodsworth.—A.C.F.

ARLE MUSIC

Toronto Symphony

Last night's "Nine O'Clock" program displayed the Toronto Symphony Orchestra in top form, and left the audience with the enjoyable impression that Sir Ernest's players can really produce some very fine music. The numbers chosen gave ample scope for the display of all the potentialities of the ensemble and provided solos for almost all the sections, which were all competently handled, without being overdone.

The range of volume was surprisingly good. The full orchestra played pianissimo without being fuzzy. The diminuendos were exceedingly well handled, especially where The Wagon Passes. One could almost see it disappearing in the dim distance while the cello strings were still being plucked. The whole Elgar Nursery Suite, with its contrasts, was exceedingly well handled. Of the interesting solos which carried the various themes, Concert-master Spivak's was outstanding.

Mendelssohn's Wedding March was redeemed from the trite and commonplace and given a full free rendering. The choirs seemed almost inspired at times, under the baton of the conductor, as they swung through its familiar theme. The deep organ tones in the Nocturne from the same group was in charming contrast to the ethereal quality of the opening part of Nursery Suite.

The audience considerably refrained, as requested, from demanding encores during the broadcast portion of the concert, but their pent-up applause when the ban was lifted was rewarded by a glorious treatment of the Valses of the Flowers from the Nutcracker Suite, with its beautiful harp passages. The whole orchestra put a tremendous amount ofumph into this finale but it appeared as though the new oboe player was the one who really enjoyed the evening most.

Perhaps the triangle chimed rather indistinctly for The Serious Doll, and perhaps some of the passages marked cantabile did not sing quite as much as one might have liked, but any slight defects were so outweighed by the spirit apparent in the offering as a whole.

Anne Jamison

It is a far cry from the days when a petite, titian-haired soprano sang on a chocolate hour over the now defunct CKNC, to last night's brilliant song recital in Eaton Auditorium. The soprano, Anne Jamison, has learned much in the interim. She has acquired all the necessary poise and grace of the concert artist. Her program was most ambitious but she never over-stepped her ability which lies chiefly in the lighter lyrical type of song.

Her Schubert was a joy. In Die Vogel she tripped lightly over the melody, playing on her voice as a musical instrument.
It is regrettable that two of her encores were hackneyed songs. Perhaps this was the influence of her radio work. Coming through the Rye had the

Correspondence

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

In receipt of my letter to the Canadian Legation at Washington, D.C., last month, it was suggested I communicate with you concerning the pursuit of my enquiries.

I am intensely interested in world affairs, and find that my closest relationship with that sense is by corresponding with people in foreign countries.

Surely in your capacity as editor-in-chief of the largest student daily in Canada you would know of someone who might be interested in communicating with me. Would you be so kind as to send me the address or addresses of anyone who might be attentive. I am a student at the University of California and would be only too glad to exchange news and views on any pertinent subject.

Hopefully and gratefully yours,

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Every summer a number of undergraduates visit the British Isles and the continent. I would like to call their attention to "The Victoria League", an organization which does everything it can to make the stranger's stay in England as pleasant as possible.

DENTS TIE VIC I IN HOCKEY SERIES

In a noonday hockey game at the Varsity Arena Vic I and Dents played a 3-all tie, both teams turning in a good performance.

Dents beat the Vic goalie twice in the first period while Vic were only able to score one.

However, Vic rallied in the second frame to hang in two to Dents one, to end the game 3-3.

Siberry, Bothwell and McLeod scored for Vic with penalties handed out to Pollard and Matheson. Sproule, Reid and Sibbald scored for Dents and McKee, Beattie and Sproule received penalties.

Vic I: Pollard, Matheson, Siberry, Hoeg, Smith, Haig, Wilson, Bothwell, McLeod, Brown, Fennel.

Dents: Goodison, Beattie, Sproule, Reid, Passalis, McKee, Ray, Sibbald, Labrey, Bergman, Bigelow.

Basketball

By J. Westcott

Three helpings of basketball were handed out for the entertainment of interfaculty fans (if any) at Hart House yesterday afternoon and evening. Vic thirds nudged out U.C. thirds 15-14. St. Meds. after a strenuous hard-fought contest, were tied by S.P.S. Srs. 19-19. Knox whitewashed Emmanuel by the overwhelming score of 51-0.

Frechette, who played a stellar game throughout for Vic, potted the first basket to give them a lead which they held practically throughout the contest.

Vic III: Shudis (4), Jones (4), Frechette (3), Rice (2), Deller, Kane, Small, Rutledge (2), Mann.

U.C. III: Sampson, Peart (2), Murray (10), Essery (1), Mackintosh (1), Weinstein, Yacemoko, Patenick, and Harshoran.

In the brilliant Meds-S.P.S. clash, the Meds' superior speed and passing ability put them in front at half-time by 10-5. Levy clicked for seven points in this half.

Then with dogged determination, and sparked by Fisher, who scored four beautiful baskets from centre, S.P.S. began to climb until they caught up with the fast-breaking Meds. For the rest of the battle the lead saw-sawed from one side to another, finally ending in the 19-19 tie.

S.P.S. Srs.: Ronson, Rule, Murray, Johnson (4), Thompson (2), Dawson, Kirby, Ballagh (5), Fisher (8).

Meds Srs.: Wise, Levy (8), Langer, Metzler (4), Kyle (2), Boettger, Takefman (3), MacKinnon (2), Denne, Lane.

In the Emmanuel massacre, Knox played a fast, tricky game, using much unselfish combination work to score near field goals. Siles, with 20 points, was outstanding, and Keith and Booth with nine and eight points respectively, played very well for Knox.

Knox A: Siles (20), Vincent (6), Taylor (4), Booth (8), Richardson (2), Barr (3), Keith (9).

Emmanuel: Elmsley, Brydon, Smith, Johnston, Rowland, Gifford, Goodyer.

SR. BASKETBALL BEGINS SCHEDULE

Real Contest is Promised in Initial Match between Western Mustangs and Blue and White Hoopsters

Western Mustangs begin their basketball schedule on Saturday evening when they invade Hart House for a match with Warren Stevens' Blue and White hoopsters. Varsity are leading the senior intercollegiate loop with two wins to their credit. The fans are looking forward to a repetition of last year's thriller.

"Moose" Rogin is likely to lead Varsity attack. Rogin is adept at potting field baskets and rates a high average on his foul shots. "Scrubby" Aitchison is also expected to supply the scoring punch. Teaming up with Aitchison at guard position is Walt McGregor of U.C.

Western will be sending down a starry lot of players for this important encounter. The Western Ontario squad have made impressive showings in pre-season exhibition games. A mere glance at the scores by which they downed three strong opponents will tell the story. Western defeated Canisius 38-36, Niagara 32-27, and Assumption 37-21. Their only loss was that administered to them by St. Bonaventure, 28-18.

Last year's powerhouse line of Hurley, Farmer, and Casey are back, plus "Clen" Faust, the football flash, who is a valuable addition to the line-up. Add to this outfit Joe Cro, one of the best natural basketball players in Canada. I can't sit beside someone with gum without getting hungry, especially if they seem to be enjoying it.

"Disgusting habit," was the terse opinion voiced by the Brown twins, "but if anyone should offer us any now—"

Knox and Boosts

Do professors resent the energetic mastication of chewing gum during lectures? Do they shudder to see comfortably working jaws bending over dog-eared notebooks? Or do they envy students their accustomed food for thought?

The general opinion of the staff seemed of a tolerant nature. Quiet, unobtrusive gum-chewing—yes—noisy, distracting gum-chewing—no. Professors admitted having seen rows of students empty the contents of coloured boxes and contentedly indulge in the culturally unaccepted art of rubber mastication without comment.

Pre-fessorial dignity, it appears, could afford to ignore such occurrences so long as attention to the lecture did not waver.

But what is the appeal which gum-chewing seems to have for thoughtful undergraduates?

"Chieties are my speciality," avowed Marjorie Mason, II Vic. "They are so handy to take to lectures and they go farther if you have lots of friends."

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

CONCERNING GYMNASTICS

Back in the fall semester of 1935 a new instructor was appointed to the Athletic Wing of Hart House in the person of Charlie Zwygart. Yesterday Charlie had lots to tell us of the manner in which the gym teams have been developing during the few years they have been under his tutelage. Three years ago only a dozen or so students turned out to practices; now the aspirants have increased in numbers and dexterity until it has been found necessary to create two divisions. At the last intramural sports meeting a motion was passed which included the junior gymnasts in the point system of the T. A. Reed Trophy set-up. Last Friday the junior competition was held in the upper gym, and the winner was Dave Coyle of Trinity. The junior meet in part serves the purpose of spotting material for the intercollegiate team, and one of these lads might be moved up to the top ranks to fill out the roster. Recently the senior squad visited Queen's and had a very profitable sojourn there. The Tricolours were able to give Varsity some good competition and also measured themselves against a real team. Queen's have now signified their intention to enter intercollegiate competition for the first time since the formation of the Intercollegiate Gymnastic Union. The Blue and White team have a good chance to perfect their work before the intercollegiate meet on Feb. 25th. The display which wowed hundreds of spectators the night of the U.C. Follies will be taking your breath away once more on Feb. 17th, when School Night will be entertained by the strength and finesse of these athletes. We note in passing that Wilson, Mark, Patterson and Lester are all registered in the Little Red Schoolhouse. Powell, Macdonald and Simpson comprise the other half of the team.

FOLLOW THE BOUNCING BALL

The day, before Candlemas is no time, say you, to be discussing golf. On the contrary, though the fairways may be knee-deep in snow, this winter season is the determining factor of your next summer's score. If you shoot a game that is in the low eighties or the high hundreds (Shake, pal!), you will profit greatly from the kindly and valuable teaching of Dave Hutchison. Dave, who is the pro at Woodbine, is to be found in the Golf Room at Hart House, and he takes the trouble to give each student a course of instruction suited to his individual needs. Mr. Hutchison is acknowledged both on and off the campus as a man who knows his golf, and Varsity men are fortunate in having such instruction available. Golf is a pastime which can be enjoyed long after graduation, when the old zip which you need for more strenuous sports has departed. Besides, it is fast becoming a social institution, and this healthful recreation will continue to increase in popularity in the future. To enter the golf school you don't have to knock a caddy from a niblick. The fee? One registration card.

HURRY! HURRY! HURRY!

To night at Hart House McCutcheon's Marvels take on O.A.C. as they start in their seventh consecutive intermediate basketball title. This game will begin at seven o'clock and at eight-thirty the senior scrambleball squad will play an exhibition tilt with Sunday Morning Class. Admission is FREE. Saturday is another gala day—in the afternoon at the Arena the picksters will play Yale, and in the evening at Hart House the following are on deck against the Blue and White teams: BASKETBALL, the flashy Western team, who have taken Canisius, Niagara, and Assumption in pre-season games; SWIMMING, Buffalo State Teachers; BOXING, Queen's. They are all worth seeing, and if you feel athletic yourself, there will be dancing in the big gym from ten o'clock on.

TOUGH LUCK DEPT.

Last Saturday our wrestling team (which by the way goes to Buffalo this Saturday) travelled to Rochester, where they won three out of seven bouts. And here's the heart-break, one of our grapplers lost his fall at eight minutes and fifty-nine seconds of a nine-minute bout.

WITH PUCK AND STICK

Queen's University gained undisputed possession of first place in the team standing and its outstanding scorer and playmaker, Mel Williamson, gained a first-place tie in the individual scoring race in the only game played last week in the third annual Intercollegiate Ice Hockey League championship tournament.

Queen's defeated Toronto 2 to 1, its fourth victory in six league games, and passed McGill, the defending champion, on points. It was Toronto's first league setback in four games this season. McGill and Toronto are tied for second place in the standing, each with 6 points.

Williamson was credited with both assists on the goals his team scored, passing both times to Norville Williamson for the tallies. He now has a total of 11 points, carried on 6 goals and 5 assists, and is deadlocked with Russ McConnell, McGill captain and individual high scorer last year. Princeton's Ralph Wyler, although idle, retained his hold on third place with his 10 points.

The league resumes concerted action this week-end, when three games are scheduled. Yale will appear in two of them, meeting Queen's on Friday and Toronto on Saturday, both in Canada.

A third game will bring together McGill and Montreal at Montreal. Quadrangular League competition resumes this following week-end.

The Sportsman

By Marg Conlin

Trials of a hockey executive. With only two games disposed of, the Hockey Club has had to rearrange its original schedule. The only change this week, however, occurs tonight, when U.C. will not meet Vic Jrs. Why? Because there are no Vic Jrs. any more. In hockey that is. After sponsoring two teams in the hockey league for years and years, Victoria co-eds couldn't work up enough fresh enthusiasm this time to form a second hockey team. Seniors here are everywhere are lamenting a tragic apathy where hockey is concerned among newcomers at all the colleges this year. Ignorance may be bliss, but we prophesy that the frosh will eventually succumb. Now, however, Vic can concentrate on its senior team exclusively, and with their talent on hand ought to produce a crack team. Elsewhere on this page you will find the new schedule. NB managers, which goes into effect next week. After one postponement caused by Monday's storm, U.C. and St. Mike's hope to play their fixture Thursday at seven during the Saints' practice hour. We're wondering whether they will.

They say that various sporting luminaries have been indulging in a strenuous arm-chair agitation for a co-ed golf school. All very well, but if you really want results the quickest and least painful method is via the visit-room-82-U.C. plan. Miss Parkes, who is the ruling deity there, is anxious to co-operate with your suggestions and if anything can be arranged, she is the lady in the case. When 40 co-eds found an hour in a crowded schedule to include an hour's bowling every week, undoubtedly another 40 could be mustered to form the nucleus of a golf class. All Fore now, children.

SHANGHAI BULLETIN SHOWS DIRE NEED

Reports from Missionaries, Hospital and University Officials Collated in Appeal for Aid

A bulletin just received from the American Information Committee of Shanghai, China, shows how pressing are the problems confronting that country at the present time.

The factual background for this report has been gleaned from missionaries, social service workers, municipal officials, hospital and university authorities, and officers of Chinese, foreign and international relief organizations, both in Shanghai and in the interior. Thus rumours have been verified from original sources or else eliminated completely.

In Shanghai the summary shows that trained workers and volunteers are needed to sort the refugees by careful case work. In the occupied areas outside Shanghai the distressed can be helped through groups or independently and money, medical supplies and trained personnel are needed.

In the unoccupied areas much assistance is needed. The transportation of medical supplies is a continual problem as valuable sera rapidly lose their potency when exposed to the heat of tropical summer. The National Red Cross, the China Medical Association, and the League of Nations Preventive Service are co-operating to provide aid and transport to strategic centres in the interior.

In this and the program of economic reconstruction by industrial co-operatives, students, because of their technical training, are playing a strategic part. Any contribution to aid them through the Far Eastern Student Relief Committee may be left at the Women's S.C.M. Office in the Household Economics Building or the S.A.C. Office in Hart House.

AROUND THE TRACK

Victoria College scored two firsts and two thirds to boost their point total to twenty points and take a commanding lead in the race for the Toronto Cricket Club Trophy. Ron Cass, intermediate intercollegiate hurdles champion, won the fifty yards indoor hurdles followed by Broderick of St. Michael's and Miller of Vic. Broderick is a new hurdler and has shown great form in practice. Rowell, Vic, and Orr, Meds, tied for fourth and Laidlaw of Trinity was sixth. The winner's time was 68".

In the two-twenty yards the same high standard was maintained from last week. H. Brown, Vic, won in 24.7", followed by Delaney, Trinity, in 24.9". Broderick, Vic, was third, followed by Keenan, St. Michael's, V. Brown, Vic, Stinson, Vic, and Laidlaw, Trinity, were tied for fifth place in the fast time of 25.4". In former years the sixth man has usually run the furlong in 26". This shows the remarkable improvement that has taken place this year.

Martin, Meds, won the fastest mile that has been run around here in some time, from Bill Hoeg, S.P.S. Shand Meds, nosed out Nick Loutit, Wycliffe, for third place. Next week the quarter-mile will be run off along with a field event. See the notice.

ART MUSIC AND DRAMA

saving grace of being beautifully handled, but the choice of Danny Boy was not particularly imaginative.

The Gavotte from Massenet's Manon was the longest work on the program. In it Miss Jamison displayed her dramatic ability learned in more cosmopolitan centres.

One of the most charming numbers was Guitares et Mandolines by Grolez. The accompaniment is in the form of a Habanera and in this connection we would like to add a note of appreciation to the accompanist, Gwendolyn Williams, whom we have come to look to for uniformly fine work.

Miss Jamison was singing to the most critical audience possible, composed as it was of friends and former critics. Surely it must have been the supreme test to face such a group and Anne Jamison passed nobly.

Already they have the approval of the Engineering Society, the Undergraduate Women's Medical Society, Dr. Cody, Denton Massey, and others. A survey of student opinion will be made during the scholarship week.

While immediately concerned with scholarships, the Student Assembly will discuss such policies as national unity, foreign policy, curricula, staff and student relations, at a later date.

CHINESE STUDENTS CONTINUE TRAINING

surrounding villages, the students aroused the patriotic enthusiasm of the people by their plays and songs. Now throughout China, hundreds of dramatic troupes are being organized by university students, merchants, workers, many of whom are graduates of the academy.

The use of drama for propaganda purposes has changed the traditional character of the Chinese stage. Plays no longer deal with complicated court intrigues but are of a simple, striking character, suited to open-air stages and capable of being understood by the simple people of the villages. Recently a two weeks' training class was held in Hankow in which 650 Hankow actors and actresses took part, in order to learn the new technique of popular drama and so be able to place their talent at the service of the people. In addition to following courses on dramatic art, they attended lectures on current topics in relation to political, social and military developments in China and in foreign countries. They also learned a number of patriotic songs.

The training-class proved so successful, that others will be held in the near future. The Hankow dramatists have decided to hold group meetings once a week to discuss problems of popular drama in connection with the war of resistance.

Dr. Grant Lathe, who visited these centres and students last summer as a guest of the Chinese government in company with representatives of the students of both the United States and England will tell of his trip at an open meeting of Dr. Gordon's Bible Class at 44 Hoskin on Sunday afternoon. Anyone wishing to contribute to the fund being raised for Far Eastern Student Relief may leave their gift at either the Women's S.C.M. Office in the Household Science Building, or at the S.A.C. CORRESPONDENCE

Although "The Victoria League" has branches in most of the dominions, it is practically unknown in Canada since there is, unfortunately, no branch established there at present.

The Victoria League is composed of two divisions, the senior and junior sections. The latter are called "Young Continentals", and as the name implies, they are interested in the welfare of the younger visitors to this country.

The activities of the Victoria League are too numerous to mention in a short letter. Perhaps the greatest service this society provides to young Canadians, is the introduction to people living here who possess similar interests and would therefore make excellent companions.

Introductions are naturally very important. Much has been written about "English people" and the student-traveller will want to meet and associate with his overseas cousins. Someone has said aptly, "English people are so difficult to know—but so difficult to know without that important small initial formality."

It is this "small initial formality" that the Victoria League graciously provides. But it does much more. The Young Continentals arranges trips to country estates and to places of historical interest which would not be otherwise accessible.

You will meet fellow Canadians whom you have never seen before at their dances and social gatherings. You will dance and chat with young people from all over the Empire.

There are no strings attached to this amazing offer! There is no down payment. The members of the Victoria League ask only that their guests "feel at home".

In a few days bulletins will be posted in the college rotundas describing more fully the organization itself and its activities.

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

For the sake of accuracy you'd be so kind as to correct a wrong impression which the telephone interview with me, appearing in your issue of January 25th, may have created.

I am not planning an expedition to the Peace River District for the students of the University of Toronto and I have not invited co-eds to come along. My conversations with the Students' Administrative Council and the Engineering Society were based on a suggestion that the students of the University of Toronto might be interested in forming their own Exploration Society of Club.

This suggestion emanates largely from Lord Tweedsmuir, who is President of the Oxford Exploring Society and an enthusiastic patron of the Schools Exploration Society of Canada which I helped to found.

I feel that Canada has an immense, largely unexplored hinterland, such as no other country in the world possesses, and from which the average Canadian might derive a great deal more pleasure, experience and profit than he does, if he once became conscious of it.

If, on expeditions of the Schools Exploration Society we have been able to travel hundreds of miles through partly unmapped and little known country in Northern Alberta and British Columbia with boys fifteen years old and upward, the thought occurred how much more fun and experience university students might derive from an exploration society of their own.

As to the scope of such an organization it would obviously depend on the tastes, initiative and objectives of the students who might participate. It might be possible to organize highly scientific expeditions into distant areas such as those organized by Oxford University.

On the other hand some engineering and mining students might use such an organization to carry out less valuable expeditions which might give them valuable and practical experience and in some cases even perhaps supply them with a summer's earnings out of working small placer deposits which are still numerous in British Columbia.

Others may plan extensive canoe trips with or without a scientific object. And, as I pointed out in the interview, even co-eds do not necessarily have to be excluded from such a movement as some of them make just as good explorers, on this scale, as the men.

In closing, I wish to offer my services to any group of students or members of the staff who might be interested in starting a club or society of this kind at the university and who may wish to discuss suggestions and details with me or see the coloured films of our expeditions. I am,

Yours truly,

Nicholas Ignatieff.

UNEMPLOYED MEN TO BE PAID VISIT BY VARSITY GROUP

Invitation is Extended to See Situation of the Homeless
Single Man

SPONSORED BY S.C.M.

Following the invitation of the Single Unemployed Men's Association to visit their quarters at Duke Street and to investigate the conditions under which numerous men are sleeping nightly in railway cars, a party of male undergraduates has been organized and will leave Hart House tonight at 9.15. The group will be under the direction of Dr. Lockhart of the S.C.M.

It is estimated that something like 500 men in this city sleep every night on floors or in railway cars and they are only a small portion of the men who are without work and domicile.

A visit to Duke Street yesterday revealed that the health of a great number of the men is rapidly breaking and while those who are most seriously ill have been removed to the hospital, the remainder continue to sleep under the most appalling conditions.

Any men who are interested in investigating these conditions and of meeting and talking with these men are asked to meet in the main rotunda in Hart House at 9 p.m. this evening.

AT S.C.M. MEETING

Mrs. John Davidson spoke on the subject "Women" in the second lecture in the S.C.M. series on "Personality and Social Relations" at the Women's Union yesterday.

She emphasized 3 points. Women, she said, have not fully recognized how recently they have acquired their privileges, nor have they considered the fact that these privileges will disappear because of misuse.

It is the duty of the educated women of the privileged class to lead the way in uplifting all women. Today the women of this privileged class are not fulfilling the responsibilities which are naturally theirs. Rather they masquerade under a pretended weakness of strength to change conditions. They are too gay

Western Laboratory Is Damaged by Flames

Cause of Disaster Attributed to Matches Ignited by Rodents

SEVERAL FIREMEN INJURED

By Joyce Cooper

Vancouver, Feb. 1 (CUP)—Fire razed a chemical research laboratory on the second floor of the University of British Columbia science building shortly after midnight Sunday, causing over $2200 damage to building and equipment, and injuring several firemen. Research students who have been working on fish oil experiments in this laboratory assign the cause of the fire to the ignition of matches by rats or mice, and the consequent firing of the fish oil and chemicals in the room.

It is assumed that the fire was smoldering for some hours before it was discovered early Monday morning. Although firemen battled the flames with chemicals and water, walls and ceiling were charred, and the thick panes of glazed glass in the doors and walls on the hallway were cracked and blackened. On the badly damaged stools and tables were strewn broken test tubes, flasks, beakers and twisted metal apparatus.

The laboratory was one which was particularly inspected by Sir Frederick Banting of the National Research Council at Ottawa, during his visit to U.B.C. last fall. Experiments on the ingredients and use of fish oil, a valuable local product, were being carried out experiments on thymus glands and in the laboratory together with and dioxane. The equipment used in the fish oil experiments was specially manufactured in eastern Canada last year, and its replacement will probably take some four months. Valuable notes on the experiments were also destroyed and this will necessitate the repetition of the experiments.

Basketball Seniors Edge Out S.M. Class

Last Game before Western Invasion Results in Tussle

Varsity seniors plus several men brought up from the second squad moved out a speedy Sunday Morning Class outfit by the score of 36-34 last night. The tussle was the last exhibition the Blues will play before they meet the formidable Western squad which will invade the Hart House portals this Saturday evening.

Play was ragged in the first half with the Blue seniors kicking the ball around quite a bit. However, Rogin managed to drop in a field goal and Jack Lavarnway tossed in a nice hoop. Flaherty of the intermediates got no less than six points, and Flynn of the same squad also potted a nice shot. At half time, Varsity were leading 19-18.

Both teams settled down in the second half, and play was close and fast. Shag Park of the S.M.C. broke through the Varsity zone defence time and time again for valuable tallies. Park is one of the best basketball players in the city and the Blues had a hard time taking care of this tricky individual.

With three minutes to play, play was tied up, but Mahoney tossed in the winning hoop in the dying moments of the game. For the Blue, Rogin, Lavarnway and Singer went well, while Shag Park took all the honours for the S.M.C.

Varsity: Lavarnway (6), Cahill (2), Flaherty (6), Mahoney (4), Flynn (2), Bannigan (1), McGregor (4), Rogin (6), Singer (4).

S.M.C.: Carter (4), Maxwell (2), Watson (4), Park (17), Rider (4), Bandy (3).

NEW SUPPER SYSTEM

Next Wednesday night Newman Club will hold its annual ball in the Crystal ballroom of the King Edward Hotel. For this formal event invitations have been extended to faculties and colleges on the campus to have representatives attend. Also present will be guests from other Newman Clubs at McGill, McMaster, Queen's and Western.

In accordance with the policy of the club in making this dance the first outstanding Newman event since the Silver Jubilee last November, George Hooley's orchestra has been engaged for the evening. This band, which has won wide approval for its swing, as well as sweet music is expected to add much to the dancers' enjoyment. Another feature will be the presence of a sketch artist who will draw pictures of the guests.

To ensure a large turnout for this affair the committee has adopted a new plan for supper accommodation. Whereas in former years supper was included with the ticket, this year it has been made optional. The venue for this has been changed to the Victorian room.

S.P.S. OVERCOMES TRINITY'S MARGIN

With a thrilling, unexpected comeback in the last two minutes of play, the fourth team from S.P.S. overcame a two-point deficit to defeat Trinity's B team 19-15 in a basketball game at Hart House yesterday afternoon.

The second half was fading fast, and S.P.S. were struggling desperately but vainly to get back in the running, taking wild shots at the basket. Then suddenly they began to click and tickled the twine with three rapid shots to put them four points up. Trinity were unable to score in the drying seconds at S.P.S. wisely "froze" the ball.

Trinity started strong but were very erratic in their shooting. They got the first six points however, and the S.P.S. slowly crept up on them to tie the game at half time 8-8. The second half was ragged with flashes of brilliance. McCullum of S.P.S. and Whitlaw of Trinity were the high scorers, each with eight points. Simpson was quick and tricky for S.P.S. and Bell of the same outfit handed out many fine passes.

Sleepy Co-eds Roused By Bell Only Mutter "What The Blazes"

Will the advent of a fire inspire fear in the hearts of the students in the various residences of this university? Apparently most of them are well prepared for such a misfortune although they have not had to face anything of the sort recently.

Most of the residences have fire drills once a year. At the U.C. women's residences, Whitney Hall and Hutton House, these always come as a surprise. The gong rouses the co-eds from their slumbers at about six in the morning. Then there is a roll call to make sure no one is missing. And woe to girls in whose house someone has

FORMER PRESIDENT
ANALYZES RELIGION

Sir Robert Falconer Defines Religion for S.C.M.
Meeting

RECOMMENDS BIBLE STUDY

Sir Robert Falconer, past president of the University, spoke yesterday on "I believe in Christ", as a guest of the S.C.M. noon-hour series.

Sir Robert approached that problem in a Christian's life—"Is there anything beyond the present, upon which we can rely? The Christian faith, through Christ's life and teaching, gives us a historic bridge from here to the next world. This bridge, this fresh and living way to the next world is religion."

In defining religion, Sir Robert went on to say, "Religion is not a social order; it is that which enables you to believe in the reality of the unseen. The Religion of Christianity is not a mere moral faith, not a higher Stoicism, not humanism—it far transcends these. Christianity is a personal thing described for us in Jesus' life and beliefs."

"Jesus introduces you to the unseen. He tells us that Love, Fatherhood and Wisdom, those best things in us, are guiding the unseen world. Christ called them the Kingdom of God."

"Christianity does not depend on a perfect world to be effective, but upon the individual who finds his root in God. I believe in Christ because I got to know him. To understand this belief in Christ and the unseen, know Jesus. The New Testament will throw light on your problem."

Secretary-Treasurer Compares Set-up Here to U.S.
Organizations

ON VARSITY BROADCAST

The work of the Students' Administrative Council and that of similar organizations in three American universities was outlined last night when Mr. E. A. Macdonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the Council, was interviewed during the broadcast. The Varsity Speaks, over station CKCL.

In response to questions by Mr. Jack Thompson, director of the program, Mr. Macdonald described the "representative" composition of the Council, terming it "an essentially democratic organization" which deals with "the administration of general university student activities". Mr. Macdonald listed the many activities undertaken by the Council. "It aims to give assistance to every worthwhile student enterprise."

Mr. Macdonald spoke briefly of his recent trip with Professor S. N. F. Chant in which they visited Yale, Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh Universities to inquire into student administration. Each of these institutions boasts of a large, well-staffed department to deal with student activities, and especially with "loans, employment and bursary aids," he said. He emphasized that there is great stress laid on "the prediction of individual student development" as a criterion in giving aid. However, there is not the degree of student administration and control that there is in this university, said Mr. Macdonald. "We were impressed by our visits, but we saw that there is little or no student control, but rather a narrow paternalism which is not desirable."

Jack Thompson commented briefly on items of news gleaned from this week's pages of The Varsity. He spoke of the coming U.C. Arts Ball, of alumni branch meetings, of the successful St. Michael's At-Home, and of proposed plans for the visit of the King and Queen to the university next May.

MYSTERY AND INTRIGUE RAMPANT IN COLLEGE

The Presbyterian College has been the home of mystery, deep dark mystery. The other week it was a rug that disappeared, and that is a mystery that is still baffling the police.

But now it seems to be the abode of tragedy. This morning when one of the nuns returned to his monastic cell he found that fairies had visited him. His favourite chair, which usually reposes underneath his desk, had soared aloft and was perched plump in its centre. From its seat to the lofty ceiling rose a winding column of precious volutes. So now the dwarfs will have to get busy and find the tones that are needed for essays and lectures, but alas, it is doubtful if they will ever find the fairies.

Re National Scholarships

Since we have voiced our stand on the proposed scheme of the Canadian Student Assembly for national scholarships, the correspondence has been pouring in from various sources where it is believed that the proposal merits the backing of all University students.

We are printing a letter from Dave Woodsworth who deals with the plans of the C.S.A. at length. Another letter from the committee in first and second year Social Science gives even a fuller and better criticism of our editorial, but space does not permit, nor does the scheme merit the printing of too much of this correspondence. A letter of protest was also received from the Social Problems Club, and from many individuals.

Only one criticism was manifestly unfair, and that was from an individual who apparently has the idea that the function of a newspaper in a university is to support every proposal made by a group of students which seems to have a social consciousness, whether the editor feels that the scheme is worthwhile or not. The editor of The Varsity does not feel that it is his duty to support something with which he is not in agreement, and resents being told that his paper has failed in its function, when this is not done. The writer might remember that the proposal of the C.S.A. has been refused the endorsement of many people who at least have mature minds. It has also been refused endorsement by the body which is the official voice on this campus.

Mr. Woodsworth suggests that our criticism is the result of misinformation. That is not correct, for there is one thing that the C.S.A. has not failed to do, and that is to supply the various college editors with plenty of information. We were more in favour of national scholarships before we allowed ourselves to be exposed to the plan of the campaign, than we are at the present time, although we still agree that it has many admirable qualities.

Mr. Woodsworth also indicates that we were misinformed regarding the size of the scholarships. He suggests a sliding-scale, which doesn't alter the matter basically. Our "misinformation" is the result of seeing stories on no less than six occasions, saying that students asked for "five hundred thousand dollars for one thousand scholarships", which according to our arithmetic would average five hundred each. The fact that they are asking for so large a scholarship is an indication of the weakness of the plan. Offer any student, who has the ability to be the best in twenty high schools, on matric exams, free tuition at a university (considerably less than five hundred), and he will rarely refuse to avail himself of the privilege. With such a sum why not have twice as many scholarships? Even although they might have to work in the summer, which one correspondent says is a bad thing because the student "returns to college tired in mind and body", we are so conservative to think that it does most students a certain amount of good to have to work in the summer. Under this scheme, where need is a main criterion of distribution, the tendency will be to avoid summer work in order to keep the scholarship.

The danger of political patronage is admitted by almost all. We feel that it is one of the greatest dangers, while the supporters feel that it is a minor danger. Apparently this difference of opinion is based on our opinion of Canadian politics, rather than our faith in human nature. We believe that it would be much fairer, if when the Assembly named certain prominent men as supporting their scheme, they would also indicate that these men qualified their statement of support with the pious hope that political patronage would not creep into the administration. In itself this is not sufficient reason to condemn the proposal, but it should be guarded against very closely.

The proposal for a scholarship fund is that one thousand students would be enabled to attend university every year (something which when it got organized would mean some two hundred and fifty students would enter annually) without having any financial worries, and without having to worry about summer employment. There is a danger of political patronage, and there is no guarantee that the neediest students would get the scholarships, although the ideals for this are very high.

On the other hand we proposed that the C.S.A. in bringing in such a radical change would be much better off spending its time working with a loan fund in view. Which, despite Mr. Woodsworth, would not be an "indiscriminate" system, as we cannot even imagine the federal government loaning money indiscriminately. The spending of half a million dollars annually through a loan fund would mean that many times the number of students could get to university. And if they haven't got enough faith in themselves that they are going to make good with a university education, and also be able to pay part of their way as they proceed, well then they aren't the type of students for which universities are looking.

We feel that in making such a campaign, while they realize that there are other branches of education standing in a much greater need, and that the federal government will hesitate to assist the other needier departments if they should make this grant, the C.S.A. members are starting at the wrong place, and they are acting only from the point of view of university students, rather than from the standpoint of educated, unselfish Canadians. —A.C.F.

The Hart House Library

There is reason to believe that many university men do not realize the advantages of one very important phase of Hart House services. We refer to the library, the only one on the campus whose aim is to provide men with their favourite books for leisure time reading. It has been said that both in interior fittings and the selection of books, it ranks as one of the finest private libraries in the world.

Here Library Evenings are held periodically, at which students can hear well known literary figures presenting their views. To attend these is one of the privileges of university life, and it is our belief that undergraduates would like to have these meetings held a little more frequently.

As for the library itself, it is unique in the sense that its books are intended only for pleasure. They are new, interesting, and cover every popular field. Another unique feature that seems to have been neglected is the fact that the readers themselves can have complete say in the selection of books. The Curator and Library Committee, faced with the task of purchasing a hundred new volumes annually out of thousands published, have placed a suggestion box in the room. It is unfortunate that this is not used more.

The aim of the Library Committee is to buy only those volumes that will be read. Students undoubtedly have some preference, and it would greatly aid the work of the Committee if they would express themselves. —C.M.

ART MUSIC Drama

Trudi Schoop

Satirical ballet, a comparatively recent development in artistic history, has, so far as we know, appeared in only two forms, those created by Kurt Jooss and by Trudi Schoop. Both are merciless in revealing the absurdities and sometimes the pathetic inadequacies of those aspects of society into which they probe. Their techniques too are similar, both employing what might be called the "caricature" system of exaggerated gestures and heavily underlined characters. The difference is that Jooss can leave his audience feeling distinctly depressed.

JAI-ALAI GAME WITH WIREGARTERS AT ARTS' BALL

Prince Houminkeeyou Wiregarters to Oppose Sixty-Three Cod in Thrilling Joust

WALTZING MICE

Toronto, Feb. 2: The eyes of the world turned towards the Arts' Ball when it was announced late last night that Prince Wiregarters of Hawaii will be present at the dance to demonstrate his native game of Jai-alai.

Playing before the crowned heads of Europe His Highness established a reputation as an all-round bouncer. A deputation from S.P.S. greeted him early this morning but he escaped with scratches.

Opposing the Prince will be a jai-alai team of 63 cod hand raised on the Dogger Bank. A waltzing mouse will preside. Noise-makers will be provided, provided there are any to be provided. There will also be favours for the ladies.

Few people understand the rules policy and organization of Jai-alai and incidentally the Boy Scouts of America. Let us today however deal with jai-alai. Each player is provided with a cizigooka or as it is more commonly known a ciz. Holding it firmly in his left hand, he begins to flail about. Here is where the klophitizoi or klop comes in. Catching the klophitizoi in the cizigooka the player klopplizes down the ijko or ijk (incredible isn't it) and throws the klophitizoi into the hikloizoi or hikl and his team is awarded two goigoooodoos.

(NOTE: The player fail to observe the rules, he will be sent to the penaliteboxizoi or penalitebox.)

Correspondence

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

The editorial which appeared on January 31st on National Scholarships was unfair to the project of the C.S.A. in that it created a false impression in that it said "On the surface this seems a very worthy scheme" and followed this up with a series of criticisms and, finally, the suggestion of a loan fund. The Student Assembly is grateful to you for raising this issue because it gives an opportunity to discuss the facts of the campaign.

The editorial pointed out the danger that the allotment of scholarships might become a "political football". Naturally the Student Assembly recognizes that this might be a difficulty, and for that reason has from the first recommended that the awards be administered by a strictly non-political committee or board composed of the heads of the colleges and universities of each provincial area. The British system of state scholarships, one of the most well developed of such schemes, has, we understand, been notably free from political patronage.

By suggesting that the scholarships will be awarded more on the basis of scholastic ability than of need, and by pointing to the wealthy students who accept scholarships now, you again obscure the point. At the present time the majority of scholarships in this country are awarded altogether on a scholastic basis, and with no consideration whatever to financial need. We have from the first made it clear that the awards will be made only to those who have no means of meeting the expenses of university.

You have mentioned the sum of five hundred dollars as the exact size of a scholarship. This is an obvious misunderstanding. Five hundred dollars was regarded as being the average cost of a year at college, yet at our own university where the compulsory fees range in exceptional cases from about fifteen dollars to well over three hundred dollars. This is exclusive of books and equipment. The size of any one scholarship would be adapted to the particular tuition and maintenance costs of the student.

You suggest that the student could
